The doll industry in Germany is now commencing to make the "character doll" in restricted numbers. The model is made by an artist, and the molds are then copied from this model. The painting of these dolls is done with especial care, and, consequently, their price is considerably higher than that of the commoner type of doll.

Similes Useless.

In argument similes are like songs in love; they must describe; they prove nothing.—Prior.

When Clay Pipes Were Popular.

Justin McCarthy went to London in 1853 and found clay pipes in fashion. "It was thought quite the right thing for a man of fashion to appear in the broad day with a clay pipe in his mouth," he wrote. "Many a young man stuck a clay pipe in his mouth and pretended to be a real gentleman."

Its Origin.

Man explained his complexion. "I was the first man asked to take down a stove pipe," he said.—Harper's Bazar.

Simple Diet the Best.

The fewer foods we eat together at a single meal the better, from the health standpoint; of that there can be no reasonable doubt. The poor man who can afford but a few simple dishes is far better off, in reality, than the rich man with his extensive "course dinners"—as many millionaires have found out when they are reducing to living on milk for a while.

Notable Wedding Anniversary.

A golden wedding celebrated at Rothesay, Buteshire, England, the other day, possessed several notable features. The family party, including grandchildren, numbered about 56, and of the nine present some traveled from South Africa and Canada.

Pestilent Female Mosquito.

The female mosquito often lives through the winter, hibernating in dark places like attics, clothes presses and the crevices between floor and baseboard or outdoors in the cracks in the bark of trees. As soon as the pools of water are warm enough in the spring so her eggs will not freeze she begins to lay, and ten days to three weeks later the young mosquitoes sally forth for their first taste of blood.

Kills Contagious Germs.

Turpentine, mixed with carbolic acid and kept in open vessels about the room will greatly lessen the risk of contagion in scarlet fever, diphtheria, etc.—"Home Department," National Magazine.

INCREASE

RURAL LETTER CARRIERS TO RECEIVE RAISE IN SALARIES

The Increase Will Afford Adequate Compensation For Additional Service in Connection With Parcels Post

Under authority conferred by postoffice appropriation bill, Postmaster General Hitchcock today increased the salaries of rural letter carriers on standard routes from $1,000 to $1,100 a year, thus affecting 30,000 men, with proportionate increases to carriers on shorter routes. The order will become effective Sept. 30.

This will mean an increased disbursement of $4,000,000 a year. It is the second salary advance for rural carriers made in the last four years.

At the close of the last fiscal year there were 42,031 rural mail carriers the aggregate prices being $40,685,740. The increase provides rural carriers adequate compensation for additional burdens to be imposed by the parcels post system, effective Jan. 1.

Hitchcock has directed that rural mail carriers, on the completion of 15 [illegible] service, be granted fifteen [illegible] pay. This will [illegible] [illegible] a year to

THE PROGRESSIVES

THE NEW PARTY IN LAKE COUNTY IS NOW ORGANIZED

Delegates to State Convention Selected and Executive Committee Organized

Dr. M. D. Cadwell of Fairport was the chairman of the Bull Moose convention held here last Saturday. The county executive committee was organized with Dr. Cadwell as chairman, D. F. Crofoot secretary, and E. E. Gould treasurer.

The convention selected the following named gentlemen as delegates and alternates to the state convention which is being held at Columbus this week:

Delegates—J. R. Garfield, Mentor; J. L. Shepard, Perry; W. H. Pope, Madison; B. P. Warren, Mentor; F. P. Freshley, Kirtland; D. F. Crofoot, Painesville; E. J. Gray, Concord; T. D. Morley, Mentor.

Alternates—Floyd Allen, Kirtland; W. E. Taylor, Wickliffe; Will Barry, Madison; Dr. J. W. Lowe, Mentor; David Davis, Leroy; Matt Killinen, Fairport; D. Bennett, Perry; R. S. Grant, Painesville.

You will never forget nor regret visiting the great new Lake County Fair at Painesville, O., Sept. 17-20.

ABOUT PEOPLE AND PLACES

Noise promises to be one of the big features of this year's campaign.

—o—

The next big event on the list is the county fair. It is to be the best fair in the state.

—o—

One way to prolong life is by eating parsnips, but who wants to do it at such a price.

—o—

Thieves stole $12.00 worth of clothing from the Nickel Plate freight depot last Friday evening.

—o—

Wherever you find a Lake county farmer you usually meet a man who thinks Woodrow Wilson will make a good president.

—o—

One of the things very few G. O. P. candidates for Lake county offices are bragging about is how they stand on the national ticket.

—o—

The newly-weds, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Creedon, will make Painesville their home. Mr. Creedon is with the Lake Shore railroad.

—o—

W. B. Wolff, who has spent several days at the Wolff residence on Jackson street, returned to Philadelphia, Pa., on Tuesday, where he has a responsible position.

—o—

Gas has been struck on the John Menges farm near Black Brook. John Fredebaugh is the driller and he reports the flow of gas as about as good as any in the county.

—o—

President Taft and Governor Harmon did not run very well at Tuesday's election. Amendment No. 6, the initiative and referendum and No. 14, the modified recall of all officials won by big majorities.

—o—

Count up the vote against the initiative and referendum and you can guess about what Mr. Taft's vote at the November election will be unless some of those fellows decide to vote for Wilson to beat Roosevelt.

—o—

A meeting of Fairport voters was arranged for last Sunday. Wm. Gordon, of Cleveland, and Dr. Winans of Madison, were to speak. Both of the speakers were present but the attendance of voters was so small that the meeting was not called to order.

—o—

On Saturday morning ten special cars passed through here on the C. P. & E. railroad carrying residents of Ashtabula county to the Ashtabula county picnic. A large number of Painesville people also attended the picnic, which was held at Euclid Beach.

—o—

Willoughby C, Wickliffe precinct is the banner precinct in the county to favor progressive ideas in government. From 8 to 1 to 11 to 1 in favor of the labor amendments and other social betterment ideas. That precinct stood about 2 to 1 for the ladies. Good for Wickliffe.

—o—

The Mormons venerate the seagull, because it is traditional that seagulls saved the Mormon pioneers in the West from a plague of grasshoppers, and a monument to these birds, costing between $30,000 and $40,000, is to be erected in Salt Lake City. A granite shaft will be surmounted by a huge gull fashioned of pure marble.

—o—

Miami, O., has an up-to-date agriculturalist, who has been rejoicing in the addition to his stock of a bay filly which has on one side an accurate map of North America outlined on her skin and on the other a drawing of a chicken and a bunch of roses. At all events that is what a journal of the region solemnly avows.

—o—

A cake, some cookies, a box of candy and $5 in gold were taken by a daylight thief from the home of H. G. Edwards of Concord last Sunday. The Edwards family were away at the time. No trace of the visitor was left behind with the exception of a ladder left leaning against the house.

—o—

We hear words of the highest commendation for the work of Superintendent Wenner at the Lake County Teachers' Institute held here last week. Mr. Wenner is superintendent of the Ashtabula Harbor schools, and he has in that position shown ability of the highest order. His executive force and his general knowledge was of great value to the school board in the building of their new high school building, one of the finest school buildings in the state.

Marriage Licenses

STATE FAIR

A SUCCESS THIS YEAR. MORE THAN PAYS EXPENSES

The Ohio-Columbus Centennial Celebration Held at Same Time Proves Big Factor in Large Attendance

The State fair broke all records in attendance and receipts. There was a total register of over 170,000 admissions. The receipts were over $76,000.

The showing has brought much gratification to the managers. Years ago the fair was held at a loss to the state and appropriations to pay the deficit had to be made. The list of entries this year was the largest in its history.

The Ohio-Columbus centennial celebration held at Columbus during the past week came to a close on Sunday with religious services at all of the churches in the city and a great religious mass meeting at Franklin park in the afternoon.

It has more than surpassed the expectations of those who promoted it. More than 200,000 visitors reached the city during the week. There was not an accident on any of the transportation lines that proved fatal. Scores of special trains were operated and the traction lines doubled and quadrupled their equipment. The police were needed only to help manage the crowds. They had little of real work such as comes usually with vast throngs.

GIRLS INSTITUTE OPENS

Willoughby School Has Academic Department

The Andrews Institute for Girls at Willoughby, O., began its third year's work yesterday with an enrollment of 112 regular students and more than eighty specials. Five residences are now in use as boarding cottages.

The facilities for work in the domestic arts and sciences have been increased by the addition of a laundry school with a complete modern equipment, and by classes in costume designing, lunch room work, and trade millinery.

The board of trustees at its last meeting provided for the establishment of an academic department on an equal footing with the two existing departments of domestic arts and of cottages. The director of the new department will be Frederic M. Wood of South High School, Cleveland.

Mr. Wood received the degree of Master of Arts from Western Reserve university in 1898. He was principal of Willoughby high school for five years.

The grand aggregation of unparalleled attractions, unrivaled exhibits, spicy racing, educating and entertaining features and unprecedented attendance will be at the New Lake County Fair at Painesville, O., Sept. 17, 18, 19, 20.

SOIL SURVEY

A MAP OF STATE WILL BE MADE SOON

The Department of Agriculture Now Has An Expert At Work In Geauga County

A soil survey of Geauga County is being made by Gustavus B. Maynadier in the employ of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Mr. Maynadier is making his headquarters at the Highland Hotel. His map of Geauga County will appear in a large map of the State, showing the variance of soil in the various counties.

A corp of assistants is expected from the Department of Agriculture. Maynadier has been engaged in this work in several states.

Working Well

In the six months' operation of the workmen's compensation law in the state there have been many interesting developments as shown in the first semi-annual report made public today. Premiums have been collected amounting to slightly more than $50,000. The premiums were based on the past payroll. The unusual activity of the past half year has operated to make the sum more than was estimated, and there is about $7,000 due the state and in process of collection. The semi-annual wages on which the premiums have been collected are in excess of $4,000,000, with nearly 16,000 employes under the protection of the law against accident or death. During the six months there has been a marked scarcity of serious accidents, the total payments being $4,600 with about $6,000 due in deferred payments. There have been 199 cases handled, and there are now 153 cases pending. The managers expect the awards to grow during the next half year. The probable awards in sight amount to about $25,000.

Card of Thanks.

We wish to thank the friends and neighbors for their kindness and beautiful flowers at the recent death of our son and brother, Herbert S. Moore. Also the singers who sang such beautiful songs.

Mrs. Della Moore
Mr. W. T. Moore
Mrs. J. R. Covert
Mr. and Mrs. Chauncy Covert

You can meet your old friends on the fair grounds, Painesville, Sept. 17-20.

FIGHT ONLY BEGUN SAYS MRS. UPTON

Special to Lake Co. Herald.

Before the final reports came in to state headquarters confirming a probable defeat for Amendment 23, the active forces of the Ohio Woman Suffrage Association had under way the details of a vigorous NEW CAMPAIGN UNDER THE PROVISIONS OF THE INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM. The women of Ohio will be the first to demonstrate the practical value of the decision of the voters to keep ultimate power in the hands of THE SOVEREIGN PEOPLE OF THE STATE. WOMEN ARE PEOPLE. NEVER WILL THEY CONSENT TO ABIDE BY THE SHAMEFUL VERDICT OF SEPTEMBER THIRD. OUR STRUGGLE IS JUST BEGUN. WE WILL BE THE FIRST TO USE THE INITIATIVE AND REFERENDUM IN THIS STATE.

HARRIET TAYLOR UPTON,
President Ohio Woman Suffrage Association.

There never was a time when people appreciated the real merits of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy more than now. This is shown by the increase in sales and voluntary testimonials from persons who have been cured by it. If you or your children are troubled with a cough or cold give it a trial and become acquainted with its good qualities. For sale by all dealers.

THREE TONS OF MONEY

The Dice of God are Always Loaded—State Fair Sets New High Water Mark.

The world applauds the winner and the record-breaker. The State Fair is both. By leaps and bounds it grows. In popularity it gains. In attendance it went beyond expectations. In quantity and quality of exhibits it surpassed all predecessors. The present grounds are no longer adequate. Over 500 cars were used in bringing exhibits. The President and the private citizen touched elbows within its gates.

Over 6,000 pounds of silver were paid in admissions. Receipts from all sources total $30,000 more than ever before. Good humor prevailed. Everybody was satisfied. The man in the moon worked nights. Every department was complete. The vast crowds were orderly. Every officer was on duty at proper time and place. Unpleasant incidents did not happen. Words of praise were heard on every side.

The State Fair advertising brought larger crowds to Columbus than ever before. There was no confusion. The Fair started on time. Every detail of the program was kept to the minute.

Doing away with the free [illegible] curse has won respect and [illegible]. An increase of over [illegible] both attendance and exhibit [illegible] story. Demands for [illegible] next year have already been [illegible]. This is a new indication of the [illegible] and success of Ohio's Big [illegible]

DR. FURNESS AND THE SKULL

Howell Hansel Relates a Story That Reveals the Late Scholar's Sweetness of Spirit.

Howell Hansel tells this story of Dr. Furness, the venerable Shakesperian scholar, who died at his home near Philadelphia a short time ago. While playing last in Philadelphia, Mr. Hansel visited Dr. Furness and was shown through his "vault," wherein are stored countless mementoes and relics of Shakespeare's dramas and of celebrated actors who have played in them. Mr. Hansel saw and handled a pair of gloves which Garrick's word has established as those the bard himself had worn.

There was also a skull, which came from the property room of the old Walnut street theater in Philadelphia, the oldest playhouse in America. "This skull was of priceless historic association," said Mr. Hansel, "for not only had Booth and Barret used it in their gravediggers' scene in 'Hamlet' and had written their names upon it, but the old relic had even furnished forth this scene for Kean, Kemble and Macready and bore their inscriptions."

"An old caretaker of the doctor's house one day bethought herself to straighten up the vault a bit and presently came upon this skull. It was very dirty indeed, with all those marks, and she went at it with soap and water.

"A little later she took the skull, with perhaps a brighter grin for its scouring, to the doctor, rejoicing that while there was some of the scribbling that 'stuck terrible,' some of it was so old that 'it wasn't any trouble at all.'

"And what do you suppose the old man said to her?" asked Mr. Hansel. "He just told her that he wouldn't bother about cleaning in the vault any more, and never by a word or sign did he let her know how deep or irreparable had been the loss to him."

Funny Peasant Notions.

There have been laid before the Astronomical Society of France the results of an extended observation, covering a period of ten years past, concerning popular notions of astronomy. The astronomical lore of the Russian peasantry of the north center and south of the empire, for instance, is limited to a knowledge of the existence of the sun and the moon and stars, of three constellations, of the milky way, of one planet, of comets, shooting stars and meteors. The sun is to all a mysterious and beneficent being.

The moon covered with ice and snow is even in flight from its brother, the sun. Upon its disk is portrayed the murder of Abel by Cain, the latter being done to death with a pitchfork.

The lunar rays are malignant, and evil comes to those who sleep unprotected from them. The horns of the moon afford information as to the weather.

The stars are lamps or candles lighted and extinguished by the Eternal. A shooting star is the soul of one just passed away. Comets are heralds of war and famine. No Russian ever forgets that the Napoleonic war followed the great comet of 1811.

Oldest Princess in Europe.

The Grand Duchess Augusta Caroline of Mecklenburg-Strelitz, who celebrated her ninetieth birthday recently, is the oldest living European princess. The grand duchess is the granddaughter of George III., and a princess of Great Britain, while her father, Adolphus Frederick, Duke of Cumberland, acted as viceroy of Hanover for George IV and William IV.

Exports to South America.

Under the fostering care recently given by the United States to the South American trade, the bulk of business has greatly increased. The total value of exports from the United States to South America for the fiscal year 1902 was $35,000,000. Five years ago, in the fiscal year 1907 it was $58,000,000 and that of the current year will probably be about $135,000,000, an increase of more than 260 per cent in the last five years. This increase in exports to South America while occurring in a large number of articles, is especially notable in lumber, leather, mineral oils and railway materials. Argentina is the country showing by far the greatest gain in our exports to South America. The figures indicate that the total exports to Argentina for the present fiscal year will amount to about $55,000,000, against $23,500,000 in 1905, having thus considerably more than doubled in the period in question.

Care of Home a Profession.

Mrs. Julian Heath thinks that instead of one large market in a large city there should be several in different parts of the city, that would give householders an opportunity to visit them when it might be impossible to go so far from the neighborhood to the central market. She thinks the habit of long standing accounts at the grocers and butchers has much to do with the high cost of living. "Realize that the care of a home is a profession," she says.

Women Entering Public Life.

More than 1,100 women are enrolled at Berlin university this year, of whom sixty are from the United States. Kansas has more than sixty women lawyers and more than 100 women physicians.

VERMONT ELECTION SHOWS NO CHOICE

CASE GOES TO LEGISLATURE

Roosevelt Progressives Sweep California at Primary Election and Will Have Majority of the State Lawmakers.

White River Junction, Vt.—The full report of the balloting in the state election in Vermont has been compiled without altering to any material degree the general figures as indicated by the early returns. The unofficial total vote for governor reached 65,033, the largest in a state election in a presidential year since 1904. A sufficient number of Republican members of the legislature were chosen to insure the seating of Allen M. Fletcher, in October, as well as the remainder of the Republican state ticket. The total vote of the state for all five candidates was:

Harlan B. Howe of St. Johnsbury (Democrat), 20,350.
Rev. Fraser Metzger of Randolph (Progressive), 15,800.
Fred W. Suiter of Barre (Socialist), 1,181.

The Republicans re-elected both their congressmen, Frank L. Greene of St. Albans, and Frank Plumley of Northfield. They carried 11 of the 14 counties and 167 of the 246 cities and towns.

Fletcher Assured of Seat.

Fletcher, the Republican candidate for governor, to be sure, has a plurality but a majority is necessary to elect. Consequently the legislature will be called upon to choose the governor. This body was almost unanimously Republican in 1910-11 and of the senators and representatives chosen September 3 a competent majority will be Republicans, so that Mr. Fletcher is assured of the seat which the people at the polls have refused him.

Despite a heavy rain during most of the day, the voters came out in unusual force. The bitterness of the campaign, the vigorous efforts of the new Progressive party and the Democratic insistence upon local issues, such as railway taxation, combined to stir even the smallest communities.

It is evident that many Prohibitionists and some Socialists gave Metzger their suffrages. The Democrats are boasting that they have more than held their own, their normal vote is 17,000 and are not losing to the Progressives.

Primary Election in California.

Los Angeles, Sept. 4.—Incomplete returns from the various sections of the state indicate that the Roosevelt Progressives have swept the state in the primary election and will have a majority in the California legislature. This has the significant meaning that probably no Taft presidential electors will appear on the ballot in this state at the presidential election in November.

According to the peculiar provisions of the California primary law the candidates for the state legislature who have become the nominees of the party in the primaries meet and elect the presidential electors. With the national political significance in view, the Roosevelt supporters in California concentrated their efforts in selecting at the primaries legislative candidates pledged to vote for Roosevelt electors. With the success of their campaign in the primaries, the only way the Taft Republicans can have Taft electors placed on the ballot at the general election is through the institution of legal proceedings.

CARBOLIC ACID KILLS YOUTH

Deadly Fluid Causes Boy's Death and His Chum Is Locked Up Suffering From Burns.

Canton, O.—William Johanning, 18, of this city, is dead and Curtis Dorrow, 17, is locked up at police station here suffering from burns about the face as the result of drinking carbolic acid in the room of Dorrow's sweetheart, Miss Hilda Huprich, 16, while the girl looked on.

Dorrow said he had gone into Miss Huprich's room and upbraided her "for having another fellow." Then he said he pulled out the whisky bottle and told her he guessed he would commit suicide. Seeing some carbolic acid in a bottle on the bureau, he poured it into the whisky bottle. Here Johanning entered, he says, and was invited to drink half of the mixture. He accepted and followed that drink with a long draught from the bottle. He died later at a hospital.

Fire Renders Thousands Homeless.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Five thousand people are homeless in Santa Monica as the result of a fire which originated in the kitchen of the Casino cafe at [illegible] p. m. and burned uncontrolled until nearly nine o'clock at night.

Six solid blocks of cottages and apartment houses, crowded with summer visitors, were destroyed. The famous Frazer's million dollar pier, with all its concession buildings, was totally destroyed, except for the concrete piling of the pier itself.

Convicts in Fierce Riot.

Jackson, Mich.—A riot among the convicts in the state prison here was subdued only after a pitched battle with several companies of militia, under Gov. Osborne, the local fire companies, the prison guards and special deputies. One prisoner was shot while trying to escape and the interior of the prison was wrecked.

The rioting began at noon when a number of prisoners released 75 others from the prison bullpen, where they had been confined for causing disorder among the inmates.

SITUATION ALMOST UNBEARABLE

DENIES HE SOUGHT TRUST AID IN 1904

ROOSEVELT REPLIES TO ALLEGATIONS OF JOHN D. ARCHBOLD AND SENATOR PENROSE.

IGNORANT OF CONTRIBUTION

Colonel's Letter to Senator Clapp, Chairman of Committee Investigating Where Campaign Funds Came From, Made Public.

New York City.—Denying therein every allegation of John D. Archbold and Senator Boies Penrose that he sought or was cognizant of contributions by the Standard Oil Co. to his campaign of 1904, branding Penrose as unfit to hold a seat in the United States senate, and reviewing in detail his part in all matters connected with the controversy raised by the accusations of Penrose and Archbold, Col. Roosevelt made public his letter to Senator Clapp, chairman of the committee investigating campaign contributions. The letter which bears the date of August 28 was written after the senate committee declined to have the colonel appear before it recently as he requested. The statements of Archbold and Penrose Mr. Roosevelt brands as "injurious gossip at third hand instead of merely at second hand."

Raps Senator Penrose.

The charge against Mr. Penrose, he declares, was a direct charge. This charge was not merely that he took $25,000 from the Standard Oil Co., but that at or about the time of taking it while a member of the committee of the senate which was formed to investigate industrial affairs in the United States he was in constant communication with Mr. Archbold on the subject and that he submitted to Mr. Archbold for his approval in advance a copy of the report of the commission.

"If these statements are true," he continues, "of course Mr. Penrose is unfit to represent the people in the United States senate and the testimony against him is direct."

Veiled Slap at Committee.

"Apparently, however, the committee is investigating not this charge against Mr. Penrose, which was sustained by direct evidence, but Mr. Penrose's counter-charge which was sustained by no evidence at all and only by the repetition of second hand gossip."

The Archbold statement that with his consent or knowledge, Cornelius Bliss, then treasurer of the Republican national committee, asked the Standard Oil Co. for $100,000 Roosevelt avers is "an unqualified falsehood." Supporting his defense the colonel includes in his letter copies of his letters to Mr. Cortelyou, his campaign manager in 1904, ordering him not to accept any money from the Standard Oil, also a telegram to Mr. Cortelyou, asking him if his desires had been complied with. In reply Cortelyou told him, the colonel says, that no contribution had been received from Standard Oil or would be received.

Includes Copy of Letter.

The colonel recalls the candidacy in opposition to Cortelyou of Senator Penrose for chairman of the Republican national committee in 1904 and his selection of Cortelyou. He says:

"I was not willing to have any man whom I did not know personally and in whose probity I did not have entire confidence as head of the committee."

In connection with his relations with Penrose the colonel asserts he spoke of contributions to the Pennsylvania senator but once and then when he refused to retain one of Penrose's henchmen, a certain Bunn, employed in the Philadelphia postoffice after the latter had been recommended for removal by the civil service commission for collecting political contributions from fellow employes. A copy of this letter to Penrose is included.

Takes Up Parker's Charges.

The colonel takes up the [illegible] before the senate committee of the charges of Alton B. Parker, Roosevelt's opponent for the presidency in 1904, that the Republican national committee had blackmailed corporations into making campaign contributions and [illegible] if the contributions were [illegible].

Col. Roosevelt reproduces his reply to [illegible] 1904, in which he described them as "false" and "monstrous." In this statement is a sentence of pertinent interest in view of the nature of the recent fight between Roosevelt and Taft for the regular Republican nomination.

"I cannot understand how any honorable man, a candidate for the highest office in the gift of the people can take refuge not merely in personalities but in such base and unworthy personalities."

Reviews Harriman Controversy.

Col. Roosevelt reviews at great length the Harriman controversy, introducing it with a letter which he wrote to Vice President Sherman in 1906, this letter including a copy of Gov. Odell's letter to Roosevelt, dated December 10, 1904. All the other now famous Harriman letters are reproduced, including the "You and I are practical men" missive, the motive being to prove that Roosevelt never asked Harriman for a campaign contribution as Mr. Harriman was said to have alleged and to show that Harriman was never consulted by the colonel on the subject of prosecution of the railroads and that Roosevelt refused to comply with the request of New York financial interests voiced by Harriman that Chauncey Depew or James Hazen Hyde be designated as American ambassador to France. The colonel reiterates that his message as regarded the interstate commerce commission in 1904 was not changed, despite the importunings of Harriman.

Ignorant of Contributions.

Referring again to the subject of campaign contributions Col. Roosevelt makes flat denial of the inference of John D. Archbold that he (Roosevelt) through Bliss, knew of the Standard Oil contribution. He says:

"I communicated with Mr. Bliss very frequently and never made any allusion to contributions in any letter I wrote him or any conversation I had with him.

"I have never discussed the question of contributions with Mr. Perkins," he goes on, says in connection with discussing the accusations brought before your committee.

Col. Roosevelt states plainly that he does not believe the statements of Archbold and Penrose that Bliss said Roosevelt knew of the [illegible] request for money from Standard Oil.

36 DIE IN SEVERE STORM

PROPERTY WORTH OVER $5,000,000 DESTROYED IN THREE STATES.

Cloudbursts Cut Gorges in Valleys Filled With Homes, While Raging Rivers Annihilate Crops and Cattle

THREE STATES VISITED BY STORM.

WEST VIRGINIA—Eighteen persons are known to be dead and probably 28 have perished at Colliers, W. Va.

PENNSYLVANIA—Eighteen persons are known to be dead and a larger loss of life is probable in western Pennsylvania. Cherry Valley, Burgettstown and vicinity suffered the greatest.

OHIO—Salineville in Columbiana county suffered the heaviest property damage, although there was no loss of life there.

Pittsburgh, Pa.—At least 36 persons are dead and property worth more than $5,000,000 destroyed as a result of the worst storm which western Pennsylvania and northern West Virginia have suffered since the Johnstown flood.

The torrential downpour of rain, accompanied by heavy wind began with an hour's terrifying display of lightning just at dark Monday night. The storm lasted about five hours. In that time Colliers, W. Va., a town of 800 inhabitants, was wiped out; Cherry Valley, Pa., was left in ruins; Avella, Cannonsburg, Washington, Burgettstown and a dozen smaller places in the extreme western end of Pennsylvania were inundated.

At New Philadelphia, Steubenville and other Ohio towns near the Ohio river the damage to property was heavy, while the loss of life is not known. Western Pennsylvania, eastern Ohio and parts of the Panhandle of West Virginia are devastated. The rain fell in torrents, cloudbursts wiped out hills and flooded streams, cut great gorges in valleys filled with homes. Raging rivers tore out bridges, annihilated crops, slaughtered cattle and washed away miles of railroad track. Lightning, striking in scores of places, added its terrors to the wild night.

Noisy Mail in the Future.

Washington, D. C.—Urban users of the new parcels post system to be started January 1 are likely to get noisy mail when the delivery begins of live chickens, rabbits and other country products by mail. Fresh eggs and country butter will also be handled through the parcels post. This is no dream of cheaper cost of living but will be a reality under the new law, which is designed to put the producer into direct communication with the consumer. General farm and garden produce comes under the law.

Girl's Life Saved by Angel.

London, England.—Saved by an angel who met her at the gates of death and bade her turn back to mortal life, Miss Dorothy Kerin, who has been a bedridden invalid from tuberculosis and diabetes, is today running about her home, 204 Milkwood road, as though she had never been ill a day in her life. Miss Kerin, who is a beautiful girl 22 years old, had been given up to die by 27 doctors. Saturday they announced that she would die before midnight. Sunday morning she suddenly opened her eyes and sat up.

Four Killed in Rail Wreck.

Camp Douglas, Wis.—Four persons were killed in the wreck of passenger train No. 12 on the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha railroad, which plunged into the Lemonweir river near Camp Douglas, owing to the washing away of a bridge. Twenty-six persons were injured, six seriously.

Every car, including the sleepers, with passengers still in their berths, were hurled into the stream whose waters, augmented by a cloudburst, had made it a torrent.

Editor of Judge Is Dead.

New York City.—Carlton T. Garrison, editor of Judge, died here at the home of his sister, Mrs. J. G. Finch, as the result of injuries received when he was thrown from his horse on May 10. Although he had been paralyzed from his neck down since the accident, he had dictated from his bed frequently during his illness material for his publication. Prior to his connection with Judge, Mr. Garrison was connected with the editorial staff of Leslie's Weekly and the New York Evening Globe.

DELIVERS SPEECH BEFORE OHIO PROGRESSIVE MEET.

Delegates to State Convention Repeat in Unison the Lord's Prayer Before Starting Work.

STATE COMMITTEE.

Columbus.—Walter F. Brown was elected chairman of the Progressive party's new state central committee and I. M. Foster, of Athens, secretary. Sherman H. Eagle of Gallipolis was elected vice chairman.

First—E. H. Farr, Hamilton county.
Second—Otto C. Lightner, Hamilton county.
Third—R. R. Nevin, Montgomery county.
Fourth—C. E. Jones, Darke county.
Fifth—William Kirtley, jr., Defiance county.
Sixth—William Bishop, Clermont county.
Seventh—C. W. Smith, Clarke county.
Eighth—Louis Stack, Delaware county.
Ninth—Walter F. Brown, Lucas county.
Tenth—Sherman H. Eagle, Gallia county.
Eleventh—J. H. Foster, Athens county.
Twelfth—C. E. Ellis, Franklin county.

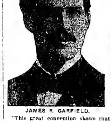
Columbus, O.—Fifteen hundred delegates listening reverently to the reading of the Scriptures, reciting in unison the Lord's Prayer and then lifting their voices in the patriotic hymn "My Country 'Tis of Thee," was the inspiring and impressive picture presented at the first session of the first Ohio state convention of the Progressive party.



JAMES R. GARFIELD.

"This great convention shows that the old spirit of liberty is not dead in Ohio," said James R. Garfield in sounding the keynote at the bull moose convention here.

"Ohio men will live up to their best traditions and be in the front of the present day struggle for strengthening and perpetuating popular government," he continued.

"The Progressive party has been formed because the Republican and Democratic parties are not acquitting themselves like men in fullness of strength, but as worn-out men unequal to the task of dealing with the abuses and wrongs that afflict the body politic.

Attacks Old Parties.

"Both the old parties are now in the control of those who use party power and machinery for their own benefit, or for the interests they represent.

"The old division between Republicans and Democrats no longer exists. A new line has been drawn—it runs between reactionaries and progressives.

"The Progressive party comes from the people themselves in response to deep-seated conviction that a new party is absolutely necessary if we are to move forward in the struggle for self-government.

"The Progressive party will expose and attack the combination of crooked politics and crooked business that too often occurs in both national and state affairs. In our own state the last Democratic legislature, and in the national the Lorimer case and the Archbold-Penrose conspiracy, are striking examples of such combination.

"The relation of business to politics must be open and above board. The Progressive party makes no attack upon legitimate business, but it wars upon crooked business.

"The Progressive party promises definite action upon the tariff, trusts, currency, conservation of resources and other matters of national concern.

"It is not expected that existing evil conditions can be immediately changed. No utopian commonwealth is promised, but we set our faces in the right direction when we adopt the Progressive principles.

Noted Soil Expert Is Dead.

Washington, D. C.—Dr. W. J. McGee, noted anthropologist, geologist and hydrologist, for many years the soil and water expert in the department of agriculture, bureau of soils, died in Washington after an illness of several weeks.

Dr. McGee's activities in many lines of scientific study gave him a nation wide acquaintance and prominence.

He explored Tiburon Island in the Gulf of California in 1894 and 1895, the island being the home of a tribe of cannibal Indians.

Astonishes Scientific Men.

London, England.—Life can be produced artificially. This statement, short, yet so staggering in its immensity, showing that the world must remodel all its ideas of life and death, was the theme of a momentous address delivered before the British Association for the Advancement of Science at Dundee by the new president, Prof. E. A. Schafer of Edinborough University. The address was the [illegible]

ORGANIZE MANY NEW COMPANIES

190 NEW CORPORATIONS CHARTERED BY THE STATE DURING AUGUST.

WITH AVERAGE CAPITALIZATION $30,000

Attorney General Hogan Holds That Names of Regular Republican Nominees May Appear on the Progressive Ticket.

Columbus.—During the month of August, 190 new corporations, "for profit," were chartered by the secretary of state with a total new capital of $8,163,000. The average corporation capitalization was about $30,000. Increases authorized in the capital stock of existing corporations amounted to $11,058,000, while decreases authorized amounted to $1,154,000. One-third of the new corporations formed will have their headquarters in Cleveland, which leads all other cities of the state with the organization of 60 new companies with a total capital of $1,668,500. Cincinnati was second with 16 new companies and a capitalization of $385,000, and Columbus was third, with 15 new companies and a total capital of $504,500.

Hogan Holds for Moose.

Columbus.—Attorney General Hogan expressed his opinion that the names of nominees of the Republican state ticket legally can appear on the Progressive ticket providing the third party is a bona fide organization and it is not merely an adjunct of the Republican party.

Attorney General Hogan said the question had not been referred to him officially.

He said the secretary of state is not required to submit the question to the attorney general.

Banks Rap Campaign Aid.

Columbus bankers are much annoyed over the course of leaders in national politics suggesting that banks receive and forward contributions from the public for the Wilson campaign funds.

Two Columbus banks have agreed to act in that capacity but will not solicit or urge contributions from any one.

Other banks positively decline to take any action until a meeting of the directors has canvassed the situation. Their officers are doubtful of the propriety of banks taking any active part in the financing of the campaign.

Business Cutting on Investments.

The character of the securities markets was unchanged during the past week in that a large number of stocks at one time recorded new high prices for the year and some of the highest figures on record while the downward movement in bonds continued. This was partly the result of advice given to investors by brokers, anxious to stimulate business on account of the sluggish market which has existed for a long time past in the older railroad 4 per cent issues. It is believed that the expansion of business now under way, together with the marketing of large crops, will severely tax the resources of banking institutions generally and leave comparatively little money to be invested in securities.

Rural Carriers Get Increase.

Under authority conferred by the postoffice appropriation bill, Postmaster General Hitchcock increased the salaries of Ohio rural letter carriers on standard routes from $1,000 to $1,100 a year, with proportionate increases to carriers on shorter routes. The order will become effective September 30.

May Protect Depositors.

Columbus.—That banks, by surety bonds, may protect their depositors against losses, is the gist of an opinion rendered by Attorney General Hogan to F. E. Baxter, state superintendent of banks. This is said to be a practical method which could be made to take the place of the state guaranty of bank deposits, as adopted by Oklahoma.

The attorney general, in his opinion, said: "The power to contract or be contracted with gives to a bank very broad powers, and, in the absence of any provision prohibiting a bank from securing its depositors by a surety company bond, it seems that this power or right can well be implied."

Mr. Baxter propounded the question to the attorney general in the interest of a number of banks who wished to know whether they might purchase a surety bond for the protection of their depositors and give them the same sort of protection that the state or a political subdivision demands when it deposits public money.

Employes to Get Big Dividend.

The Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company at its next pay day will divide $250,000 among between 7,000 and 8,000 employes, besides their regular wages. It is the annual profit sharing dividend which the company has been paying out for the last three years. This year the announcement is made that the company did not earn as much as it did the last two years, but it has been decided at 5 per cent, the amount paid last year on the total earnings of each man outside of the executive offices.

Employers Reinsured.

As evidence of the success of the Green compensation act, 96 per cent of the employers who were insured are reinsuring at the expiration of their six months' period, according to Secretary W. A. Archer of the state liability board of awards. The total number insured is now close to 600.

Urbana.—Burglars who have committed a series of crimes in [illegible]

[illegible] Drourick of the common pleas court upheld the constitutionality of section 34 of the public utilities act, which requires that before a telephone company can build a competing toll line it must first secure permission of the public utilities commission. It is the first court decision in Ohio on the constitutionality of the section. The United Telephone Co. of Bellefontaine brought suit to restrain the Farmers' Telephone Co. from constructing a toll line between DeGraff and West Liberty, on the ground that the United company is already furnishing adequate service and the Farmers' company had not secured permission from the utilities commission to build such line. Judge Brodrick upheld the contention of the United company.

New Coins Not Favored.

Bank officials and clerks of banks do not take kindly to the proposition that the government coin 2½-cent pieces and ½-cent pieces. The majority of them take the position that there is no necessity for any new coinage pieces. What they most desire is a sufficient coinage of the pieces already in use. In this connection it is pointed out that no little difficulty is often experienced in securing enough 1-cent pieces, nickels and dimes. There are said to be small coins enough to take care of the business of the country if there is a sufficient quantity at hand all the time for the demand. Cashiers and bank tellers are opposed to the new coinage for the reason that it will complicate the matter of making change by adding fractional pieces, which will require much mental effort to adjust and at times necessitate pencil work in order to make certain.

Insane Witness O. K.'d.

Insane patients, held at a state institution, may be subpoenaed before a grand jury to testify if justice demands, but the superintendent of the institution cannot be penalized for failure to bring the patient into court. Such is an opinion given by the attorney general to O. O. Fordyce, superintendent of the Athens State Hospital for the Insane.

In villages where there are mayors' courts the president pro tem of council is without authority to preside at the court in the mayor's absence is the advice given T. C. Crossen, prosecuting attorney of Athens county by Mr. Hogan.

Soldiers Given an Ovation.

Columbus.—Columbus witnessed the largest parade of civil war veterans it had seen since the national G. A. R. encampment in 1888. Probably 2,500 veterans participated. They were escorted by 500 veterans of the Spanish-American war in uniform, who stood with colors dipped and heads uncovered as the gray-bearded men marched through their ranks in front of the reviewing stand. Sons and grandsons of veterans also participated in the parade.

While the old soldiers were passing through the open ranks of the Spanish war veterans a white man and a colored man refused to take off their hats. Both of them received rough treatment at the hands of the Spanish war veterans. It required the services of the police and National Guardsmen on duty to rescue them.

The parade was marked by a number of unique features. It was headed by two battalions of regular soldiers from the Columbus barracks, following which came the famous "Old Guard" of Columbus and Newark, one of the few remaining organizations of soldiers in the country which maintains a strictly military organization. They carried the old Springfield rifles of the civil war period and were accompanied by their own drum and fife corps, made up of veterans.

One float of the parade carried crippled soldiers, while in the rear was a pup-tent, such as the soldiers used on the march during the '61-'65 campaign. Under this was a little old soldier, who appeared to be 85 years of age. One of the old soldiers carried a cornet and played "Marching Through Georgia" as he passed the reviewing stand.

Hold Rail Tax Hearing.

Representatives of the Toledo Railway & Light Co. were in conference with the state tax commission relative to values of the company's property for the current year. It was valued for slightly over $8,000,000 last year and because of some improvements will be increased about $250,000 this year.

It is the only traction company operating in any of the large cities of the state without a franchise and for that reason has neither franchise or good will values in its tax figures.

The value cannot be set by rule, as is the case with other traction properties, and always is left to the last and figured out after a hearing.

B. & O. Surveying Route.

Baltimore & Ohio railroad engineers are surveying a new route from Jackson to Byers Junction, on the main line of the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern, a distance of ten miles. It is understood that a new line is being planned to connect with the coal fields of that district.

To Hear Strader's Application.

At the next meeting of the state pardon board, Alfred Strader, the Grove City youth who kept Columbus terrified during the street railway employes' strike three years ago, will present an application for a recommendation of clemency. He is serving a five-year sentence for dynamiting street cars.

Strader escaped after detectives had fixed the crime on him and was captured several months later in West Virginia. He has served but two of his five years.

Compensation Act O. K.

After a six months' trial of the workmen's compensation act, as enforced by the state board of liability awards, announcement was made that 96 per cent of the firms are renewing their insurance. These figures and the number of firms now carrying the state insurance plan [illegible]

Cleveland, O.—In the adoption of what amounts to a brand new state constitution the people of Ohio have tossed aside the devices under which they have been operating their state and municipal government for 60 and in some instances 100 years.

The changes that have been made in the basic law of Ohio are far reaching and mark the most pronounced step forward that has been taken by any state in the union, not excepting the Pacific coast states and the younger states, such as Oklahoma and Arizona, which incorporated much of the new ideas of government in their first state constitutions.

Arizona recently adopted the recall of all officers, including judges, and the new Arizona and Oklahoma constitutions generally have been considered the most liberal and even radical of all state charters.

Further Than Any Other.

Ohio has not incorporated the recall in her new charter, yet in the amendments covering the relations between employers and employes the people of this state have gone further than the people of any of the other American commonwealths. As the result of Tuesday's election Ohio has a constitution in many respects more liberal than that in Wisconsin. In other words, Ohio has gone beyond Wisconsin in adopting governmental reforms urged by Senator La Follette.

The adoption of the new constitution places a tremendous load of responsibility upon the general assembly and new state administration which takes office Jan. 1 next.

Upon the next assembly will rest largely the burden of putting into execution the new state charter, the remodeling of the laws to conform with the new constitution. In large part, the new charter becomes effective Jan. 1, but a few days before the convening of the state legislature. Upon the next governor will rest much of the responsibility for directing the work of the assembly.

People Take Powers.

The people have taken to themselves largely increased powers, which the state legislature, no matter how disposed, cannot disturb. It will be months, in all probability, before the people of Ohio fully realize and become acquainted with the extent of the power which they now possess.

In the initiative and referendum the people have seized on a device which gives them an absolute check upon the acts of their legislative bodies. The principle of direct legislation has been written into the constitution to become effective October 1 next.

The absolute authority now rests with the electors of the state to bring about amendments to the constitution without legislative sanction, also to initiate legislation first through the general assembly and, if unsuccessful there, directly by an appeal to the electorate. The new power now vested in the people gives the electors the right to compel a referendum or popular review of all laws enacted by the legislature.

Marks Vast Change.

The home rule amendment is scarcely less important in its effects. Both these charter changes touch the very roots of what has come to be known as popular governmental system under which the state and its great municipalities have been operating for a century.

Under the home rule amendment Cleveland, for example, is intended to be left almost entirely free to work out her own future. Except for restrictions as to the amount of money that may be expended and a very general restriction to cover state welfare, the people of Cleveland along with other municipalities are left to determine for themselves the kind of government they want. Municipalities are empowered to determine their form of government by any one of three ways, as follows:

a. They may, upon vote of the people, elect 15 citizens to frame a charter, which must be submitted to the voters for approval.

b. They may adopt, by a majority vote, a form of government provided by the general assembly. This may be the commission form of government, the federal plan, the so-called Newport plan or as many other plans as the general assembly may provide.

c. They may decide to be governed, as at present, by a municipal code, framed and adopted by the general assembly. Such a code automatically takes effect in all municipalities which do not frame their own charters or take the trouble to submit to the people one or the other of the forms provided by the general assembly.

Can Operate Utilities.

The home rule amendment as adopted was drafted to give municipalities the right to acquire or construct and to own and operate public utilities, a power which has been fought for for ten years.

Much of what has been adopted will have to go to the supreme court for final interpretation. In the meantime, however, advocates of reforms will be active in campaign to initiate legislation.

These campaigns have been started. For example, the Anti-Saloon league will at once circulate petitions making a demand on the legislature for a law that will prevent shipments of liquor from wet into dry territory.

Direct legislation, it appears, will be used as a plaything for some time, certainly until the people become somewhat accustomed to the new powers they have acquired. Indications are that scores of new laws will be pressed upon the next assembly with the intention, at the outset at least, to carry them direct to the people should favorable action be denied by the legislature.

No Vote This Year.

None of these suggested laws, however, can be submitted at the general election in November. The first opportunity will be at the election a year from next November. By that time the newness of the charter adopted will be worn off to some extent and the people may not be so active in the matter of direct legislation.

A great step has been taken by the people with relation to control of the judiciary. By the amendments adopted the state judiciary is to be operated along the lines of the federal courts. The entire process of court review has been changed and the process shortened. Under the new order of things the circuit court is converted into a court of appeals of three judges with the mandatory provision that their judgment in all ordinary matters shall be final and without review by the supreme court.

A new chief justice is added to the supreme court with power to direct the movements of the judges of the inferior court. Probably most important of all, however, is a limitation on the power of the supreme court to declare any laws unconstitutional as passed by either the state assembly or the people direct.

Limits Supreme Court.

Under the new charter no law can be declared unconstitutional if two judges of the supreme court hold dissenting opinions.

In adopting a new charter the people have abolished state conventions, taking the power of nominating all candidates entirely into their own hands.

In the industrial field the door has been opened wide for the enactment of laws that will give to employes a wide degree of protection, both materially and physically.

Through the home rule proposal cities are permitted to take over and operate public utilities by issuing bonds above the amount of the limit prescribed by the legislature, with the stipulation, however, that such indebtedness must not be charged against the municipality's tax revenue. Then, on top of that is section 17 of amendment No. 32, declaring positively that such and all other indebtedness must be paid by taxation and from a sinking fund created for that purpose.

Indicate Higher Taxes.

Of the other amendments which seem to act toward increased taxes:

No. 12 provides that to encourage forestry land devoted exclusively to forestry may be exempted from taxation. The legislature also may authorize drainage of swamp lands and acquisition of land for forest reserves.

No. 28 permits the state to issue nearly $50,000,000 of road bonds in lots up to $10,000,000 a year. Taxes must be collected to pay the interest and provide for the bonds' redemption.

No. 40 gives additional rights to appropriate private property for public use, such as civic centers, park or street openings.

HERBERT S. BIGELOW.

Mr. Bigelow is president of the Ohio constitutional convention. He is a clergyman by profession.

Sleeps 36 Hours at Stretch.

Wooster, O.—Henry Dull of Garden Isle is Wayne county's champion sleeper. Dull sleeps so much that his neighbors fear he has in some way contracted the African sleeping disease. Dull's desire for sleep has been coming on gradually for the last year and his family think nothing of it at all if he sleeps 24 and even as long as 36 hours.

Dull is in fairly good health and says that when waking from one of his siestas is drowsy for a short time but feels no ill effects.

Becker to be Tried September 12.

New York City.—Fighting desperately at every opportunity for delay, Police Lieutenant Charles F. Becker appeared in the criminal branch of the supreme court to plead to the charge of murder in connection with the shooting of Herman Rosenthal.

When he refused to plead, Justice Goff ordered that a plea of "not guilty" be entered on the lieutenant's behalf and set September 12 as the date for the beginning of his trial in [illegible]

Falls in Scuffle, Loses Legs.

Marysville, O.—Willis Mackling, 23 years old, married, was crushed under a heavy hay baler and amputation of both his legs was necessary. Mackling, while scuffling with Ira Ebright, fell between the traction engine and baler and both wheels passed over his limbs.

Holds Court in Woods.

Springfield, O.—Surrounded by cackling hens, quacking ducks and grunting pigs, Squire J. N. Matthews held court in Mad River township, hearing William Smith of this city plead guilty to stealing hay from James Worley. Squire Matthews was passing when Smith was arrested. Immediately he called court to order in Kildeer Hollow, using a huge stump as a bench and a gnarled stick for a gavel. Smith was fined $1 and costs. The prisoner paid the fine and was released.

Wood Pleads Not Guilty.

Boston, Mass.—William M. Wood, president of the American Woolen Co., pleaded not guilty in the superior court to an indictment charging him with conspiring to distribute dynamite in Lawrence during the big textile strike in that city last winter.

Fast Train Kills Railroad Man.

Akron, O.—Louis Supotin, an employe of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, was instantly killed at Barberton when he was struck by a fast train. He was walking on the track.

NO AID TO WORKER

TARIFF IS NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR THE PROSPERITY OF THE WAGE EARNER.

PROVED BY TWO INSTANCES

Condition of Workingmen in Highly Protected Steel Industry Is Bad While Plants of Moderately Protected Farm Implement Industry Are Bright Spots in Labor World.

By agreement of all observers, a lie dies hard. There, for example, is the lie that asserts that the American workingman is dependent upon the tariff for whatever he enjoys of superiority to the "pauper workman" of Europe in wages and standard of living. Let us look at a couple of great American industries, one very highly, the other very moderately, protected. By the theory, the workingmen employed in the first ought to be better off than those employed in the second.

Take the steel industry and the agricultural implement industry, both flourishing, and each enjoying a good export trade. And in order not to complicate the tariff problem with the trust problem, suppose we leave out the harvesting end of the implement industry and consider only the manufacture of plows and machinery for planting and cultivating, an unmonopolized branch. The steelmaker is protected by a 45 per cent. tariff; the tariff on agricultural implements is just 15 per cent. For the past fifteen years—the period of most rapid development of both industries—the tariff on steel has ranged from two and one-quarter to three times as much as that on implements.

The condition of the workingmen in the highly protected steel industry, generally speaking, is bad, as the world knows. A tariff barrier of 45 per. cent. against the output of the "pauper labor" of Belgium, Germany and England has not kept the American workingman from making the acquaintance of the twelve-hour day and the seven-day week. It is not necessary to resume familiar facts; the Pittsburg Survey will supply details to the curious, at any public library. Since the degree of prosperity assured to the workingman by a 45 per cent. tariff is so low, we should be prepared, according to orthodox Republican doctrine, to find the employes of plow, planter and cultivator factories the pariahs of the industrial world.

The very contrary of this assumption is the fact. There are no brighter spots in the American industrial system than these very plants, whose tariff protection is relatively so little. In the "plow towns" of Illinois you find wages good. Scrupulous attention is paid to matters of safety and factory sanitation. In no industry employing an equal amount of unskilled labor are conditions more stable. From this, and the thriftiness of the workingmen, it results that a large proportion of them own their own homes. It is not uncommon to find workingmen of three generations of the same family in a single organization. One large concern has a successful pension and insurance scheme in operation; another, instead of buying outright inventions of employes, pays substantial royalties for the use of them.

The tariff was not designed to help the workingman. It is a trick to enable the manufacturer to exploit the consumer. Nothing could be more conclusive on this point than the contrast between industrial conditions in the two industries under discussion.

Why is the "infant" steel industry, protected by a 45 per cent. tariff and selling annually about $255,000,000 worth of its products in the foreign market, unable to treat its workingmen as well as the plow and planter industry, which has only a 15 per cent. tariff and an export trade of about one-twenty-fifth as much? And how does it come that the implement maker some years since, professed their willingness to get on without any tariff at all while the steel industry, according to no less an authority than President Taft's veto message, would be withered and blighted if the duties on steel were reduced to a figure still substantially higher than the implement duties?

The answer is that the tariff philosophy is a farrago of lies.

More Details Lacking.

The Progressive platform is explicit and my speech before the Progressive convention was explicit.—The Third Termer.

Sure, they are! Except, of course, as to the mere details of how to do what it is proposed to do.

The Big Campaign Fact.

The one hope of the American people for relief from the terrific cost of living lies in the election of Governor Wilson, and the inauguration of his sane and sensible plan of reform.

ONLY HOPE IS IN WILSON

To Him Alone Can People Look for Serious Effort to Reduce Cost of Living.

As the campaign progresses, it becomes plain that Gov. Wilson is the only presidential candidate to whom the country can look for a serious effort to reduce the high cost of living. [illegible] President Taft, who was born rich, approaches this question only to explain why the high cost of living must remain high. He does not understand what high prices mean to poor people, and it is hopeless to try to teach him.

Mr. Roosevelt, who also was born rich, is interested in wars and rumors of wars, in grand stand plays, in spectacular denunciations, and most of all, in himself. If elected—which he will not be—he would probably raise the cost of living by his wide extravagance.

Governor Wilson alone has given careful thought to this most pressing problem of the day.

Governor Wilson sees that needlessly high tariff duties raise the price of the articles on which they are levied by approximately the amount of the duty. He calls for a revision of the tariff downward, "steadily and unhesitatingly downward."

Governor Wilson sees that in the shade of the tariff the trusts gathered to exploit the people. He would not only cut down the trust protecting shade, but he would invoke the law, fearlessly and without favor, to break up the vast combinations which have assumed the right to fix the high cost of living "by private agreement."

Only by the election of Governor Wilson and the triumph of the principles of which he is the exponent, can the burden of high prices be lifted from the shoulders of the American people.

What Wilson Promises.

We may expect readjustment, but not revolution. That is the key-note of the whole—"a new point of view and a new method and spirit of counsel," but no "excited change." Governor Wilson is for meeting the changed conditions of our life candidly, and with new laws—radical laws, if you please—but not with a new and strange form of government.

We may expect the one great reform we have fully discussed and resolved on—tariff revision downward—made, indeed, without vindictiveness or violence, but, nevertheless, "unhesitatingly and steadily downward."

We may expect a policy with the trusts and other great industrial combinations and confederacies equally firm for justice, yet equally free from any impulse of mere destructiveness, laws to prevent and punish unfairness and wrongdoing, but none against mere bigness, none to arrest the natural course of economic development.

We may expect a conservative policy which will conserve without mere hoarding, which will prevent waste and robbery of our natural wealth, but permit and encourage the proper use of it.

We may expect a revision of our laws of currency and banking, to make our system more elastic, more modern and scientific, and more responsive to all the needs of business.

We may expect, if we ourselves have the virtue to play our part in the change, the proper working of representative government—the true "rule of the people" through public servants brought again into a right sense of loyalty to the entire public. And in the highest place of all, we may expect a leadership at once resolute and entirely democratic; ready to learn and to be advised, but of good faith and courage; a leadership by consent and counsel, but nevertheless an authoritative and fearless spokesmanship of the people.

That is what we understand Governor Wilson to have resolved and promised when he accepted the nomination for the presidency and the headship of his party.—Harper's Weekly.

A Democratic Year.

"Some time before the presidential conventions there was a feeling in the east that this was a Democratic year," said Nicholas L. Potter of New York, "and since all the nominations have been made it looks as if the Democrats would have a sweeping victory.

"I am one of the multitude that votes, but do not take any active part in politics. I have always voted the Democratic ticket, but this is the first time since my first presidential vote, which was in 1892, that I have felt as if we were going to win.

"Before the Baltimore convention had selected the ticket I was inclined to think that Congressman Underwood of Alabama would be the best man for standard bearer, but since Wilson was chosen I am strongly for him. I think we have a splendid ticket.

"I have many friends who are actively engaged in political work and it is their opinion that the state of New York will go for Wilson and Marshall."

The Farmer and the Trusts.

"While you were feeding the world, congress was feeding the trusts."

In that one compact phrase, Governor Wilson stated the case of the farmers of this country versus the Republican party.

Of the two billion dollars which the tariff costs the consumers of this country each year, the farmer pays nearly half—and gets nearly nothing.

The farmer exports considerable produce, even now.

The exporter can get no advantage out of an import tariff unless he is in a trust, which is able to charge higher prices at home than it gets abroad.

The farmers of the country have never been able to form a trust, and never will be able to do so.

The farmer has fed the world, and congress—a Republican congress—has fed the trusts. Yet now the Republican party asks another lease of power that it may tame the trusts and encourage the farmer!

"What we are seeking is NOT DESTRUCTION OF ANY KIND, NOR THE DISRUPTION OF ANY SOUND OR HONEST THING, but merely the rule of right and of the common advantage.

"Our domestic markets no longer suffice. We need foreign markets. That is another force that is going to break the tariff down. The tariff was once a bulwark; now it is a dam. For trade is reciprocal; we cannot sell unless we also buy.

"Tariffs are never conceived in the general interest; they are always for the benefit of the few, and the few who seek and obtain them have only themselves to blame if presently they seem to be contemned and distrusted.

"Republicans have employed tariff duties as a method of fostering special privilege.

"No group of directors, economic or political, can speak for a people.

"Government has much more to do than merely to set the house in order."—Extracts from Gov. Wilson's speech of acceptance.

OHIO STATE NEWS GIVEN IN BRIEF

EVANGELICAL MINISTERS HEAR RESULTS OF THE FREMONT CONFERENCE.

ASSIGNMENTS AS MADE BY DISTRICTS

Erie County Sustains a Heavy Loss by Electrical Storm, Followed by Wind and Hail—Kills Sister Suitor at Cadiz.

Pastors Assigned to State Pulpits.

Cleveland.—Reports presented at the Ohio conference of the Evangelical association just closed at Fremont, O., show a gain of 557 members in the past year, making the total 11,233. Pastors reported 1,723 converts, and 1,390 received into church fellowship. Bishop Samuel P. Spreng of Cleveland presided.

Total membership of the Sunday school, including the home department and cradle roll, was 17,384. This branch has 1,602 officers and teachers.

Receipts during the year for all purposes were $138,000. This showed an average of $12.09 per member. The average salary of pastors is $788.63.

License was granted by the conference to two candidates for the ministry. Four were ordained as deacons and one as elder. The next session will be held at Upper Sandusky, O.

Following are the assignments of ministers made by the conference:

Cleveland District—D. L. Caldwell, presiding elder; Akron, A. F. Totheroh; Ashland, E. S. Flora; Butler, T. S. Weaver; Cleveland, J. W. Heininger; Greensburg, J. R. Dallas; Homeworth, E. E. Hunt; Independence, S. A. Shisler; Kenmore, W. S. Gamertsfelder; Lafayette, W. J. Roth; Mansfield, E. D. Paulin; Marshallville, W. A. Shisler; North Lima, H. G. Tovey; Trinity, C. W. Weltmer; Warren, A. M. Rickel; Wayne, J. W. Munk; West Salem, O. J. Stone; Woodbury, O. D. Myers; Wellsville Italian mission, D. Raffone; C. W. Hensel, executive secretary laymen's missionary movement.

Tiffin district—H. C. Berger, presiding elder; Bellevue, H. E. Renms; Bettsville, Roy B. Leedy; Bucyrus circuit, Otto Spreng; Bucyrus mission, H. W. Dranske; Flat Rock, E. Wengerd; Fostoria, H. W. Link; Fremont, W. L. Martin; Gibsonburg, William H. Bade; Greenspring, J. N. Stoffaunt; Lindsey, H. L. Zachman; Mexico, W. F. Anderson; Napoleon, C. E. Lamale; Perrysburg, C. H. Vandersall; Tontogany, A. L. Smithson; Tiffin, W. L. Naumann; Toledo, W. H. Munk.

Columbus district—J. H. Kanaga, presiding elder; Belmore, J. F. Atkinson; Benton Ridge, L. C. Hoover; Bluefield, C. H. Kern; Bradner, J. W. Zachman; Cedar Hill, C. W. Ruhlman; Circleville, W. H. Shisler; Columbus, F. F. George; Findlay, J. M. Prickett; Lancaster, John Hobson; Logan, to be supplied; Marion circuit, J. A. Hensel; Marion station, C. L. Weatherwax; Mt. Cory, W. D. Huddle; Nellie, Hoy Stafford; Wagram, H. M. Mease; Westerville, J. Wengerd.

Ohio County Big Loser.

Sandusky.—Heavy losses in eastern Erie county were caused by an electrical storm, accompanied by a high wind, rain and hail. A barn on Hiram Camp's farm, near Rye Beach, struck by lightning, was totally destroyed. Its contents, including this year's crops and valuable machinery, was burned. Peaches around Berlin Heights were bruised by hailstones, as were grapes in vineyards south of Vermilion. Many cellars were flooded at Milan.

Kills His Sister Suitor.

St. Clairsville.—Because he objected to the attentions paid his sister, Mary Moss, by Frank Bolon, 23, the police charge Harrison Moss shot and instantly killed Bolon in the Moss home at Cadiz.

Bolon, it is said, was calling on Miss Moss in the absence of the other members of the family. Disapproving of this, Moss went to the police and charged Bolon with alleged sales of intoxicants in violation of the law, hoping to cause his arrest. The authorities refused to investigate and Moss became angered. Going home Moss found Bolon there talking to his sister, and the police say, fired five shots into the young man's body.

Remarkable Operation.

Cincinnati.—One of the most remarkable operations ever performed by medical science was written in the medical history of Cincinnati August 30. Sherrick Bobb, six, was the patient. Three years ago the lad swallowed a screw about an inch long. It slid into his windpipe and gradually worked down to a position where it was impossible to reach it, causing the youngster intense pain and affecting his breathing. The family physician, after using all known methods to relieve the patient and dislodge the screw called in Dr. John Rauly, an eye specialist, who has had wide experience with the use of magnets to remove steel and other metals from the eyes. He suggested the use of a magnet. This was agreed to and in less than five minutes the screw was removed and now the lad is on the way to recovery.

Lightning Fills Pockets.

Girard.—In the most terrific storm of the summer lightning shattered a tree under which Joe Ross, laborer, had taken refuge. Joe's clothes and pockets were filled with splinters and how he escaped death is a mystery.

Elks Open Tiny Theater.

Bellaire.—America's smallest theater except one, was opened here by Thomas W. Ross, for the local lodge of Elks, who built the playhouse at a cost of $30,000. It holds 400 people.

Stolen Shoes Don't Fit.

Bellefontaine.—Robert Bailey, 50, of Huntsville, pleaded guilty to a charge of burglarizing the Sturm general store at Huntsville. Burglaries of the store had been frequent and Marshal Anstine hid in the store four nights to capture the thief. Sunday night Bailey entered through a rear window and was carrying out plunder when the marshal arrested him and after a tussle landed him in jail. Bailey had brought back a pair of shoes that did not fit, to exchange for a larger size.

ONE GREAT OPPORTUNITY IS PASSED UP

Fred Parent, Baltimore Player, Who Overlooked Chance to Make Triple Play Unassisted.

Fred Parent, of the Orioles, passed up a chance to make an unassisted triple play in a recent game with Newark, when he had the thing all laid out for him. He said he didn't care, but it is suspected he didn't realize his opportunity until it was too late. Billy Zimmerman was on second and Eddie Zimmerman was on first when Higgins hit a liner above Parent's head. He made a leap and caught the ball. The two Zimmermans were both racing toward home and all Parent had to do was to step on second to get one and tag the other when he attempted to come back, but instead he tossed the ball to Maisel at second, who relaid to Schmidt at first to complete the three out. Parent was within five feet of second base at the time he executed the play.

WHY TOM LEACH WAS LET GO

Manager Clarke Compelled to Trade Clever Player to Make Way Clear for Honus Wagner.

The cat is out of the bag as to why Fred Clarke, manager of the Pirates, apparently had to show his lack of sagacity as a big league team manager and be outdone in a trade when he let Tommy Leach and Lefty Leifield go to the Chicago Cubs in exchange for King Cole and Sol Hofman.

According to a member of the Pirates, this trade or some other trade by which Tommy Leach would get out of the Pirate ranks was absolutely necessary to prevent constant internal dissensions and save the scalp of Barney Dreyfuss, president of the Pirates. Also it had to be done in order that Hans Wagner may be manager of the Pirates next season.

This Pittsburg player declares that some time ago Dreyfuss promised Tommy Leach he would succeed Clarke when the present manager of the Pirates retired.

At the beginning of the present season Clarke told Dreyfuss he would retire at the end of 1912. Clarke also told Hans Wagner, and the big Dutchman thought he would like to be manager of the Pirates for at least one season. He went to Dreyfuss, and Dreyfuss told Wagner he would succeed Clarke. This left Dreyfuss with two prospective managers on his hands—the fighting Tommy and the big Dutchman.

STORIES OF THE DIAMOND

A chap named Sloan has been sold to the Browns. He came from Bristol, Tenn.

Charlie Wagner has had his eye on the ball this season. He has hit it on an average of one single a game.

Tommy McMillan has been given the shortstop position of the all-star Eastern league team by a Baltimore paper.

Beals Becker of the Giants, in six batting efforts recently, got three bases on balls, and three blows on the head.

The only club in the American association this year that is making anything like good money is the Minneapolis Millers.

Pitcher Packard of the Columbus team of the American association is regarded as one of the best pitchers in that league.

Pittsburger's biggest crowd since the world's series of 1909 turned out on July 19 at the double header with the Giants. It numbered almost 25,000.

The unconditional release of Pitcher Moroney by Chicago was in accordance with his agreement that he should be set free if he did not make good.

Munsell, a pitcher who was tried out by the Giants last spring, has been sold to the Sacramento club by the Buffalo team of the International league.

Connie Mack keeps right on signing collegians. His latest acquisition is Robert Stevenson, great football and baseball star at the University of Minnesota.

Manager Fred Clarke denied that he meant to send Alex. McCarthy to the minors, as reported when it was decided to recall Infielder Gus Dodd from Wheeling.

NERVE IS CAUSE OF FAILURE

Billy Murray Says Many Baseball Players Fail to Make Good Because They Lack Assurance.

Billy Murray, manager of the 1903 pennant winning Jersey City team and present chief scout of the Pittsburg Pirates, mourns the fact that so many ball tossers fail to make good because they lack assurance.

They are all right when among friends, but let them encounter strange territory and people, than they seem half scared to death, meek supplicants, instead of energetic warriors. The boy able to hold his own in a test of badinage has a sure advantage over the quiet, dreamy youth. Nothing helps more on a league trial than a lot of nerve.

"It takes a boy with spunk and spirit to make good in the big show," said Murray. "Give me the kid who isn't abashed or taken back at the quips thrown at him by veterans and others, and if he has any athletic ability he will stand a much better chance of keeping up to the pace, than the minor leaguer who is excellent in his company, but scared at the tall buildings on the major league circuit."

CAMNITZ IS "ONE BEST BET"

Pitcher Has Been Mainstay of Pittsburg Pirates for Some Years—Has Done Great Work.

Howard Camnitz, the Pittsburg pitcher, is having a good season on the diamond. Camnitz has long been regarded as one of the best twirlers in the National league, but his showing has been of an in-and-out variety. He has been one of the mainstays of the Pirates for a number of years, but has not shone with the brilliancy of other pitchers. This year he is the one best bet of the Pirates on the firing line.

Howard Camnitz.

McAleer After "Farm."

It is reported that President McAleer of the Red Sox has about concluded negotiations for the purchase of the Youngstown club of the Central league. McAleer desires to use this club as a farm. While Boston was playing in St. Louis, McAleer spent the time in Youngstown and also was there much of the time when the team was in Cleveland.

King Cole Has Quit.

King Cole has quit. He is camping near Bay City, Mich., and admitted to his friends that he has only slight hope of ever regaining his old form.

Well, the women put up a game fight and will win out later.

Lake county is in the progressive bunch of counties, giving a majority for all the amendments, including Woman Suffrage.

Lloyds are betting even money on Wilson's election A man who wouldn't bet at least ten to one on it in America would be called a piker

The men voted the word "white" out of the constitution but refused the women even a "look in" on voting That was adding insult to injury

"Be a man or a mouse or a long tailed rat, a republican, Moose or a democrat, says the poet chairman of the republican state central committee

The anti-saloon league was not very enthusiastically supported at the polls Tuesday, and the antics of that organization is really responsible for the defeat of Woman Suffrage

Mrs. O H. P Belmont has the words "Votes for women" stamped across the face of all her personal checks. No "anti" has carried his disapprobation of the suffrage movement so far as to refuse any check she has sent him.

"Who are those fellows over in the corner?"

"They are Socialists."

"They seem to be engaged in a very earnest discussion."

"Yes. I suppose they are trying to invent new theories of government."

"I thought they had plenty of new theories."

"They did have, but the rest of the people have caught up with them, so they've got to invent more in order to keep ahead."—Chicago Record-Herald.

MISTAKE, BUT WORKED WELL

Unintentionally Friendly Letter to Bullet-Proof Debtor Brought Quick Results From Him.

A lawyer who had drifted out of the regular line into a collection practice dictated so many dunning letters every day that he had his stenographer sign them and would himself read over the carbon copies the following day if he thought it necessary. He had another bad habit, which was that as it came to the close of a day and he had become weary of nagging people he would grow facetious and instead of dictating the names of the debtor properly would vary the monotony by saying "Dearest Skin" or "Darling Mr. Smith," knowing that his stenographer, having the correspondence before her, would fill in the proper name.

It chanced that she, like most good stenographers, decided to get married, and she brought her sister into the office to succeed her. The first full day of dictation that the attorney put in after the sister's advent chanced to be one of his humorous ones, and he started a letter to a bullet proof debtor named Samuel Smith "Dear Sammy," and then proceeded to tell Sammy" his opinion of him The next morning, on looking over the carbon copies, he was horrified to find the new stenographer had typed that letter exactly as it was dictated and sent it out in the mail the night before.

All that day the attorney expected Mr. Samuel Smith to show up with fire in his eye and a pistol in his hand. He shivered when the office door opened and he left for home very early in the afternoon The next morning, however, he received a letter from "Sammy," which started off "Dear Billy" (the lawyer's given name being William), and which went on to say, "If you had addressed me in such friendly style before you would have had the money sooner," and inclosed was "Sammy's" check for the whole account.

The new method had brought gratifying results, but the attorney did not dare to adopt it as a regular practice; on the contrary, his dictation since has been notable for its exactitude

Nettles as Substitute for Cotton.

The search for a cotton substitute has been going on in Europe for a long time, and many experiments have been made with the common nettle, which has been a promising plant on account of the strength of its fiber and its ready growth wild under the most discouraging conditions, with a large yield per acre. The great difficulty has been in separating the fiber from the woody stem. In a method of treatment that has been worked out in the last two or three years the dried nettle stems are boiled about half an hour in dilute soda lye, and the loosened fibers are then separated in a machine with revolving brushes. The material is then subjected to a number of alternate boilings in dilute lye and thorough washings, both under high pressure. The product is a mass of yellowish fibers, free from gum, that can be bleached, combed, and spun into lustrous white yarn. This is claimed to have the smoothness and softness of flax, with a strength even greater than that of hemp The yarn has been made into brilliant damask, and can be used—alone or with other threads—for upholsteries, ribbons, and a variety of fabrics.

Year's Sleep in Prison.

A remarkable case of lethargy is reported from one of the towns in South Russia. A certain Moisselyinko was put on his trial in March of last year on the charge of having committed an armed robbery, but in the midst of the proceedings he dropped to the floor in what was supposed at the time to be a fainting fit, but which afterward proved a lethargic sleep.

In this condition the prisoner has lain till March 8 of the present year. He has evidently been all the time in complete possession of his wits, but was unable to move a limb, open his eyes or take food When his eyelids were raised the pupils could be seen, and he was all the time fed by artificial means.

During his sleep he has lost some weight, but he has kept throughout the external appearance of a man in normal and healthy sleep.

Titanic as a Synonym for Large.

Marion made it a practice to use all the new words she heard of in sentences. The other night she was listening while her mother read of the disaster of the Titanic.

"Mother," she said, "what does Titanic mean?"

"Titanic," her mother replied, "means very large, or big."

Marion was thoughtful for a minute. Then turning to her mother she said:

"I can use it in a sentence."

"How?" asked her mother.

"The Titanic ship hit an iceberg Titanicer than itself," said Marion.

WILD TIMES IN HONDURAS

Bandit Crew From Guatemala Raids a Village and Carries Off All the Women.

Paralleling the robbery of the Sabine women in early Roman history, a bandit crew from Guatemala dashed across the border recently and carried off the women of a tiny village. Excitement runs high, both here and throughout the colony, since the announcement that no troops could be sent to run the thieves to earth. That plans for a private invasion of Guatemala are in progress there is no doubt. A posse is expected to leave in a day or two well provided with arms and ammunition, to accompany the men of the village to the mountain lair where, it is thought, the brigands hold their fair captives.

The border near the point where the Mexican, Guatemala and British Honduran lines join is infested with outlaws, who, by jumping from one country to the other, avoid the rather lax vigilance which is maintained by the police departments in this vast and sparsely settled region. Near the line, in British territory, is the village of Bhilet Tree Bank, one of the chicle stations on the Upper Belize river. At present only ten families are making their homes in the place.

It was during the day that the robbers descended on the village and carried away the women, when the men were all to the woods tapping the sapote trees and collecting the chicle. Five young women, daughters of the chicle gatherers, accompanied by an older woman, who was the wife of one of the workmen, were washing clothing on the banks of the river. The other women, who were in the houses, heard screams and ran out to see their friends and relatives being driven before a band of no less than 12 men.

The alarm was given as soon as possible, but as the men of the village were several miles away and widely scattered to the forests, it was night before all were summoned home. Their lack of sufficient firearms made pursuit impossible until arms and ammunition had been secured.

Loading their effects into canoes and bringing the remaining women and children with them, the chicle gatherers came down stream as rapidly as the current and sturdily plied paddles could bring them.

On arrival here their story was soon circulated throughout the city. First the authorities were consulted, but it soon was apparent that the red tape surrounding legal procedure would bar any effective action. Many men volunteered to join the "chicleros," and while the expedition is being conducted as secretly as possible, there is little danger of police interference, as they are thought to sympathize with the movement—Belize (British Honduras) Dispatch New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Man Power and Coal Power.

Does any one realize the power of coal as a worker? A man was set to work to pump as hard as he could all day and at the end of ten hours it was found that he had done just as much work as a little less than two ounces of coal could do.

Taking all the energy put forth by a hard-working man during one whole year, the same amount of force would be furnished by 88 pounds of good coal, or say 40 pounds of average coal.

We produce six tons a head of population, and this contains the energy of 336 men working for a whole year.

Of course, even in our best engines the greater part of the working energy of coal is wasted. But even if only one-tenth is turned to account, one and a half hundred weight of coal is equal to a man working for 300 days of the year.

A horse can do as much work as ten men, but one and a quarter pounds of coal has as much working force as a horse expends in one day. So that a ton of coal, if we could use all its force, would do as much work as six horses working for a whole year.

Captain's Specific Orders.

Capt. John I. Lewis, an official of the Arundel Sand and Gravel company of Baltimore, has toured the world. Captain Lewis in recalling some of his trips said that he met a friend one time, and they talked of the dangers of icebergs.

He remembered that his friend, also a tourist, said:

"One night while returning from Europe I came out on deck. It was so foggy that nothing could be seen. The captain of the ship was walking the deck and I approached him and said:

"'How fast are we going?'

"The master replied, 'Twenty-two miles an hour.'

"'Is not that a violation of the law?' I asked The captain admitted that it was.

"Then I asked, 'Why do you run so fast through a fog?'

"The captain replied, 'My official standing orders are 'Heaven, hell or New York in five days.'"

Bridget Nonplussed.

Mrs Jenkins had retired to her room to try to sleep off a headache. She had a particularly devoted maid, Bridget. Bridget now annoyed Mrs. Jenkins greatly by tiptoeing to her door every little while and peeping in at her

Finally Mrs. Jenkins called to Bridget and asked her not to do it as it was disturbing her, to which Bridget replied:

"Shure, Mrs. Jenkins, phat am I to do? Whin yez makes a noise I think yez wants me, an' whin yer ia quiet I gits to thinkin' maybe yez is dead."

WHEN MUIR REJOICED

NATURALIST WRITES ABOUT A "NOBLE EARTHQUAKE."

Impressive Description of Shocks in Yosemite Valley Which Gave Birth to a New Mountain Avalanche Talus While He Looked.

"A noble earthquake! A noble earthquake!" exclaimed John Muir, when he was awakened at half-past two o'clock of a moonlit morning in the Yosemite valley. For years he had believed that the many great avalanche taluses leaning against the walls of the valley at intervals of a mile or two, had been caused by an earthquake at least three centuries before, and here was his chance to make some observations. Never before had he enjoyed a storm of this sort, but the strange, thrilling motion could not be mistaken, and as he ran out of his cabin, both glad and frightened as he made his exclamation.

"The shocks were so violent and varied, and succeeded one another so closely," he writes in the Century, "that I had to balance myself carefully in walking, as if on the deck of a ship among waves, and it seemed impossible that the high cliffs of the valley could escape being shattered. In particular I feared that the sheer-fronted Sentinel rock, towering above my cabin, would be shaken down, and I took shelter back of a large yellow pine, hoping that it might protect me from at least the smaller outbounding boulders."

The most impressive part of his description is of the sounds. "It was a calm, moonlight night," he says, "and no sound was heard for the first minute or so save low, muffled, bubbling underground rumblings, and the whispering and rustling of the agitated trees, as if Nature were holding her breath. Then suddenly out of the strange silence and strange motion there came a tremendous roar. The Eagle rock, on the south wall about half a mile up the valley, gave way, and I saw it falling in thousands of the great boulders I had so long been studying, pouring to the valley floor in a free curve luminous from friction, making a terribly sublime spectacle—an arc of glowing, passionate fire, fifteen hundred feet span, as true to form and as serene in beauty as a rainbow in the midst of the stupendous rock storm. The sound was so tremendously deep and broad and earnest that the whole earth, like a living creature, seemed at last to have found voice, and to be calling to her sister planets. In trying to tell something of the size of this awful sound, it seems to me that if all the thunder of all the storms I had ever heard were condensed into one roar, it would not equal the rock roar at the birth of a mountain talus. Think, then, of the roar that arose to heaven at the simultaneous birth of the ancient canyon taluses throughout the length and breadth of the range!"

The Indians and many of the white men left the valley in terror of this earthquake, the final rumblings of which were not over for two months, but Muir remained to study its effects. Among other things, he kept a bucket of water on his cabin table to learn what he could of the movements.

Pedigree Was Fine, But—.

Though nepotism has been known to get good railroad jobs for young men, there is one passenger official in Kansas City with whom family connections do not go very far.

A few days ago the official in question was in quest of an additional man for his office.

The letter contained some glowing testimonials of some of the things accomplished by the young man's ancestors and relatives. But it didn't set very far with the passenger official, who sent the following laconic reply to the young man's indorser:

"Judging from your letter, the young man you recommend must have a good pedigree. However, I merely desire a clerk now, but if I conclude to start a stock farm later, I will let you know and will be glad to give the young man a chance."—Kansas City Journal.

Planting the Poppies.

When the daffodils are in flower the garden begins to regain the attractions which it lost in winter, and the tasks which the spring imposes are entered on with zest. Among the most important is the sowing of annuals. Two very common mistakes should be avoided. One is sowing too thickly and the other sowing too deeply. An annual such as a Shirley poppy, when well grown, will occupy a square foot of ground at least, yet in that space dozens, if not scores, of seeds are often sown. The result is a tremendous waste, not only of seeds, but also of plants, for all that do grow must be spoilt, unless they are thinned quickly and severely.

Paradoxical Display.

Miss Mary Garden, at a dinner at Sherry's in New York, said of a beautiful girl who was wearing one of the ultra-decollete dinner gowns of the 1912 season:

"When you see a pretty girl in such a low cut gown as that, you have a remarkable paradox before you—the paradox of a person who displays simultaneously very bad taste and very good form."

"No, sir. I have reasons for stayin' away."

"Oh, you have! And what may your reasons be? I should like to explain them away, if possible."

"Well, sir, I doubt you'll manage that. They are very decided objections. The first is that I don't believe in bein' where one does all the speakin'; the second is that I don't believe in so much singin' as we get in your church; the third, and last, and most important reason of all is that it was in your church that I got my wife!"

Live Your Life.

We sometimes wonder of what use we are, and why we are put on earth. One day is added to another and we seem to be no further advanced on the pathway of our lives. As Mark Twain would have put it, we do not appear to be gaining on the scenery. Yet there is room in the world, and need in the world, for each and every one of us, and, therefore, we must keep on going to the end Emerson has a poem in which the squirrel talks to the mountain and says: "If I cannot carry forests on my back neither can you crack a nut." You can do something nobody else can do, namely, live your life You have the chance, if you will only take it, and I have mine If we can do nothing else we can at least be some one's friend, and there is nothing that the world more keenly wants and sadly needs.—Ladies' Home Journal

Sound Values—Good Service—Courteous Treatment

THESE are the advantages you gain by trading with the I H C local dealer. He is a good judge of values in farm machines. He sells machines of guaranteed quality, and stands behind them to see that they make good. When he sells you an he sets up the machine, tests it, and makes sure that everything is right before he delivers it. He shows you how to use the machine, to make it last longest. In case of accident he can furnish repair parts promptly—repairs that fit. He gives you service worth far more than it costs you.

I H C Manure Spreader
Kemp 20th Century, Corn King, or Cloverleaf

I H C manure spreaders are made in both return and endless apron styles, but all aprons run alike on large rollers. Non-friction roller bearings are used wherever practical, making the machine easy on the horses. The feed is variable and positive. The machines pulverize the manure and distribute it evenly in a light or heavy coat, as may be needed. Because they distribute manure properly, I H C spreaders use less than half as much manure as fork spreading to cover the same amount of ground. They make one ton of manure go as far as two, and do better fertilizing with far less labor than the old-fashioned method.

MENTOR.

Mr. Albert Haskell died at his home on Tuesday last of some heart complications, and was buried from his home on Thursday. Mr. Haskell was an old soldier and is survived by one brother, Mr. William Haskell, of Concord, and one sister, Miss Emily Haskell, who still lives on the old homestead here, and one child, Miss Carrie Haskell of Cleveland.

Mrs. Frank Daniels of Virginia is spending some weeks with her mother, Mrs. Upham, and her three sisters, Mrs. A. D. Carleton, Mrs. Frank Jenkins and Miss Louise Upham.

Miss Frances Cleveland returned home from Chautauqua, N. Y. on Thursday last, having completed the Librarian's course of study, and having won her "Sheepskin" by dint of much hard study during the six or more weeks of her stay there. Although Miss Frances has had the offer of two much better paying positions [illegible] in little old Mentor village, she much prefers remaining among her friends and declares that she shall do so for the present, at least.

Miss Nelly King spent a part of last week in Cleveland as the guest of her friend, Miss Mary Anderson, and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Anderson, all well known in our village.

Mrs. Frank Sandberg has been serving as usual most satisfactorily, in the Mentor Telephone Exchange during the absence of Miss Bessie Irwin who has been spending her vacation with relatives up in Michigan.

Some of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Frost have heard from them since their arrival in Petosky, Mich., where they are most pleasantly situated, where hay-fever patients are quite in evidence, and where they expect now to remain until early in October It was the train just ahead of them that was wrecked, and so their train was delayed and put to considerable inconvenience thereby

Mrs Lilila Morley Nutting of Cleveland is the guest of her aunt, Miss Hattie Martindale in Kirtland for a short time now, and is also with the families of her brothers, the Messrs W P and T D Morley whose homes are here

Mr Grant Cowles has been on the sick list most of this past week and under the care of Dr Tanner of Willoughby

Miss Marjory Jackett has returned in time to begin school at the Center, having spent the entire summer vacation with relatives in the East

Miss Ella Freeman is to begin her school in the Reynolds District on Tuesday next, and Mrs Frank Higgins will go to Wickliffe to teach the Primary Dept there, she much preferring that work to the position of Principal, which was offered her

The new store of Mr. Bradway has so far succeeded in getting a footing in our village, that a clerk has been engaged, and Derket Howard who has served so acceptably with Robt Case in his general store, will take orders and deliver the goods from the new store, we hear

Messrs Irving Larned of Detroit and Fred Larned of Cleveland were here on business a short time last week.

Miss Carrie Justus is enjoying a visit from her cousin Miss Marion Amidon of Los Angeles, Calif., just at present, and is also expecting to spend a part of her summer vacation of a month, down at Geneva-on-the-Lake with friends.

The very acceptable news has been passed around among the patrons of the public schools at the Center, that James McMahon of Willoughby, has been engaged to teach music in all the schools, in place of Miss Eva Cadle. Mr. McMahon is a Mentor boy and such a great favorite here, that we have heard the wish expressed that he would move his family back, and make his home here.

Miss Shields of Independence, O., has been engaged to teach the Intermediate Dept at the Center, made vacant by the resignation of Miss Littlejohn. Miss Shields comes highly recommended, and will be accompanied by her widowed mother, we understand; and are thereby led to hope for other permanent residents

Miss Eva Cadle, who has taught music here so very acceptable for so many years, was married on Wednesday morning last, to Mr. Howard Bundy of Willoughby; and started immediately on a delightful trip to the Adirondack mountains

Miss Margery Brooks of Warren, has been spending her school vacation at "Lacwood" the home of her grand-father, Mr Edmund Cadle, but is expecting to return home this week.

Miss Frances Case is to attend school at Washington, D C this coming year, but will not go until sometime next month

The Miscellany Club begins its year's work next week with Mrs Harry King, as President. The first meeting is to be something of a Social affair, when the Club are to be entertained by the Literary Committee at the home of Mrs. Clara Gilbert in the west end of the village.

Mrs. J. W. Lowe accompanied by her father, Mr. Wm. Ackley spent a short time at North Bloomfield, Ohio last week, where they renewed many old acquaintances.

Mrs. [illegible] is a guest at the home of her husband's brother Dr. Albert Church and his family, at Lorain, Ohio, for the week.

News has just arrived of the decided improvement of Mrs Jane Lowrence and her daughter Mrs Robert Case is expecting to be able to return home sometime during the latter part of the week.

Dr. Bruce Higgins of Bangor, Me., and his bride, have been guests of Mrs Phoebe Woodford and her family over the Sabbath just passed Dr Higgins has been searching for a desirable location somewhere in the Southland, and has decided to locate in old Kentucky

Mr Arthur Andrews and his "coterie" of workmen, have just completed [illegible] Mr. W. P. Murray for two new tenant houses, to be built on the old Aldrich farm, which is now owned by Mr. Murray, and operated for him by his foreman Mr. John Miller.

NO SPOOKS FOR MUGGINS

Was Afraid of Nothing He Could Understand, But Apparition Was Too Much for Him.

Muggins goes to camp with his folks every summer on the shore of a large inland lake, and one of the bulldog's favorite amusements here is in chasing the tiny chipmunks which throng the woods. He never was known to capture one, but this does not in the least dampen his enthusiasm for the pursuit. It is amusing to watch Muggins hustle one of these tiny creatures up into a big tree and then sit patiently at its foot waiting for his prey to come down—which it quite often does, but on the opposite side of the trunk, whence it scurries away to pastures new, while poor deluded Muggins, all unaware of its escape, sits gazing intensely upward in wide-eyed anticipation of his quarry's reappearance.

Muggins despises water, but one day in his eager rush for a chipmunk he was over the bank before he knew it and landed kerflop on his back with such force as to send him way below the surface. Disgust spoke from every feature of his expressive countenance as he hastily scrambled ashore.

Once as Muggins' master stood in the boathouse on the lake shore and saw his favorite trotting toward him, a mischievous thought came to him and he prepared to surprise the innocent bulldog. Hastily cutting two round holes for his eyes in a big paper flour bag, which lay at hand, he pulled it down over his head and shoulders and doubled over so as to look altogether unnatural. Just as Muggins entered the door he sprang forward with a dismal "boo!" and the dog, who fears nothing on the face of the earth which he can understand, jumped backward, rending the air with a series of distracted barks, then tore wildly away on a race for his life, without even a backward glance at the awful apparition. He did not stop at camp, but fled into a field far above, where he installed himself in the open and continued his excited barking for over three hours, when he was finally coaxed back to quarters by his repentant tormentor.

Then They Hit Up the Sirup.

"While on a western tour in connection with certain investigations of the committee on Indian affairs, Senator Carroll S. Page of Vermont happened to get in conversation with a man at Ashland, Wis.

"From Vermont?" chuckled the man. "Why, I was born at Swanton, Vt."

"So was I," said the senator.

"So did mine," replied the Vermont senator.

"My father dealt in hides and wool."

"So did mine," echoed the senator.

In this unexpected way the sons of the old Vermont partners had met after 40 years, and tradition has it that they went off quietly arm in arm for a feast of maple sirup, in memory of childhood days at Swanton in the old Green Mountain state.—Joe, Chapple's News-Letter.

The Yellow Letter

SYNOPSIS.

Harding Kent calls on Louise Farrish to propose marriage and finds the house in great excitement over the attempted suicide of her sister Katharine. Kent starts an investigation and finds that Hugh Crandall, suitor for Katharine, who had been forbidden the house by General Farrish, had talked with Katharine over the telephone just before she shot herself. A torn piece of yellow paper is found, at sight of which General Farrish is stricken with paralysis. Kent discovers that Crandall has left town hurriedly. Andrew Elser, an aged banker, commits suicide about the same time as Katharine attempted her life.

CHAPTER III.—(Continued.)

I glanced quickly at Davis. I fully expected to see in his face something of the same astonishment I had felt. I was disappointed. With a casual glance at the envelope he turned to Dowd as if waiting for him to go on.

"It's evidence in the Elser case," the detective went on, "turned in by the man on post who reported the suicide. He was that old party that was found dead in his room up on West Twenty-third street. To my mind, it's just a plain case of suicide—an old man tired of living. The poison bottle was there on the floor beside him. I don't see nothing suspicious about it, but the chief has taken a notion that there's something behind it and wants to know where this letter came from. We searched the room, but this torn envelope was all we could find. The postmark's torn through, but he thought maybe you could trace it anyhow."

"I'll see what I can do and I'll let you know in the morning," said the inspector calmly, dismissing the detective with a nod. From his matter-of-fact tone and apparent lack of interest I would not have been surprised if he had refused this undertaking, too, as he had mine, though it seemed to me that the two bits of yellow paper connected the two suicides at the same hour as something decisively more than a mere coincidence.

As soon, however, as the detective had left the room the inspector's whole manner changed. With the glitter of excitement in his alert eyes he turned to me and explosively said:

"Quick, let me see that yellow scrap."

I had placed it carefully in my wallet after he had refused my request. As I drew it out now he almost snatched it from my hand. Putting it on his desk beside the torn envelope, he picked up a reading-glass and studied both pieces carefully. His inspection lasted for several minutes, and meanwhile I, too, studied the torn envelope.

Both in color and texture the paper so closely resembled the scrap that I was positive that they were of the same lot. The envelope bore the address of Andrew Elser, in West Twenty-third street. Part of the postmark—most of it, in fact—had been destroyed, as if in the careless opening of the letter with the finger. All that was decipherable was a capital "A" and part of another letter that might have been either an "N" or an "R." In the lower part of the circle was a fragment of a letter that looked as if it might have been an "N." I noticed, too, that the stamp had been stuck on rather carelessly, in a lopsided manner.

My friend, his inspection completed, turned to me apologetically.

"I beg your pardon, Harding Kent," he said, "you were entirely right. These two bits of paper are key-notes in an important mystery, one that it is well worth my while to try to solve."

"What made you change your mind so suddenly?" I asked, for though I quite agreed with him, his manner had puzzled me not a little.

He leaned back in his chair and turned it so that he faced me. He had a sharp, explosive way of speaking, biting off his words almost before he had completely enunciated them.

"Can't you see? One footprint leads nowhere. Two footprints start a path. When you brought that yellow scrap to me you were merely guessing that it might have something to do with the strange happenings in the Farrish home. There was no way in which you could have positive knowledge, nor could I. You were only guessing."

"Indeed, I wasn't!" I exclaimed indignantly. "What drew my attention to it was General Farrish's exclamation of terror at the sight of it just before he fell paralyzed."

Davis shook his head determinedly.

"That meant much—or nothing. It may have been mere senile hysteria superinduced by the great shock. At some time in his life he may have had some unpleasant experience which was associated in his subconscious memory with a yellow document. Wrought up as he was by the news of his daughter's attempt to kill herself, the brain cells called into action were those that had recorded other disturbing experiences, perhaps a month ago, perhaps forty years ago. No impressions in the brain records are ever lost. The sight of the yellow paper probably recalled some other yellow paper. There was then no evidence whatever that it was this particular piece of paper that so agitated him."

"But you think so now," I suggested.

"The situation has entirely changed. There was nothing to show that this piece of paper had ever come through the mail. There was nothing to connect it with suicide. Dowd comes in here with a similar piece of paper that plainly has been mailed. We now have not one footprint, but two—the beginning of a path. Once started on the path, we can solve the mystery."

"Then you think there is some connection between the two bits of paper?"

"I know there is," said Davis. [illegible] yellow [illegible] same quality and texture—to all appearances the same paper. Two persons in whose possession they were, attempt suicide on the same day. The same person, or at least the same typewriter, wrote both the address on the envelope and the contents of the letter. This envelope came from a country post office in either New York or New Jersey within a month—some post-office the name of which begins with 'Ar' or 'An.' There are not many rural offices that will fit in all particulars. In two days or sooner, I can tell you exactly from what office they were mailed."

"Letters—you think there were two? Might not this be the envelope in which this paper came?"

"That presupposes an acquaintance between Elser and Miss Farrish, at least a connection of some sort. Did she know him?"

"I don't think so. Her sister and I were talking of the Elser suicide last night after we saw the evening papers. Louise surely would have known it if her sister was acquainted with him."

"Perhaps," said Davis doubtfully. "There isn't a human being ever lived that has not a secret that they keep from some one. It looks to me, though, as if in all probability there were two distinct letters. That is what makes me suspect a plot. It convinces me that the mails are being used for an improper and more than likely a criminal purpose. This brings the case or both cases properly in my domain as a post office inspector."

"And I can count on your assistance, after all," I said joyfully. "When can you begin work?"

"I have begun," he said tersely, pushing over for my inspection something he had hastily scrawled on a pad lying on his desk. It was an order addressed to the superintendent of the railway mails, which read:

"Have all railway clerks on New York and New Jersey routes report from what rural office within the last month they have received large quantities of letters in yellow envelopes, if letters have been discontinued, when? DAVIS."

"Large quantities!" I gasped. "Were there more than two?"

"Of course," he snapped, in a way that showed me he did not wish to be questioned further. Then he reached for his hat and coat, and with an abrupt "Come along!" led the way to the elevator.

"Where are you going?" I asked as he rushed me hurriedly through Park place to the Sixth Avenue Elevated.

"To Twenty-third street," he replied, "to find out what the police have not."

In the "L" train I told him in low tones of Crandall's apparent connection with the case and of his sudden disappearance. He sat silent, his whole bearing indicating such abstraction that I doubted if he had heard a word I was saying, but suddenly, just before we left the train, he startled me by asking:

"Do you know Crandall? What color are his eyes?"

I regretted that I had to say no to the first question, and that I did not, to the latter, which query amazed me greatly. What connection the color of a man's eyes could possibly have with two attempts at suicide and a lot of mysterious yellow letters from a rural post-office was entirely beyond me. Curious as I was, I hesitated to question him on the subject, for experience had taught me that he was better at asking than answering.

Instead of going directly to the boarding-house where Elser had killed himself, he took the other side of the street and turned abruptly into a house, beside the door of which was a doctor's plate.

"Is Doctor Berner in?" he asked of the maid, and on being shown into the physician's office, introduced himself as "Inspector Davis" and began questioning the doctor about the Elser suicide.

Though the papers had made no mention of Doctor Berner, the statement being that a policeman had called an ambulance from Bellevue Hospital, it now appeared that the landlady had summoned him as soon as the suicide was discovered. Elser was dead, so he had withdrawn as soon as the policeman arrived.

"Did you ever have Elser as a patient?" asked the inspector.

The doctor reflected.

"Only once, about two years ago. I gave him something for insomnia. He called here at the office and I wrote him a prescription. He was to return in a few days for further treatment, but he did not do so. Another time—"

The doctor hesitated.

"There was another time I had almost forgotten, a year or two before that. He met me in the street one day and asked what my office hours were on Saturday. He explained that he was the guardian of a boy who was in a boarding-school. The child had some slight throat trouble and he wished me to make an examination. On the following Saturday he brought the boy here, a bright little chap about ten."

"Do you know the boy's name? What school did he attend?" The inspector fired this question rapidly, but it was quickly apparent that the doctor had nothing more to tell, so we left.

"What a wonderful man you are!" I exclaimed as the doctor's door closed behind us. "How did you learn that Doctor Berner had been called in after Elser killed himself?"

"There is nothing wonderful about my knowledge," answered Davis with a laugh. "What is the first thing that people do when anything happens? They run for the nearest doctor. Doctor Berner is the nearest doctor. Could anything be simpler?"

The simplicity of his logic amazed me. It was like a conjurer's trick after it has been explained; or like one of those puzzle-pictures with hidden faces. You work hours trying to find them, and after you have found them you wonder how you ever happened not to see them.

We now arrived at Mrs. Trask's boarding-house—one of those dingy ex-residences that proclaimed its retrogression by a white slip of paper on the door frame. I had supposed that here, too, my friend would introduce himself as "Inspector Davis" on account of the prestige it would give him in searching the rooms, but to the slattern maid who came to the door wiping her hands he merely said:

"Tell your mistress a couple of gentlemen are inquiring about room and board."

Mrs. Trask was the old-school boarding-house mistress fast disappearing before the inroads of the family apartment hotel. "Better days" was written all over her, though somewhat obscured by years in boarding-house grease. Eying us sharply through her spectacles, she inquired how much we were willing to pay, meanwhile debating with herself whether it was necessary to ask for references.

Davis' "not more than twelve dollars a week each" apparently convinced her that references were unnecessary, for she at once led the way to what she described as the second floor front, the room in which Elser had killed himself only the day before. Probably she had no intention of telling us this, but garrulity overcame her caution. She had been expatiating on the advantages of the room—Heaven knows it needed an eloquent advocate!—when suddenly she lowered her voice to a mysterious whisper.

"One gentleman has occupied this room for fourteen years—ever since I've had the house, and a fine old gentleman he was, too. I wouldn't have the room vacant but what happened to him yesterday." She let her voice sink still lower. "If it was a couple of ladies looking at the room I wouldn't be telling it, but I know you gentlemen won't mind. It was in this room yesterday Mr. Elser killed himself, not on the bed, but right here on the floor. It was poison he took—cyanide of mercury, the doctor said."

"You don't say!" exclaimed the inspector, as if he had heard the news for the first time. "Why did he do it?"

"It's more than I can say," said Mrs. Trask, evidently well pleased to talk about the tragedy. "I did everything I could to keep him comfortable and happy. He spent all his time here since he gave up his office down- was a complaint out of him. On Saturdays he used to go up to Westchester to see a boy that he was guardian town. He read the papers every morning in the parlor. Every afternoon he took a walk. He was always on time to his meals and there never for. Every Saturday night regular he paid his board, that is, up to last week—that's still owing."

"Did he have any visitors?"

"No, I don't recollect that there was ever any one here to see him, though occasionally he used to bring the boy down here to lunch on Saturday or Sunday. He hasn't had him here, though, for the last three years."

"Did he receive any mail?"

"Ain't it queer, now, that you speak of that! The first letter he had in months came only last week. The police found part of the envelope on the floor beside him. Them and me both looked through all his things, but never a trace of the letter could we find. I can't, for the life of me think what he could have done with it. I know the letter must have had some sort of good news for him, for after he received it, for several days he was as bright and chipper as could be, more like himself than he had been for years. Then yesterday somebody telephoned to him—I don't know who it was, for I was out marketing—and he never had any 'phone calls before that I know of. Right after lunch he went out and was gone until after three. Soon after he came in he killed himself in this very room."

To my mind things were beginning to look blacker and blacker for Crandall. The parallel between the cases of Katharine and Elser was entirely too strong for it to have been mere coincidence. We knew it was Crandall who had telephoned Katharine. It must have been he who had called Elser. There was much to be explained. What it was that had driven them both to seek death was still a mystery to me. My mind reverted to my original theory that there was a child, whose existence had been kept from the world, that was in some way connected with the Farrish family. Old Elser was the guardian of a boy. Suppose this boy was the child. It would establish a possible connection between the two suicides. It would explain why Katherine might have known old Elser yet never have mentioned the man to Louise.

I took it for granted that Davis would ask the landlady further about the child. Of course, he would want to know the boy's name and the name of the school where Elser kept him, but he made no further inquiries. Telling the landlady he would let her know in a day or two about the room, he turned to me with:

"Come on, Kent, it is time we had some luncheon."

"It must have been Crandall," I asserted with conviction.

"It may have been Crandall," the inspector replied. "Was Crandall left handed?"

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Tramps at Sea and Ashore

Whoever first named the wandering cargo steamship "tramp" did it in a moment of inspiration. A sea tramp and a shore tramp have more in common than the name. These steamers go everywhere in the same slouchy, aimless way, without knowing whither they will sail from the next port, and never knowing when they will get into the lane that leads home. Tramps ashore and afloat carry with them enough to cover their nakedness; the bare necessities of life suffice; they are involuntary ascetics. Tramp steamers have the pinched, hungry look of a city newsboy, for they were born in adversity, and the chill breath of economy constantly blows over them. They are the undermanned, underfed, overloaded Ishmaelites of the sea. Every seaman's tongue is against them, and the merchants of the world conspire to get their goods carried in them for nothing. It is seldom one hears anybody speak respectfully of a tramp. Men in liners, deep water vessels, and regular trades will allude with an inflection of pride to "my ship;" coasting men speak of "them tramps" with a sniff of scorn that defies interpretation. Those who go in them, especially the officers, speak in a deprecating, half-apologetic way of their being on a tramp, as though caught where they should not be.—George McPherson Hunter, in Survey.

Fewer Fogs in London.

Efforts of the Coal Smoke Abatement society in greatly reducing the volume of smoke have been instrumental in making black fogs rare in London. A few years ago these fogs were quite frequent in London in winter, and for several days at a time the city itself and the outlying suburbs were covered by a dark, black pall, sometimes high in the air, but more frequently descending and forming a thick, dirty and greenish-yellowish substance through which the people had to travel. Fogs still occur in London, but only occasionally, and not for several years has there been an old-fashioned fog, when torch bearers had to be employed to indicate the way.

An Exaggerated Comparison.

"What makes you think that man is necessarily a great statesman?" asked Senator Sorghum.

"Because he is a clever lawyer."

"My dear sir, to assume that a clever lawyer is necessarily a great statesman is the same as taking it for granted that a [illegible]."

Saving Faith

Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and Thou Shalt Be Saved.—Acts 16:31.

THERE are many important problems which in this life call for solution, but no question can possibly be so momentous as the query of the jailer of Philippi, "What must I do to be saved?" nor any answer to that question at once so simple and so comprehensive as the reply of Paul, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." In every age men have in multitudes been moved to ask this question, and the name is legion of those who have found comfort and peace in accepting the solution offered by prisoner Paul, and believing savingly in the name of the redeeming Christ.

In the present day there are many men of "mere morality" who continue like their predecessors in history to pride themselves on their upright life and "good works," and decline to submit as humble suppliants for pardon at the foot of the cross on which Jesus died for sinners.

There is still need, however, for the simple, earnest and direct preaching of the truth that Jesus died for sinful men and that the only way to the favor of God lies past the foot of an uplifted cross.

Three Elements of Faith.

The question, however, may arise: What is it to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ savingly? Many enquirers are in real perplexity on that point. No Christian believer should be in ignorance of the true answer to that query. It is a fact that human language is inadequate to fully state all the implications of redemption, and there may be elements of this saving belief on the Lord Jesus which escape detection and analysis, in the present world at least, but the broad outlines of redemption may be mastered by a child's intelligence, so long as a child's spirit of simplicity and sincerity moves to the inquiry. There are, it may be said, three elements in saving faith, no one of which may safely be neglected. These are the assent of the mind, the consent of the will and the obedience of the life.

The assent of the mind is required by the Master to a few simple propositions which, if language means anything at all, are readily discerned as an integral part of the teaching of God's Word. In order to be saved man must regard Jesus as a Saviour, and that, too, a divine Saviour. He is not born of God—in this century any more than in the first century, when John wrote—who does not confess that Jesus Christ is come in the flesh, and the means come as a divine and all-sufficient Redeemer, being at once the incarnation and the interpreter of the one God. The sinfulness of man, the need of the new birth, the dependence of mankind on God's Holy Spirit, the eternal difference between right and wrong and the final issues of life ultimating in heaven or hell—these are the salient outlines of the New Testament teachings, which the spiritually illumined see. Without some such irreducible minimum of mental conviction the content of salvation is not provided.

Must Have Consent of Will.

But when the mind has assented to certain doctrinal teachings the will must consent to the mode and process of salvation. Perhaps this activity of assenting is in actual practice contemporaneous with that of consenting. At any rate, the will must be reached with the gospel motives, and must yield to them, if salvation is to be made possible. The will is in a sense the man. The will and the affections are bound up mysteriously together. Unless a man wills to be saved he cannot be saved.

There is a third element in salvation which, in all cases of genuine conversion, practically follows the other two, and that is the obedience of the life. This is not the ground but the result of the sinner's justification. The fruit which the plant bears is not the source, but is the proof of its life. Men are not saved by their good works, it is true, but it is certain that they are not saved without them. The apostle Paul pierced this error, when he exclaimed: "Shall we continue in sin that grace may abound? God forbid!" It is a point that cannot be too much insisted on that while sinners are saved they are saved from their sins and are the Lord's redeemed. The "magna charta" of believers is expressed in the assurance: "Sin shall have no more dominion over you."

Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ with such an intelligent, practical faith as this, and thou shalt be saved. Satan is intent on mystifying the mind, deflecting the will and debasing the conduct of all would-be believers on the redeeming Christ, but we are not ignorant of his devices, nor should we allow others to be misled by him and thus defeated of their heavenly

Upward and Outward.

"This commandment have we from him, That he who loveth God loveth his brother also"—1 John 4:21.

Most religions are meant to be straight lines, connecting two points: God and man. But Christianity has three points: God and man and his brother, with two lines that make a right angle. Each one of us is at the point of the angle, looking up to God and out to our brother. What God sends down the perpendicular line we must pass along the horizontal. If one hand goes up to God, the other must go out to our brother.—Rev. Maltbie D. Babcock.

To Prove and Strengthen Us.

All providences are doors to trials. Even our mercies, like roses, have their thorns. Our mountains are not too low for temptation; trials lurk on all roads. Everywhere, above and beneath, we are beset and surrounded with dangers. Yet no shower falls unpermitted from the threatening cloud; every drop has its order ere it hastens to the earth. The trials which come from God are sent to prove and strengthen us.—C. H. Spurgeon.

SYMPATHY, BUT NO APOLOGY

Lawyer's Tart Remarks Not Greatly Softened by His Rejoinder When "Called Down."

Andrew Lipscomb, who practices law before the courts of Maryland, was trying his first case before a judge named Merrick. Lipscomb, wishing to impress the judge, was, in the language of the bar, right lippy in his remarks to the eminent gentleman. Finally, Merrick lost patience and exclaimed:

"Sit down! Sit down, sir! If you don't sit down I'll fine you for contempt of court."

Lipscomb sat down, but turned to a young lawyer beside him, and remarked, in an undertone:

"That's the crustiest, most opinionated old judge I ever saw. I'll show him where he gets off. He's an old fool."

"If you talk like that, I'll beat you up!" replied the young lawyer. "He's my father."

ECZEMA IN RED BLOTCHES

205 Kanter Ave., Detroit, Mich.—"Some time last summer I was taken with eczema. It began in my hair first with red blotches, then scaly, spreading to my face. The blotches were red on my face, dry and scaly, not large; on my scalp they were larger, some scabby. They came on my hands. The inside of my hands were all little lumps as though full of shot about one-sixteenth of an inch under the skin. Then they went to the outside and between and all over my fingers. It also began on the bottoms of my feet and the calves of my legs, and itch, oh, my! I never had anything like it and hope I never will again. The itching was terrible. My hands got so I could scarcely work.

"I tried different eczema ointments but without results. I also took medicine for it but it did no good. I saw the advertisement for a sample of Cuticura Ointment and Soap and sent for one. They did me so much good I bought some more, using them as per directions, and in about three weeks I was well again. Cuticura Soap and Ointment entirely cured me." (Signed) Benj. Passage, Apr. 5, 1912.

To Reproduce Riot Scenes.

The recent riot at the Federal building, Los Angeles, will be reproduced at the trial of those arrested by motion picture films, and shown to the jury on a screen. It will be the first time in the history of jurisprudence that such evidence will have been introduced. While the riot was at its height a moving picture company, with the newest model machine, had an operator on the scene, and his films show the entire actions of those persons who are charged with having caused disturbance.

We Lead You To Fortune and Happy Life in California

Messrs. J. S. & W. S. Kuhn, the Pittsburgh bankers, are doing in the Sacramento Valley what the U. S. Government is doing elsewhere for the people.

There is ten times more net profit per acre in California irrigated land than in the East and with less labor.

Let us take you where there is comfort and happiness besides profit, climate equal to that of Southern Italy, no frosts nor snow, no thunderstorms nor sunstrokes.

Let us take you where big money is now being made, markets are near, demand for products great and income is sure.

Let us take you where railroad and river transportation is near, where there are denominational churches and graded schools.

Now is the time to buy this land—get in with the winners, the great Panama Canal will soon be ready and you can share in its triumphs; farms are selling rapidly, and we strongly urge you to purchase as soon as possible.

You can buy this land on very easy terms—$15.00 an acre now and the balance in ten yearly payments.

Give us an opportunity to take up all details with you—write us now.

Let us send you our fine illustrated printed matter telling all about it. Write for it at once—it gives you absolute proofs.

NERVOUS DESPONDENT WOMEN

Find Relief in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Their Own Statements So Testify.

Platea, Pa.—"When I wrote to you first I was troubled with female weakness and backache, and was so nervous that I would cry at the least noise, it would startle me so. I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies, and I don't have any more crying spells. I sleep sound and my nervousness is better. I will recommend your medicines to all suffering women."—Mrs. MARY HALSTEAD, Platea, Pa., Box 98.

Here is the report of another genuine case, which still further shows that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound may be relied upon.

Walcott, N. Dakota.—"I had inflammation which caused pain in my side, and my back ached all the time. I was so blue that I felt like crying if any one even spoke to me. I took Lydia E. "What's that?"

Keeping Water Cold.

If you are in the habit of taking a pitcher of iced water to your room on retiring, try this: Procure a square pasteboard box (with lid), sufficiently large to hold your pitcher, and give it two or three coats of varnish on the outside, allowing each coat to dry thoroughly. Place your pitcher of water in this box on retiring, putting the lid on tightly, and you are sure of having cold drinking water any hour of the night.

THIRTEEN YEARS.

Unlucky Number for Dakota Women.

The question whether the number "13" is really more unlucky than any other number has never been entirely settled.

A So. Dak. woman, after thirteen years of misery from drinking coffee, found a way to break the "unlucky spell." Tea is just as injurious as coffee because it contains caffeine, the drug in coffee. She writes:

"For thirteen years I have been a nervous wreck from drinking coffee. My liver, stomach, heart—in fact, my whole system being actually poisoned by it.

"Last year I was confined to my bed for six months. Finally it dawned on me that coffee caused the trouble. Then I began using Postum instead of coffee, but with little faith, as my mind was in such a condition that I hardly knew what to do next.

"Extreme nervousness and failing eyesight caused me to lose all courage. In about two weeks after I quit coffee and began to use Postum I was able to read and my head felt clear. I am improving all the time and I will be a strong, well woman yet.

"I have fooled more than one person with a delicious cup of Postum. Mrs. [illegible] wanted to know where I bought my fine coffee. I told her my grocer had it and when she found out it was Postum she has used it ever since, and her [illegible] are building up fine.

HORTICULTURE

CAUSE OF PLUM BLACK KNOT

Tree Wart Is Undoubtedly Due to Fungous Growth and Most Prevalent in Hot, Damp Seasons.

The plum tree wart or black knot is said to be due to a gall produced by an insect or from fungous growth. Mr. P. Barry, in his Fruit Garden, says it is undoubtedly due to fungous growth. It is most prevalent in hot, damp seasons. He says: "Cions should never be taken from a diseased tree. Cutting out the diseased branch clean to the sound wood, the moment the knots begin to appear, is an effectual remedy, and these cuttings should all be burnt at once. We have saved trees six inches in diameter, that were affected on the trunk so seriously that one-third of its thickness had to be removed to get below the disease. After it was cut out we applied a plaster of grafting composition, covered it with a cloth and in two years it was all healed over and sound.

"Plum and damson trees are the two fruits most injured by this fungous disease. If the warts are not cut out and the branches upon which they grow are not burnt, it will not be long before the entire tree is affected, causing the loss of the tree. Wild trees with this disease should be cut down and burnt.

"Slugs, which eat the tender leaves of the cherry and pear trees may be killed by dusting with fresh airslacked lime. Apply early in the morning when leaves are damp. Two applications will nearly always kill the worms and their larvae.

"The late broods of caterpillars should be destroyed before they leave the nest. If not killed when small, the worms will quickly eat up the young tender leaves, causing the loss of one or more branches of the tree. An asbestos torch, attached to the end of a pole of suitable length, is an effective way to destroy the nest and worms. The torch is sprayed with a little coal oil and when lighted, held under the nest and around the branch where the worms are, the heat kills the worms at once and will not injure the branches.

FEW MUSKMELON DISEASES

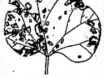
Leaf Blight Causes Large Dead Areas in Leaves—Fungus Attacks Stems of All Plants.

(By A. D. SELBY.)

Muskmelon leaf blight is a disease more or less peculiar to the muskmelon, although the fungus which causes it has also been found upon cucumber leaves.

The leaf blight causes rather large dead areas in the leaves, which are usually distinguished from those of mildew by their larger size and the tendency of the central portion to break out. The prevention of muskmelon leaf blight is by no means an easy matter, requiring of itself great thoroughness and carefulness in the application of the Bordeaux mixture and also requiring that the downy mildew shall be watched during the same period. For this reason earlier sprayings, if made before August 1, should be repeated at fortnightly intervals, while those after August 1 should be at weekly or ten-day intervals. Melon growers have succeeded by following these lines, while others who were less thorough were less successful or failed entirely. The Bordeaux treatment is recommended with confidence.



Muskmelon Leaf Attacked by Blight.

The common anthracnose fungus of the muskmelon attacks the stems of plants of all sizes as well as the leaves. In these the fungus produces the fruiting bodies. After the seedling stage is passed it is usually possible to keep the anthracnose in check by spraying with Bordeaux mixture.

Increasing Gooseberry Bushes.

In many places it will pay to plant more gooseberries. If you have a few old bushes that you like very much, the way to increase them is very simple. Lay down the tips of the branches next spring, and cover with earth. They will take root and may be removed in the fall.

A still better way, but it involves the loss of one crop of fruit, is to cut off all the tops of the old bush close to the ground, and cover an inch deep with earth. Anywhere from 12 to 40 sprouts will start up. After they are six inches high fill in with three inches of mellow earth. In the fall you will have as many well rooted plants as there were shoots, which may be cut off and set in a row.

Killing Trees.

Peeling trees in the late summer will kill them. The stumps can easily be removed with a stump puller or if the ground is cultivated around them they will rot in time. They may be destroyed by fire or blasted with a small can of dynamite. Sprouts can easily be killed after the trunk is dead by continually cutting them under the surface with a mattock and [illegible]

NEW POT FOR TRANSPLANTING

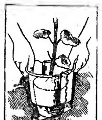
Made in Two Sections, Which Are Easily Separated and Damage to Flowers Eliminated.

A simple and effective pot for flowers and shrubbery that requires transplanting has been patented by an Idaho man. Of course, it costs more than the ordinary pot, but that is equalized by the fact that it lasts much longer and damage to transplanted flowers is eliminated. This new pot consists of two parts of steel metal, with dovetailing hinge eyes. Rods run through the hinge eyes on both sides and hold the pot together. When a plant is to be transferred from the pot to the ground a hole is dug in the latter and the pot inserted. The two rods are then withdrawn and the two sections of the pot fall away from the dirt surrounding the roots. The earth can then be packed back into the cavity and the flower transplanted without the slightest trouble or danger to the roots.



Transplanting Pot.

PLAN FOR WATERING TREES

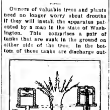
Tanks Sunk in Ground Supply Needed Moisture—Need Not Worry Over Dreaded Drouth.

Owners of valuable trees and plants need no longer worry about drouths if they will install the apparatus patented by a man in the state of Washington. This comprises a pair of tanks that are sunk in the ground on either side of the tree. In the bottom of these tanks are discharge outlets, and the flow of water through these outlets is regulated by means of plugs. There is also a drain opening in the bottom of each reservoir.



For Watering Trees.

Pipes extend up from these tanks to above the surface of the ground and through these pipes the reservoirs can be filled when the water gets low. This can be discovered by watching a float in one of them. As the water sinks this float slowly drops down with it and when the top of the float has fallen to the top of the pipe it is time to fill up again.

Experimenting With Peach.

The professors in the department of horticulture of the Missouri university are experimenting to produce hardier varieties of peaches for the accommodation of the state's climate, which is inclined to run to light early freezes. The new variety, if successful, will be a cross between the Elbertas and Crawfords.

Black Locust Trees.

Black locust is an excellent tree to grow for posts. But it is attacked by the borer in some localities.

Reset the Beds.

Reset the strawberry bed every two years for best results. It will pay well.

HORTICULTURAL NOTES

Blackberries are started from sprouts and by root cuttings.

Old canes of all bramble berry bushes are best cut out when through fruiting.

Dewberries and black raspberries are propagated in the same manner as blackberries.

New varieties of strawberries, like all of our cultivated fruits, are produced from the seeds.

Prune a little every year rather than too much in one year. It will be much easier for you and a great deal better for the orchard.

A moist soil, when kept in an unfrozen condition as long as possible, is the surest means to prevent winter killing of trees.

Remember that the wood ashes that come from the cook stove, fireplaces or furnace are the best kind of fertilizer for the orchard.

The holes for your new trees must be made larger, and deep enough to receive the entire root system without crowding or cramping.

Peach leaf curl is a common disease of the peach wherever peaches are grown, but it is most prevalent when the spring is cold and damp.

Health & Beauty Hints

By Katherine Morton

"My business requires a great deal of writing, and I find my eyes are beginning to hurt and look strained. Can you tell me any exercise for resting them or making them stronger? Also please advise me about the cosmetics I would need to give them a softer look when going out in the evening.

"A BUSINESS GIRL."

The eye is the most responsive of our physical parts, and from this very fact it requires a frequent change of focus. While doing any work which requires a close, fixed gaze, such as writing, sewing or embroidery, the worker should often lift her eyes and look off to a more distant point. If the office desk is near a window, pitch the gaze to the farthest object visible during these rests, which if only taken every half hour would be of benefit. But the oftener the gaze is directed toward distant objects the better—such as the blue tip of a distant hill, the horizon line, a shadowy church steeple, etc.—for the normal eye the far-off gazing is a natural rest. Small badly lighted rooms and the shut-in outlook of city life readily promote eye strain, for constant muscular effort is required to adjust the eye to close objects. If the window gazing is not possible, or the outlook provides only a view of high walls, a good expedient for resting the eyes is to hang pictures of mountains and landscapes with distant perspectives where the worker can see them easily when looking up from her close work.

Frequent rests of two or three minutes with the eyes closed are also helpful, and these will never be missed from the sum total of the day's work, being more than made up for by the greater ease with which the task can be pursued. But at the same time a definite eye strain often intimates a need of glasses, and if these are correctly fitted and used always for working moments, it is frequently possible to do without them at other times.

Washing the eyeball night and morning with tepid water and an antiseptic such as salt or boracic acid would undoubtedly be a comfort to much used eyes, and it would not be much extra bother to keep an eyecup in the dressing room of the office and repeat the baths several times during the day. The eyecup will cost ten cents and the tiniest pinch of salt is all that is needed, this being mainly to soften the effect of the water, which, when used alone pains the eyes considerably. The boracic acid being a definite antiseptic, is considered more helpful than the salt and it is best bought in crystal form. Put a teaspoonful of the crystals in a glass of boiled water, cover the glass and use the dilute fluid both in the eyecup and for bathing with absorbent cotton. The water will only take up as much of the acid as it can hold so more water can always be poured over the remaining crystals.

Many doctors advise the use of ice packs at night for very tired eyes, the chill of these reducing inflammation at once. Wrap up a little finely cracked ice in two bits of old handkerchief, and apply the packs to the closed eyes when lying down. Using the ice during the day as well would be a further benefit.

Sensitive eyes should always be guarded against the direct glare of artificial light, so the reading lamp must be shaded with a dark quiet color such as deep green and the light itself should fall over the left shoulder. When long exposed to a bright glare of artificial light the eyes out of gear may be seriously injured; as for perfectly well eyes they would have to be of the strongest sort to stand such abuse. Eyelids are for the especial purpose of guarding the eyes against too much light, but as they do not shut it all out healthful sleep can only be taken in a dark room.

The simplest coloring materials used are the cosmetic pencils, which can be had in every color, black, brown, auburn and blonde. Very dark brown, however, is more used than pure black, as this makes a line almost too heavy for naturalness. The pencil follows the natural line of the eyebrow, and as straight brows are now thought more beautiful than the curved ones once admired the very arched brow is never painted at the outside end. A very faint tinting is done on the upper and lower lid and for this the pencil is rubbed on a piece of paper and the powder transferred to the lids with a finger. This gives a softer and more blurred shadow than if lines were made with the pencil itself.

Crocheted Buttons.

Crocheted buttons are used on linen suits and dresses for summer wear and while quite expensive to buy can easily be made at home by the needle worker. Among the newest are those with a small crocheted rose in the center. The button mold is first covered with colored linen or silk, and the rose is enlarged by means of chain stitching taken around or under the outer petals. The last row of chain stitching is drawn together under the button and held in place, with the rose in the center of the button, by means of a coarse needle and thread.

Rings Tear Stockings.

Many women who wear silk stockings complain of small rips and broken stitches, and imagine that the stockings are faulty of make. But this is not always the difficulty. The cause of the little break often comes from running one's hand within the stockings while rings are on the fingers. These rings and the stones in them catch the tiny threads and break them, causing the damage.

Social Forms and Entertainments

In Honor of a Mother's Birthday.

I wish to entertain on my mother's fortieth birthday; can you give me a few suggestions as to what would be nice? There will be twenty guests, and I should like to have something that will be of interest to all.—E. R.

Of course the birthday cake will be the center of attraction, with its ring (symbol of eternity), containing forty candles. Make the ring out of a barrel hoop covered with the color of tissue paper that you choose for the decorations. Ask each guest to be prepared to make a wish or give a sentiment when she blows out a candle. If possible, write or ask some of your mother's old-time friends to send her a letter to be read on this occasion; this will be a most interesting feature and a surprise to the honored guest. Of course have the epistles sent to you, so the surprise will be complete. For souvenirs you could have small fans on which each guest will inscribe her name. Have a vase containing forty roses, and in the refreshments have the things your mother is fond of; her special cake, etc.

Questions from "Annie."

I am very interested in your columns. May I ask a few questions? Is a girl fifteen years old too old to wear Roman sandals? About how long should she wear her dresses? How would you fix your hair? Was there any harm in walking and talking to a young man whom I had never seen before? Do you think it is right for a boy to try to kiss a girl? Is a girl thirteen too young to have callers?—Annie.

I have seen girls as old as you are with sandals, but only on the beach or for very informal country wear. Dresses should come about to the tops of high shoes and hair is worn in Madonna braids around the head or in a soft roll with the ends braided or turned up with a bow of ribbon. There was decided harm in talking to a man whom you had never seen before. It is not right for a boy to try to kiss a girl, and boys who do it should be let severely alone by the girls until they learn better manners. I think a girl of your age is decidedly too young to have men callers.

Pertaining to a Wedding.

At a simple home wedding where expense is an item to be considered may the invitations for the ceremony be written and announcements sent to those who are not asked? Must any entertainment after the ceremony be provided for the guests, and is the bride supposed to really cut the cake or just put the knife in? Please reply to these questions in your department and greatly oblige.—September [illegible]

Certainly write notes to those whom you wish to see you married and send announcements to the others. Even where expense does not have to be considered this is frequently done. No form of entertainment is necessary for the guests; a wedding is all the diversion required. The bride merely puts the knife into the cake; some one else does the actual work. It is only a pretty ceremony signifying that the bride is now the hostess and mistress of her own table.

An Afternoon Party.

As I have often been benefited by your splendid answers, I shall appreciate it very much if you will kindly help me in regard to an afternoon entertainment. Suggest something for a menu. Something rather simple and still very nice.—Sidney.

I find that cards are still the stand by for most people for afternoon parties with a few musicales and thimble parties. Refreshments for afternoon affairs are quite simple as the elaborate spreads spoil the appetite for the evening meal. If the weather is warm serve something frozen with small fancy cakes and tiny cups of hot coffee or a salad with coffee and sandwiches or tea, small cakes and sandwiches.

For a Picnic Party.

I am a member of the amusement committee of a secret society that has invited a number of lodges of the same order to an outdoor picnic. It is our duty to provide amusements in the way of games and contests and we are sure you can suggest something novel and entertaining.—X. Y. Z.

For such a large crowd as this must necessarily be, the best thing to do will be to arrange a series of races according to age and sex. This can be made very amusing. Then have a peanut hunt, with a prize to the one finding the most. Partners for refreshments could be found by matching "flags of all nations." These may be purchased in paper and are pretty souvenirs.

Two Queries.

Is it customary for a bridal couple to go into the dining-room for refreshments first, and is the groom obliged to wear a dress suit at a seven o'clock wedding?—Anxiety.

The bridal couple are usually served first and etiquette prescribes full dress for a bridegroom after the hour of six. Circumstances may alter cases, but I can only tell you what custom and society demand.

Unusual Occurrence.

Richard Harding Davis, during his Atlantic City honeymoon, said at a fish luncheon:

"I confess that I am not pleased with the modern trend of fiction. The newest fiction leaves a bad taste in the mouth. It is full of double entendre—like the parlor maid's remark.

"A gentleman came down to breakfast one morning with bloodshot eyes. He drank eight glasses of ice water hurriedly, then he muttered hoarsely to the pretty parlor maid:

"'Tell me, Adele, did I reach home last night very much under the weather?'

"'Indeed you did, sir,' the maid replied. 'Why, sir, you kissed the missis!'"—Washington Star.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

In this age of research and experiment, all nature is ransacked by the scientist for the comfort and happiness of man. Science has indeed made giant strides in the past century, and among the—by no means least important—discoveries in medicine is that of Therapion, which has been used with great success in French Hospitals and that it is worthy the attention of those who suffer from kidney, bladder, nervous diseases, chronic weaknesses, ulcers, skin eruptions, piles, &c., there is no doubt. In fact it is one considered from the big stir created amongst specialists, that THERAPION is destined to cast into oblivion all those questionable remedies that were formerly the sole reliance of medical men. It is of course impossible to tell sufferers all we should like to tell them in this short article, but those who would like to know more about this remedy that has effected so many, we might almost say, miraculous cures, should send addressed envelope for FREE book to Dr. LeClerc Med. Co., Haverstock Road, Hampstead, London, Eng. and decide for themselves whether the New French Remedy "THERAPION" No. 1, No. 2 or No. 3 is what they require and have been seeking in vain during a life of misery, suffering, ill health and unhappiness. Therapion is sold by druggists or mail $1.00. Fougera Co., 90 Beekman St., New York.

After the commemoration service held at St. Anne's Friday morning, the entire congregation were invited to dine at the home of R. S. West. The tables were prettily decorated and the young ladies of the church served dinner to about fifty guests.

The new altar was presented and carved by Rev. Kell of East Liverpool. It is built of pure white marble and its crowning feature is a gold cross, thus making the altar a fitting symbol of the Christ who interceded for men. And as altar has always meant intercession. From time immemorial men have had access to God by means of an altar—Cain and Abel, Noah, Abraham, Jacob—all built altars at which they offered sacrifices to God. So at the altar at St. Anne's prayers will be sacrificed to God whenever people meet to worship.

Repels Attack of Death.

"Five years ago two doctors told me I had only two years to live." This startling statement was made by Stillman Green, Malachite, Col. "They told me I would die of consumption. It was up to me then to try the best lung medicine and I began to use Dr King's New Discovery. It was well I did, for today I am working and believe I owe my life to this great throat and lung cure that has cheated the grave of another victim." It's folly to suffer with coughs, colds, or other throat and lung troubles now. Take the cure that's safest. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free at Gehring's pharmacy.

MERCY THAT STINGS

NIGHT COURT JUDGE METES OUT DISGUISED INJUSTICE.

Fashionable Women Enjoy His Cruelly Impertinent Questioning of Forlorn Girl and Then Praise Him for His Kindness.

She wasn't a bad looking girl at all. Not many months ago she had been a very good looking girl indeed. In spite of the slush underfoot and the drizzling rain that had been falling, she was not noticeably bedraggled when she came into the night court for women. One chiefly noticed that her eyes were dull and her hearing careless. She had become used to the routine of her life—and that routine included the court. Emotion had been burned out of her by the caustic of existence. A flare of drunken anger—a maudlin sob—were her limits of expression. She mounted the bridge drearily, hopelessly. It was evident enough the girl didn't care.

"Ask her—"

A buzz of whispering filled the court room. One looked up to see a bevy of handsomely dressed women sitting by the side of the judge. They wore evening gowns. Gems sparkled against the pallor of their breasts. Their fair shoulders were protected against the draughts of the filthy courtroom by costly furs. They rested white kid elbows upon the judge's desk and propped their arrogant and complacent faces to slender hands and stared that dingy courtroom down. The judge had obviously been dining with them. His handsome face was flushed and he often laughed behind his hand with the prettiest of his callers. At their prompting he asked that poor, bedeviled, hopeless woman who stood before him questions that were still cruelly impertinent, though he was a judge and she a woman of the streets. The silk clad women by his side tittered and exchanged mocking glances. The woman's voice grew hoarse and strained as she replied. She stared at the women of another world as those women of the poor streets in Paris may have stared at the women of the court some hundred odd years ago.

"You may go now," said the judge, silkily. The women who sat by his side upon a bench that had been defiled, stretched out their pretty hands and patted him gently upon the arm.

"How good you are to these people," said one to him, addressing him by his first name.

The old court officer was leading the woman toward the door. A bright spot burned high upon her cheekbones. The flames of rage flared in her widely opened, staring eyes. "G'wan now, kid," said the old court officer, patting her shoulder with awkward kindness. "Don't you care."—Cincinnati Times-Star.

At the Bird Store Window.

The bird store window is an unfailing attraction to many people. Perhaps it attracts men more than women, but it is a magnet that draws all children.

Let small boys or girls discover a bird store and they halt and linger long, wondering over or admiring the strange or beautiful feathered creatures within, and children walking with their mother if they should spy this window are sure to tug her toward it to give them a chance to look in. The bird store window interests all children, as it appears to interest also many grown men who may be drawn to it by a natural fondness for birds and animals, or be attracted by the novel or striking character of the exhibit on view.

Here, for instance, in this window is a white peacock, a remarkable bird seen with its plumage to whatever form. As with characteristic deliberation it walks about with its long tail feathers folded and trailing people stop to look at it, and then let it raise and spread its great white fan and many more halt and gather in a crowd around the window.—New York Sun.

Hurt in the Sequel.

Graham Ferguson has just returned after an absence of six months on "the other side." Fergie did not spend all his time abroad at the home of his Ayrshire ancestors; he visited Switzerland and Italy and did not neglect Paris. It was in this famous city that he witnessed a famous sight.

"When I was in France," he told a newspaper friend Sunday, "I saw a duel."

"Oh! One of those French duels, eh? Nobody was hurt, I presume?"

"One of the contestants? Surely you mean, a bystander or a second or a surgeon?"

"You astound me! One of those toy rapiers could not smash a rib, surely?"

Thick.

"How far is it to the next town?" inquired the traveler in the mud bespattered buggy.

"'Bout ten mile, mister," said the farmer by the roadside.

"Long miles, too, I suppose."

"No, sir, they're not so very long, but you'll find them pretty blamed thick."

EXPLAINING WHY ONE LIVES

There Are Times When Logic and Devotion Require That You Should Be Dead.

[illegible] hesitation or two to make in the line of his usual thoughtfulness. "Did it ever occur to you," he asked, "that one of the hardest tasks a man may have to perform, sometimes, is to explain why he is alive? The necessity has arisen after certain battles, and it may arise after shipwrecks. Several of these men whom we are awaiting may find it awkward tomorrow to explain their continued existence. The world requires a certain adherence to the logical necessities of things, and when all logic, human and divine, has demanded that a man should die, and he is nevertheless alive and well, the anomaly of his healthy presence is something that he cannot account for, with all his explanations.

"I was an army chaplain once, and I saw a captain, whose duty as the personal aide of a general in battle, was to stand by that general's side when the bullets flew. It happened that a bullet—two bullets—three bullets—struck the general, and none struck the captain. The general fell dead; and an hour afterward, when the captain was back at headquarters explaining that there was urgent need of reinforcements at the front, and that the general had fallen, that captain had great trouble in explaining why he was not shot, too. In fact, the mystery has never been cleared up yet. The fact that reinforcements were not needed at all has always clouded the captain's story, though there was no positive proof of cowardice against him.

"No; when logic and all the laws of human devotion require that you should be dead, you had much better be dead than alive, for all the rest of your life will be but a living death."

A Birthday Toast.

There is no modern instance for which a wise saw may not be found in Shakespeare, apt and to the point, the more we react on his wondrous works, the more we are lost in astonishment at the depths of that unfathomable mind that has given a volume to the world containing passages quotable in relation to every occurrence of life, and poetry of such excellence as may challenge the combined talent of man to produce its equal. Without Shakespeare our dramatic literature would have taken a respectable station in modern Europe, with Shakespeare it is supreme—invincible, our drama challenges all the world; tasteless and semi-barbarous as it was, he converted it into a feast of reason for men of education and refinement. (Cheers.) The age of Elizabeth may well, indeed, be called the golden age of literature when it could boast a Shakespeare. A contemporary who flourished with him—Ben Jonson—has said that a man could not be a poet without being a good man. Of our bard he has also said that he was of an honest, good, an open nature. For myself, I can only say that I love the man and honor his memory in the fullest sense of the words on this side of idolatry. (Cheers.) I give now "The Immortal memory of William Shakespeare."—From a speech made by Benjamin Webster, London comedian and actor manager, at a Shakespeare festival dinner given at the Town Hall, Stratford-on-Avon, April 23, 1853.

The Best Women.

Miss Susan B. Anthony, the social reformer, had no more bitter opponent than Horace Greeley, the famous editor and journalist. It was for a long time his custom to wind up all debates with the conclusive remark: "The best women I know do not want to vote."

When the New York constitution was being altered in 1867 Miss Anthony laid a trap for him, says a biographer. She wrote to Mrs. Greeley and persuaded her not only to sign a petition herself, but to circulate the paper and get 300 signatures among her acquaintances.

In committee Mr. Greeley, who was chairman, had listened to the debate and was prepared to introduce to the convention an adverse report. He was just about to utter his usual "settler" when George William Curtis rose.

"Mr. Chairman," said he, "I hold in my hand a petition for suffrage signed by 300 women of Westchester, headed by Mrs. Horace Greeley."

The chairman's embarrassment could hardly be controlled. He had found that one of the "best women I know" wanted to vote.

All Fond of Walking.

Quite the whole Supreme court can be seen walking in Washington. Chief Justice Fuller was too old to walk, and he rode, but Chief Justice White dearly loves to walk, and is usually seen in company with some of his Associate Justices, Holmes, McKenna, Lamar and now Pitney, who promises to use the streets of Washington as often as his distinguished predecessor, Justice Harlan. And since he requires some coaching from the Chief Justice, it is natural to see him in Justice White's company. Justice Hughes is also often seen walking on the streets of Washington.

The diplomats like to walk. Ambassador Bryce, as typical of the Englishmen he is, never misses his daily walk. The cabinet men are also fond of walking, and especially Secretary Nagel and Postmaster-General Hitchcock. The Italian ambassador is frequently met with his daughter, the Donna Beatrice Cusani. The Turkish ambassador likes to promenade Connecticut avenue with his daughter, Mlle. Zia.

MADISON HOME

ADMINISTRATION OF SUPERINTENDENT KNEALE SUCCESSFUL

The Inmates All Well Pleased With Home Life and Conditions Under Management of Mrs. Griswold, The Matron

A representative of the Herald was at the Madison Home one day of last week and through the kindness of Supt. O. W. Kneale was permitted to make an inspection of the institution.

The Home, at Madison, for Ohio soldiers, sailors, marines, their wives, mothers, widows and army nurses, is the only state institution in Lake county. It is the only state institution, the supervision of which, is in the hands of Lake county people.

Supt O W Kneale will soon complete the first year of his supervision. As a matter of justice to Mr. Kneale it might be said that his administration, from a business standpoint, has met with expectations of those who know of his executive ability. In many ways he has shown the good results which are sure to follow successful business methods when applied to the administration of an institution of this kind. In the management of the Home itself, in the careful attention given to the state's property and particularly in the attention given to the small farm which belongs to the Home, Mr. Kneale has shown the results of careful and painstaking efforts. Lake county people would naturally hope to see a Lake county "make good" in a responsible position of this kind and it is with a feeling of pride that we state that Mr. Kneale has in an unofficial way been informed by the State Board of Administration that his work is most commendable, and the Herald can state with authority that Governor Harmon has spoken most highly of the condition of the Home under its present management.

But more is required, in an institution of this kind, than successful business methods. It is the home of many good ladies, ladies of refinement who are now as a general thing in advanced years, and to make the home meet with the expectations of the friends of these worthy people there must be conditions as near like the conditions to the ideal home as it is possible to make them. As to the home life of these good ladies much depends upon the Matron, and in this matter Mr. Kneale was indeed very fortunate in securing the services of Mrs. Jennie Griswold, who early in her administration established a high reputation for efficiency and kindness. She is systematic in her management and possesses a sympathetic disposition that of itself helps more than any other one thing to make the Home the ideal home.

The Herald representative noted many improvements, ranging all the way from methods of bookkeeping to careful attention given to fruit trees, but the one great good thing that was everywhere apparent, was that spirit of kindly feeling, that mutual good will and confidence of inmates, management and assistance each toward the other.

LAKE COUNTY ILLUSTRATED

A Beautiful and Artistic Portfolio Illustrating the Entire County, Including its Cities, Towns and Villages

The publishers of The Herald are about to issue a beautifully illustrated book or portfolio, to be known as "Lake County Illustrated." The work will be printed on heavy enameled book paper, and the illustrations will be engraved half tone copper plates of the highest quality. Size of Pages 8x12, and the subject matter designed to reflect our cities and county as they are today, pictorially, historically, biographically, industrially and professionally. Gata will be employed so that the book will prove a valuable souvenir, worthy of encouragement and preservation. Special features will include public buildings, churches, schools, pretty homes, street scenes, and illustrated "write-ups" of the towns and villages of the county. We ask the cooperation of all business and professional men in order that we make this work fully representative of our county's many and varied interests and a reflex of that well-known civic pride for which our citizens have always stood.

Much of the work is already on the press, but the demand for space and illustrations has been so great within the past few days we have decided to hold some of the forms open in order that all may have an opportunity to be represented on the pages of this beautiful book.

Our solicitors are making special efforts to see everybody, but it may be some have been overlooked. We ask if you will phone the Herald for information. A special feature of the work will be the beautiful homes of Lake County. If you have not been seen about this please let us know. We have a corps of photographers and will send one at a moment's notice. A special design in colors for the cover has been made at great expense, and there will be other and many charming things in the book that will make it a notable publication.

We also ask those who may like extra copies to [illegible] their orders in [illegible].

MINNELLI BROTHERS TO PLAY HERE FAIR WEEK

Popular Company Plays Return Engagement on Postoffice Lot Next Week

The ever popular Minnelli Bros. dramatic company will be with us for a return engagement commencing September 16. The plays are all new. The specialties are new and while the old favorites are retained there will be several new faces. The company has enjoyed the most successful season in their long career and it is without doubt owing to the very excellent performances given.

The opening bill, "The Girl From Mexico," is perhaps the best ever presented by this company, abounding in strong situations, full of comedy and with a pretty love story running throughout. Miss Connell has a great part and the entire company has an opportunity to renew their popularity of last spring. This play was never seen in Painesville. The company will be here fair week and will do much to entertain the large number of strangers expected. The tent will be located on the postoffice lot. As formerly, the prices will be 10 and 20 cents with ladies 15 cents opening night only.

To Mothers and Others.

You can use Bucklen's Arnica Salve to cure children of eczema, rashes, tetter, chafings, scaley and crusted humors, as well as their accidental injuries,—cuts, burns, bruises, etc., with perfect safety. Nothing else heals so quickly. For boils, ulcers, old, running or fever sores or piles it has no equal. 25 cts at Gehring's pharmacy.

You will never forget nor regret visiting the great new Lake County Fair at Painesville, O., Sept. 17-20.

Remember that the exhibition at the new Lake County Fair at Painesville, Sept. 17, 18, 19, 20 includes many features not usually found at [illegible]

The red bandanna has been seen in public life before. It was, in fact, a favorite of Allen G. Thurman, candidate for vice-president with Cleveland, and he did not use it as an ornament or a symbol. An Ohio newspaper man who remembers the old Roman draws a touching picture: "The Hon. Allen G. was a snuffer for fair, and after inhaling a large pinch of the tobacco powder and harvesting a resounding sneeze, he would bring a red bandanna into play to brush away the results of his engagement with old man Tobacco."

—o—

"Beware of advertised lands in Florida," recently said a man who had been traveling in that state, "if you want to invest go where the lands are not advertised. They are better lands and they can be bought at a fair price." The remark, which may be taken for what it is worth, is specially timely because of the recent investigation of the Everglades scandal, which has damaged Florida even if the department officials in Washington have been able to clear their skirts. Florida is a state of great possibilities, but ever since the quest for the fountain of life it has suffered from great expectations and golden fables.

OUR PARK

WELL KNOWN CITIZEN (NAME WITHHELD) TELLS ABOUT THE TREES

The Merchants and Clerks Seventy-four Years Ago Sowed Grass Seed. Many Changes Since

Nothing is more interesting than the reminiscences of our older citizens. It was the good fortune of a representative of the Herald to meet one, who is adverse to having his name before the public, but who at times delights in telling of the past and to hear him tell of the old times is the more entertaining because his mind is clear and what he says is in a conversational style with no thought of how it will look or sound when seen or read in the paper.

There are not many of us who ever thought of the trees in the park or how they came to be there. Possibly all of us who have ever thought about the matter have supposed that these were a part of the primeval forest and were just left there. Not so, as we learn from the above mentioned citizen. He remembers well when the first trees were set out. It was in the year 1838. The park was nothing better than a sand patch at that time. There were oak trees among the others, but the oak trees are gone, but there remains many of the trees set in 1838, seventy-four years ago.

Our informant tells of another incident of that same year. He remembers how, on a spring morning, he saw the merchants and their clerks drawn up in line on the east side of the park or sand patch each with a quantity of grass seed, and at a given signal all marched across the park sowing the seed as they went. It seems that in those early days there were no superintendents of parks or boards of public service.

This well known citizen remembers clearly the earthquake of 1839. It happened at night, and the shock was so severe that many got up from their beds to investigate. The quake left a crack or crevice which crossed the park from the northwest to the southeast and this break in the earth's crust could be plainly seen for some time after the night of the earthquake.

NEW HOUSES

The Diamond Alkali Company Will Build New Houses

MISREPRESENTATION

THE HERALD SECURES STATEMENT FROM GOV. WILSON

His Statement Refutes Claim Sent Over The State By Enemies of the Initiative and Referendum

There was sent to nearly every democrat voter in the state of Ohio, just before the election on the constitutional amendments, a pamphlet containing quotations from alleged speeches of Governor Woodrow Wilson and other prominent democrats. All the speeches quoted were apparently against the Initiative and Referendum.

The editors of the Herald had the best of reasons to believe that these statements were misleading and put out with intention of defeating the I. and R. We decided to put the matter up to Governor Woodrow Wilson.

The author of this dishonest pamphlet is of course unknown to us, but we are sorry to say that the Wellston Transcript apparently was connected with the distribution. The name of this paper was used to give standing to this collection of falsehoods.

The letters which we publish below are self-explanatory:

Painesville, Ohio, Aug. 27, '12.
Gov. Woodrow Wilson,
Trenton, New Jersey.

Dear Sir: I enclose a pamphlet which is being circulated over the State of Ohio. The statements herein attributed to you are leading many earnest democratic voters to question your position upon the Initiative and Referendum.

In the most kindly spirit we wish to ask that you or your friends, inform us if you are today opposed to the Initiative and Referendum to be applied to the affairs of government as proposed in the amendments to the constitution being considered by the voters of Ohio at the present time.

Yours very truly,
The Lake County Herald
M. L. Harter, Editor.

Sea Girt, N. J., Sept. 5, 1912.
Dear Mr. Harter:

For Governor Wilson I beg to acknowledge receipt of your letter of August 27th, which has remained unanswered owing to the Governor's absence from Sea Girt.

The Governor desires me to say that if you will refer to a speech delivered by him at Portland, Oregon, you will find that he favored the Initiative and Referendum not as a substitute for representative government but as a means of restoring it.

Very truly yours,
J. P. TUMULY,
Secretary to the Governor.

Woman Suffrage Column

By Lucy Burton Buell

A Vote of Thanks

The women of Lake County are proud of the vote which the men gave for woman suffrage.

The Western Reserve has always been noted for intelligence far above the average. In Lake county that opinion was confirmed by the vote of September 3rd.

The 23d amendment had much against it; ignorance, which was played upon by the forces of evil; Conservatism, which believes that what has been must continue to be; and a jealousy for their age-long dominion which was felt by a certain type of man—all these were elements in the defeat of the amendment.

But in Lake county a desire to see justice done to women out weighed all that fought against equal rights—and what Lake county has done all Ohio will do before long.

Signed,
The Equal Rights League

Will Go On With Struggle

Warren, O., Sept. 7, 1912.
Mr. Harter, Ed. Herald,
Painesville, Ohio.
Dear Sir:

I wish to express to you the gratitude of the Ohio Woman Suffrage Association for the generous space given to the Campaign for the Woman Suffrage Amendment, by the Herald. It seems impossible that our cause should have been defeated when it has commanded such aid as has been rendered by the Herald.

But the result of Tuesday's election is by no means the final result and we ask that you continue your support during the coming months. The women of Ohio will use the weapon put into their hands by the new constitution to go on with the struggle.

With renewed thanks for all you have done for us,

Very truly yours,
MARY GRAY PECK,
Treas. Ohio Woman Suffrage Asso.

The happy holidays of the season will be at the new Lake County Fair, Painesville, O., Sept. 17, 18, 19, 20.

THE REBEKAH LODGE

Hold Open House On Monday. Large Attendance

The twelfth annual convention of the fourteenth district Rebekahs was held here in Painesville Monday of this week. Ninety-nine members of the order were present from out of the city including a special car from Cleveland that carried the Clover Leaf lodge. The others came from Ashtabula, Geneva and Madison. The session was a secret one and not open to the public as in former years. It was in the nature of a school of instruction.

Mrs. Lizzie Garver of Toledo, president of the Ohio Rebekah assembly, and Mrs. Emma N. Bell of Columbus, secretary, were present, as teachers.

The afternoon was devoted entirely to secret work and instruction but in the evening the Clover Leaf lodge of Cleveland worked the degree in an exceptionally fine manner.

DEATH CALL

Charles Armstrong Respected Citizen of East Side

NEW SPELLING IN ENGLAND

Band of Reformers Having Plan to Deliver Lectures Throughout the Country.

A campaign in favor of spelling reform is to be conducted in London and the provinces in the autumn and winter, the London Daily Graphic states. William Archer, under the auspices of the Simplified Spelling society, is to conduct a lecturing tour on his return from the east, and lectures will also be delivered by many other well-known men throughout the country.

The lecturers will advocate the reform of what they regard as the present "chaotic spelling," which they declare is so remote from pronunciation that it is no guide to the English language at all, and tends to degrade our speech.

The society desire to fix a standard of pronunciation of the English language throughout the empire.

It has been stated that the English people over seas, particularly in Australia and South Africa, are deviating so seriously from the general standard of speech prevailing in the mother country that the time might come when visitors from these parts of the empire might fail to make themselves understood in London!

Mr. Tate, director of education in Melbourne, has suggested several spelling reforms to which effect has been given in the official paper issued by his department. Discussions have taken place and the council of public education in Melbourne is addressing a letter to the president of the board of education in London urging upon him, in the interest of education, the necessity of a general adoption of a simplified reform in spelling.

Light Diet.

Poor Mary Ann was positively sick of it. From morning till night her mistress bullied her.

For weeks M. A. bore the accusations heroically; but the breaking point came eventually. She approached her mistress and solemnly reported that the coal cellar was bare.

"Just like you!" nagged the missus. "I don't know what you do with the coals! You must eat them!"

An hour or two later Mary Ann had to make it known that there were no more candles.

"Yes, ma'am," rejoined the maid of all work tartly, "but I ate them so that I could swallow the coal more easily!"

The Devil's Beauty.

Several correspondents have written to us about the origin of the French phrase "beaute du diable." The phrase, which is current not only in English but in German, comes from the French proverb "The devil was handsome when he was young," and it means that even the ugliest person may be attractive in the bloom of youth. It is used in France to prophesy that the beauty which a certain young person has is of a kind that will quickly fade, but in this country it is used a thousand times with no idea of its meaning where it is used once correctly.—Collier's Weekly.

Russian Exodus.

The Mennonites, a Quaker sect who inhabit certain provinces of Russia, are said to be planning a migration to British Columbia. They want agricultural lands, where, among other things, they can raise fruit, and the land of British Columbia is said to have been reported on favorably by an emissary who was sent over to examine it.

Once Abode of Great People.

The ruins of Macchu Picchu, a city probably built by the Megalithic race, who preceded the Incas, were discovered by Hiram Bingham on his 1911 expedition to Peru. The ruins are on an almost inaccessible ridge, 2,000 feet above the Urubamba river. They are of great beauty and magnificence and include palaces, baths, temples and about 150 houses. The huge blocks of white granite, some of them 12 feet long, were so carefully cut that they match perfectly. Though no mortar or cement was used to hold the stones together the walls have withstood the elements for at least 2,000 years.—The Argonaut.

"Helen Keller" of Minnesota.

Vera Mavel Gamon is the name of the little blind deaf mute who is often spoken of as the Helen Keller of Minnesota. She was less than four when she became blind and less than a year afterward she lost her hearing. When placed in the state school for the deaf in Minnesota she was believed to be without the average intelligence. Her teacher is Miss Blanche Hanson.

Hard on the Clothes.

"I'm glad you're not a baseball player!"

"Why not, my dear?"

"From the way they slide and throw themselves about it seems to me that their poor wives must be forever sewing buttons on their trousers."—Judge's Library.

French Demand for Automobiles.

Despite the immense number of automobiles built in France, that country imported nearly three times as many cars last year as in 1910.

Maori Woman's Criticism.

Mrs. Iline Rawei, a Maori from Auckland, New Zealand, is to Chicago, advocating woman suffrage, says the Inter-Ocean, and is surprised to find us so much behind the times in all matters pertaining to government.

SIX ARE KILLED AT MOTORCYCLE RACE

TWENTY-TWO ARE INJURED

Rider Going at Blinding Speed of 92 Miles an Hour Is Hurled to Instant Death at Vailsburg (N. J.) Velodrome.

THE DEAD.

Eddie Hasha of Waco, Tex., killed outright.

Edward Fischer, 17, of Newark.

Two unidentified boys ranging in ages from 14 to 18 years.

One of these was killed outright, the other died shortly after reaching the city hospital.

Unidentified man, about 21 years of age, died in city hospital.

Newark, N. J.—Fate staged a tragic spectacle with cruel art in the great bowl of the Vailsburg velodrome when, through the midst of cheering thousands, speed sent six persons to death in a space of a deep drawn breath. It was at the middle of the thirteenth race—the free for all—when riding at the blinding speed of 92 miles an hour, Eddie Hasha's motorcycle went wrong, climbed the 28-foot incline of the track, hurled its rider to instant death and crashed into the packed grand stand.

Before the whirling mass of steel was halted by a deep set iron pillar, four young men lay beneath and 22 others rolled unconscious and severely injured from its path. Then the twisted engine of death, rebounding from the pole, rolled down the saucer flat of the track.

Down the circular path his speed scarcely less than that of the ill-fated Hasha's, came Johnny Albright, the Denver rider, knowing nothing of the tragedy above him, hearing naught of the screams and the curses of warning—blind to the panic rush of the crowd. Slowly yet so fast that none had time to halt it, the wreck of Hasha's machine rolled down in Albright's path. The whole unnerved and frightened throng saw the coming of the second tragedy.

Mrs. Hasha, wife of the first rider, lay in a dead faint on the grand stand floor. With a scream Mrs. Albright fell beside her. But no one saw them, no one heard them scream. The sound that came from the crowd was the sighing, impotent prayer of the thousands for mercy that could not come. The front wheel of Albright's motorcycle struck the wreck, leaped into the air and the body of the rider shot 30 feet over the handle bars and fell at the bottom of the track unconscious. Two hours later Albright was dead.

Confusion, wild cries of fear and fright and then panic ensued. The police finally fought their way through the crowd only to find unconscious forms strewn beside the dead while fainting women lay here and there through the terrified grand stand. Three ambulance surgeons fell to work; the more seriously injured were rushed to hospitals, where 20 were found to be seriously injured. Many others, only slightly bruised or suffering from fright and excitement went to their homes after being given emergency treatment at the track.

BAD WRECK ON TROLLEY LINE

Thirty-five People Are Injured, Five Seriously, When Two-Car Limited Hits Automobile Truck.

Cleveland, O.—Thirty-five people were injured, five of whom are expected to die, when a two-car limited of the Lake Shore Electric smashed into a five-ton automobile truck at stop 13, a short distance west of Rocky River. The first car of the train was hurled from its trucks, thrown on its side and twisted diagonally across the tracks. The automobile was bent into a mass of wreckage and the first car leaped completely over it. Persons from the Automobile Country club worked with railroad employes and picknickers to drag the dying and injured from the first car. Everyone in the first car was injured at least slightly, for the interior of the car was a tangle of broken iron, smashed seats and splintered glass.

Injured were placed in automobiles and hurried toward the Lakewood hospital. They were transferred from the automobiles to ambulances in the streets and the run for medical attention resumed.

The two cars which were wrecked at stop No. 13, where two fatal accidents had occurred within four months, left the Public Square at 11:30 bound for Toledo. They were limited cars and were numbered 149 and 117.

Even Take Man's Clothing.

Atlantic City, N. J.—Bernard Hunt, a government employe of Washington, D. C., was found stripped of his clothing and tortured by insects, wandering in the suburbs of Pleasantville. He was too dazed to talk until the afternoon, when it was learned that he had been enticed into an automobile by two men who beat him into insensibility, took his valuables and stripped him of his clothing to forestall pursuit. Hunt lost his watch, stickpin, $300 in cash and all his clothing.

One Killed in Auto Crash.

Fonda, N. Y.—While rushing at a high rate of speed in their automobile from New Haven, Conn., to Syracuse, N. Y., W. W. Ogle was instantly killed and his wife lost her right foot in an accident which wrecked the automobile. In some manner the steering gear became locked and Mr. Ogle was unable to keep the car in the road. It crashed into a telegraph pole, hurling both occupants 30 feet into the air. Ogle was dead when picked up but it is believed his wife will recover.

TILLERS OF SOIL WILL BE WELL REWARDED FOR LABOR.

United States Crop Report, Just Issued, Shows Large Harvest Is on the Way.

Besides being the largest in the history of the country, Uncle Sam's mammoth corn crop, according to the figures of the government experts, will almost reach the three billion bushel mark.

The estimate announced was 2,995,000,000 bushels. If these figures hold good, the crop will be over 400,000,000 bushels in excess of last year.

The biggest crop in history up to this time was in 1906, when the figures were 2,927,416,000.

Department of agriculture officials said that they were confident that the big crop would mean an appreciable decrease in the price of meat next winter.

The following estimates were made: Condition of crops Sept. 1: Corn 82.1 per cent. of normal, compared with 81.1, the 10-year average; spring wheat 90.8 per cent. as compared with 76.5, the 10-year average; oats 92.3 per cent., compared with 78.8, the 10-year average.

Yield per acre of crops: Corn 27.7 bushels, compared with four-year average of 27.1; winter wheat (preliminary estimate) 15.1 bushels, compared with 15.5, the four-year average; spring wheat 15.6 bushels, compared with 13.4; all wheat 15.4, compared with 14.6; oats 34.1, compared with 28.4.

Total production of crops in millions of bushels: Corn 2,995 against 2,531 last year; winter wheat 390 against 430; spring wheat 290, against 191; all wheat 690, against 621; oats 1,290, against 922.

REPUBLICANS WIN IN MAINE

William T. Haines Is Elected Governor Over Frederick W. Plaisted, Democratic Candidate.

Portland, Me.—The Republicans, with the efficient help of the Bull Moose party, have wrenched from the Democrats the control of the state which the latter have held for two years. William T. Haines, the Republican candidate for governor, is elected over Frederick W. Plaisted, Democrat, by a majority estimated at 3,700, with five-sixths of the vote in, including the vote of Portland, Bangor, Augusta and other cities of considerable size. The legislature will be Republican on joint ballot, which will insure the election of Edwin C. Burleigh, Republican, over Obadiah Gardner, the present incumbent. Both Burleigh and Gardner are their party nominees at the preferential primaries.

Indications are that for congress Asher Hinds, Republican, is elected over Michael T. O'Brien in the First district, including Portland; that Frank E. Guernsey, Republican, is elected over Charles W. Mullen in the Third; that Forest Goodwin, Republican, is elected over Samuel W. Gould in the Fourth.

The surviving Democrat who is sure of election is Daniel J. McGillicuddy, present Democratic congressman from the Second district, who has a safe majority over William B. Skelton.

Now that the control of the offices has fallen into Republican hands, the Bull Moosers, claiming credit for the triumph, will begin an aggressive campaign to carry the state for Roosevelt. Two sets of electors, regular Republican and Bull Moose, are already in the field and beginning immediately the two elements that pulled together through the state will inaugurate an energetic warfare against each other.

FLOOD IN CHINA KILLS 40,000

Destroys Villages and Towns, While an Important Missionary Station Is Washed Away.

Shanghai, China.—Immense loss of life is reported in mail advices just received from Wen-Chow, in the province of Chekiang.

Chinese estimates give the death roll between 30,000 and 40,000 as the result of a typhoon, which occurred August 29. Great floods followed and the upper Wen-Chow river overflowed a vast area.

The town of Tsinatien, 40 miles northwest of Wen-Chow, was overwhelmed and 10,000 of the inhabitants were drowned.

Various other towns and villages were destroyed and the prefecture at Chuchow, an important missionary station, was washed away.

Ohio Rich in Mines.

Washington, D. C.—A bulletin soon to be issued by Director Durand of the census bureau, giving results of the mine, quarry and well census conducted by the department of commerce and labor, shows that in the years of 1902-9 the value of Ohio products increased from $56,340,184 to $59,931,837, 6.4 per cent. The census shows that in 1909 there were 964 mines and quarries in Ohio and 35,067 gas and oil wells. The total number of persons engaged in these industries was 82,674.

Missing Years, Returns Rich.

Houghton, Mich.—After an absence of ten years, during which time his wife and eight children were left to their own resources, Barney McKenzy has returned to Hurontown, near here, bringing with him $100,000. McKenzy is doing at the present time everything possible to make up for the years of privation his family suffered. He became prosperous through a mining venture in Canada. Sixteen years ago McKenzy brought his family to Hurontown. He failed to prosper, however, and finally left.

BOAT REGULATIONS ARE TONED DOWN

LAKE STEAMSHIP MEN ASSERT THE LIFEBOAT PROVISION APPLIES TO OCEAN LINERS.

PASSENGER LIST VERY SMALL

Washington, D. C.—Awful memories of the greatest marine disaster of modern times—the loss of the Titanic—which were gradually being softened by the passage of time, were rudely awakened in Washington when it became known that the steamship interests which were taken so seriously to task regarding the proper safeguarding of life had succeeded in having some of the drastic regulations regarding the carrying of lifeboats adopted by the federal steamboat inspection service toned down as "impracticable."

This action was taken at a conference just ended between steamship owners and government officials in which modifications of the regulations were agreed upon. Just before congress adjourned, three bills to govern the safety of ships were pending before the senate committee, having passed the house. Action on all three of the bills was postponed until the next session on the ground of pressure of business and for the further reason that the regulations adopted by the steamboat inspection service did not make the legislation urgent. Hardly had congress left Washington when the steamboat interests started a movement to secure a softening of the regulations. This culminated when, after a meeting of the executive committee, the United States board of supervising inspectors and representatives of the steamship interests, some of the regulations were toned down as "impracticable."

No information would be given out at the office of Supervising Inspector General George Uhler of the steamboat interests inspection service as to the nature of the changes. It was stated that the modifications were not important, and that they were in the hands of Secretary of Commerce and Labor Nagel for his approval.

Following the sinking of the Titanic the following regulation was adopted regarding ocean going vessels:

"Ocean going vessels must be equipped with sufficient lifeboats, etc., to accommodate at one time all persons aboard, including passengers and crew. One-half of such equipment and lifeboats may be in approved life rafts or approved collapsible lifeboats."

The provision that equipment sufficient to carry passengers and crew at one time was also made for river, coast and lake steamers. It is on this phase of traffic that question has arisen, the meeting which modified the regulations being represented largely by river, lake and coast steamship men. The argument made was that this provision was "impracticable" and burdensome, with reference to vessels engaged mainly in freight traffic and which do not carry many passengers.

Under the present law the supervising inspectors have power to change the regulations from time to time. This is generally done by an executive committee of three inspectors selected by the supervising inspector general.

VALENTINE QUITS FEDERAL JOB

Resigns as Commissioner of Indian Affairs to Join Roosevelt and Third Political Party.

Washington, D. C.—Robert G. Valentine of Massachusetts, commissioner of Indian affairs, has resigned to join the bull moose movement.

Mr. Valentine is the second important official in the Taft administration to give up his position to follow Roosevelt. The first was Herbert Knox Smith, who resigned the position of chief of the bureau of corporations of the department of commerce and labor. Valentine's resignation, sent to secretary of the interior, will become effective at the discretion of President Taft.

One Killed, 30 Hurt in Wreck.

Erie, Pa.—One man was killed and 30 persons were injured in a wreck on the Nickel Plate road when train No. 8, eastbound, due in Erie about 1 p. m., was wrecked by a broken axle.

General Manager A. W. Johnson of the road, in his private car attached to the train, was taking a party of officials over the road. In the party were W. H. Caniff, president of the road, and W. F. Watterson, division superintendent.

Girl's Great Swimming Feat.

London, England.—Rose Pitinoff, the Boston girl, swam 16 miles in the cold waters of the Thames in four hours and 14 minutes. Starting at Richmond Lock and finishing at Tower Bridge at a quarter past seven in the evening, she was as fit as a fish and ready to swim farther, but the members of the Sussex Motor Yacht Club and the pressmen who accompanied her urged otherwise, owing to the danger of the Thames.

English Army Airmen Killed.

Oxford, England.—Another double aviation fatality, the second within a week, occurred to members of the army corps when Lieut. C. A. Bettington and Lieut. E. Hotchkiss, both of whom had just been given commissions and probation, were killed when flying past Wolvercote. The machine, in which the officers were maneuvering had passed over Oxford and had reached a point just outside Wolvercote when the motor appeared to stop and the aeroplane fell to the ground from a height of [illegible].

Shoots Foe, Then Kills Self.

Van Wert, O.—Forbidden to call at the home of Richard Martin, a farmer living west of here, Ernst Verrbet, 25, fired the contents of both barrels of a shotgun at the family as they sat at supper. He injured four and then killed himself.

Mrs. John R. McLean Dies.

Bar Harbor, Maine.—Mrs. John R. McLean, wife of the millionaire publisher of Cincinnati and Washington, died at her summer home here. The cause of death was swift pneumonia. Dr. Llewellyn F. Barker, the noted Johns Hopkins specialist, arrived September 8 after a race with death of 1,331 miles from the mountains of South Carolina, whence he had been called by special request of Mrs. McLean. The patient rallied long enough to recognize the physician and then passed away.

Well Known Reporter Kills Self.

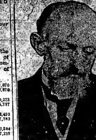
Gravesend, England.—Charles C. Boucher, connected with the Paris Bureau of the New York Herald, was found dead in a hotel here, with a pipe attached to a gas jet in his mouth. When he retired the previous night Boucher apparently was in the best of spirits.

New York, Sept. 10.—Mr. Boucher was one of the best known reporters in New York and had friends in nearly every city in the United States. He was president of the Ship News Reporters' Association of New York.

OSCAR S. STRAUS



Oscar S. Straus, secretary of commerce and labor in President Roosevelt's cabinet and before that minister to Turkey, was nominated for governor of New York by the Progressives of that state.

STRAUS HEADS N. Y. MOOSE TICKET

DAVENPORT FOR LIEUT. GOV.

THE TICKET.

For Governor—Oscar S. Straus of New York.

For Lieutenant Governor—Frederick M. Davenport of Oneida.

For Attorney General—John Palmieri of Kings.

For State Engineer and Surveyor—O. M. Leland of Tompkins.

For State Treasurer—Ernest Cawcroft of Chautauqua.

***

Syracuse, N. Y.—After one of the most remarkable demonstrations in the history of political conventions, Oscar S. Straus, former ambassador and cabinet officer, was nominated by the New York state Progressives as their candidate for governor. Just when it seemed that the bickerings between the adherents of Comptroller Prendergast of New York and state Chairman Hotchkiss were certain to split the Bull Moose state party wide open on the day of its birth, J. C. Magee, known as "suspender Jack" of the Fifteenth New York assembly district, fought his way to the platform and with a ringing speech turned thunderous howls of derision aimed at the speaker into a wild outbreak of enthusiasm in which every woman in the hall joined. After eulogizing Straus, Magee concluded:

Magee Sounds Warning.

"Gentlemen, remember, remember that Rome was saved by the cackling of geese. I have no political prestige, but I warn and charge you to put up a man for governor who cannot and will not be defeated."

Now Magee, an unknown, did have political prestige. The cheering lasted 10 minutes. Hats, women's and men's, were trampled and torn, bandanas were whipped to shreds. The band played "Onward, Christian Soldiers." Hotchkiss fought his way to the platform where Straus was sitting as chairman and began to plead with him to accept. A dozen other leaders followed, Tim Woodruff among them. A dozen negative shakes of the head and Strauss inclined his head ever so slightly. The rumpus broke out anew. J. J. Kingsbury moved that the nomination be made unanimous and the motion was seconded by the Rev. J. W. Karnshaw.

Nomination Made Unanimous.

Tim Woodruff anounced the withdrawal of the name of Prendergast and moved the nomination of Straus by acclamation. There were many seconds. Hotchkiss, acting as temporary chairman, put the question and it was carried with one wild, long yell. At 5:30 a. m., with tears streaming down his cheeks, Straus came forward and after all who could reach him had shaken his hand, accepted the nomination. A recess was then taken during which the leaders worked out the remainder of the ticket, which was later approved by the delegates.

Buckeye Wreck Kills Two.

Cincinnati.—Two men were killed, another was fatally injured and several persons were seriously hurt when Baltimore & Ohio passenger train No. 20 ran into a work train at Sixth and States streets in this city.

The passenger train was just entering the Cincinnati yards on its way from Louisville. No explanation of how the accident was made possible was given.

The name of one of the dead men was Joseph Purcell, a resident of this city. The other body is unidentified.

Three Killed While Flying.

London, England.—Three men were killed in aeroplanes which dropped from the clouds, two at Stevenage, England, and one at Munich, Bavaria. Capt. Hamilton and Lieut. Stewart met death in a biplane at Stevenage. While flying a sudden gale arose and hurled them from a height of 300 feet to the ground. The biplane was destroyed and both men were dead when picked up. Lieut. Stewart of the Bavarian army was killed while scouting 300 feet in the air above some army maneuvers.

REPORT ENCOURAGING

Pays Out Only $4,500, and Collects $50,000—Awards Will Probably Reach One-Half of Collections.

Columbus.—With the first half of its existence completed, the state liability board of awards reported it had collected $50,000 premiums with $7,500 still due the state and that only $4,500 had been paid out for accidents to employes of Ohio. Deferred payments will bring the total to $6,000. There are 153 cases pending and the board thinks that awards in sight probably will total $25,000.

Despite the difference between premiums collected and payments made, the board is of the opinion that the present rates are little if any too high, as there have been an unusually small number of accidents and none of any large proportions.

The semi-annual total pay roll of all employes upon which premiums are collected now amounts to $4,100,000. The cost of operation so far has been 30 per cent. This, the board thinks, can be reduced materially.

Important Point To Be Settled.

The suit brought to test the constitutionality of the non-partisan judiciary law will be heard by the supreme court September 24, the day that court convenes for its fall work, according to announcement made.

The suit was brought by Morris J. Weinberger, of Cleveland, in an attempt to prevent the Cuyahoga county election board from placing the names of judicial candidates in that county on a separate ballot.

The plaintiff states that the new judiciary law is unconstitutional, and that under its operation a voter can not vote intelligently for judicial candidates.

Atty. Gen. Hogan demurred to the petition on the ground that it did not state facts sufficient to constitute a cause for action. His demurrer was sustained by the Cuyahoga county common pleas and circuit courts, which held the act to be constitutional.

The non-partisan judiciary law, which was enacted by the legislature a year ago last winter, provides that every judicial officer shall be placed upon a separate ballot without any party designation.

It is expected that the supreme court will decide the case promptly so that the question will be disposed of 30 days preceding the November election, by which time all candidates must be certified for places on the ballot.

Turner Has Made Record.

Since Edward C. Turner took the office of prosecuting attorney convictions have been secured in more than 95 per cent. of criminal cases. During the five terms of court at which he has represented the state, 224 persons have been tried for crimes ranging from first degree murder down, and only 11 persons were acquitted. During the year ending September 1 there were 38 convictions. Not a single case which was carried to the higher courts has been reversed.

Mr. Turner and members of his staff have disposed of 89 civil cases to which the state or county was a party during the year and he has collected more than $80,000 for the county.

Fifty damage cases against the county involving $66,500 were successfully won by him for the county. In only one was there a verdict for the plaintiff. This was for damages growing out of the street car strike and was allowed by a jury from Madison county. The amount by a jury from county. The amount allowed was $1,500, but to induce Mr. Turner not to appeal to the higher courts, a compromise for $1,000 was offered and accepted.

To Encourage Farmers to Increase Production.

The first meeting of the Agricultural Committee of the Ohio Bankers' association was held here, the full membership being present. The committee was appointed at the recent meeting of the bankers for the purpose of encouraging the farmers to secure an increased production from their lands. It was said that the prosperity of Ohio might be doubled if the agricultural methods were improved. The bankers feel that they can do more for the farmers than business men in any other field of endeavor. One plan discussed today was to encourage country bankers who own farms to make them models of progress as an encouragement to the farmers in the community. Organization of farmers by country bankers was also urged.

Secretary A. P. Sandles, of the State Board of Agriculture, said Ohio has 142,000 acres of abandoned farm lands and thousands of acres lying idle that would produce immense quantities of fruit if they were developed.

Looking forward to the day when the streams of Ohio will furnish a fisherman's paradise, sufficient for the most exacting Isaak Walton, and when the fox hunt of old will be run with as much good sport and as ample returns as formerly, a state-wide crusade is being conducted by the Ohio fish and game commission against pollution of streams and illegal forms of hunting game and fish. "I can look forward to the day when for ideal sport a man will not be obliged to go out of the state," declared Game Warden Speaks.

During the month of August, 190 new corporations, "for profit," were chartered by the secretary of state with a total new capital of $6,163,000. The average corporation capitalization was about $30,000. Increases authorized in the capital stock of existing corporations amounted to $11,983,000, while decreases authorized amounted to $1,124,850. One-third of the new corporations formed will have their headquarters in Cleveland, which leads all other cities of the state with the incorporation of 60 new companies with a total capital of [illegible].

ABOUT MR. PERKINS

THINGS CONGRESSMAN STANLEY SAID OF COL. ROOSEVELT'S FINANCIAL AID.

WIDOW AND ORPHAN ROBBED

Plain Talk Concerning the Man Who Contributed $50,000 of Other People's Money to Aid in the Election of T. R.

People everywhere are asking why George Perkins, late of J. P. Morgan & Co., and now of the Harvester trust, is such an enthusiastic Progressive, and why Mr. Roosevelt has made him his campaign chairman. Both have explained, each is pleased with the other. Roosevelt tells us of Perkins' coming to him, but perhaps, when all is known, it will develop that he went after Perkins!

Mr. Morgan's ex-partner has been advocating this long time the creation of a court of big business at the capital city which, as we understand his proposition, will leave the government very little to do. This is similar to Roosevelt's plan to establish an autocratic stewardship of the public welfare untrammeled by courts or by congress. When great men think along the same lines they inevitably must come together.

In connection with Mr. Perkins' past it may be of interest to hear in part what Congressman Stanley had to say in the house respecting the $50,000 of other people's money contributed by Perkins to aid in Roosevelt's election:

"He gave his personal check to Mr. Bliss and was reimbursed by check of the New York Life Insurance company payable to J. P. Morgan & Co. The proceeds of this check were traced to Mr. Perkins and he was arrested under a warrant charging him with grand larceny. Perkins knew the consent of the policy holders was necessary to save this appropriation of their funds from larceny, and that consent was not obtained, and could not have been obtained.

"Who were these pilfered policy holders? The most pathetic and helpless figures in all this tale of tears—the young mother, wrapped in the black habiliments of woe, orphans wailing the name of father above the silent dead. He robbed the widow of her slender patrimony and snatched the last crumb from the pinched fingers of helpless childhood. In all the loathsome annals of greed and graft there is nothing so sordid and pitiless as the creatures who did it. This man escaped a prison cell by the skin of his teeth for having picked the pockets of a shroud."

This is what Mr. Stanley said of the campaign manager of the third term party whose motto is "let the people rule!" This is Mr. Perkins.

Old Roosevelt Tell the Truth?

Questions of veracity are so much in evidence nowadays that, happening to pick up an old newspaper, the above question immediately arose.

President Roosevelt, on being informed of Mr. Taft's nomination for the presidency, said:

"I feel that the country is indeed to be congratulated upon the nomination of Mr. Taft. I have known him intimately for many years, and I have a peculiar feeling for him because throughout that time we have worked for the same object with the same purposes and ideals.

"I do not believe there could be found in all the country a man so well fitted to be president. He is not only absolutely fearless, absolutely disinterested and upright, but he has the widest acquaintance with the nation's needs without and within and the broadest sympathies with all our citizens.

"He would be emphatically a president of the plain people as Lincoln, yet not Lincoln himself would be freer from the least taint of demagogy, the least tendency to arouse or appeal to class hatred of any kind.

"He has a peculiar and intimate knowledge of and sympathy with the needs of all of our people—of the farmer, of the wage-worker, of the business man, of the property owner. No matter what a man's occupation or social position, no matter what his creed, his color, or the section of the country from which he comes, if he is an honest, hard-working man, who tries to do his duty toward his neighbor and toward the country, he can rest assured that he will have in Mr. Taft the most upright of representatives and the most fearless of champions. Mr. Taft stands against privilege, and he stands pre-eminently for the broad principles of American citizenship which lie at the foundation of our national well-being."

If Mr. Roosevelt told the truth then, what shall be said of some of his recent utterances?

TAFT THREAT BAD MEDICINE

Assault on the Tariff No Longer Is an Attack on Citadel of Business.

"To them I appeal, as to all Republicans, to join us in an earnest effort to avert the political and economical revolution and business paralysis which Republican defeat will bring about."—From Mr. Taft's speech of acceptance.

This amazing utterance is either an honest forecast of conditions or a threat. Which is it?

In order to be frightened by a curse the "consumer" must believe in the divinity or fetich in whose name the curse is launched. Our ancestors believed in Wotan and Loki, but the man who would curse in the name of these divinities today would not frighten anybody, and would get locked up in the observation ward into the bargain. Now in the good old days of Mark Hanna such talk as Mr. Taft's was good medicine. It worked. The barons of protection stood ready to put the screws upon the general business of the country in the event of Democratic victory. An assault upon the tariff was "an attack on the citadel of business."

Some things have changed since those days. People have been reading and thinking. They know, for example, that the steel interests of the United States are just selling 20,000 tons of rails to one Canadian railroad and three-fourths that amount to another. They know that the manufacturers of the United States are selling in the foreign market one thousand millions of dollars of manufactured goods a year.

They know that there is a coalition of banking interests in the United States that might produce a panic through the contraction of credits, if it pleased. They mean, ultimately, to get to that situation and reform the currency. Meanwhile, they are watching the financial horizon with one eye, and keeping the other on the witches' buckets that brew the storms.

Mr. Taft's threat is bad medicine. It is a worn-out curse. The divinities behind it are discredited. The 100 per cent. taxes on gloves and blankets are going to be replaced by reasonable duties and the tariff is going to receive like treatment all along the line. Our steel mills are going to keep on exporting rails by the ten thousand tons. Our more than $3,000,000 worth of manufactured exports are going to continue to be sent out on every working day in the year via the seven seas. The crops are going to be harvested. These United States will continue to do business at the same old stand. They will do more of it than ever under a Democratic president and with a congress playing the open game. In a few years, good old Mr. Taft will wonder how he could have ever believed, without assistance, the nonsense wherewith he sprinkled his acceptance speech.—St. Louis Republic.

Governor Wilson Talks to Farmers.

The chief good points of Woodrow Wilson's talk to farmers of three states were three.

First, he was interested himself. He believes profoundly in government by public opinion, to the value of the thought on public questions of the average man. We have heard speeches by presidential candidates—some of them not more than four years ago—which had about as much of the spontaneity that comes from a sense that the thing said is worth saying as the greeting extended to the "three little maids" by Poo-Bah, in "The Mikado." But Governor Wilson has the zest that comes from enjoyment of real opportunity.

Second, Governor Wilson is clear in his understanding of national problems. He knows human weaknesses and selfishnesses; this helps him to discuss the tariff intelligently. He knows how to organize and govern men; this makes him worth listening to when he discusses remedies.

Third, the governor realizes the tremendous strength of the forces behind the rising tide of Democratic success. He realizes that victory at the polls is practically assured and that the great problem is to get ready to use that victory wisely. He is thinking not of election day only, but of the four years which will follow.

All United for Wilson.

The unanimity with which all Democrats and Democratic newspapers are supporting Woodrow Wilson is remarkable. There has not been a nomination so generally accepted and so warmly ratified by any party in many years. After every national convention there have been daily reports about papers which have repudiated the candidate nominated and about prominent people who have gone over to the other party. On this occasion there are practically no Democratic papers but what are heartily supporting the candidacy of Woodrow Wilson. All Democrats are for him, and thinking, progressive Republicans are for him.

Rabidly Anti-Roosevelt.

Pushed into a corner, Roosevelt fights back. "Liar!" "Liar!" "Liar!" he shouts. That is his answer. That is his usual answer.

But of what avail is it to denounce Penrose as base? That doesn't meet the charge that he received knowingly $100,000 from the Standard Oil company. It wasn't Penrose who made the contribution, it was Archbold. And Archbold on the witness stand testifies that he not only handed $100,000 to Treasurer Bliss, but that Bliss came back later and asked for $150,000 more, that Bliss informed him that both Roosevelt and Cortelyou appreciated the first contribution and that a second one would be likewise appreciated.

There is testimony given directly by the man who made the contribution in behalf of Standard Oil and refused to give another great sum. It is no answer for Mr. Roosevelt to denounce Penrose as base and shout "liar" at Archbold.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

High Praise From Schiff.

"Governor Wilson, if elected, will enter upon his high duties relatively free from partisan pledges, will bring into the presidential office a mind ably trained in economics and sociology, fully conversant with the needs of the country at present, in many respects critical juncture, and he will, moreover, go into the White House as near as this is possible with the confidence of all classes and sections of the country in his ability to better existing conditions."

Such testimony from a man like Jacob H. Schiff is worth something to the candidate in whose behalf it is unselfishly given.

The Sick Calf.

"The calf is constantly growing worse, Jim. What shall we do until the veterinary comes?"

"We still have two of the powders the doctor gave to little Jas when he had the measles last year. We might give them to the animal while we wait."—Fliegende Blaetter.

CAR STRIKES AN AUTO

ONE YOUNG WOMAN DANGEROUSLY WOUNDED IN CRASH AT LIMA.

Lima, O.—One young woman was perhaps fatally injured, another seriously hurt and three men received minor injuries, when an auto driven by George Shimmel, Wapakoneta, was hit by a north bound Pine and Wayne street car, at the corner of Second and St. John's avenue.

The most critically hurt is Pearl Silferd, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Silferd, No. 708 E. Vine street. She received internal injuries and a concussion of the brain.

Adeline Jamison, who lived at the Silferd home was badly cut and bruised but not dangerously hurt. She suffered a sprained leg and shoulder and cuts and bruises.

Mr. Shimmel, who was driving the touring car, was unhurt with the exception of a few scratches but Vol Kohl, also of Wapakoneta, was not so fortunate. He suffered a sprained back and several ligaments in his right leg were torn loose. Conductor Ash, who was running the city car, was cut by flying glass.

PLAY GROUND DEDICATED

First Such Institution in City of Springfield Is Formally Opened.

Springfield, O.—As a place of recreation for the youth of that part of the city, in this generation, and the years to come, the first of the public play grounds of Springfield was formally opened in the new Commercial club addition, near Belmont avenue.

Several hundred people attended the exercises by which the playground was opened, and the interest manifested in the occasion, both by the children for whom the playground will be maintained, and by their elders, was highly pleasing to the committee of the Commercial club, which has the development of the Warder park addition in charge.

Robert C. Bancroft, chairman of the committee, presided at the meeting and delivered the first address.

CLERK SLAPPED MAYOR'S FACE

When He Visited Hotel and Requested Service After Closing Hours.

Columbus, Ohio.—That he slapped Mayor George J. Karb was the testimony given before the Civil Service Commission by Harry M. Rocco, hotel clerk at the Kaiserhof, in the hearing of the charges brought by the Mayor against Chief of Police Charles E. Carter.

Carter is defending himself by trying to show that the Mayor tried to get drinks after midnight. He is making this the principal answer to the accusations of allowing gambling to go on unchecked.

Rocco told this story, stating the incident happened on a Sunday morning, shortly after midnight:

"I was counting up the money when the Mayor and his friends came in. I said, 'Sorry, gentlemen, but we are all closed here.' Then the Mayor abused me, calling me a dirty, little, low-lived pup, and asked me who gave me authority to make the statement.

"Then, when he abused me and called me names, I slapped him. Then he telephoned for the police and Mr. Leachman, the proprietor. I could tell from what he said to Leachman he was the Mayor and wanted me fired, so, when Mr. Leachman came, I quit."

Another witness told that he sat with the Mayor in a saloon after midnight and got a drink when the place was supposed to be closed after hours. The Mayor did not take a thing, the witness said.

KILLED BY OFFICER.

Dayton, O.—Acting suspiciously in a barn on Orchard street and fleeing from apprehension, Louis Smith, 55, whose residence and kinship are unknown, was killed by Patrolman John M. Widner. Several persons were in pursuit and the officer drew his gun, commanding the man to halt. He failed and Widner's revolver cracked just as Smith leaped over a high fence. It is claimed the man's actions greatly annoyed West Side residents for a week and many efforts were made to capture him.

OHIO HAY SHIPPERS.

Lima, Ohio.—The formation of the Ohio State Hay Shippers' Association was perfected in a meeting presided over by H. W. Robinson, of Cleveland. Officers were elected as follows: President, S. W. McMillan, Van Wert; vice-president, S. W. Kemp, Spencerville; secretary-treasurer, E. A. Young, Shelby.

DR. JONES IS APPOINTED.

Columbus, Ohio.—Dr. J. F. Jones, of Columbus, has been a member of the State Library Board, taking the place made vacant by the expiration of the term of Frank McGrew, of Springfield.

CHURCH DESTROYED BY FIRE.

Crooksville.—Fire of unknown origin destroyed the United Presbyterian Church at Rose Farm. The loss is $2,000, with no insurance.

MAN KILLED BY AUTO.

Dayton, O.—Frank F. Kuhn, 32 years old, machinist of Coldwater, O., was struck and killed by an automobile when alighting from a car here. The automobile party, which consisted of three women and two men, failed to stop. Kuhn has a brother, Thomas Kuhn, residing in Cincinnati.

Middletown, O.—Dominico Rinaldi, an Italian, was hit by the Big Four express here and killed. The man has two brothers in Cincinnati.

MRS. JOHN S. BOGGES

Mrs. Bogges, leader of Chicago's army and navy circles, renowned beauty of Columbus, O., celebrated musician and sole heir to the millions of Jhon T. Kegling, law partner of United States Senator Atlee P. Pomerene, has mysteriously disappeared.

WATER BOY IS KILLED

Cretan Professor Working as Laborer Is Struck By Traction Car at Lima.

Lima, O.—Working as a "water boy" on a railroad section gang here, although worth nearly $18,000 and well educated, Elnvragell Kirmigis, 28 years old, a Cretan, was instantly killed by a Western Ohio traction car.

In a belt worn by the foreigner was found $100 in United States paper money, a large amount of Italian currency and other valuables.

A bank book found on the man disclosed that he had $18,000 deposited in the banks of Europe. He was a leading professor in his country, his friends claim. The man had stepped on the tracks as he was returning with a bucket of water, not hearing the car's approach. His skull was crushed.

POSTMASTERS IN COLUMBUS.

Columbus.—The Ohio division of the National League of Postmasters held their annual convention here. The membership is composed of the heads of all third and fourth class offices in the state.

Among the speakers were two congressmen, Alfred Allen, of Cincinnati, who spoke on "Postal Affairs," and E. L. Taylor, of Columbus.

Mayor Karb's address of welcome opened the convention Wednesday, followed by the annual address of the president, J. S. McKinley of Orient. G. F. H. Birdseye, inspector of the Cincinnati division, delivered an address on "The Postal Service."

A discussion of the proposed changes of the body's constitution opened the Thursday morning session, followed by addresses by M. M. Carey, of Lexington, and P. J. Powers, of Gibsonburg.

Election of officers and delegates to the national convention and addresses by E. C. Jordon, of Adamsville, and G. F. H. Ofrdseye closed the convention.

FORMER OHIO BANKER

And His Brother Are Given Sentences in State Penitentiary.

Marietta, O.—Arraigned before Judge Jones in court of common pleas here, Harry Crooke, former cashier of the Waterford Commercial and Savings bank, pleaded guilty to a charge of falsifying a report of the condition of the bank. He was sentenced to the Ohio penitentiary for two years. His brother, J. C. Linton Crooke, former manager of a land company, pleaded guilty to aiding and abetting Harry Crooke in the embezzlement of $7,500 bonds. He was given three years in the pen.

SHORTAGE IN POLICE FUNDS.

Dayton, O.—There is a shortage of $42,000 to the police department of the city which can only be met, the safety director says, by laying off each month four or five men and putting the remainder on 12 hours duty. The police now work on eight-hour shifts. The deficiency has rapidly accumulated during the past five years despite special bond issues.

SHULER NAMED AS EXAMINER.

Hamilton, O.—Probate Judge Jobe R. Connaughton named Louis Shuler, of Ross township, as a school examiner of Butler county for a term of three years. Shuler succeeds Mary Fitzgerald on the board. The appointment as made is a very popular one. Mr. Shuler is well qualified for the position.

SAVE DOG AND DOLLY.

Bellefontaine, O.—Judd Fidler and wife, of Belle Center, left their two little children asleep when they started for Springfield to spend the day. When the children arose they tried to start a gasoline fire. The house caught fire and the children escaped. Then the boy remembered he had left a pet dog in the burning home and his little sister wished to rescue her dolly. Together they rushed into the flames and succeeded in getting their pets before the roof fell in.

FOOTBALL COACH CHOSEN.

Oxford, O.—C. T. Donnelly, an attorney of Boston, Mass., has been secured to coach the Miami football team this season. He succeeds Thomas L. Kaady, who was elected for that position for this year, but who resigned to accept an offer to travel as salesman for a sporting goods house. Both are Dartmouth college graduates and Mr. Donnelly has each year returned to his alma mater to aid in rounding the football team into shape for its biggest games.

Health & Beauty Hints

By Katherine Morton

A becoming arrangement for the hair is a very important feature of the bride's altar getup, and this naturally includes the right draping of the veil; so it would be ridiculous to claim that any one style of coiffure is to be used, for the lines of hairdressing must conform to the size of the head, the cut of the features and the height of the bride. But, for the most part, hairdressing is done on a very elaborate scale, and to accomplish the vast structures piled upon heads many false pieces are needed. These go under names too numerous to mention, but the bang, the switch, the psyche puff, the cluster puff, the transformation and the pin curl are some familiar titles. In buying any of these pieces by mail, the bit is matched to a lock of hair from that part of the head where the false piece would be worn. Thus bangs and transformations are matched to the front hair, switches are judged by the tints of the back hair, and so on. The reason for this particularity is that naturally colored hair is of many tones, and these seem to dispose themselves over the hair as they see fit; wherefore it is easy enough to tell dyed false hair at a glance, for the changing tones of the natural color cannot be imitated. So dyed false hair is without the commercial value of the false pieces in natural colors, and when the tint required is a rare one the false fixing is still dearer. All those shades of brown which have a drablike tint, Titian red, reddish gold and golden and white blonde are dearer than other colors.

A very handsome hair arrangement for the bride who is not too tall—that is, much taller than the average woman—is called the "coronation," this lending itself most charmingly to the lace veil put on in cap fashion, as is shown by the bride of the fashion pictures. For this style, which is rather intended to give a little height to the figure, the hair is parted in the middle, and two braids are carried around the head to form a large knot, showing from the front view of the head. This knot gives the support needed for the mop arrangement of the veil, which is fastened to it with a wreath of orange blossoms, the face border of the veil falling about the face is a shaped frill. Such veils, be it understood—those with lace borders—are more widely trimmed at the bottom and sides than at the top, so the lightly trimmed and narrower end is shaped as it should be for a pretty fall about the sides of the face. With the "coronation" coiffure a ribbon is often worn about the braided knot, this ending in a bow without ends at the side. For classic, statuesque types lace veils are far more becoming than those of tulle, which seem rather to belong to youthful brides of saucy or demure types.

The bang will be a salient feature of the coiffure of every girl who can wear the forehead fringe, but the bang is the merest cobweb, and it is slightly waved or left straight, as suits the face. The fringe is also quite short, and when it seems unadvisable to cut the natural hair for it, the little piece, delicately woven to a silk thread, is bought in false shape for about seventy-five cents. A narrow, ventilated and naturally curly bang of "convent hair" in every shade is sold for a dollar and a half, and where the forehead is very high, and the face thin, this is very softening to the features.

The smartest tendency of all coiffures is toward a distinct flatness of the top of the head, where the hair is parted at the middle or at one side; from the parting, wherever disposed, the side locks go back with a light waving, and the large knot of braids, or puffs and curls is placed high enough to show all the nape of the neck, and, besides, elongates the back of the head to a great extent. This flatness of the top and rear extension gives the head a very lovely contour, and if the face needs the softening of little curls they are put in many places—at the nape of the neck, below or above the ears, or else in the round or pointed rear knot. As to the deep waving once done at the sides and under the back hair, it is still a feature of the coiffure's waxen ladies, but is by no means so conspicuous on human heads. The undulations admired are wide and loose, as if the waving were natural, for this method certainly gives a very legitimate look to the artificiality.

Ornaments for the bride's coiffure are numerous enough, some very splendid bandeaux of pearls being seen, as well as pearl combs and barrettes and pins. But if the veil is to cover the whole head, as it generally does, the ornaments had better be of shell in the color of the hair, as in this way they will not conflict with the hair of whole wreaths and the separate knots of orange blossoms, used upon pins, for fastening on the veil.

Social Forms and Entertainments

For Club Entertainment.

I belong to a ladies' club. The ages of the members are from twenty-five to fifty. Will you please suggest some way of entertaining them? I would like something in which all might take part.—Violet.

A number of ladies spent a most enjoyable afternoon in this manner: Each one was asked to dress her hair to represent some famous woman. It was surprising what a change was wrought in the appearance, and it was a jolly crowd, I assure you. Some of the personages were Martha Washington, Mary Queen of Scots, Queen Victoria, Queen Alexandra, Frances E. Willard, Priscilla, etc. Old pictures furnished the ideas. Programs and pencils were passed and a prize was given to the lady who guessed the most and one to the person who remained the longest unguessed. I should think this would furnish entertainment for your club.

Regarding Mourning.

Would it be proper for me to receive a gentleman caller while I am still wearing black and my mourning veil? I have worn it a year. I would not go driving Sunday because I didn't know whether it was proper. How long does one usually wear the mourning veil? Would it do for me to wear it with all white dress? In taking off mourning is it necessary to wear black and white a while before you go out in white?—M. H.

There is no harm in receiving calls while you are in mourning. About the driving, you must be guided by your own feelings. All white is considered mourning and black and white half mourning. A year is long enough to wear a heavy veil.

Compensation for Organist.

Is it the custom to pay the organist at a wedding for her services, if you are well acquainted with her, if so, what compensation would you give her?—Blancha.

If you are well acquainted with the young woman and hesitate to offer her money, give her something to equal what she would receive in money from a stranger, for an organist is always paid for a wedding. I cannot set the amount, not knowing her terms.

Duties of Bridal Attendant.

Will you please tell me what the duties of the bridesmaid and groomsman are, also at a home wedding who should receive the guests at the door?—Mabel.

At a home wedding the mother and father of the bride receive the guests; in other words, those who issue the invitations are the host and hostess of the occasion. A bridesmaid, if there is no maid of honor, immediately precedes the bride, stands beside her and holds her bouquet. The groomsman supports the groom, enters with him, produces the ring at the critical moment and relieves him in all possible ways of the details of the preparation.

For a Scotch Entertainment.

Will you please give me some suggestions as to representing some Scottish character or books for an entertainment.—Lassie.

"The Heart of Midlothian," "Annie Laurie," "Scottish Chiefs," "The Monastery," "A Highland Laddie," "Ivanhoe" (carry a small hoe). If you go to the library doubtless many others will be suggested.

For a Dinner Dessert.

Maple mousse is delicious for dessert and always acceptable to every one, as maple flavoring is a general favorite. Mousse is pronounced exactly like moose, a deer.

Picnic Invitation.

Here is the invitation sent out for our club picnic that you helped us with when I wrote you a few days ago:

(To be sung to the tune of "Annie Laurie.")

You are cordially invited our picnic to attend —— delighted this message now to send.
(Individuals can put "I surely am delighted.")
Next Tuesday morn's the time, and —— the place
And so we send this little rhyme to help away gloom to chase.

The dashes can be filled in as desired. —Sarah.

MADAME MERRI.

DOTTED VOILE WAIST

This pretty waist is of white voile with blue dots, trimmed around the yoke with a band of blue soutache. The yoke is of white tulle or voile, ornamented in front with buttons and finished at the neck with a lace ruffle. Little ruffles of the same lace trim the sleeves at the bottom.

AN ECHO.

He (at the musicale)—That singer seems to be echoing our feelings.

She—How so?

He—She's singing "No One Knows How Sad I Feel."

Robert Browning's Will.

Diligent search is being made at Florence, Italy, for the will of Robert Browning, son of the famous poet, but so far it has not been found. The fact that there apparently is no will is causing considerable gossip, as the property, of which there is a good deal, both in Asolo and Florence, will pass to his wife, who was Miss Coddington of New York, and from whom he lived apart for years, owing to incompatibility of temper.

Browning's property in Florence included Casa Guidi, where he spent his childhood days. When his mother died the property passed out of the family, and was acquired by him a few years ago.

A FOOD CONVERT
Good Food the True Road to Health.
The pernicious habit some persons still have of relying on nauseous drugs to relieve stomach trouble keeps up the patent medicine business and helps keep up the army of dyspeptics.
Indigestion—dyspepsia — is caused by what is put into the stomach in the way of improper food, the kind that so taxes the strength of the digestive organs they are actually crippled.
When this state is reached, to resort to tonics is like whipping a tired horse with a big load. Every additional effort he makes under the lash diminishes his power to move the load.
Try helping the stomach by leaving off heavy, greasy, indigestible food and take on Grape-Nuts—light, easily digested, full of strength for nerves and brain in every grain of it. There's no waste of time nor energy when Grape-Nuts is the food.
"I am an enthusiastic user of Grape-Nuts and consider it an ideal food," writes a Maine man:
"I had nervous dyspepsia and was all run down and my food seemed to do me but little good. From reading an advertisement I tried Grape-Nuts food, and, after a few weeks' steady use of it, felt greatly improved.
"Am much stronger, not nervous now, and can do more work without feeling so tired, and am better every way.
"I relish Grape-Nuts best with cream and use four heaping teaspoonfuls as the cereal part of a meal. I am sure there are thousands of persons with stomach trouble who would be benefited by using Grape-Nuts." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."
Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

The proposed single tax amendment to the Missouri constitution has been endorsed by the municipal, finance and taxation committee of the Civic League of St. Louis, one of the most influential organizations in that city. The committee's report was prepared by Prof A. A. Young of Washington University and F. N. Judson, another recognized expert in taxation matters, who was president of the Buffalo tax conference in 1901. But it was signed by all the members of the committee. It clearly shows the injustice of the present system and the advantages of the single tax. The committee is to be commended for approaching the subject with an open mind and the St. Louis Civic League is to be congratulated on its possession of a membership capable of such splendid, intelligent work. No doubt the report will have great weight with thinking people of the state outside of the organization which the committee represents.

There is considerable speculation in Washington as to the effect the new parcels post law will have on the express combination case now pending before the interstate commerce commission. Last spring the commission made a report in the express investigation, which announced that the decision would not take effect until after its possible effects had been argued in October. It is generally understood that the express companies are willing to accept the decision of the commission, except the part relating to rates. The situation is complicated by the passage of the parcels post law, which authorizes the carrying of packages up to eleven pounds. It is believed that the express companies will alter their position on the zone system and accept rate reductions. They will no doubt be anxious to compete with the government for the small package business. The parcels post law is a step in the right direction and will be productive of good results.

The Invasion of Modern Spiritualism and the Discovery of Gold in California

Editor Herald.

We here jot down a few items in our local history, which may serve to refresh memories of the earlier days and bring us a little closer to those who have preceded us, most of whom from time to time have dropped from view and joined "The innumerable caravan which moves to that mysterious realm, where each shall take his chamber in the silent halls of death."

Sixty-four years ago two notable events transpired in widely separated localities the influence of which either singly or combined have served to mark an epoch in the material and intellectual advancement of our own country and incidentally of the civilized world at large.

This assertion will not appear extravagant when we consider even one of the two events, first the discovery of gold at Captain Sutters saw-mill on the Sacramento in 1848, for that alone has practically duplicated our habitable domicile and bound with iron bands the east and west ocean coasts, results wholly unprecedented in all historic time. The immense shipments and traffic in fruits, cereals and other commodities that have followed the recent settlement of the Pacific slope is truly astonishing, saying nothing of its mineral wealth, but it long ago ceased to excite surprise and now has become a matter of course to our eastern markets. But these are facts that are frequently enlarged upon and we proceed to name a second discovery or rather a re-discovery of the proximity of the two modes of human existence, that is to say, the mundane and the spiritual life.

This also occurred in 1848 and was more commonly known for many years as the "Rochester (N. Y.) Knockings" although they took place at the little suburban village of Hydesville near the above city as has often been stated at the home of a respectable Methodist family named Fox. Beside the parents the family consisted of three young girls, one of whom, Maggie, some years later became the wife of the celebrated Arctic explorer De Kane. All three girls were known in after years as spirit mediums or more correctly "intermediaries."

Strange noises occurred in their presence and followed them wherever they went.

Curiosity ran high. Neighbors were nonplussed, professional men offered unheard of theories and the clergy believing perhaps that the source of the uncanny phenomena smacked of the mythical super-heated realm and him with the "sooty phiz" as the Poet Burns describes him suggested exorcism, ignorant of or forgetting that the great English reformer and founder of the Methodist church was similarly afflicted a hundred years before. But the phenomena persisted and manifested great vitality and a decided tendency to spread to distant localities. In the very early fifties similar manifestations were announced in our own town and others along the lake shore region. Meantime the new discovery had taken on the name "Modern Spiritualism." But no well-informed person believes these peculiar phenomena are or were limited to our own day and generation for as Rev Lymen Abbot is reported to have said to his congregation, "they are as old as humanity and will remain as long as humanity exists" and this view is confirmed by both ancient history and current observation.

However the subject became a common topic, in confidential interviews—to some it appeared as an important and reasonable reaction upon waning faiths and increasing belief in a bold and illogical materialism—to others a venal fanaticism, subversive of true religious order and hence it is received most unmerciful and caustic lampooning from many sources—based mostly on "a priori" grounds and bitter prejudice, a faith that awaits any fact or sentiment that is likely to change the order of things or modify prevailing notions, especially those of a religious character. Beliefs once accepted and adopted take deep root and are difficult of change, yet are subject to slow modification and even disintegration.

Evolutionary movements are ever forward and result in growth and general progress.

"For still the new transcends the old
In signs and tokens manifold."

Continuing our story—a gentleman then living on the west side of Little Mountain was engaged to speak to a small coterie of well-known citizens and weekly meetings were held in one of the small jury rooms of the county court house as it was then arranged.

At that time Joel Tiffany was not widely known, even locally. By those who were favored with his acquaintance he was recognized as a man of fine analytical powers, of broad religious and humanitarian views, together with the gift of properly expressing them. From the very first his lectures were a great success, so great indeed that the little jury room would not nearly accommodate the increasing number who wished to know something more of those profound philosophies which hinge largely upon the oft-quoted question propounded in Job "If a man die, shall he live again?" and the main court room was thrown open and filled with anxious listeners at nearly every Sunday session, in fact it has been said that the attendance upon Mr Tiffany's ministrations exceeded that of any organized church then in our village. This is partly accounted for from the fact that many who were affiliated with the several churches left their accustomed pews and were in regular attendance at his lectures. In a letter received from the veteran John S. Batchelor a year or so before his death in Ashland, Oregon, he says: "It split the Methodist church; about one-half withdrawing."

It is quite probable however that the anti-slavery movement, then agitating the public mind, was one cause of disruption, since the church had already resolved itself into two factions or branches, and became the "Church North" and the "Church South" in 1844 if I do not mistake.

The sentiments promulgated by Mr. Tiffany naturally invited controversy and public debates were held with Rev Norton (Methodist) and Rev. Mathew Clapp (Disciple) with the usual result of giving the alleged heretical teachings a wider publicity and inducing a more anxious spirit of inquiry.

Mr Tiffany put forth no dogmatic assumptions upon which to build a theory or warrant a creed, he summoned facts and authentic history and announced the logical conclusion.

He would lift humanity up rather than expect heaven to stoop in contravention of immutable law. It was as if he kept in mind that terse biblical text: "Add to your faith knowledge" and in his attitude toward those of conflicting opinions he seemed to say "All true religionists are to be respected," sentiments too often ignored or forgotten.

After some two years (say 1853 to 55 or a little later) Mr Tiffany closed his public ministrations here and began a liberal publication in New York City under the name of "Tiffany's Monthly." But his literary venture was not a financial success and was discontinued after a vain struggle of about three years. He was next employed as reporter for the Supreme Court of New York and now upon the shelves of most law offices may be found twelve volumes 'bound in sheep' labeled "Tiffany's Reports." It will be readily inferred that Mr. Tiffany was a lawyer; though the calling seems not to have been altogether to his taste, for he is said to have once won a suit in which he was afterward convinced that a deserving man lost his farm and he then resolved never to engage in the prosecution or defense of any case until fully satisfied his efforts were to be on behalf of justice—a resolution and precedent to be remembered together with the common prayer of honest litigants namely "Less law and more justice" "less cant and more piety."

During the fifties several local mediums attracted people, even from long distances away and the "delusion" (often so-called by those who through prejudice sought to quell and quench the innovation in its infancy, denouncing it as heretical and therefore unsafe and to be shunned. Still it would not "down" but appeared in new and unexpected forms and localities, challenging further investigation until, in more recent years it has not only attracted the attention of accredited scientists and thinkers in every civilized country and for most part has received their approval and endorsement as a settled fact in science and ethics—while in our more intelligent centers the orthodox clergy are now ready to concede the existence of its phenomena and quite as prone to make free use of its broad and reformatory sentiments, though they be in direct conflict with impossible creeds which are still regarded as foundational to good doctrine and the well-being of humanity and the church.

In 1867 a large and flourishing society of liberal thinkers and advocates of the so-called "Spiritual hypothesis" was formed in the village of Painesville with an average membership of one hundred or more and continued in existence for four years but was disrupted by the agitation of extreme doctrines of the day to which only a portion of the membership could give assent, since which no concerted effort at re-organization has been attempted.

During the existence of the society its Sunday sessions were attended by large and intelligent audiences, often to the full capacity of the hall, to hear some of the most eloquent speakers then having a place upon the public rostrum; most of whom have done their work on earth and gone forward to invisible fields and new activities.

In the ensuing years there was perhaps somewhat less said from the platform generally but an increasing number of honest investigators took up the quest for such facts and philosophies as might meet the universal hunger to know something of the continued life in which all people believe or profess to believe, though it lie just beyond the mortal horizon—a faith barren of proof be it ever so sincere, does not satisfy the longing of growing souls—and hence the radical heresy in its modern presentation continued to spread until it has openly invaded every civilized country on the globe and in many of them has established a press for its promulgations and thousands upon thousands are ready to declare with poet Longfellow:

"The spirit world around this world of sense
Floats like an atmosphere, and everywhere
Wafts through these earthly mists and vapors dense
A vital breath of more etherial air."

A. O. SMITH

RECORDED QUEER BET

LOSER PAID GUINEA A DAY FOR THREE YEARS.

Made Wager with Clergyman Based on Expectation of Napoleon's Death and Finally Was Released From It by a Jury.

"One of the most curious bets I ever heard of was made in England a hundred years ago," said Angus McGregor, an attorney of Edinburgh, Scotland, at the Belvedere.

"The wager was between a knight, who was also a member of parliament, and a clergyman, for in that day it was not considered scandalous for dominies to put up their money on sporting propositions. It is but fair to the preacher, however, to say that the other man did the bantering, and this was the knight's singular offer: That if anyone of a crowd present would put up 100 guineas (something over $500) he would give to each person one guinea a day during the remainder of the lifetime of Napoleon Bonaparte.

"In making such an extraordinary offer he evidently thought the great Corsican had but a few days to live. Before the others in the company could recover from the shock of the strange proposal, the clergyman shouted out that he would accept the terms and then and there the wager or deal was consummated, there being witnesses to the act of the minister in putting 100 guineas into the challenger's hands.

"A splendid bet it was for the reverend gentleman, but a miserably poor one for the other, who had to surrender a guinea every day and this he continued to do for the better part of three years. Along toward the close of 1814 the knight wearied of his losing game. As you American say, he began to have cold feet. At first he tried to beg off, but the parson would not listen to his entreaties. A bet was a bet he contended, and the fact that he was ahead to the tune of some 900 guineas made him not in the least compassionate. Boney might live a good while longer and that daily revenue was very sweet.

"As a last resort the knight refused to pay any longer, and the parson brought suit before a judge. Eloquent and learned counsel spoke on both sides, but it must have been that the advocate for the defendant knight produced the most convincing argument in telling the jury why his client should not be made to pay any longer.

"In the first place," said the lawyer, his client had not in the beginning made the bet seriously; it was a sort of jocular proposal, but once being made the proponent was too game to back out. Secondly, it was contrary to public policy to give legal sanction to such a bet. Napoleon was Britain's most dreaded foe and for a British subject to have a procuring interest in prolonging the enemy's life was a horrid and untenable thought. The jury took the same view and freed the knight from further payments."—Baltimore American.

Young Financier.

It appears that there is more or less humbug about the traditional slowness of the messenger, the fabulous laziness of the office boy—and all that sort of stuff. At any rate, there is a young fellow in Cleveland who may be said to be abreast of the age to which he lives. He works in a downtown office building, but he has a rapidly growing account to a savings bank.

The other day our young hero went to his bank to make a deposit of 50 cents. The teller, with more than his customary haughtiness, informed the boy that the bank would not receive deposits of less than $1. The kid didn't waste any time arguing about it. He walked over to the desk, wrote a check for $1 and presented it at the paying teller's window. It was honored, of course. Then the little financier said:

"I wish to deposit $1.50."

And that deposit was accepted. And the teller ground his teeth.

Haec fabula docet—that you can deposit a cent if you have an account.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

That Active Germ.

A single germ to a forty-quart can of milk, if the conditions be favorable, will divide once every half hour, so that at the end of 24 hours it will have increased to 281,474,976,710,656. At the end of the 24 hours one cubic centimeter of the contaminated milk would contain more than 7,488,000,000 germs. This is the report made by the New York Milk Committee in the government's weekly public health reports. What's the use?

Cleaning Glass Bottles.

A glass water bottle, when constantly used, soon becomes discolored. This may easily be cleaned by pouring a little vinegar into the bottle and adding a pinch of salt. Allow this to stand for several hours; then rinse with clear water. The bottle will be perfectly clean and bright.

Dream Yourself to Sleep.

When you retire to bed, go there to sleep. And sleep. Don't think, don't plan, don't worry. Shut the door firmly upon all thinking. Open the mind to fancies, never mind how vague and fantastic, if they are but pleasing; and let yourself drift about in this sea of fancies until sleep comes—you know not when. So by acquiring the power of dreaming while awake you gain the ability of dreaming yourself into sleep.—Health Culture.

Lost Its Tongue.

The Paul Revere bell in the city hall at Bath, Me., lost its 18-pound tongue the other day and became silent for the first time in over 100 years. The bell first hung in the steeple of the North church at Bath. The people of Bath knew that something was amiss when the curfew did not ring at nine o'clock.

Use Blotting Paper.

Place a piece of white blotting paper under a vase containing flowers. It will absorb any moisture which may run down the vase. This prevents stains from appearing upon the polished surface of the table.

MENTOR

Now that the voting time is over, some of our Mentor women are quite stirred up over the matter of suffrage and are seriously thinking of refusing to pay any more taxes. It seems especially humiliating to know that they have been beaten by the liquor men, who are now so jubilant that even the indifferent persons are beginning to think it would have been better had they taken more interest.

Another thing that is stirring up Mentor women, is the fact that the White Slave traders have invaded our own Lake county. A fourteen year old girl disappeared from her home in Kirtland last week, and another young girl on her way to Painesville High School, disappeared (so we are told), as mysteriously and as suddenly as though the earth had opened and swallowed them up! Men will do nothing to stop this most devilish traffic—at least they never have—but women would! One reads about such things, and while they seem very dreadful, they are so far off, they do not alarm and "sink in." But when it comes to having our girls snatched away right before our eyes, it is high time something was done.

Mrs. Bert Dille of Madison, has been spending a few days here with Mrs. Sam Curtiss and others of her old neighbors. Mrs. Dille reports that her mother, Mrs. George Dille, is in very poor health, but that others of the family are well and doing well.

The Messers Maurice Rosenthall and Frank Smith and their better halves went to Toledo by automobile a few days ago, and remained with friends over Sunday.

Mrs. Elbridge Steinhoff of Buffalo, has been visiting her father's family here at the Center, and was accompanied home by her younger sister, Miss Josephine Johnson, who will remain a week or two.

The much shot and killed Dan McCarthy has so far recovered as to be in his place in the Methodist choir on Sabbath days, but where is the would-be murderer? Probably not in church anyway!

Mr. John Chambers has decided not to move his family to Michigan just at present, Mentor seems a fairly good place in which to live, and he will continue in the employ of W. P. Murray as heretofore.

Mr. and Mrs Ed Sanborn were in the village last week, getting their property in readiness to rent (and have rented to some Mill people) and so their friends are led to believe they will remain at Chagrin Falls for the present.

Miss Helen Murray has just returned from taking a trip down the river St. Lawrence, with a party of friends.

The schools at the Center have opened with a larger attendance than usual and the greatest satisfaction is being expressed by the children with their teachers this year. Miss Hubbard has the Primary, Miss Shields the Intermediate, Miss Hazel Murray of Painesville the Sixth and Seventh grades, while Prof. McMillan has the higher classes and the care of the schools and grounds in general.

Mrs. E. D. Barber accompanied by Mrs. Taft and others of her family, drove out from the County Seat on Tuesday last, making a few calls on her way to and from.

The Miscellany Club has been postponed one week on account of the Lake Co. Fair, the success of which all good Mentor folks wish to help on by their presence.

Mrs. Chas. Justus has been spending a week or two at Geneva-on-the-Lake.

Today, we understand, Miss Marion Amidon, of Painesville, (but whose home has been in Los Angeles, Calif. for several years), is to be married to Mr. Will Hagenberger, one of our Mentor florists, and that their home will be here.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Warren of Concord were recent guests of Mrs. Anna Shumaker, over Sunday.

Mr. Bert Smith has been spending a portion of his summer vacation with friends living down in Cincinnati.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Carlston, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Justus attended the State Fair at Columbus last week, and so are prepared to compare it with our own county fair, coming on now very soon. (Of course our's will be way ahead of anything else!) That goes without the saying!

Mr. W. P. Murray is to have some of his fast Kentucky horses at the Fair, and the Cleveland Driving Club already have some of their best, here in the Clark Parker big barn under training.

The Misses King entertained at luncheon on Thursday the following ladies who were friends of their mother: Mrs. Bliss, Mrs. Tyler, Mrs. Carroll and Miss Ellen Corning.

Hours for the opening of the Mentor Village Library have again been changed back, on account of the opening of school, and will therefore be Tuesday, as usual, Thursday and Saturday. The only evening will be Friday evening, as usual, and the only afternoon will be Wednesday as the children seemed to have very little use for extra books on that day.

Mr. Arthur Frisbie is again in Cleveland for a few weeks on business and spent Tuesday down here with his cousins, the Kings. Mr. Frisbie is in the real estate business in Fresno, Cal., but declares that if one is not making the getting of money the one business of life, and is content to live slower, that there is no place like northern Ohio in which to make a home, according to his notion!

We feel to say "All hail" to the Mentor Ladies' Aid. They are going to serve lunch on the Fair Grounds beginning on Tuesday, and continuing all down the week. Their place of serving is to be just south of the east gate, in plain sight of same, and will be marked in red big letters "Mentor Methodist Aid Society." They propose to serve hot coffee at five cents per cup, ice cream at five cents per cone, and two kinds of sandwiches (ham and something else) each one of which is to cost five cents. The object of all this hard work on the part of the Mentor ladies is to increase the pipe-organ fund.

The Lawn Social held on Methodist church grounds a couple of weeks ago netted over twenty dollars to the Society towards this same organ fund! And should any person feel moved to put his hand in his pocket and give outright something towards this fund it would be quite cheerfully accepted by any Mentor lady, and handed to the Treasurer.

Still more wedding bells are to ring this coming autumn, and two more young ladies are thinking of taking a "school of one scholar." Both of these are valuable to our village society and can not well be spared, yet, what is our loss may be the gain of two other villages.

It has been suggested that some one in authority should secure room for a display of antiques, both furniture, needle-work, curios, china, laces etc at the coming Fair, as there are more real genuinely nice things stored away in this county than any one has any idea of. The trouble would be, not every one would care to loan them!

The Cleveland merchants have agreed on Wednesday as Suburban Day, and have decided to try the delivering free of charge system, at our own doors. Monday, Wednesday and Friday packages are to be sent this way, if so requested when the purchase is made, and the following are a few of the stores agreeing to make this trial delivery, and so prove whether it will pay them or not. The Higbee Co., Chandler & Rudd, The Bailey Co., George H. Bowman, Burrows Bros., Cowell & Hubbard, Halle Bros., Henan & Son, De Klyn, Stearn & Co., The May Co., Moorehouse Co., Scotts, Southworths, Lindner Co., Quinbys, Korner & Wood, Buschman & Sons, Conrad-Kroech, W. B. Davis Co., Wm. Taylor Co., Likly & Rockett Trunk Co., John Meches, Manila Trading Co., Yesinger Co. This trial scheme is operated under the head of the Retail Merchants Board, the members of which are also members of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce.

BETTOR HAD MONEY COMING

But Then, Charley Is Hardly Likely to Live Four Thousand Weeks, You Know.

We'll conceal his identity under the trade name of Charley, says the New York correspondent of the Cincinnati Times-Star. He is a telegraph operator, with a professional knowledge of the ponies. When times were better in this town, in a sporting way, he used to take the racing results in a poolroom. When the Western Union refused to serve the rooms in town any more, he had to take just an ordinary wire-snapping job. As a side issue he used to run a little handbook. "I'll take the bets at track odds," he announced to his friends. "You all know that I haven't any bank roll, but I'm honest. If you hit me too hard, I'll have to pay you off out of my salary, at the rate of two dollars a week."

That was satisfactory to the little bunch of operators who handed him dollar bills daily. Charley went on, luck being a little better than even. Operators are pretty wise players, as a rule, and they hit him almost as often as they lost. But on the whole Charley was ahead. Then, one day, a friend put a five-dollar bill on a four-horse parlay.

"I don't like to take this money," Charley protested. "I don't know what this parley may pay if it goes through. No way of getting the track odds here. If you win, and I haven't enough money on hand to settle, you'll have to take it out of my pay, two dollars a week."

The other fellow agreed—and the four-horse parley went through. The lucky bettor won $8,000 from Charley, and spent $150 of his own money in celebrating the event. Next day he went around to collect.

"This," said Charley, "is to be paid off at the rate of two dollars a week. It will get through paying you in just four thousand weeks."

According to the other bettor, the second Christian era will be dawning before he gets his money out of Charley. He wanted to take Charley's typewriter for it, and call it square, but Charley refused. "I'm no welsher," he protested, indignantly. "I'll pay you every cent—if I live that long."

Domestic Pets.

A healthy dog, living a natural and healthy life—not the life of the pampered inmate of a harem—is a distinct asset in a household.

He not only helps to smooth the rough places and give us interests and protection, but very often he compels his owners to take their due share of exercise and lead more open air lives than they would do if left to themselves.

We owe him a heavy debt of gratitude and we should lose no opportunity of doing him a good turn, but the lady who lets her pet eat from her own plate, sleep in her own bed, even teaches him to take morsels from her own lips, frequently kisses her pet's muzzle, and allows him to lick her face with equanimity to return, is severely warned.

These, says a well known doctor, are most dangerous practices when one realizes how all dogs perform their own toilettes and where they poke their muzzles, and also how the germs of certain disease may be transmitted.

The Oldest Egg.

Not so long ago a party of explorers, members of the Archaeological society of Mayence, found, during their excavations in the ancient Moguntiacum, a hen's egg which was estimated to have been buried for something like nineteen centuries.

Moguntiacum was built by Drusus, the son of the Roman Emperor Augustus, in the year 14 B. C. Upon the site of the ancient Roman castrum or encampment near the city the excavations in question brought to light many interesting relics, including some water cisterns of Roman make. It was in one of these, which was located twenty feet below the ground, that a damaged Roman clay pot was found containing the shell of a broken egg and also a whole egg that had been kept from being smashed by a shred of the damaged pot, which covered it. The ancient egg was turned over to the municipal museum.—Harper's Weekly.

Women Knights.

It is not at all well known that knighthood has constantly been conferred upon women. Many English ladies received the accolade and many more were members of such knightly orders as the Garter and St John. When Mary Cholmondeley "the bold lady of Cheshire," was knighted by Elizabeth for "her valiant address," on the queen taking the command at the threatened invasion of Spain, did she know that a whole city of Spanish women, the gallant women of Tortosa, had been knighted for saving that city from the Moors! Mary and Elizabeth had both been knighted at their coronation, but by the time Anne, the second Mary, and Victoria ascended the throne it had been quite forgotten that according to English law and use a woman who filled a man's office acquired all its privileges and was immune from none of its duties.

Confusion of Effects.

"They didn't," admitted Mr. Stormington Barnes. "When we played tragedy the box-office receipts were a farce, and when we played farce they were a tragedy."

Wise Philosophy.

Do not let your head run upon that which is none of your own, but pick out some of the best of your circumstances, and consider how eagerly you would wish for them, were they not in your possession.—Marcus Aurelius.

About Mirrors.

Do not place them where the sun falls upon them, as this occasions a separation of the particles of amalgam upon the back, with the result of an inequality of surface which interferes with reflection and sight.

The Yellow Letter

SYNOPSIS.

Harding Kent calls on Louise Farrish to propose marriage and finds the house in great excitement over the attempted suicide of her sister Katharine. Kent starts an investigation and finds that Hugh Crandall, suitor for Katharine, who had been forbidden the house by General Farrish, had talked with Katharine over the telephone just before she shot herself. A torn piece of yellow paper is found, at sight of which General Farrish is stricken with paralysis. Kent discovers that Crandall has left town hurriedly. Andrew Elser, an aged banker, commits suicide about the same time as Katharine attempted her life. A yellow envelope is found in Elser's room. Post Office Inspector Davis, Kent's friend, takes up the case. Kent is convinced that Crandall is at the bottom of the mystery.

CHAPTER IV.

Katharine Speaks.

If I had been alone I would have gone directly to the Farrish home. I was anxious about Louise. I had not seen her since the night before, though I had telephoned her early in the morning—I greatly regretted having to leave her so much by herself in such distressful circumstances. I thought it wiser now to prepare her beforehand for the inspector's coming. I wanted him to see the Farrish home. I felt that if he met Louise and realized the luxury and comfort in which the family lived he would better appreciate the mystery and my determination to solve it.

I suggested luncheon at Martin's and Davis assented. As soon as we had obtained a table I excused myself and hastened to the telephone. Louise told me that the condition of both her father and Katharine was practically unchanged. I briefly summarized my morning's work and asked if I might bring the inspector after luncheon.

"By all means," said Louise, "bring him right over. I want to meet him and there may be some things I can tell him which will aid him."

When I returned to the cafe on the Broadway side, where I had left the inspector, I found him abstractedly rolling little pellets of bread and placing them in various positions on the cloth. So absorbed was he in his occupation that he hardly seemed to note my return. His flying fingers would hastily mold three or four pellets in as many seconds. Placing them in a row, he would eye them intently. Occasionally he would swoop down on some unoffending pellet and sweep it to the floor. Two or three times I tried to interrupt him to learn what he wished to eat, but each time he waved me impatiently away. Finally, not desiring to delay too long over luncheon, I gave the waiter the order without consulting him. Mechanically he ate what was put before him, all the while keeping up his game with bread balls.

Knowing him as well as I did, after studying closely his eccentric movements, I felt sure that the array of pellets was closely allied with the mental process by which he was seeking to solve the Farrish mystery. The larger pellets, I decided, must be the various theories about the yellow letter or letters and their origin. The smaller pellets were the different persons connected with the case. One by one he pushed the larger pellets from the table until a single pellet remained. The smaller ones he kept arranging and rearranging until at last he seemed satisfied. The single surviving large pellet stood directly on a crease in the cloth. On one side equally distant from the crease, but close to each other, he had placed two of the smaller pellets. The rest were in three groups on the other side of the line. For perhaps five minutes he carefully studied their position without shifting them and then with a quick motion of his hand swept them all to the floor.

"There was some purpose distinctly criminal connected with the yellow letters," he said, as if for the first time aware of my presence, and becoming as loquacious as he had before been silent. "When we have run this mystery to earth we will find that there are two of the criminals—only two guilty."

"Guilty of what?" I asked in amazement.

"I haven't the slightest idea as yet," he replied with such apparent frankness that I suspected he was not telling me all his thought. "Evil ideas are of three kinds: the solitary, the pair, the group. Crimes are merely the physical expression of evil ideas and bear the same classification. The solitary evil idea manifests itself in a variety of crimes. In this class belong defalcations, poisonings, crimes against women and generally the assassination of private individuals. These are the hardest crimes to discover and punish. The evil idea is not communicated. This sort of criminal seldom has confidants. Often, in fact almost always, he masks his villainy behind the cloak of respectability. Most of these offenses are due to mania, to blood lust, to a desire for revenge for real or imaginary wrongs.

"Evil ideas of the pair are generally attributable to money-lust. In such crimes as burglary, highway robbery, blackmail, you will find two persons equally guilty, always the pair. Sometimes it is the man and the woman, sometimes the strong man and the weak man, sometimes two women, though seldom, for women have little of the inventive or creative faculty, even in crime. Notorious women criminals, just like all other feminine celebrities in literature or art, have much of the masculine in their make-up.

"The third kind of evil idea, that of the group, is responsible for the [illegible] the mob, the conspiracy. It is [illegible] Hand is a typical example. The members of this notorious organization, while they profit financially by their misdeeds, care little about that end of it. Their greatest pleasure is in the torture of their victims, in the agony they suffer from the time the nameless dread of the Black Hand first seizes them until finally they are put to death for refusing the society's exactions. It is this evil spirit that kills kings, burns witches, destroys property and lynches negroes. The Farrish mystery, however, is of the second class—the crime of the pair. I am certain of it."

"The important thing then for us to do," said I, trying to bring him from the abstract to the concrete, "is to find Hugh Crandall and also to discover who was his closest associate—man or woman."

"Do you think so?" he asked enigmatically, adding a second later, "Can't you take me to see Miss Farrish?"

Hardly another word passed between us as the taxicab whirled us up Madison avenue to the general's home. I was thinking about Davis' strange theories of crime and his opinion that this was a crime of the pair. I felt sure that he, as well as I, must be convinced of Crandall's connection with the matter and surely his flight did not argue innocence. But if this was a crime of the pair who was the other guilty person? Whom did Davis suspect? He had said that it might be either two men or a man and a woman. A woman? Could it be that he suspected Katharine Farrish of sharing Crandall's guilt?

No, no it was impossible, too absurd. Yet certainly the yellow letter seemed a link between her and Elser. It was she who for a long time had been Crandall's closest associate. That association apparently had been recently renewed in secret. Was it possible that back of the mystery there was some crime and that Katharine was guilty?

For a moment I was tempted to order the chauffeur to stop. It seemed almost desecration to take this heartless analyzer of crime into the home where death stalked so close. Suppose Katharine was— No, I had pledged my word to Louise that I would solve the mystery and I would keep my promise, no matter where it led me. After all, the important thing was my beloved one's peace of mind. As long as the shadow hung over her father and sister, her happiness must be marred. Better the knowledge of evil than the terror of mystery.

Davis wasted little time in ceremony. As soon as I had introduced him to Louise, he said abruptly:

As Louise called one of the servants to escort him upstairs I was rejoicing at the opportunity to be alone with her. The cold formality of her greeting would have troubled me had I not attributed it to the inspector's presence. As soon as he had left us, with the memories of the evening before glowing in my mind, I turned to embrace her.

"Don't, please don't!" she said coldly.

"Why, dearest!" I stammered in amazement.

She offered no explanation but said in the most matter-of-fact tones—too matter-of-fact to be natural, I thought—"Tell me, Mr. Kent, what you learned at the place where Mr. Elser lived."

I was dumfounded. What had come over her? What could have happened to make this sudden change in her attitude toward me? Could this cool, distant young woman be the same girl who only a few hours before had clung so desperately to me and had wept out her sorrows in my arms? Had she overnight forgotten the kiss with which we pledged our joint efforts to solve the mystery?

"Tell me, Mr. Kent," she persisted quietly, "is there a yellow letter in that case, too? Do you believe there can be any connection between Mr. Elser and—and what Katharine did?"

Greatly perturbed, yet trying to convince myself that her attitude was only a girl's natural reaction as she recollected the events of the evening before, I was just beginning to rehearse what little we had learned in the boarding house when Davis came running down the stairs.

"Tell me," he said abruptly to Louise, "what color are Mr. Crandall's eyes?"

"Blue," said Louise, "gray blue."

"Humph!"

I could see she was as much puzzled at his question as I had been, but he offered no explanation and made no comment.

"Was Crandall left handed?" he snapped.

"I don't think so," said Louise after a minute's thought. "I never noticed that he was."

"Humph!" he repeated, his eyes roving about the room. "Take me in to see General Farrish."

The young doctor whom Doctor Wilcox had left in charge happened to be passing through the hall, and stopped as he heard the request.

"It can do no harm," he said, in reply to Louise's look of inquiry.

The four of us—the doctor, Davis, Louise and myself, in the order named, tiptoed into the general's room. I was prepared for a great change in him, but his appearance was really terrifying. Perceptibly thinner, aged as by many years, all shriveled and shrunken, he lay chained to his bed by his affliction, unable to lift leg or arm, his lips fallen nervelessly apart, his tongue lolling uncontrollably—dead, [illegible]

As Louise and I approached the bedside it appeared to me that he recognized us both and I could detect the same pleading look I had noted the night before. He seemed to me struggling, [illegible] us something. While I did not know whether or not his hearing had been impaired I thought he might be worrying about Katharine's condition, and carefully and slowly I began to enunciate something about her, hoping that I had guessed what it was he wished to ask. But even as I spoke I saw that his eyes had left my face. Into them returned the same acute terror he had exhibited at the sight of the yellow letter. If those eyes could have spoken, their shrieks would have filled the room. I followed the direction of their glance. He was staring in terror at the one strange face in the room—the inspector's.

Seeing how much his presence disturbed the invalid, Davis turned quickly and left the room. Louise and I followed, leaving only the doctor and nurse.

"I wonder what made him look so?" breathed Louise.

"He's afraid of something—or some one?" I said, hurrying to overtake Davis, hoping to learn from him his opinion as to what caused the patient's fears.

"I was right. It's just as I thought," I heard him mutter as he hastened to the hall and reached for his hat and coat. I saw that he was making preparation for instant departure and I was in a quandary what to do. I felt it my duty to accompany my friend, for from his manner I was convinced that he was on the track of the mystery. Yet I did not wish to leave Louise until I had gained some explanation of the barrier that she seemed to have raised between us. I was conscious of no way in which I could have offended her, yet there was a marked difference in her attitude toward me overnight. While I was still debating the question and Davis had all but reached the door, seemingly indifferent to whether or not I accompanied him, a nurse came running to Louise.

"Miss Farrish," she said, "I think your sister is recovering consciousness. I thought you would like to know it and to be at her side in case she speaks."

Though Davis was some distance away his acute ear must have caught her words. He turned and was up the stairs in a flash. Louise convulsively caught my hand. The barrier between us was swept away. I knew then it was only fear that she had been forward in showing her affection. Hand in hand we raced up the stairs after the inspector and ranged ourselves on the other side of the bed from him.

Between us, her long hair in braids, only the white bandage around her forehead to suggest her wound, lay the silent figure of Katharine Farrish. The pallor of her face seemed only to enhance her beauty, and though her eyes were closed, her long dark lashes still gave expression. As we watched, she began stirring restlessly and her hands twitched nervously. Suddenly her eyes opened wide, not with the light of intelligence, but with the [illegible] excitement of fever. She made an ineffectual attempt to rise in bed, but she was too weak. Sinking back on the pillow she shrieked: "Promise me, Hugh, promise me, you'll do it at once."

After that one sentence she relapsed into unconsciousness. I feared for a moment that she was dead. The doctor hastened to her side and began to feel her pulse and listen to her heart. It seemed many minutes before he turned to us with a reassuring whisper:

"It is nothing serious—a relapse to be expected after that outburst. Her heart is stronger than I expected. She will not likely regain consciousness for many hours, but there is no immediate danger."

His manner, rather than his words, invited us to go, so Louise and I followed Davis from the room.

The inspector seemed to have forgotten his haste to depart. He sat down abruptly on a divan in the upper hall, with his face resting in his hands, and gave himself up to intent thought.

Louise and I stood a little apart, discussing in whispers Katharine's strange outcry. What could she have meant?

"She meant Crandall, of course," said Louise. "She mentioned Hugh—did you hear it?"

I nodded assent.

"Probably she was repeating a conversation she had with him just before she shot herself," I suggested. "What do you suppose she wanted him to promise her?"

Louise shook her head. I racked my brain in vain for some theory to fit her words in her own desperate act, to Crandall's flight, to her father's terror. I judged from Davis' abstracted manner that he, too, was similarly engaged.

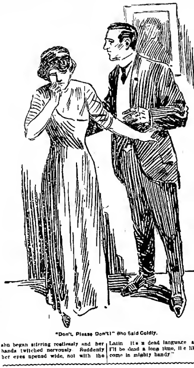
"Everything," I said to Louise, "every single thing we have learned points to Crandall's connection with the mystery that has hung over your father and Katharine. When we have found him we shall learn what it was. I am more and more convinced that he is guilty of some crime, something terrible, something that your father and sister knew."

The inspector laughed aloud.

We turned toward him, I in indignation, Louise in astonishment, to find him looking at us with an amused smile.

"Don't be too sure," he said quizzically. "Crandall doesn't seem to have been left handed."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)



"Don't, Please Don't!" She Said Coldly.

A Utilitarian View.

A Brooklyn man, confined to his home by illness, recently surprised a visitor by revealing that he was studying Latin. "Why," asked the visitor, "do you bother about Latin? That's a dead language. If you must study, why not take up German, or French, or Spanish?" The sick man smiled. "My doctor says I have not long to live," he said. "That's why I study Latin. It's a dead language and, as I'll be dead a long time, it's likely to come in mighty handy."

Wrath Came In Very Handy

So Mad After Spat With Sweetheart That He Whipped a Bandit.

Sam Jones was mad clear through. He had just had a quarrel with his sweetheart, and although he had controlled his anger until he left her home he was now boiling over with rage. As usual, Sam had got the worst of the little spat, for in spite of his 6 feet 2 and his great strength his diminutive lady love had wound him around her finger like so much ribbon.

As Sam alighted from the elevated train at his home station his cheeks were still flushed with helpless anger and he was just "spoiling" for a fight or almost any kind of a chance to even up matters on some one. His wish was destined to be granted sooner than he knew, for when he descended the elevated steps to the street a figure blocked his path, a revolver was held a few inches below his nose, and a gruff voice commanded, "Come on! Shell out, Jack!" [illegible] smashed the would-be robber full in the face with his brawny fist and sent him reeling several paces backward and stunned him so that he dropped his weapon. Both Sam and the thief were so surprised that they merely stared at each other for a few seconds, then the latter remembered that he possessed a good pair of legs and started to run at express speed.

"Here's a good one," Sam laughed grimly as he set out in hot pursuit of his assailant. "This fellow intended to hold me up and now I'm going to hold him up just to balance things a trifle." Sam was soon forced to give up the chase, however, for he was burdened with a heavy ulster, while the holdup man wore a light sweater.

"Gee," chuckled Sam, "if I hadn't been as hot under the collar as I was, as a result of that little fuss with Alice, I'll bet I'd have shelled out like a little lamb when he presented the invitation. I'll go up there tomorrow night with a big box of chocolates and [illegible]

When We Have Been Wronged

From the Sunday School Times.

DOES any responsibility for "making up" rest upon a person who has been wronged by another, when the one who has done the injury will offer no apology? The question is not merely one for class discussion; it enters into ordinary experience constantly and prominently. A bank president in Ohio writes of its discussion in his Sunday-school class:

"Our class was divided over the question of our duty to the other fellow, when he has wronged us, and we feel certain that there has been no wrong on our part. Some said we are to leave him alone until he is ready to confess that he has wronged us. Others said that the verse, 'If therefore thou art offering thy gift at the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath aught against thee,' means that we must try to be reconciled to the brother who has been offended (even when there has been no wrong on our part) before our gifts will be acceptable to God. What is the teaching of that verse? (Matt. 5:23, 24)."

It is always safe to follow the example of God in our principles of action. We have wronged God so terribly by sin that we cannot, and would not if we could, turn to God of our own accord and seek reconciliation. God is wholly in the right; yet God does not leave us alone until we are ready to confess and ask for reconciliation. Instead, God seeks us out, and, at a tragic and infinite cost to himself and his Son, he simply loves us into confessing and seeking reconciliation. No man has ever turned to God for forgiveness until after God had won him to this by long-suffering, patient, loving entreaty and kindness. Suppose God should "leave us alone" until we were ready to do the right thing!

When we have finally yielded to his love and accepted his pleadingly proffered forgiveness and life in Jesus Christ his sacrificed Son, then he asks us, who thus have been forgiven such an unspeakably great debt, to forgive others their little debts against us. And he asks us to do it in his way—the same way that he used toward us. He asks us to go out after them in love, positive, aggressive, compelling, winning love, love that makes the first move, but that never makes the last move, because it never ceases. "never faileth." If we simply lavish our love, in positive ways, persistently and unceasingly upon one who has wronged us, and never show that we have even noticed the wrong, any hard feeling is pretty sure to starve to death. There is pretty sure to be a reconciliation, whether or not the other fellow ever does anything about it openly. To be reconciled means, to the Greek, to be changed throughout. It is that sort of change that God would effect by showing his love in us and through us toward any one who needs reconciling toward us.

The injunction in Matthew 5:23, 24 would seem to include all this. It would reasonably seem to apply to either an innocent or a guilty party in such a matter. If a man has wronged another, and has not confessed and made restitution, then he certainly ought to set things right before going on with his religious duties. If he has been wronged, and has not done all that he might to effect a reconciliation, the obligation to do so lies just as heavily upon him as upon the offending person. Though he may have been innocent before, he now becomes guilty of the quarrel if he does not sacrifice himself utterly in loving effort to win the other's love; and his worship will not be acceptable to God until he does so.

Joy of Our Hindrances.

We could never know the joy of overcoming unless there were something to overcome. Every time there obtrudes itself into our life some sharp, unwelcome, distasteful circumstance, this is an invitation to enter at once into a privilege, an achievement, a joy, that we could not know except for the unwelcome intrusion. What a new glory our hindered, limited, interrupted life takes on when we really see it in this light, and honestly believe in the power of Christ to lead us always in triumph through every obstacle that Satan intended for our annoyance and defeat. To Goethe is attributed the saying that he never had a chagrin but he made a poem of it. But no mere determination to do this can insure it in any life. Christ alone is equal to it; yet Christ is so sufficient that the very words chagrin and defeat may drop out of our experience. He has overcome the world in which we must live. Therefore this hindering world is the very best place in the universe just now for us to know and prove his overcoming power.

Under the Rule of Jesus.

Let our temper be under the rule of the love of Jesus; he alone can curb it—he can make us gentle and patient. Let the vow that not any unkind word of others shall ever be heard from our lips be laid trustingly at his feet. Let the gentleness that refuses to take offense, that is always ready to excuse, to think and hope the best, mark our intercourse with all. Let our life be one of self-sacrifice, always studying the welfare of others, finding our highest joy in blessing others. And let us, in studying the divine art of doing good, yield ourselves as obedient learners to the guidance of the Holy Spirit. By his grace the most commonplace life can be transfigured with the brightness of a heavenly beauty, as the infinite love of the divine nature shines out through our frail humanity.—Rev. A. Murray.

In every hour of danger the Lord is with us and he will save us from death until the time comes for us to go home, when he will be with us as we go [illegible]—Rev. [illegible] MacArthur, Baptist, New York [illegible]

Letter from Mrs. J. A. Thompson, Newport, Vt.

Newport, Vt.—"I thank you for the great benefit Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done me. I took eight bottles and it did wonders for me, as I was a nervous wreck when I began taking it. I shall always speak a good word for it to my friends."—Mrs. John A. Thompson, Box 3, Newport Center, Vermont.

Letter from Miss Grace Dodds, Bethlehem, N.H.

Bethlehem, N.H.—"By working very hard, sweeping carpets, washing, ironing, lifting heavy baskets of clothes, etc., I got all run down. I was sick in bed every month.

"This last Spring my mother got Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for me, and already I feel like another girl. I am regular and do not have the pains that I did, and do not have to go to bed. I will tell all my friends what the Compound is doing for me."—Miss Gracie B. Dodds, Box 133, Bethlehem, N.H.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine, made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health.

To Fortune and Happy Life in California

Messrs. J. S. & W. S. Kuhn, the Pittsburgh bankers, are doing in the Sacramento Valley what the U. S. Government is doing elsewhere for the people.

There is ten times more net profit per acre in California irrigated land than in the East and with less labor.

Let us take you where there is comfort and happiness besides profit, climate equal to that of Southern Italy, no frosts nor snow, no thunderstorms nor sunstrokes.

Let us take you where big money is now being made, markets are near, demand for products great and income is sure.

Let us take you where railroad and river transportation is near, where there are denominational churches and graded schools.

Now is the time to buy the land—get in with the winners, the great Panama Canal will soon be ready and you can share in its triumphs; farms are selling rapidly, and we strongly urge you to purchase as soon as possible.

You can buy the land on very easy terms—$15.00 an acre now and the balance in ten yearly payments.

Let us send you our finely illustrated printed matter telling all about it. Write for it at once—it gives you absolute proofs.

Unfailing Stimulant.

Men have tried many things, but still they ask for stimulant—the stimulant in use but requires the use of more. Men try to drown the floating dead of their own souls in the wine cup, but the corpses will rise. We see their faces in the bubbles. The intoxication of drink sets the world whirling again, and the pulses playing music, and the thoughts galloping, but the fast clock runs down sooner, and the unnatural stimulation only leaves the house it fills with revelry—more silent, more sad, more deserted, more dead. There is only one stimulant that never fails, and yet never intoxicates—Duty. Duty puts a blue sky over every man—up in his heart maybe—into which the skylark, happiness, always goes singing.—George D. Prentice.

Collective Housekeeping.

An English paper tells of an experiment in collective housekeeping in what is known as Brent Garden village. The dwelling houses contain all improvements except a kitchen. Meals for everybody are cooked at a central hall, and may either be eaten there or sent home. A four-course dinner costs only 1 shilling and 4 pence. Servants are supplied, when needed, from the central hall at a cost of about ten cents an hour.

Grouchy Vacation.

"Is your husband enjoying his vacation?"

"Not as much as I am."

If you would win life's battle you must be a hard hitter and a poor quitter.

VAGABONDS OF THE EARTH

BY

ARTHUR D. HOWDEN SMITH

(Copyright, by Ridgway Co.)

I HAVE often wished that I could bring those six men together, and yet, on the face of it, the wish is impossible of fulfillment. They are scattered to the corners of the earth. Some I have heard from through roundabout channels, but most have passed beyond my ken. All but two were chance acquaintances, with whom I spent an hour or so.

There was Helmslund for instance. His line is birds—sea-birds, although, as far as that goes, anything wild and unknown attracts Helmslund. I dare say you never heard of Helmslund. You would soon enough, though, if you undertook to collect rare birds as a hobby. Helmslund is indispensable to scores of collectors in this country and Europe.

I met him one Sunday afternoon at the house of a friend who possesses a really remarkable collection of North American birds.

"Odd sort of fellow—Helmslund," our host later remarked. "I've known him several years, now, and he's just getting to the point where he gives me a sketchy account of the main incidents of interest in his trips."

"What trips?" I asked.

"After birds," replied my host. "That's Helmslund's work. He gets birds, not for the feather people—he would regard that as sacrilege—but for collectors like myself. He goes everywhere to get them. I don't suppose there's a country he hasn't been to in search of some particular specimen."

And that was how I happened to hear the story of Helmslund's battle for life on the wrathy waters of Lake Kibushka, far up by the Arctic circle in the grim desolation of the Siberian steppes. It had happened the summer before, on a trip he had taken to secure some specimens of the rosy gull for a European collector.

With a single companion and a couple of dog teams, he was working around the country, paying especial attention to the marshy tracts bordering several large lakes, which are the habitat of various species of water fowl. There is probably no more desolate country in the world than this portion of the steppes.

Helmslund soon found that the rosy gulls had deserted the shores of Lake Kibushka and he determined to cross the lake, which was about twenty miles wide, and try his luck in the country beyond. So he secured a craft which he called a dingey and which was large enough to hold his companion and three of the dogs, besides himself, and the party set out early in the morning. They propelled the craft by paddling, and it was slow work. At first, everything went well. Then a brisk breeze sprang up, agitating the surface of the lake until the waves became as large as those of the open sea. To add to the confusion, the dogs became frightened and started to quarrel among themselves.

Before they realized the danger, the boat had capsized and the two men and three dogs were struggling in the water. Helmslund kept his wits about him and helped his companion to swim to the overturned dingey. The dogs had already clustered about it and were fighting desperately in the water to climb on the bottom, but Helmslund pushed through them ruthlessly and helped the other man to get a seat, before he followed him. Luckily, he had retained possession of his paddle and he used it to beat off the dogs, crazy with fear as they felt the steadily increasing weight of their heavy water-soaked fur. Snarling fiercely, the beasts attacked the boat again and again, snapping at the men's legs and leaping out of the water in wild attempts to seize their throats.

Early in the afternoon, Helmslund's companion fainted and dropped off. My friend said that the tears stood in the little man's eyes as he told of this occurrence. He told it quite simply, as he told the whole story, indeed—without any straining for effect. It was only by direct questioning that my friend discovered that Helmslund had fallen off the boat himself in his efforts to save the other man, who had sunk like a stone. When Helmslund gained the boat a second time he was utterly exhausted and barely able to crawl on to its bottom. He had lost his paddle and had no means of directing his progress or even of determining in which direction he was going.

Fortunately for him, the wind was on-shore, and late in the afternoon he drifted within sight of land. The sight gave him renewed energy to strip off his shirt and use it to signal to a village of natives.

Whenever I smell the sickly-sweet scent of South American orchids a vision rises before me of another one of the six—a fever-racked specter whom I met toiling down the gangplank of a fruit-steamer from La Guayra. His name was Grayson, and he belonged to that legion of reckless adventurers, the orchid hunters.

Grayson had gone to Venezuela some months before, with a vague determination to strike into the jungle country in the direction of the Guianas. In a cafe in Caracas, however, he heard a tale which caused him to change all his plans.

This tale, or, rather, legend, had filtered into the city through the medium of up-country planters, and had been imparted to them by tame Indians, who in turn, had heard it from their wild brethren of the jungle. It had to do with a mysterious place known as 'El Lugar de los Flores Venenosos' (The Place of the Poisonous Flowers), a great clump of weirdly beautiful flowers, exhaling a deadly perfume, which was said to be located in the dense wilderness that lies about the headwaters of the Orinoco. This perfume was noticeable two days off; within a day's march it was sickening, and by the time a man was within sight of the flowers, he was overcome by the intense smell.

With the instinct of the orchid-hunter, Grayson divined that the legend implied the presence of his quarry. He scouted the melodramatic features of the tale, setting them down to the imagination of the countless untutored individuals through whom it had passed, and without more ado he set to work organizing an expedition. Strange to say, he preferred to be the only white man, although he took with him an old half breed who had been his companion on several other expeditions, and a large train of Indian porters.

One morning there was a perceptible odor of flowers in the air; by noon it had increased considerably. When they camped that night the jungle smells had been entirely supplanted. Their nostrils were filled with the cloying scent. A number of the Indians refused to go any farther, but Grayson, the half breed and a half dozen of the staunchest porters pushed on in the morning. The perfume grew heavier and heavier as they advanced.

Finally, one of the porters collapsed in his tracks. Another went down, and another. Grayson could feel his senses leaving him, although he struggled on. He said he had never smoked opium, but he imagined that his sensations must have resembled those of an habitual user. He was sure that he could see the flowers, huge, colorous, many-hued clusters of them, the most magnificent collection of orchids in the world, gleaming enticingly through the jungle trees, and then he, himself, collapsed. When he regained consciousness they were back at the camp where they had left the rest of the porters. Two of the men who had accompanied him were dead, another was mad. He and the rest, who had brought him off, were horribly sick.

With the madness of despair, he begged his men to try again with him. But they refused. The continued effect of the scent was almost intoxicating, so they turned back.

Their way thither had been fraught with perils. It was a Sunday excursion compared with the march homeward. The baleful influence of the flowers followed close at their heels. It was always with them, like a human vengeance. They were persecuted by fever; jaguars and serpents took their toll; the blow-guns of the Indians, the stunted people of the woods, slew with poisoned arrows. In the end, a handful staggered out on the banks of the Orinoco and sought their way toward the frontier of civilization. Grayson was sick for months after he reached Caracas. He was still sick when he reached New York.

Another one of the six was Carriere. He was big and quiet, with a deceptive placidity—not at all the sort of man you expected to meet if you had ever heard of him.

Like many other adventurers, Carriere ran away at sea. Like all who have ever done so, he paid for his fun in sweat and agony. He was a sailor before the mast for several years, on coasting vessels, tramp steamers, trading schooners in the Far East. He was in the Philippines when the war broke out, and he was captured by the insurgents and held prisoner for several months. He was engaged in vague, ill-formed revolutionary plots; he joined secret societies that have for their aim the emancipation of British India, and he did many other things in many other places that took him down into the deeps of life.

Finally, he drifted to the Balkans, about the time Macedonia was in the throes of the terrible revolt against Turkish rule. Carriere became intensely interested in this blind struggle of a Christian people for freedom, and he determined to let the world know some of the inside details of prevailing conditions. He believed, too, that he could be of help to the revolutionary chiefs in perfecting their organization in the villages and towns of the five vilayets.

In the course of nearly two years' work he had carried out his entire plan of organization, except in Salonika and some of the territory around that city. He left that to the last, because it was the most difficult task, and he thought that with the prestige of what he had accomplished, success would be more easy. The chief of the local committee in Salonika had rather a sinister reputation. It had never been proved against him, but there were rumors of blackmail.

For several weeks, Carriere lay in hiding in one of the suburbs of the city, receiving prominent members of the committee and talking over the new schemes he advocated. He had no suspicions at first, although he did not like the local voivode, and it came as a wholly unexpected shock when his secretary was shot down on the streets at night, after he had ventured out for a brief walk. The local committee claimed that a Greek had done it, but Carriere was suspicious.

Two nights passed, and then the old woman in whose house he was hiding came to him with a scared look on her face. She had heard two men talking in her garden about askares and the approaches to the house. One of these men was the local voivode. That was enough for Carriere.

He left the house in broad daylight, trusting entirely to luck, and on his way out of the city he met a detachment of troops marching to surround his hiding place. They halted him, but a Bulgarian girl, a friend of his future wife, who was standing near by, claimed him as her brother, and he was allowed to go on.

In Bulgaria he married the Russian girl who had been his principal helper and incentive, and cast about for some new task.

Young Ford was as different from Carriere or the others as a man well could be. I have known Ford for some years, and I think he is, without exception, the cheekiest man I have ever encountered. For one thing, he is a newspaper man—when he is anything, that is. Ford never works unless he has to, and he always makes sure that any position he accepts does not entail undue effort, mental or physical.

It was several years ago that Ford came to me and said he was going to South America. By means unknown he had got together about $2,000, and he fancied that he could make at least as much as he spent by doing special descriptive articles of his travels.

His one mistake was in electing to go by way of Europe, more especially by way of Paris. I knew the hold Paris had on Ford, so I was not surprised at the outcome—although I did not hear the full story of his wanderings for many months. We knew he had sailed from England for Rio, in the cabin de luxe of an English packet boat. From week to week, for possibly two months, we received letters from him. Then came the silence.

The silence continued for six months, until one morning I received a note written on American Line paper and postmarked Southampton. It was signed by Ford.

"Shall arrive on Philadelphia within 48 hours after you receive this. Short of cash. Do you remember that ten dollars you owe me?"

That was impudence for you! I should have known who wrote that note without a signature. However, I clapped a ten-dollar bill in an envelope and mailed it promptly. A week later Ford dropped in to see me.

"Much obliged for the cash, old man," he said. "It came in handy. You see, they trimmed me beautifully in Paris, and I started out for Rio with my steamship ticket and barely enough coin to last me three weeks. In fact, when I got to the Chilean frontier town across the Andes I was strapped. That made me sick of the whole job, and I decided it was time to head for home. There was a prince of a British consul there, who loaned me a ten-spot and got me a pass for donkey transportation across the mountains to the Argentine railroad.

"Just by blind luck, I'd chipped acquaintance with the chief engineer of the construction gang on the Argentine side, and so when I hit him for a pass to Buenos Ayres, he ponied up like a good one.

"I was feeling pretty disconsolate and I went into a cafe near the water front to forget myself for an hour or two. That was the time when Brazil and the Argentine were seeing which could build warships the quickest, you know, and there was a big Brazilian sitting in the place, with his feet up, passing remarks to the occupants in general. As soon as he saw me, he concentrated his attention, apparently on the supposition that because I was small I must be easy. I stood about two sentences and then I went for him. We were rolling promiscuously around the restaurant, and I was getting a bit the worst of it, when a little man with an arm like a steam flail came through the door. After he got through with my Brazilian friend there were no scraps to be picked up.

"Well, we shook hands and told each other we'd always been longing to meet, and afterwards we had a drink. The little man was a British captain of a tramp steamer due to sail the next afternoon, and when I told him of my troubles he clapped me on the back and offered me free passage to Rotterdam. 'I'll have to put you down on the books as cabin boy or steward,' he said. 'But you'll do no work. Come as my guest. I'll be glad to have you.' He was a prince, that skipper. Fed me at his own table, gave me his own cigars and wine, and when we reached Rotterdam he staked me to Paris.

"Aunt Jane was in Paris, fortunately for me, and I think she was so glad at the prospect of getting me back to America that she divied up without any side remarks."

I never really knew Chatton, the fifth of my vagabonds. I had been dining at a club in Piccadilly with an engineering friend, and as we were passing out through the club parlors my friend drew me aside to make room for a big, broad shouldered man wearing blue spectacles. "That's Chatton," he whispered. "He was one of the principal assistants in the construction of the new trans-Andean line. He's always had bad eyes, and the doctor told him he ought not to work above the snow line, but that wouldn't do for Chatton. He wants to be where the fun is. You see, engineering as a science means little to him. It's the game he likes—the fight to overmaster some problem. Poor Chatton! Whenever there was a desperate job to be done, he was bound to be on it—and all for a beggarly six or seven pounds a week, I suppose."

"Why do you say 'Poor Chatton'?" I asked.

"Because he'll never get over this latest eye trouble. He got it from the snow glare, just as the doctors said he would."

"But what will the man do?" I exclaimed. "How is he going to live?"

"He'll live—survive, rather," rejoined my friend, bitterly. "His people have money. But he'll never work again. Every one who knows him is always cut up. And he feels it, too, although he's deuced plucky about it."

If you have been in the habit of frequenting police courts or cheap lodging houses it is possible that you have met John Kelly.

As near as I could make out from stray admissions Kelly made to me, he gave up a reputable position in life to undertake a study of the psychology of tramps and thieves. He used to speak with genuine pride of his researches, and he was particularly proud of what he termed "his life work"—the compilation of a dictionary of thieves' slang together with a compendium of the rules of housebreaking and safe-cracking. Nobody was ever permitted to get an extended view of this. For a dollar or two now and then when the man was hard up, he would permit one to copy out a few stray phrases, but he was very suspicious as a rule and believed that every one was in a conspiracy to lure the fruit of his years of labor away from him.

What became of him I never heard. He drifted away, his manuscript with him, to the end steadily refusing the propositions that he regarded as little less than insulting.

HAT IN REAL COLD STORAGE

Clever Advertising Scheme That Had the Newsboys Wondering How It Happened.

On [illegible] day last week [illegible] around a cake of ice that was [illegible] on the [illegible] outside of a hat store [illegible] street. The [illegible] themselves what was attracting attention.

The curious ones who succeeded in elbowing and forcing their way through the crowd to the front rank were surprised to see that placed in the very center of the cake of ice was a new straw hat of the latest model. It was a very clever advertising scheme on the part of the owner of the hat store outside of which the cake of ice was placed.

"I wonder if the hat grew there?" asked a little newsboy who had been gazing at the hat in the ice for five minutes.

"Naw," replied another newsie. "I tell yer how it got in there. Last summer when some feller was going up the Hudson his hat blew off and floated around. When the winter came and the river froze the hat froze in the ice.

"One of the ice cutters up there who sawed the ice up for the ice houses discovered the hat frozen in, so he cut the cake of ice up without letting the hat get out. Then the feller who owns this store bought the cake of ice with the hat in it and put it outside the store here."

"I'll tell you one thing," said the first newsie, "only I have to hustle around and sell my papers, I'd wait here until the ice melted and then I'd make sure that the hat inside was the real thing."—New York Times.

ELECTRIC LIGHT IN DENMARK

Every Town In That Country of Over 5,000 Population Has Public Service.

According to recent information about the progress of electric light and power industries in Denmark, it appears that all the towns of 5,000 inhabitants and over are now provided with public electric service, says the Scientific American. As to towns having between 5,000 and 3,000 inhabitants, there are only three in which electric mains are not installed, so that it will be seen that Denmark is one of the most progressive countries in this respect. The largest sized electric stations are to be found at Copenhagen and at present there are three large plants in operation giving a total of 27,000 horse power. Current is supplied for the city mains, as well as for the tramway lines. As regards the Danish stations in small towns, in general each town has its own plant, and there is but one example of an intercommunal system. This is at Skovshoved, near Copenhagen, and the central station extends its power lines over all the suburban regions, also supplying the tramways of Hellerup and Klampenburg. In most of the town electric stations the Diesel heavy oil engine is used.

ERUPTION LIKE PIMPLES

Wathena, Kan.—"My child's scalp trouble became so bad that I was ashamed to have anyone see him. His head had a solid scab on it. He also had a terrible breaking out on his face which was gradually growing worse. The eruption was like pimples which developed into sores when he scratched, which he did almost constantly. Baby would almost scratch himself raw.

"I had used several different kinds of salve, none of them helping in the least bit, when I saw the Cuticura advertisement in the paper and it made me think of the good results my sister had when she used it for her children. I had only used Cuticura Soap and Ointment about two weeks before I noticed that the sores were almost entirely gone and it must have been a month or six weeks he was troubled before I began the treatment. He would get easy when I would put the Cuticura Ointment on him. Cuticura Soap and Ointment completely cured him and he has a clear complexion now." (Signed) Mrs. W. H. Hughes, Dec. 31, 1911.

German Farmer Good Business Man.

Under a seemingly generous offer of hospitality, a North German farmer has managed to include a good stroke of business for himself. In a Hanover paper recently appeared an advertisement that from fifteen to twenty women and girls (not under twelve years of age) who needed recuperation could have free board and lodging on a country estate. But in exchange they would be required to pick peas from eight to ten hours. Industrious pickers might also be paid cash for their labor.

The Love in Fiction and Life.

A periodical devoted to the drama pleads for plays based on some emotion other than love. The difficulty in producing such plays is that every play must have a hero, and in making a hero the playwright, as well as his audience, almost inevitably adopts the view expressed 2,000 years ago by a scribbler on the dead walls of Pompeii: "He who has never loved a woman is not a gentleman."

It Checked Baby's Dysentery

Subtle Admonition.

"Why do you always ask that regular customer if the razor hurts him?" asked one barber.

"Just as a gentle reminder," replied the other, "that if he forgot the tip it's liable to hurt him next time."

Instead of liquid antiseptics, tablets and peroxide, for toilet and medicinal uses many people prefer Paxtine, which is cheaper and better. At druggists 25c a box or sent postpaid on receipt of price by The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass.

WHAT WILL CURE MY BACK?

Common sense will do more to cure backache than anything else. 'Twill tell you whether the kidneys are sore, swollen and aching. It will tell you in that case that there is no use trying to cure it with a plaster. If the passages are scant or too frequent, proof that there is kidney trouble is complete. Then common sense will tell you to use Doan's Kidney Pills, the best recommended special kidney remedy.

Don't Poison Baby.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. CASTORIA DOES NOT CONTAIN NARCOTICS, if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher.

Dr. J. W. Dinsdale, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I use your Castoria and advise its use in all families where there are children."

Dr. Alexander E. Mintie, of Cleveland, Ohio, says: "I have frequently prescribed your Castoria and have found it a reliable and pleasant remedy for children."

Dr. Agnes V. Swetland, of Omaha, Nebr., says: "Your Castoria is the best remedy in the world for children and the only one I use and recommend."

Dr. J. A. McClellan, of Buffalo, N. Y., says: "I have frequently prescribed your Castoria for children and always got good results. In fact I use Castoria for my own children."

Dr. J. W. Allen, of St. Louis, Mo., says: "I heartily endorse your Castoria. I have frequently prescribed it in my medical practice, and have always found it to do all that is claimed for it."

Dr. C. H. Glidden, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "My experience as a practitioner with your Castoria has been highly satisfactory, and I consider it an excellent remedy for the young."

Dr. H. D. Benner, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have used your Castoria as a purgative in the cases of children for years past with the most happy effect, and fully endorse it as a safe remedy."

Dr. J. A. Boarman, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria is a splendid remedy for children, known the world over. I use it in my practice and have no hesitancy in recommending it for the complaints of infants and children."

Dr. J. J. Mackey, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I consider your Castoria an excellent preparation for children, being composed of reliable medicines and pleasant to the taste. A good remedy for all disturbances of the digestive organs."

GOLD FOR BOYS

To Win Is No Sin

The farmer sells wheat at 90 cents per bushel which is 1½ cents per pound. Translated into fancy, high-priced pastry on a dining car, the pound of wheat sells for 66 cents. Somewhere, between producer and consumer, somebody multiplied the farmer's 1½ cents by 44.

The Ohio State Board of Agriculture offers liberal prizes for a Boy's Wheat Growing Contest. Cash to the amount of $370 in gold will be given to boys between the ages of 12 and 21.

First $100. Second $75; Third $50. Fourth $40; Fifth $30; Sixth $25; Seventh $20. Eighth $15; Ninth $10; Tenth $5.

Every farm boy is invited to enter this contest. Now is the time. The success and educational value of the Corn Growing Contest induced the State Board to continue the good work in wheat.

In many counties, Bankers, Millers, Grain Dealers, and Merchants are offering as prizes, in addition to the above cash premiums, free trips to Washington next year.

The prizes offered are not worth as much as it is to make better farmers out of the boys this year than they were last year. Boys entered in this contest will be eligible to compete for the Free Trip to the Ohio State Fair in 1913.

Boys now entered in the corn contest may enter the wheat contest also. By the best kind of farming from five to ten bushels of wheat can be added to the yield per acre. This will help to make farming profitable and to keep the boy away from the city.

Gen. Apathy In Religion.

It may be small comfort to the clergymen of this town who have had cause to be dissatisfied with the attendance at their churches, to know that the apathy is not local. The church-going habit is seriously impaired throughout the country. No matter how able or zealous the preacher is, or how enchanting the music, at this season, when there are attractions out of doors, people simply will not attend. The automobile sets the pace and those who cannot afford that habit take the next thing to it; they go somewhere. We are not defending this, but stating an undeniable fact, for which the ministers are least of all at fault. In support of it we quote the following from the New York Sun:

The complaint is general among Christian workers in New York that never within their recollection has the interest in church matters been so slight or the attendance so slim as this summer.

The churches on Fifth and Madison avenues and Trinity, on Broadway, which usually have their congregations swelled in the summer by people from out of town, are suffering from the apathy as much as their smaller neighbors. There were only 26 persons at the church of the Heavenly Rest yesterday morning and 40 at St. Thomas's.

Such churches as the Marble Collegiate and the Madison avenue Methodist are drawing from 100 to 200 people every Sunday. Trinity, which has just as pretentious a service in summer as in winter, had a congregation of only 300 yesterday.

Repels Attack of Death.

"Five years ago two doctors told me I had only two years to live." This startling statement was made by Stillman Green, Malachite, Col. "They told me I would die of consumption. It was up to me then to try the best lung medicine and I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery. It was well I did, for today I am working and believe I owe my life to this great throat and lung cure that has cheated the grave of another victim." It's folly to suffer with coughs, colds, or other throat and lung troubles now. Take the cure that's safest. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free at Gohring's pharmacy.

Walls That Don't Transmit Sounds.

Experiments have recently been carried out in Germany with the object of discovering methods and means for rendering walls and ceilings capable of effective resistance to sound transmission. One of the more recently devised methods involves the use under the ceiling, or parallel to the wall, as the case may be, of a network of wire stretched tightly by means of pulleys secured into adjacent walls and not touching at any point the surface to be protected against sound.

Upon the wire network is plastered a composition formed of strong glue, plaster of paris and granulated cork, so as to make a flat slab, between which and the wall or ceiling is a cushion of confined air. The method described is said to be good in two respects: first, the absence of contact between the protective and protected surfaces, and, secondly, the colloid nature of the composition recommended for the plaster.

Keeping the Children Amused.

A delightful way to amuse children and incidentally their parents, is by illustrating a fairy story, the title of which is guessed by those watching the performance.

Select a well-known story and divide it into short parts, or acts. Then let the children act the various parts in dumb show, using gestures without speech, which are not hard to teach very small children.

The idea is a good one for bazaars or school entertainments, where a public performance can be the climax of several rehearsals.

If possible, dress the title actors in costume and let the performance be given to the accompaniment of suggestive music that will help them make the right gestures at the proper time. Without having to think of lines to recite, children learn positions and gestures very quickly.

Used Fraud to Gain for Charity.

A strange psychological phenomenon is disclosed in the case of Sister Candide, a French nun who was recently convicted of swindling Parisian jewelers in order to raise money for charity. She systematically secured jewels of great value and then pawned them, using the money thus raised—over $1,000,000 in all—to carry on various charitable enterprises. She apparently did not realize the gravity of her offense, and sentence was suspended by the court.

LITTLE GIRL LOSES DISDAIN FOR THE BOYS

Conversion Comes Through Disaster to Her Doll When She Undertakes to Throw a Brick at Marauding Dogs.

"Do you see that little girl?" asked the old bachelor, as he leaned upon his gate and halted me in my morning walk. "Yesterday she was all for woman's rights, but today her views are of a different complexion."

He nodded toward a four-year-old who was wandering with lonely and disconsolate air along the edge of the sidewalk.

"She lives in that little shack over there, and she hasn't much to play with, but she's well brought up and her mother has taught her to flock by herself and not chum with street boys and girls. Some one gave her a doll and doll buggy, and she's been out with it every fine day as proud and happy as a queen. She's scared to death, though, of two small dogs that live across the street and come sniffing around her and her baby. The boys, too, tease her sometimes, but they throw stones at the dogs and chase them away.

"Yesterday she was pushing her buggy along and singing to herself when the dogs ran out. She halted and watched them approaching. Then she made up her mind she'd chase them herself instead of squealing for the boys.

"So she stood in front of the buggy and picked up a piece of brick. It was pretty heavy for her, but she threw her arm back the way she'd seen the boys do and hurled it with all her might. She shut her eyes tight as she threw, so as not to witness the annihilation of the dogs, I guess, and probably she thought the crash that followed was the breaking of their bones, but when she opened her eyes the enemy was unhurt and coming right on. Then she turned to fly, but when she looked into her buggy the yell that arose brought people to the windows for a block around.

"Her mother came and bore her off, wailing at every step, and today she is quiet, as you see, but it is plain her heart as well as her doll is broken.

"Yesterday I thought I would teach her how to throw stones, but today I've changed my mind. I'm going to get her a new doll. I think she'll leave the dogs to the boys in future."

Power of Radium.

Suppose that the energy of a ton of radium could be utilized in 30 years, instead of being evolved at its invariable slow rate of 1,780 years for half disintegration, it would suffice to propel a ship of 15,000 tons, with engines of 15,000 horsepower, at the rate of 15 knots an hour for 30 years—practically the lifetime of the ship. To do this actually requires one and one-half million tons of coal.—New York World.

LAKE COUNTY SEES HIGH GRADE STOCK

Center of Cleveland's 'Gentlemen Farmers' Has Blooded Exhibit---Over 28,000 People Visit the Fair Wednesday

[CLEVELAND DAILY PLAIN DEALER]

Lake county, famed as the tax paying home of numerous lake steamship companies that have offices in Cleveland, also the paradise of Cleveland's "gentlemen farmers" who make money in the city and spend part of it raising the most fancy grades of blooded live stock, sat up yesterday and gasped in astonishment.

Half Million in Stock

More than $500,000 worth of fancy cattle, thoroughbred horses, choicest hogs, best bred sheep and other kinds of blooded animals are housed on the Lake county fair grounds, come under great tents, others in new, airy buildings.

Lake County Fair Building, Showing Main Entrance.

Lake county didn't know until yesterday that it had so many fancy cattle, horses, hogs, sheep and chickens within its borders. Neither did the sixty, more or less, of Clevelanders, who have been so busy for several years past developing the highest grades of animal breeding on their "summer home" farms that they haven't had more than a passing minute now and then to see what their neighbors were doing.

But yesterday at Painesville, when the gates of the first county fair Lake county has held in eighteen years were opened and more than 28,000 people had scattered themselves about the sixty-five acres comprising the new fair grounds, the realization slowly dawned. It is, in effect, that Lake county probably is leading the United States in the highest development of blooded livestock of all varieties.

Half of the sixty, more or less, so-called gentlemen farmers who are responsible for Lake county having on exhibition the most exclusive fancy display of blooded live stock ever shown at a fair in Ohio were as amazed yesterday as the rest of Lake county. For Lake county, from stem to stern, including public schools and business places, closed shop yesterday and bundled off to the fair grounds.

Of thoroughbred horses there is the cream of racing, driving and draft animals. The list is headed by Toddington, the champion $30,000 stallion owned by W. P. Murray of Pickands, Mather & Co., also president of the Cleveland Athletic club. Toddington, king of racing horse sires, is the father of Frank Perry, champion yearling of last year, with a mark 2.15.

But Toddington is only one of the string of blooded peers of the horse kingdom that Murray brought from his Lake county stock farm and has on exhibition. There is his champion Belgium stallion, Warwick, weight 1,940 pounds, and Tambas, his champion 4-year-old French Percheron, weight 1,865 pounds, both kings in the heavy draft horse class. There is also Maximo, champion trotting mare, with a mark of 2:09 3-4, that had the grand circuit in a fever of excitement all last year, not to mention four imported French Percheron brood mares and several other pieces of blooded horse-flesh.

J. B. Perkins, millionaire horse fancier and veteran breeder, is exhibiting Climax, his 7-year-old international blue ribbon stallion. Climax took first at the Chicago national horse show as the best American driving stallion, also first at the International New York show as the best Morgan stallion and second prize at New York in the officer's charger class.

Henry A. Everett, millionaire traction head, drew on his Leo Doro stock farm for Astrakan, prize winning imported Percheron stallion, also a string of his blooded Shetland ponies for which the Leo Doro stock farm is famed.

The array of fancy cattle is large. John Sherwin, president of the First National bank and proprietor of South farm, is exhibiting his blooded herd of Ashires, including White Lily, champion 2-year-old milch cow of the United States. White Lily holds the record of producing 12,022 pounds of milk, and 588 pounds of butter in one year.

Keeweydin farm, owned by E. H. Baker, has on exhibition its herd of blooded and registered Guernseys, including Sequel of Keeweydin, champion 4-year-old bull, and Beauty, champion milch cow which took three first prizes at the recent state fair.

Sleek, blue blooded porkers, some with short snouts, some with long snouts, including Rival's Majestic Boy, Charles A. Otis' $1,000 champion 2-year-old, are followed next in order by fancy sheep.

"It is a most bewildering array," said Hoyt V. Shulters, one of the directors of the Lake County Agricultural society. "I didn't know there was so much fancy live stock in the county."

So said W. P. Murray, likewise J. B. Perkins, not to mention all the rest of Cleveland's gentlemen farmers.

HON. J. A. BEIDLER

HEART-DISEASE SUMMONS WELL KNOWN CITIZEN

Coal Merchant, Political Leader and Successful Stockman Has Many Warm Friends in Lake County

Mr. Beidler was best known in Lake county as an enthusiastic farmer and stockman and as a politician of remarkable ability considering his limitations in way of public speaking. He had the faculty of making friends and returning their good will.

Beidler was born on a farm in Chester county, Pennsylvania, in 1852. His father was a minister of the Reform Mennonite church. Until he was 21, Beidler worked on the farm, graduating meanwhile from Lock's seminary at Norristown, Pa. Then he came to Cleveland and started business as a coal dealer.

For forty years he had been active in the coal business of Ohio and Cleveland. He was president of the East Goshen Coal Co., and the Goshen Coal and Mining Co. For a long time he was a member of the Burton-Beidler-Phillips Coal Co., and at the time of his death was president of the Rhodes & Beidler Coal Co., with offices in the Columbia building.

Mr. Beidler made his home at the Belle Vernon farm near Willoughby village. This farm has been considered one of the finest stock farms in Ohio. His entrance in national politics was coincident with his return to country life. He was one of the pioneers of the back-to-the-farm movement in Ohio, and much of his work at Washington was associated with such interests, particularly in obtaining free rural mail delivery routes in this part of the state. He had no equal in his ability to obtain and send out free seeds.

The one campaign speech which is best remembered was delivered when he invited his Cleveland followers to a spread at his Willoughby farm. Then he stood on his own front porch and, as among good friends, forgot he was making a public speech. He talked about his farm, and talked at length. The cheers were even longer than this record speech.

Mr. Beidler was a member of the State Board of Agriculture. He was also a director of the Telegraph-Republican.

[illegible] and three children, Mrs. James Freeman of Atlanta, Ga.; Mary Frances Beidler and Joseph Arthur Beidler, survive. The funeral was held Monday at 1 p. m., with interment at Lakeview cemetery, Cleveland.

ABOUT PEOPLE AND PLACES

Here is to your health Geo. A. Bates! It's a success.

—o—

It seems good to see hundreds of strangers in Painesville.

—o—

It was a good show this year. Let's all try to make a better one next year.

—o—

W. H. Millard and L. E. Sanborn of Kirtland were at the fair Wednesday.

—o—

The fire works Wednesday evening surpassed the expectations of everybody.

—o—

S. A. Bockefollow and wife of Willoughby, were enjoying the fair Wednesday.

—o—

The fair more than any other thing has helped to put Lake county on the map.

—o—

W. H. Adlard of Adlard Bros. was among the many Madison people present at the fair Wednesday.

—o—

"We must have a horticultural hall," says Britton. "Let's have a mile track," says Colonel Burrows.

—o—

E. B. Carroll of Collinwood came to the fair Wednesday and made the Herald headquarters a pleasant call.

—o—

Wm. Harrington and wife of Kirtland were here Wednesday and had only words of praise for the big show.

—o—

The Painesville public school exhibition attracts as much attention as any thing at the fair. That is just as it should be.

—o—

C. J. Wadsworth is building a new barn at his Concord farm residence. Mr. Wadsworth enjoys his country home immensely.

—o—

The C. P. & E. is a great road and they does their best but the crowd of Wednesday was a little too much for any one line to handle.

—o—

Miss Ruth Jenkins of Girard, Ohio, who has been the guest of Miss Gladys Robinson for the past few days, has returned home.

—o—

The White City on Mentor avenue gave the many people who pass on street cars and on the Nickel Plate roads something to look at.

—o—

Wm. H. Conners is building an elegant new residence on Prospect street. The building is now enclosed and will be completed by late fall.

—o—

Hon. Wm. Gordon and Councilman Forster represented the progressive democracy of Cleveland at the fair, both have many friends in Lake county.

Charles E. Artman, secretary of Lake County Young Men's Christian Association, "earns his bread by the sweat of his brow" just like the rest of us.

—o—

The display made by the Andrews school of Willoughby is indeed a most creditable one. It shows at a glance the object of the school and is of interest to every one.

—o—

W. F. Therkildson, who had charge of Agricultural hall, worked with his coat off Tuesday and Wednesday. He answered twenty thousand questions and gave a few orders besides.

—o—

Willis Miller of Munson, one of Geauga county's best farmers, was one of an auto load to attend the fair on Wednesday from Geauga county. Mrs. Miller was one of the party.

—o—

There were many things at the fair to delight the small boys, but they envy the men who ride horses and wear red sashes more than they crave any other job at the whole show.

—o—

E. W. Ingersoll is one of the finest appearing policemen on the job at the fair ground. It is a safe proposition that Ingersoll will "golden-rule" every man that he may catch in trouble.

—o—

The whole show at the fair is a credit to the county, but the one department that attracts the most attention and elicits the greatest amount of praise is the fruit show. It is great.

—o—

There was a happy selection made when Luther Gordon was secured to look after the fair ground in a general way. His general knowledge of all kinds of work has been of great value to the agricultural society.

—o—

The beautiful new silk flag now waving from the tall staff of the Main building at the Fair grounds is a recent gift to the Lake County Fair Association by Mr. Samuel Runner of Cherry Farm.

—o—

What a grand place for political meeting of the grand stand or Agricultural hall at the fair grounds will be. Mr. Bryan and Mr. Roosevelt can come this way. Rain or shine we can take care of the crowd.

—o—

The Painesville Green House and Garden Co. has made its first planting of lettuce plants under glass. The first crop of lettuce will undoubtedly be ready for market by Thanksgiving and Christmas.

—o—

Colonel Parker of Mentor has been an active factor in promoting the fair. He believes in doing things. He came here from Oklahoma, a place where they do things and do them right.

As Thursday morning dawns bright and clear thousands are making their way to the fair grounds. The indications are that both Thursday and Friday will see two record breaking crowds at the fair.

—o—

The County Y. M. C. A. show was another of the many good parts of the great show at the White City on Mentor avenue. Great credit is due the good workers who assisted Mr. Artman in making the display.

—o—

That quiet man who does not have much to say, and who does not wear badges, sash or decorations of any kind, is F. H. Murray, president of the Lake County Agricultural Association. He is the head push of the whole show.

—o—

Thomas Caley of Concord slipped and fell on the sidewalk here last Saturday. The fall resulted in a bad bruise on the forehead. Mr. Caley made light of the mishap and was soon on his way home as if nothing had happened.

—o—

The time has come in Ashtabula county for the candidates on the Democratic county ticket to sit up and take notice. Several have already begun to prick up their ears. Looks like a mighty good fighting chance, boys.—Ashtabula Standard.

—o—

Rev. T. F. Phillips has bought another tract of land adjoining his fruit farm on Mentor avenue. He now has fifteen acres of land. It is one of the most desirable pieces of land anywhere between Cleveland and Painesville.

—o—

Mr. R. J. Brakeman, who was in charge of the construction work at the Lake county fair grounds, was about the busiest man in the county during the first of this week and just preceding this week. But he does not get excited or rattled and consequently every thing moves along nicely when he is in charge.

—o—

The Agricultural hall and the grand stand were the two products in connection with the fair that pleased the people. Both were too small for the first day of the fair. But now that the first fair is a success there will be things doing before next year.

—o—

If Mr. L. M. Johnson of the Old Orchard farm jumps into the political game, with the same degree of earnestness that he takes part in agriculture and horticulture, look out for a big Bull Moose vote from the western part of the township. But Johnson is newer at the political game than he is at the art of farming.

—o—

It will pay any one who is interested in growing apples to go to the orchard at the Madison Home and see what has been done by the careful attention given to the apple trees by Supt. Knoele. He has had the help of the State Agricultural Department in the matter of spraying and other attention.

—o—

It is very strange that the farmers who object to the city automobile owners tearing their roads to pieces should not have been in favor of the city tax payers helping to build good roads. Had the Good Roads amendment carried the city tax payers would have paid over three fourths of the $50,000,000 bond issue.

—o—

In a recent issue of the Andover Citizen there is a most remarkable piece of news, and the Citizen makes the most of it. Here it is: "E. L. Lampson says he will support the republican ticket." Just think of it, President Taft is promised at least one vote in Ashtabula county. What will one, Teddy Roosevelt, say when he hears of that startling news. We'll bet he calls Lampson "One of the bosses."

—o—

A woman in Indiana has received a bequest of $50,000 from a tramp to whom she gave a breakfast six years ago. A Chicago woman receives $330,000 by the will of an old man whom she engaged as janitor when he called at her door and asked for a meal in return for a few odd jobs. These are days when the benefactors of the race seem to be going about in disguise rewarding the doers of good deeds. At any moment we may be entertaining the "angel" unawares.

—o—

The shocking accident at the Newark motordrome, which cost seven lives, has led to a general overhauling of such race tracks. At the one at Brighton beach a guard of two-inch plank leaning well forward over the track is to be added to catch any motorcycle that may fly off at a tangent. It should be possible to arrange such a coliseum so that spectators may enjoy in perfect safety the spectacle of other people risking their lives.

—o—

The Storrs & Harrison Co. has one of the most complete and attractive exhibits on the grounds. The specimens of fruits, vegetables, flowers, etc., shown are from trial beds. This company takes this exhibit to state fairs but this is the only county fair at which they show. The exhibit is in charge of Frank Thirkeldson and A. M. Bartlett.

—o—

Homer J. Kline of Cleveland, secretary of the Forest City Live Stock & Fair Co., which owns and operates the Randall track, is the presiding judge at the races. George A. Schneider, secretary of the Cleveland Athletic club, officiates as starter of the races. Mr. Schneider is an experienced starter, an enthusiastic horseman. Both these gentlemen are giving good satisfaction and proving that they are the right men in the right place.

—o—

During the interem of the races the grand stand audience was entertained by the Drummer boy of Rappahannock, introduced by Rep. Winan's, the youngest soldier of the Civil War who beat a drum in the battle of Fredericksburg, and beat the same drum here. His son accompanied him with the fife and the two beat and blew out 'Marching Through Georgia' until the delighted crowd arose en masse and cheered the veteran to the echo.

THE RACES

GOOD TIME MADE AT FIRST DAY MEET

Much Interest and Great Enthusiasm Big Crowd Cheer Close Races.

But two races were finished, Rainbow winning two heats in the 2:16 trot, which went over until tomorrow. Conway Wilkes won the Lake county event, while Diamond Jim, owned in Ashtabula, captured the race for 3-year-olds. Jack McDonough of Cleveland captured second money. Summary:

Democrats Meet

A meeting of the democratic county central committee and candidates on the county ticket was held at city hall Wednesday and the expression of representatives from every section of the county was unanimous that this is to be a banner democratic year, national, state and local.

Candidate for Congress, Wm. Gordon, of Cleveland, was present and made the acquaintance of all members of the committee and promised to devote several days to a canvass of the county and will also be accompanied one day by Mayor Baker, of Cleveland, when they will address several public meetings in different sections of the county.

The county committee adjourned to meet again on Saturday, Sept. 28, at 2 p. m.

Mr. Gordon and a party of friends from Cleveland spent the afternoon enjoying the Lake County Fair, and Mr. Gordon says it was the best county fair he ever attended, and that Lake county was to be congratulated on its remarkable display of the products of the county.

BULL MOOSE

HOLD CONVENTION AND NOMINATE CANDIDATES

Judges Nye and Roberts Approved Favor Progressive Candidate For Congress Against Howland

"Lay On Macduff, Lay On! And Dam'd Be He Who First Cries Hold! Enough!" Says Homer Harper, and they pass him by.

Dr. M. D. Cadwell of Fairport and B. F. Crofoot of Painesville were the president and secretary respectively of the much talked of progressive convention held in Painesville last Saturday.

It is reasonable to suppose that a committee on "investigation" had reported to the faithful that candidates on the Republican ticket with the exception of Homer Harper were progressive, or at least "satisfactory." They are supposed not to hurrah for Taft at all. Homer Harper candidate for prosecuting attorney, wanted to hurrah for Taft, so the convention nominated all the candidates now on the Republican ticket excepting Harper and in his place nominated T. P. Cadle of Mentor.

Judge J. W. Roberts, present common pleas judge, and Judge C. H. Nye, probate judge, were endorsed without qualification. The congressional committee was instructed to use all their efforts to nominate Frank W. Woods of Medina county for congress, and, if he would not accept, to swing to some other Progressive. This instruction is aimed at the political head of Congressman Paul Howland, who is known to be an out and out Taft man who will not hedge.

Ezra He, To Be Free, Enters Plea In Poetree

Eastern papers have been printing this:

The following curious petition for divorce is now on file in the office of the clerk of courts of Chardon, Geauga County, Ohio.

Now comes the plaintiff Ezra Moore,
Who says that back in seventy-four,
He being tired of single life,
Then took Saphronia for his wife.
That she, instead of being good,
Caressed his form with chunks of wood,
And kept his house, from sill to spire,
Almost as hot as hades' fire.
He further says, quite plain, that she
Bestows her favors all too free,
That not content with one man's charms,
She holds whole townships in her arms.
That to the tail of seventy-six,
She hitched herself to Edward Wicks
And eloped with Ed to parts unknown
Leaving plaintiff quite alone.
So now he mourns, alas! alack!
But mourns for fear that she'll come back.
And so he to Judge Tuttle's gone,
To cut the tie that made them one.
At next September term of court
Saphronia will please report,
And in default of doing so,
Judge Tuttle here will not be slow,
To cut the link that binds the chain,
And make this prisoner free again.

From Coast To Coast

Among the Cowles House guests Friday were A. B. Scott, W. J. Baker and E. E. Fowler, representing the Durham Duplex Razor Company, of New York. They are traveling to San Francisco via Texas at the rate of 150 miles per day in a special made E. M. F. car. Mr. Fowler is known all over the country as the wag man from his ability to pose half hour at a time without so much as moving an eye lash, and is often taken for a wax image.

PROVED VALUE OF THE WIRE

Record of First Telegram by Means of Which a Criminal Was Caught.

The first case of a criminal being brought to justice by means of the electric telegraph took place a few months ago after the extension of the system to Slough in 1844. A murder had been committed at Salt Hill, and upon hearing of the occurrence the vicar of Upton-cum-Chalvey, Rev E. T. Champnes, was informed that the last person seen to leave the house was a man wearing the dress of a Quaker.

Mr. Champnes at once conceived the idea that the suspected person had probably fled to London, and acting upon this suspicion, hastened to Slough station, where a man answering to the description was seen by the vicar to pass through the booking office. Communicating his suspicions to Mr Howell, the station superintendent, the latter caused a telegram to be sent off.

This is the telegram which raced (and beat) the train to Paddington: "A murder has been committed at Salt Hill and the suspected murderer was seen to take a first-class ticket for London by the train which left Slough at 7 h. 42 m. P. M. He is in the garb of a Quaker, with a brown greatcoat which reaches nearly down to his feet; he is in the last compartment of the second first class carriage."

The following reply was received from Paddington:

"The up train has arrived and a person answering in every respect the description given by telegraph came out of the compartment mentioned. I pointed the man out to Sergt Williams. The man got into a New Road omnibus and Sergt Williams into the same."

It is but fair to add that the miscreant, who proved to be a forger returned from a twenty one years transportation, had already been discarded by the Society of Friends. The prisoner, Tawell by name and once a well known city man, was committed to jail at Aylesbury and finally suffered the extreme penalty of the law.—Railway Magazine.

For Experts to Quarrel Over.

When clearing out a garret in his official residence the other day the new mayor of Saint Amand (Loire et Cher), Central France, M. Emile Dumas, discovered a beautiful portrait painted on wood of Charles d'Amboise, Duc de Chaumont, who was governor of Milan in the reign of Louis XII and who died in 1511. Experts state that the picture is either by Leonardo da Vinci (painter of "The Last Supper" from Milan and of "La Gioconda," lost from the Louvre last year) or by Andrea del Gobbo, one of da Vinci's pupils. There is already a picture of Charles d'Amboise by del Gobbo, in the Louvre.

Word Curiosities.

It is impossible to "kick" a man in French. You must give him a "blow with the foot." The Portuguese do not "wink" at one. They "close and open the eyes." In the languages of many semi-civilized tribes there is no word with which to convey the idea of "stealing," perhaps because the idea of property is so vague. It is related of one of the early missionaries that, in attempting to translate the Bible into Algonquin, he could find no word to express "love," and was compelled to invent it.—Tit-Bits.

Typesetting in China.

In the new edition of "China in Transformation," by Archibald R. Colquhoun, which has just been published by the Harpers, the author discusses many interesting phases of present conditions in China. Judging from his reports, a labor union man would leave China a shattered wreck in a few days, for he would find that coolie labor can be obtained in any amount for 15 cents a day, and women for 11 cents. Mr. Colquhoun found much interest in watching the Chinese compositors at work setting up type in their native language. The compositors of China must be men in good condition, for a font of type contains 10,000 characters, and covers the entire length of a big room. It is quite probable that in setting a stickful the compositor is compelled to walk at least a mile.

Star Helped Revolution.

A star so bright that it could be seen in the daytime helped the revolution in China. The superstitious people believed that the star was an augury that the gods favored a change of dynasty.

Alexander? Pouf!

"Alexander the Great was less than thirty five years old when he conquered Darius and became the master of the world."

"What of it? Lavender was less than that when he beat the Giants and stopped Rube Marquard's winning streak, wasn't he?"

Great Chance.

Reasonably Sure.

"But remember that my saying yes doesn't settle it. You still have papa's consent to gain."

"Oh, I'm not worrying about that." he replied. "I am holding several thousand dollars' worth of your father's collateral."

Few Leave United States Army.

DRASTIC LETTER IS SENT TO NICARAGUA

HUNTINGTON WILSON'S NOTE

Acting Secretary of State Tells Why United States Placed Marines on Republic Land When Revolution Broke Out.

Washington, D. C.—In explanation and justification of the United States having practically taken over the government of the republic of Nicaragua, Huntington Wilson, acting secretary of state, has just made public his correspondence with the Nicaraguan government in which he denounces in the severest terms the rebel leader, Gen. Mena, and his atrocities against men, women and children.

There was, during the closing days of the last session of congress, criticism of the campaign of the state department in Nicaragua.

Describing Gen. Mena and the conditions which brought about intervention, Mr. Wilson said to the Nicaraguan government:

Denounces Atrocities.

"The revolt of Gen. Mena is in flagrant violation of his solemn promises of his own government and to the American minister, and of the Dawson agreement by which he was solemnly bound, and his attempt to overturn the government of his country for purely selfish purposes and without even the pretence of contending for a principle, make the present rebellion in origin the most inexcusable in the annals of Central America. The nature and methods of the present disturbances, indeed, place them in the category of anarchy rather than ordinary revolution. The reported character of those who promptly joined Mena, together with his uncivilized and savage action in breaking armistices, maltreating messengers, violating his word of honor, torturing peaceable citizens to exact contributions and above all, in the ruthless bombardment of the city of Managua with the deliberate destruction of innocent life and property and the killing of women and children and the sick in hospitals, and the cruel and barbarous slaughter of hundreds which has been reported at Leon, give to the Mena revolt the attributes of the abhorrent and intolerable Zelaya regime."

Appealed for Protection.

Mr. Wilson reminded Nicaragua of the murder by the Zelaya government of two American citizens, Groce and Cannon, and warned Nicaragua that it would not countenance any revival of Zelayaism.

He shows that the planting and banking and industrial interests had appealed to the United States for protection and that the lives of American diplomats and American men, women and children, private citizens were actually under fire in Managua.

It is shown in the correspondence that the minister of foreign affairs of Nicaragua asked for the intervention of the United States. That minister said substantially that his government did not have troops enough to protect foreigners, and officially informed Mr. Wilson as follows:

"In consequence, my government desires that the government of the United States guarantee with its forces security for the property of American citizens in Nicaragua, and that they extend this protection to all the inhabitants of the republic."

SUES GAYNOR FOR $100,000

Alderman Charges Libel Contained in Letter Written by Mayor to Him on September 9.

New York City.—Alderman H. H. Curran has filed suit against Mayor Gaynor, asking $100,000 damages for alleged libel contained in a letter written by the mayor to Curran September 9. The letter, the alderman says, accused Curran of taking newsstand graft. The letter in which the alleged libel is contained is quoted in the papers just filed. Among the statements made by Mayor Gaynor in the letter are these:

"I have called attention to the miserable grafting carried on by members of the board of aldermen in respect to the licensing of newsstands and the like throughout the city. I have now for more than two years been calling the attention of the board of aldermen to cases where aldermen refuse to grant these permits unless the licensee pays heavily for them. Sums of $500 and $250 are commonly paid, and there are about 7,000 of such licensed stands. I have no doubt that the aldermen who do this share in the extortion money. Evidence has accumulated here that you pursue this system."

Magazine Writer a Suicide.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Despondent over the law's delay in granting her freedom from her husband, and leaving a note in which she expressed her undying love for Frank Susaki, a wealthy Japanese of Los Angeles, whom she wished to marry, Mrs. Ida Hawley, 28, a magazine writer, formerly of New York and Chicago, is dead at Houston, Tex., from the effects of morphine taken with suicidal intent. News of Mrs. Hawley's death was contained in dispatches received from the Texas city.

Studies American Newspapers.

New York City.—During a stay of one month in this country an exhaustive study of American newspaper methods will be made by Dr. Franz Ullstein, one of the leading newspaper proprietors and publishers of Germany. Dr. Ullstein will go to Washington, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, St. Louis, Montreal and Toronto, and in each city will inspect the leading newspaper properties for the purpose of gathering data to apply to the conduct of his own large publishing enterprises in Germany.

THE BUSY DAY

GEN. NOGI AND WIFE COMMIT HARI-KARI

COUNT AND COUNTESS KILL SELVES AT FUNERAL OF BELOVED EMPEROR.

COUPLE FALL ON SWORDS

Tokio.—Driven to their death by grief over the passing of their beloved emperor, Mutsuhito, and forced by centuries old tradition to end their lives with the sword, Gen. Count Marosuke Nogi, hero of Port Arthur, and his wife, the Countess Nogi, hurled themselves on sharp blades in the main hall of the palace and died by their own hands.

Couple Fall on Swords.

Hundreds passing solemnly around the huge catafalque on which rested the body of the late emperor saw the aged warrior and his faithful wife draw slender curved swords from the concealment of their flowing robes of mourning and turn the blades upon themselves. Count Nogi fell forward first, holding the sharp blade hilt on ward so that the point of the weapon penetrated the middle of the body as the hand holding the jewel encrusted handle touched the floor. Scarcely a second elapsed and before anyone could move to the rescue, the countess threw herself forward on another sword of similar pattern.

Carries Out Old Tradition.

The general and his wife were in the long procession following the emperor's body. Count Nogi bore the title of supreme councilor of the army. Next to the emperor he was the highest military commander of Japan and his position in the procession was close to the new emperor, Yoshihito, directly following the body. The action of the Nogis, who belonged to the ancient Choshu clan of the Samurai, was in accordance with one of the oldest traditions of Japan and, even had any one seen their preparations for the act, it is doubtful if any attempt would have been made to prevent it.

Slays With Ancient Blade.

Gen. Count Nogi was the son of Maretsu Nogi, chief of the Samurai of Tagi, prince of Choshu. To him his father's sword had descended and with this ancient blade he slew himself. It will be buried with him and he will receive honors scarcely less imposing than those accorded to Emperor Mutsuhito. Nogi followed precedent as old as the sacred mountain of Fuji Yoyama, for it has always been prompted by the spirit of "Bushido" that a man shall lay down his life for his emperor if even only to show fealty to him by a sacrifice. Nogi's generation was that which saw the passing of the Samurai, but of the Samurai was Nogi, and with them he saw fit to pass himself beyond the portals of life. The Countess Nogi, following the first principles of the life of a Japanese woman, followed her husband to death as in life.

National Hero in Japan.

Gen. Count Nogi was a national hero in Japan. He captured Port Arthur from the Russians in 1904 and received the proposal of surrender of that fortress from Gen. Stoessel. On the outbreak of the Russo-Japanese war he was put in command of the Third army corps and was in personal direction of the forces which took 203 Meter hill after terrible losses. He commanded the first brigade of infantry in the Chino-Japanese war and at all times distinguished himself by a bravery and a military skill which endeared him alike to emperor and people. He was probably the most intimate friend of Emperor Mutsuhito outside the royal family and his word of advice in army matters was practically law. The military career of this foremost of oriental soldiers began in the Saigo rebellion, where he won the battles of Yamaguchi and Tawarazaka, receiving serious wounds in the latter engagement. For his efficiency in these battles Nogi was made a lieutenant colonel and thereafter his rise was rapid. The count was 63 years old and his wife only a few years his junior.

BEERS HEADS G. A. R.

CONNECTICUT JUDGE IS ELECTED COMMANDER IN CHIEF.

Retiring Chief Trimble Is Presented With Handsome Diamond Studded Badge Valued at Over $1,000.

Los Angeles, Cal.—With the election of Judge Alfred B. Beers of Bridgeport, Conn., as commander-in chief for the coming year and the placing of the selection of the next encampment city in the hands of the administrative council the forty sixth annual encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic officially ended.

The officers elected were:

Junior vice commander-in-chief—Americus Whedon, Louisville, Ky.

Chaplain-in-chief—Rev. George E. Lovejoy, Boston.

Quartermaster general—C. D. R. Stowitz, Buffalo (re-elected).

After his election as commander-in-chief Judge Beers named Henry J. Seely of Bridgeport, Conn., as adjutant general.

In recognition of his services to the G. A. R. during his term of office, retiring Commander-in-Chief Trimble was presented with a handsome diamond studded badge.

ANCIENT RITES FOR JAPAN'S DEAD RULER

Tokio.—Ancient traditions and religious rites mingled with modern diplomatic pageantry September 13 when the ceremonies attending the burial of the late Emperor Mutsuhito, who died on July 30, were inaugurated. The United States had a leading part in the modern show, in which shared representatives of all powers of the world, but in the ancient rites Japan was alone. Funeral rites of the Shinto religion, so old that their origin is lost in the mists of antiquity, marked Friday's ceremony and continued until the final interment of the Mikado in the ancient imperial cemetery near Kioto on Sunday. The event is more than an expression of a great national grief. It is important in that it shows the high ranking place of Japan among nations of the earth.

NATION TO HONOR LOVED POET

Indianapolis, Ind.—During the second week of October, James Whitcomb Riley, the beloved Hoosier poet, will be the center of the greatest ovation ever tendered an American writer. October 7 is the poet's birthday, but owing to the fact that the celebration in his honor will be of such proportions that it will be impossible to confine it to one day, it has been decided to extend it over a period of six days, beginning Monday, October 7, and ending Saturday, October 12.

Indianapolis, Mr. Riley's home town, has taken the lead in this event, but the movement has spread like wild fire and it is doubtful whether there is a city or town in the United States which will not have one or more events scheduled in honor of the poet who, through the medium of his verse, has struck a responsive chord in every breast and has succeeded in bringing poetry home to the people.

Conduct Novel Campaign.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Miss Edna Wright and Miss Estelka Jacobi, Milwaukee young women, are making a tour of the state, selling washing machines and talking votes for women. They are working without pay under the political equality league. They sell the washing machines at a few cents more than the actual cost, and the profits go into the treasury of the league for the campaign now being waged for the proposed woman's suffrage amendment to the state constitution.

Picks Up Relic of Titanic.

Middleboro, Mass.—Half a life preserver of the ill fated Titanic came ashore at Cuttyhunk, where it was picked up by Mrs. William Rogers of North Middleboro. Mrs. Rogers discovered the words "S. S. Titanic" still plainly visible upon it. The life preserver was broken in half and thorough search failed to reveal the other section.

Fearing that her find might prove a fake Mrs. Rogers carried it to the life saving station where it was pronounced undoubtedly genuine.

TEN NAVAL CADETS LOSE THEIR LIVES

RECRUITS ARE DROWNED IN WATERS OF LAKE MICHIGAN WHEN BOAT UPSETS.

NINETEEN OTHERS ARE SAVED

Tragedy Occurs Within One Hundred Feet of Frantic Persons on Beach—Pulmotors Do Great Work for the Least.

Chicago, Ill.—Ten boy recruits at the United States naval station at North Chicago lost their lives in a Lake Michigan tragedy which in many respects has no parallel. Partial list of the dead:

W. E. Antrobus, Chicago.
R. C. Herlen, Memphis, Tenn.
L. I. Southworth, Nashville, Tenn.
John Wallace.
John Patten, petty officer, Detroit, Mich.
A. L. Reymond.

Twenty-three boys, one able seaman who was a petty officer, and another petty officer set forth for a pleasure sail. They became helpless in a gale, fought their way almost to the shore, where the tragedy occurred—within 100 feet of the frantic persons on the beach.

In full view of hundreds of people along the shore the boat capsized. The lake was alive with struggling boys. Many of them had never been in rough water before. They struck out strongly for the shore but there was an undertow in addition to the heavy waves. Three boys got almost within arm's reach of rescuers when they were snatched back by the sea and went down.

The Commonwealth Edison Co. rushed two pulmotors from its central office in the loop district to the scene of the tragedy. The distance was between 30 and 35 miles and a record breaking automobile run was made. Some of the victims were lying inert on the beach when the pulmotors arrived and the operators worked on the victims two at a time.

It is believed that at least eight of the boys owe their lives to the pulmotors.

VIRGINIA BANDITS IN HOME JAIL

Sidna Allen and Wesley Edwards Who Were Captured Through Girl Are Landed in Hillsville Prison.

Columbus, O.—Sidna Allen, Wesley Edwards and Maude Iroler, Edward's sweetheart, who unwittingly led detectives to the hiding place of the Virginia outlaws in Des Moines, Ia., passed through here last night on a Big Four train out of Chicago. They are now in Hillsville, Va., where the shooting in which Judge Massie and several others were killed last March.

Miss Iroler, who is a typical uneducated mountain girl, denied in a brief interview on the train that she is to marry Wesley Edwards.

THREE KILLED IN TORNADO

Fifty Are Injured While Property to the Extent of $25,000 Is Destroyed in New York State.

Syracuse, N. Y.—A tornado which laid a ten-mile trail of destruction across Onondaga county, killed three persons, injured fifty and destroyed $250,000 worth of property. The dead are: William Madison, Syracuse; J. Dopp, Fulton, and Charles Bennott, Salina.

The black funnel-shaped cloud first appeared near Long Branch, a pleasure resort ten miles from here. Four hundred pleasure seekers were thrown into panic when building after building toppled over.

Labor Leader Is Arrested.

Boston, Mass.—Just as he was finishing an address to 15,800 persons on Boston Common, William D. Haywood of Denver, general organizer of the Industrial Workers of the World, was arrested here on a capias warrant charging him with conspiracy in connection with the Lawrence strike of textile workers last winter. The warrant is the result of Haywood's indictment by the Essex county grand jury and the labor leader was released on $1,000 bonds. Details of the conspiracy were not made public.

Gunmen Occupy Separate Cells.

New York City.—"Gyp the Blood" and "Lefty Louie," the two alleged Rosenthal murderers captured Saturday night, were ordered from the custody of the police Sunday by District Attorney Whitman to separate cells in the tombs with an abruptness that caused Deputy Commissioner Dougherty and his men to stop talking of the case.

Three Killed in Rail Wreck.

Rochester, N. Y.—Three men were killed and two others probably fatally injured in a wreck on the New York Central railroad at East Rochester. Property worth $150,000 was destroyed when three freight trains piled up in a tangled mass of wreckage on the main line. Two engines were overturned and about 20 cars buried from the tracks.

Charles Woll, brakeman, of Syracuse, and John Daluev and William Wiss of Rochester were instantly killed.

Says Morality Is Taught in Hell.

Washington, D. C.—Weird stories of hell, transmitted to him through his ex-lacuity, as he terms it, by his departed friend, Thomas Jefferson Miller, were told here by John Armstrong Chaloner. All idea of there being hell fire is dispelled by Mr. Miller's messages.

Mr. Chaloner holds that persons who have gone to hell take up a collegiate course preparatory to their punishment, and that "morality is enthusiastically and scientifically taught there."

SLAYER DIES IN CHAIR

SPENCER, WHO KILLED SCHOOL TEACHER, IS ELECTROCUTED.

Boston.—Bertram G. Spencer, convicted of the murder of Miss Martha B. Blackstone, a schoolteacher of Springfield, Mass., was electrocuted here September 17. Spencer was pronounced legally dead at 12:23:50. He displayed to the last the nerve which has astonished the prison officials. His spiritual adviser was a Christian Science reader. Spencer was the sixteenth victim of the electric chair in Massachusetts.

As Spencer was seated in the chair he said: "I wish to say to the world and the press that it is not nerve, it is the love of God that sustains me."

Spencer's Crime.

The crime for which Spencer was convicted, the murder of a young woman school teacher, was the culmination of a series of bold petty burglaries which for two years had baffled the police and terrorized the people of Springfield. Spencer confessed that the fascination of reading newspaper accounts of his exploits was the motive for the burglaries.

The night of March 31, 1910, Spencer broke into the home of Mrs. Sarah J. Dow. Miss Blackstone, a schoolteacher, was visiting at the home and with Mrs. Dow and her two daughters was putting together a picture puzzle. Suddenly a masked man with a leveled revolver walked into the room and demanded money.

Shoots Two Women.

The women screamed and started to run. The masked figure ordered them to stop and as the women did not heed the warning he discharged the revolver. One shot killed Miss Blackstone instantly and another entered Miss Harriet Dow's head, causing a fracture of the skull, from which, however, she recovered. The man then fled, leaving no clew behind him. Three months later, after rewards had been offered by the governor and others, private detectives produced a locket which had been found near the scene of one of the many robberies. It contained pictures of Spencer's mother and sister and bore his initials.

Spencer was known only as an industrious clerk in a meat market. He was 28 years of age and had a young wife and baby. Spencer was arrested and he confessed not only to the many robberies, but to the shooting of Miss Blackstone. In his home was found a collection of miscellaneous articles he had stolen.

ENFORCE LAW ON NEWSPAPERS

Postmaster General Hitchcock Prepares to Apply New Regulations Which Publishers Must Obey.

Washington, D. C.—Postmaster General Hitchcock has just issued instructions for carrying into effect the new newspaper and periodical law, first returns under which must be made by October 1.

The law requires that publishers shall file, on the first day of April and October of each year, both with the postmaster general and with the postmaster, under penalty of denial of the use of the mails, a sworn statement of the names and addresses of the owners, publishers, editor, managing editor and business manager of their newspapers and periodicals. Religious, fraternal, temperance and scientific publications are excepted. For a corporation the names of the holders of more than 1 per cent of the stocks, bonds or other securities must be given and, in the case of daily newspapers, a statement of the average paid circulation for the preceding six months is required. All editorial or other reading matter appearing in a newspaper or magazine, for the publication of which pay is accepted or promised, must be marked "advertisement," under penalty of a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $500.

BETS COLOR OF HER HOSIERY

High School Teacher in Connecticut Town Will Wear White All Winter if Roosevelt Loses.

South Norwalk, Conn.—Either Miss Katherine Henry, a high school teacher of this place, will wear low white shoes and white hosiery throughout the winter, regardless of snow, rain or cold, or Lester Wyeth will wear a straw hat until spring.

This will be the case because of a wager they made. Miss Henry is a consistent admirer of Roosevelt and dotes on Bull Moosers. Wyeth is partial toward Miss Henry, but has no use for the colonel.

After church one evening they argued the matter. They met again and acknowledged the wager before friends.

Wreck House and Kill Man.

Shreveport, La.—Ambushed assassins believed to have been members of the local Black Hand organization killed John Mondello, Sr., and seriously injured his wife and two sons, Joseph and Samuel. Mondello is a wealthy farmer of Natchitoches parish. His home was dynamited by Italians who practically wrecked the costly house. Mrs. Mondello and her sons have been brought to a hospital here and it is feared they will die.

The plot evidently was carefully laid.

Professor Takes Own Life.

Champaign, Ill.—Leaving a note saying that nothing could explain his act, Lee Wallace, professor of architecture in the University of Illinois, committed suicide at his roominghouse here. He had laid a pallet on the floor, covered himself with a sheet and put a gas lamp under his sheet. Wallace graduated in architecture at Syracuse University in 1905, winning a foreign scholarship in painting. He studied two years at Julian Academy in Paris and taught at Syracuse University from 1907 to 1911.

Sang for Sultan.

Mulai Hafid, the ex-Sultan of Morocco, while staying at Vichy, in France, made an excursion to Les Ardoisieres, says the "Matin," where Napoleon III. used often to go for rest. Three young girls, sisters, timidly approached the Sultan and asked him to sign postcards. Mulai Hafid consented on condition that they would each sing a song to him. Two of the girls at once complied, and the delighted Mulai Hafid wrote on their cards words which, translated, mean: "Like Napoleon III., I have visited Les Ardoisieres, where I have enjoyed, together with the calm and freshness of nature, the grace and charm of the voices of Miles. Pauline and Clotilde." The third girl did not know how to sing, but one of her sisters having sung for her the Sultan added the name of Gabrielle.

Move for Change in Time.

The French ministry of public works is endeavoring to have the government adopt the system of reckoning time on railways by the use of the hours from 1 to 24, instead of 12 noon to 12 midnight. This system has already been adopted by many continental railways and has been in operation for years on the Canadian Pacific railway.

Riga's Trade Distinction.

The growth in lumber shipments from Riga, totaling 97,400,000 cubic feet in 1910, ranks this port among the world's greatest timber exporters. The greater part of this trade was in sawed lumber. Britain took over half of the amount exported.

Doctor Recommends Postum from Personal Test.

No one is better able to realize the injurious action of caffeine—the drug in coffee—on the heart, than the doctor. Tea is just as harmful as coffee because it, too, contains the drug caffeine.

When the doctor himself has been relieved by simply leaving off coffee and using Postum, he can refer with full conviction to his own case.

A Mo. physician prescribes Postum for many of his patients because he was benefited by it. He says:

"I wish to add my testimony in regard to that excellent preparation—Postum. I have had functional or nervous heart trouble for over 15 years, and a part of the time was unable to attend to my business.

"I was a moderate user of coffee and did not think drinking it hurt me. But on stopping it and using Postum instead, my heart has got all right, and I ascribe it to the change from coffee to Postum.

"I am prescribing it now in cases of sickness, especially when coffee does not agree, or affects the heart, nerves or stomach.

"When made right it has a much better flavor than coffee, and is a vital sustainer of the system. I shall continue to recommend it to our people, and I have my own case to refer to."

LESSON ON TARIFF

HOSIERY SCHEDULE SUPPLIES CLEAR ILLUSTRATION OF ITS PRACTICAL EFFECTS.

PROTECTION RATE TOO HIGH

Labor Cost of Production in This Country Little More Than in Europe Notwithstanding Difference in Wages.

We have received the following appeal for light on the tariff:

"Is this the Democratic idea of the tariff: That if the tariff is taken off hosiery the American product will be undersold by the German because it can be produced cheaper in that country than it can in the United States? Would this be true of all things now carrying tariff?"

So far as we are aware, the Democratic party has never made any declaration on hosiery, but we are glad that item was specified, because it affords a peculiarly clear and intelligible illustration of the practical effect of the tariff. Hosiery worth a dollar a dozen pairs in Germany is taxed under our tariff 60 cents and 15 per cent., or 75 cents. Omitting freight and commissions and incidental charges, this hosiery, then, could be sold here for $1.75 a dozen. The census bulletins show that in hosiery the wages constitute about one-fourth of the value of the product. On domestic stockings worth $1.75 a dozen, therefore, the total labor cost would be about 44 cents.

The position of the manufacturer, then, is that where he pays 44 cents to his working people he gets a 75 cents of protection. The Democratic party does not believe that he needs any such rate of protection. The labor cost of production in this country is little more than it is in Europe in any line, and in many lines it is much less. In the last fiscal year we exported more than a billion dollars' worth of manufactured goods. In July more than half of the exports were manufactured goods. Of course, if it cost more to produce manufactured goods here than in Europe we could not export on any such scale as this. The employes in our machine shops get better wages than the men in foreign machine shops, and yet we exported machinery to the value of $115,000,000 in the last fiscal year.

Of course, the Democratic party does not believe that lowering duties would close our mills and throw all our people out of employment. If it did it would not advocate reducing duties. The reports of the tariff board show, what students of economics knew before, that the labor cost of production is often lowest where wages are highest. There is a book on the efficiency of labor, or the relative costs of labor where wages are high and where they are low, by Jacob Schoenhoff. There is a volume of lectures on "Work and Wages" by Lord Brassey, and another book by him on a similar subject, which, of course, have no specific reference to our tariff, but are all the more valuable for that reason. They are discussions of the greater economy of high-priced labor. Lord Brassey's father built railroads in every part of the world, and he found that it made little difference in the cost of construction whether he paid a shilling in India, four shillings in France or six shillings in England; if there were any difference the cost was lowest where the wages were highest.

PRESIDENT AND THE VETO

Taft's Wholly Unnecessary Defense of the Function Which He Has So Misused.

Mr. Taft at Columbus, O., undertook to convince an audience that the veto is a good thing. As if it had ever been questioned! The president at times seems afflicted with literal myopia.

Mr. Taft has vetoed every measure calculated to bring relief to the people from excessive living costs. The wool bill, the cotton and steel bills, the meat bill, the farmers' free list bill, all were killed by Taft's veto. He has perpetuated the plundering of the people. And his defense is an academic discussion of a presidential function constitutionally bestowed.

To be sure those bills came from a Democratic house. But it was to that same Democratic house Mr. Taft's reciprocity measure was committed. The Democratic house might, in effect, have vetoed the president's bill. But it didn't. It thought that the bill would serve the people's welfare. The Democratic house forgot politics and undertook the public service. The president didn't.

President Taft might have vetoed well. Had he vetoed the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill he would have been a maker of history. Great opportunity has been his. The qualities of head and heart that make for greatness are not his.

He has vetoed his own succession.

McHarg Now Among the "Bosses."

Ormsby McHarg, one of the managers of the late Roosevelt campaign, has announced that he will support Mr. Taft. He says:

"I supported Colonel Roosevelt as a Republican, having no notion at that time that he was anything else. I was bitterly disappointed to find later what his real intentions were. I am under no obligations to him or anybody else, however, to get out of the Republican party, and do not intend to do so. . . . I believe there is absolutely no future for the new third party beyond Colonel Roosevelt. If the new party expects to live it will have to take out a life insurance policy on the colonel's life. Their cry of 'fighting the bosses' is already being dissipated by the winds of public opinion. I do not think that Penrose is a bit more dangerous than Flinn, and some of the other so-called Republican bosses have quite as good a standing with the voters as has Mr. Perkins."

Of course, McHarg has, by his action, ranked himself with the bosses. For we know that a boss is a man who opposes Roosevelt. Woodruff was a boss till he came into the camp of the third termer, and so was Flinn. But they have gone through a process of sanctification. It is precisely so with McHarg. He was not a boss when he was doing for Roosevelt the work of a boss. But having broken relations with "the only perfect man" he necessarily sinks to the boss level. We, therefore, fully expect to hear him denounced as an exponent of "crooked politics." Even Penrose was "all right" when he was running Roosevelt's campaign in Pennsylvania.

McHarg's View of Roosevelt.

McHarg may have deserted Roosevelt because he would not follow him out of the Republican party, and he may have substantial reasons for deserting him. It is to be remembered that McHarg went into Roosevelt's service after denouncing him as the most dangerous man in our political life, and declaring that he would not vote for his candidate for governor of New York two years ago.

The Tender Point.

In view of the character of the Democratic nominee, the Democratic platform and the present temper of Democratic leadership, why do not the men in the Progressive movement who really desire progress cast in their lot with us?

There is, we believe, just one chief reason: the Progressive adoration of the protective principle in tariff making.

The thing the Progressive so warmly champions—for the platform goes on through the familiar formula as to "equalizing conditions of competition," and all the rest of it—is the thing which the Democracy is especially anxious to smite between the eyes. The difficulty of merging the honest and sincere portion of the Roosevelt following into the Wilson following is precisely the difficulty of fusing two companies when the evil angel of the one is the good angel of the other.

Two Great Things to Do.

There are two great things to do. One is to set up the rule of justice and of right in such matters as the tariff, the regulation of the trusts and the prevention of monopoly, the adaptation of our banking and currency laws to the varied uses to which our people must put them, the treatment of those who do the daily labor in our factories and mines and throughout all our great industrial and commercial undertakings, and the political life of the people of the Philippines, for whom we hold governmental power in trust, for their service, not our own. The other, the additional duty, is the great task of protecting our people and our resources and of keeping open to the whole people the doors of opportunity through which they must, generation by generation, pass if they are to make conquest of their fortunes in health, in freedom, in peace and in contentment.—Governor Wilson.

ARE WATCHING OHIO

NEW PROGRESSIVE CONSTITUTION RECENTLY ADOPTED SETS OTHER STATES TO MAKING INQUIRIES.

Will Be Model For the Rest of the Country—Review of the Changes Voted Upon For the Constitution of the State.

Columbus.—That the new era in Ohio under the most progressive constitution east of the Mississippi river is being watched with interest by the nation is indicated by the inquiries coming to state officials from all parts of the country. Ohio has always been regarded as one of the conservative states and if the constitutional amendments prove successful here they will doubtless be adopted as models for other states.

Compulsory and optional changes in the constitution have been classified as follows:

Compulsory Amendments.

Direct law making by the people (initiative and referendum.)

Direct nomination by people of all elected public officials (abandonment of political conventions.)

The merit system of all appointive employes in the state, county and city service.

New laws giving cities home rule.

The licensing of saloons.

The reform of the judiciary (to prevent court delay.)

Restoration of the tax on state, city and school bonds.

Increase of the personal property tax exemption to $500.

New and quicker methods to remove unfit public officials.

An eight hour day on public work (includes work done by contract and otherwise.)

Double liability for bank stock holders.

Submission of private banks to examination.

Abolition of the office of elected state school commissioner.

Distinct labeling of prison made goods.

Abolition of any limitation on the amount of damages to be had for wrongful death.

Optional Changes.

Changes authorized but optional with the law-making power:

Issuance of $50,000,000 of bonds for good roads.

Taxation of incomes, inheritances, franchises and the production of minerals.

Establishment of a minimum amount of wages to be paid employes and regulation of hours of labor.

Passage of laws to prevent diseases arising from dangerous forms of occupation and laws for the general welfare of workers.

Laws to preserve and promote forests and other natural resources.

Laws to allow laborers and material men to obtain liens against buildings, which they aid in erecting, in cases wherein contractors fail to pay them.

A simpler method of registering land titles.

The regulation of expert testimony in criminal cases (main object to prevent use of "paid" testimony.)

The regulation of insurance rates.

Laws to prevent unsightly billboards.

The use of voting machines.

Drastic Innovations.

The above lists give briefly but in comprehensive form the various things which the people accomplished by their votes. The first half dozen or so changes in each list are the most important. A few less important changes resulting from the election are not included, but they are of minor significance.

Even a glance down the line of sweeping constitutional changes will indicate the tremendous import of the political "revolution" brought about in Ohio in so short a time.

This revolution places Ohio among the most progressive states in the Union. Not even the so-called radical states of the west can any longer claim the progressive championship. In fact, some of the reforms in Ohio have been too drastic even for the great majority of the states that have been leading the march for political change. Such a reform is that making possible verdicts by less than 12 members of a jury in civil cases. Another such is the permissive minimum wage, and still another the possible prevention of occupational diseases.

However, excluding all of the other changes effected last week, the initiative and referendum alone will be sufficient to place Ohio in the so-called progressive lead. The Ohio I. and R. is regarded by many as even more drastic than that employed in the western states, even though it does not contain any provision for the direct initiative.

What I. and R. Provides.

Under the Ohio I. and R., which becomes effective October 1, six per cent of the people can force the hand of the general assembly. This is done by forcing the assembly to submit any proposed or enacted law to popular vote. The principle operates as follows: Whenever three per cent of the people petition the assembly for a law and the assembly ignores the petition, three additional per cent, or six in all, can send the law automatically to popular vote. Or if the assembly enacts a law which six per cent of the people do not like, they can force it to be submitted to the people as a whole.

In the case of proposed constitutional amendments, the Ohio initiative and referendum gives 10 per cent of the people the power at any time to have an amendment submitted to popular vote without any reference to the general assembly.

Governor Can Discharge Mayors.

The governor of the state of Ohio has the power to discharge a mayor of a city or village in the state, according to an opinion given by Attorney General Hogan. Former Attorney General Wade Ellis gave an opinion to the contrary, and his opinion is referred to by Mr. Hogan. The case on which the opinion is given, came up from Clarington, Monroe county, where the authority of the probate court to displace the mayor of that village was questioned. Mr. Hogan says that both the probate judge and the governor of state have the power to remove the mayor if sufficient cause, in their judgment, is shown.

The mayor of Clarington is charged with malfeasance and misfeasance in office. Under former Gov. Myron T. Herrick the question of displacing a mayor was submitted to him and Mr. Ellis gave the opinion that such power did not rest with the governor.

Two years ago when Gov. Harmon was confronted with evidence against the mayor of Newark, following a lynching at that place, he was advised that he had power to act. The point was never tested, for the mayor in question resigned.

State to Repair Roads.

Bids for improvements, amounting to almost $150,000, are being advertised for by the state highway commissioner, and contracts that will better several miles of country roads throughout the state will be let as soon after September 20th as possible. The roads to be improved with their estimated cost by Commissioner Marker are as follows: Columbus road, Erie county, estimated cost $4,540; Nelsonville-Athens extension, Athens county, $17,209; Scio road, Harrison county, $23,825; Canton-Waynesburg road, Stark county, $22,930; Crester road, Meigs county, $10,063; Selma pike, Clark county, $5,967; Medina road, Medina county, $6,465; Marysville and Marven road, Union county, $11,978; Scotland Station road, Geauga county, $9,612, and Geneva road, Ashtabula county, $9,746.

Political Parties Open Campaign.

Three parties will open their campaigns in Ohio this month, each with a special program and a special attraction. Then until the end of the campaign, there will be no rest for the voter in the Buckeye State. Friday, September 20, Woodrow Wilson, candidate for president, and James M. Cox, candidate for governor, will open the Democratic state campaign at Columbus.

Saturday, September 21, the Republican campaign will open in Columbus under the joint auspices of the state and national committees. Chairman Daugherty says speakers of national repute will do the talking. He is not ready to announce their names.

Monday, September 23, Hiram W. Johnson, will open the Progressive campaign with a three-day special train tour of the state during which he will speak repeatedly from the rear end of the train.

60,500 Autos Licensed in Ohio.

Ohio now has 60,500 licensed automobiles. Notwithstanding that the season is more than half over applications are still being received for licensing by Registrar J. A. Shearer at the rate of an average of 60 a day. The total number for the year will run to 70,000, which will by far surpass all previous records. Registrar Shearer thinks that there will be 75,000 licensed automobiles in Ohio next year.

Ohio Has 700 More Saloons.

Ohio has nearly 700 more saloons than it had six months ago. This is shown by the report of Auditor of State Fullington on the July Dow tax collection covering the preceding six months. The number of saloons in business during that period was 8,643 as compared with 7,950 for the half year before. The return of counties to the wet column is responsible for the increased number of saloons.

Fortune Paid Out to Pensions.

Ohio pensions to the amount of $500,000 were paid out by the subtreasury yesterday. From Washington there came during the day an additional $1,000,000 to be used in paying the pensioners whose checks will be presented to-morrow and Tuesday. The total of the Ohio pensions for each quarter has been about $4,000,000, but the new laws will increase that amount by several hundred thousand dollars. The number of pensioners in the state is approximately 90,000 at present.

Will Regulate Overhead Wires.

An ordinance to regulate the stringing of overhead wires in the city and which it is believed will aid firemen in fighting fires by removing many present hindrances, is being drafted by Safety Director Bargar. Many wires will be placed underground, if it is passed. Councilman Lucks is contemplating the introduction of an ordinance under which conduits for all wires must be placed in streets at the same time paving is laid, to prevent the tearing up of pavement for its insertion later.

State Canneries are Inspected.

State Dairy and Food Commissioner Strode has returned from an inspection trip of a number of canneries throughout the state, which brought out a very satisfactory state of affairs. There are 250 canneries in the state and a large number of these are now putting up corn. "I found these canneries as clean as the kitchen of a careful housewife," said Commissioner Strode. "Everywhere I found the canneries living up to the requirements prescribed by our department for cleanliness and purity."

In the opinion of President A. W. Tharman, of the Ohio board of administration, the state paid too much when it paid $700,000 for the site and the erections of the buildings of the Mt. Vernon State sanitarium for the treatment of tubercular patients. President Tharman and Dr. A. F. Shepherd, of the board, visited the institution and were anything but pleased with the conditions there. They have no fault to find with the way the institution is being managed, but they have with the construction work and with the inaccessibility of the place.

ELECTION WAS LEGAL

OPINION OF ATTORNEY GENERAL HOGAN TO ASSAILERS OF NEW CHARTER.

Opinion Upholds the Validity of Amendment Election of Proposals and the Work Done by the Framers of Ohio's New Laws.

Columbus, O.—The special election on the amendments to the constitution of the state, held ten days ago, was legal, according to an informal opinion of Attorney-General Hogan. The opinion was the result of published reports that the validity of the amendment to the constitution would be attacked on the grounds that the Constitutional Convention had no right to call a special election.

Although the contention that the Legislature had no authority to delegate power to fix the date for a special election may be well grounded, according to Mr. Hogan, it had the power to direct the convention to submit the matter to the electors of the state.

"The Legislature did not delegate power to the convention," said Mr. Hogan. "It merely directed the convention to submit the matter to the electors of the state at such time as it might determine.

"The essence of the matter is submission and not time. Time is a mere incident.

"The Legislature had no power to delegate authority, but this was no power to delegate authority, but this was not authority.

"Section 1, Article 6, provides for voting on amendments at regular elections for Senators and Representatives and also provides that the election shall be advertised in at least one newspaper in each county for six months prior to that time, but applies only to amendments proposed by the Legislature.

"Section 3 of the same article provides for the submission of questions by the Constitution, related expressly, but distinct from Section 1. All that is required by Section 3 is the submission to the electors of the state and does not fix the time or manner. This is left to the general direction of the Legislature, and the Legislature gave such general direction in the case of the recent special election."

With reference to the contention of some that a majority of the vote cast on all of the amendments is necessary for the ratification of any of the amendments Mr. Hogan said:

"I have not investigated that feature, but am inclined to the belief that a majority vote cast on any proposal is all that is necessary for its ratification."

The last clause of Section 4 of the provisions relating to amendments to the constitution according to General Hogan, makes it plain that the majority on each separate proposition is decisive without regard to the number of ballots cast at the election. The section declares that "no amendment shall take effect until the same shall have been adopted by the majority voting thereon." Hogan affirms that the use of the singular noun is conclusive proof that the vote of each separate proposition is independent of every other vote.

It was pointed out by the Secretary, C. B. Galbreath, of the Constitutional Convention, that the enabling acts passed by the General Assemblies for the conventions of 1851 and 1873 provided, like the Green act, that the convention might determine the time of submission, and no question was raised as to its authority.

There were special elections held on both new proposed constitutions. Mr. Galbreath said that no question was made of the vote substituting the present no-license clause that was part of the constitution prior to 1851, although the amendment was carried by far less than a majority of those voting at the election.

Upon the return of Gov. Judson Harmon to this city from his summer home in Charlevoix, Attorney General Timothy S. Hogan will have a conference with him regarding the proposed attack.

CENTRAL M. E. CONFERENCE

Meets at Kenton September 25—Will Vote on Merger.

Bellefontaine.—The Central Ohio conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church including churches in Lima, Findlay, Defiance, Bellefontaine, Marion and Toledo districts, will open on September 25 at Kenton. The conference will be taken upon consolidating the Cincinnati and Central Ohio conferences. It is believed the proposed consolidation will be ratified. In that case all the Methodist churches in western Ohio from Lake Erie to the Ohio river will be in one conference probably under the title of the Central Ohio.

SOLD INTO BONDAGE

Lima, Ohio.—Alleging that they were literally sold into bondage by a New York City labor agency, herded into flocks like so many galley slaves, bruised and beaten by intolerable masters, robbed of their very identity and shipped to Lima for railroad construction work, for which they received only their bare board and a destitute room in which to sleep, 25 Russian Poles, speaking through an interpreter, told Judge Holmes here of their ill treatment.

CHURCH PEOPLE HOLD MEETING

Ironton, O.—The twenty-fourth District Convention was held here and a goodly number of delegates and visitors were in attendance.

An elaborate program had been prepared and was rendered at the church at Fifth and Quincy streets, lasting from ten o'clock this morning to eighty-fifty o'clock this evening. Some excellent speakers were present.

Miss Mary Lyons, a distinguished speaker, delivered the evening address.

| 41. Schedule | 275,062 | 213,979 |

Eight amendments in all were defeated. They are: Equal suffrage, good roads, outdoor advertising, labor injunctions, anti-death penalty, voting machines, eligibility of women, eliminating "white."

It is estimated that there are approximately 1,350,000 voters in the state and something like 600,000 participated in the election. The equal suffrage amendment brought out the largest vote. The total vote for and against on this proposition was a little more than 586,295. Suffrage carried in but 19 counties. Those counties were Ashtabula, Athens, Belmont, Carroll, Columbiana, Fulton, Geauga, Guernsey, Jefferson, Lucas, Medina, Meigs, Morgan, Morrow, Portage, Trumbull, Summit, Williams and Wood. The license proposal lost in 34 counties. Forty-eight counties voted against good roads. The anti-injunction amendment was the only one favored by labor which failed.

MILK SHORTAGE

FACED IN OHIO BECAUSE DAIRY MEN ARE QUITTING BUSINESS BY REASON OF MIXED LAWS.

Commissioner Strode Sounds Note of Warning to Cities—Present Inspection System Is Responsible.

Columbus, O.—"A serious situation faces the cities of Ohio with reference to their milk supply, and the conditions are likely to grow worse if the present conditions of inspection is adhered to," said State Dairy and Food Commissioner Strode. Mr. Strode said that scarcely any two cities of the state have the same requirements under which dairymen must sell milk and this lack of uniformity in rules and regulations has resulted in such confusion and discontent among dairymen that they are seeking other means of marketing their product. Some of them are out of the dairy business entirely. Others convert the cream into butter and feed the residue to stock, while many ship their milk to creameries and cheese factories.

"The territory from which the milk supply of the large cities is drawn contains many smaller cities which must be supplied," said Mr. Strode. "If the dairy regulations of all these cities differ materially it is impossible for dairymen to comply with the requirements of all cities in a given territory, no matter how anxious they may be to do so. The only solution is the adoption of uniform regulations covering the entire state, and the General Assembly should authorize the State Dairy and Food department to formulate such regulations and give them statutory effect.

"If the conditions under which milk and cream are produced do not meet the municipal requirements all the city can do is to prevent the sale of these products and drive them to some other market. It is manifest that if the milk and cream from any particular dairy are unfit for consumption by the people of one city they are unfit for any other city. Another serious phase of the question is the possibility at all times of a milk famine in cities that [illegible] further curtailing the milk supply. The logical solution for this problem seems to be thorough state inspection of all dairies and the power to enforce such rules as may be necessary to secure the best possible sanitary condition for producing the marketing milk and cream."

RETURNS FROM EUROPE

Prof. Homer C. Price, Dean of the College of Agriculture, Ohio State University, has just returned from a year's tour through Europe where he has been studying agriculture. He is particularly interested in the economic side of farming and, while abroad, gave considerable time to the study of co-operative organizations among farmers and methods of farm finance. He gathered many facts and figures, which will be helpful to Ohio farmers as well as to students in the agricultural college. Prof. Price expects to attend a number of agricultural meetings throughout the state during the coming year for the purpose of giving [illegible] the benefits of his observations.

Editor Olli Weygandt, of Ravenna says it will take several days to count the Woodrow Wilson vote in Portage county this year.

A Texas exhibition contains one object lesson that should interest Americans. Side by side are two harvesting machines, made in America, and exactly alike. One was bought in Germany for $90, and the other in Illinois for $125.

The Maine election should exert a sobering and a steadying influence on the Democratic party in the nation. It has been thus far a bit too cock-sure. It has felt the victory already won and it has been joyously counting the chickens even before the period of incubation had fairly been begun. Maine rather poignantly suggests the folly of this and warns the party of the common people that nothing can be safely taken for granted. There is a real fight ahead and every man will be needed at his post. There must be no straggling, no hanging back, no sleeping except on arms. The forces of privilege are divided as never before, but they are not destroyed; and until they have been destroyed, the cause of the plain people is in danger.

ARCHBOLD COLLECTS FROM YOU

The intestine quarrel between Mr. Roosevelt and his former associates as to whether Standard Oil money is dirtier than Harriman or Frick money, is something that concerns Republicans alone. The participants can smear each other all they wish.

The undisputed fact stands out, clear and significant, that the trusts have for many years been corrupting [illegible] of the country with their money, and that the Republican and not the Democratic party has had the benefit of it. Mr. Archbold says in his testimony that without regard to the personnel of the ticket it was felt in business circles that the Republican organization was the one for them to tie to, and that in doing so they were acting on sound commercial principles. He did not need to thus explain their heavy contributions; every one knows the motive behind them and it all means that in contributing the trusts looked upon the transaction not as a gift and still less as a patriotic offering, but as an investment. The fact that they kept on investing is evidence that they were getting their money back.

AN ELECTORATE AT SCHOOL

The voters of Ohio have been to school for three months. Last week school for three months. Last week was their graduation day. Not that their school has closed for good. It hasn't. That was only the first term which closed last week. But at its close the pupils decided to keep the school open for good and all, with other graduation days as occasion for them occurs.

It is the best kind of school, too,—a school in which every voter is a pupil and also a teacher. Direct legislation creates a college of citizenship. It gives a value to the ballot that is unknown to politics of the personal kind, better ideals go with it than "standing by" a Taft, or "trusting to" a Wilson or "whooping her up" for a "Teddy." It tends to give the people a sense of responsibility, not indirectly for what somebody does in their name, but directly for what they do themselves.

And it disfranchises ignorant and indifferent voters. Nearly half the voters of Ohio went into the disfranchised class last week. But instead of being disfranchised by some superior power arbitrarily, they disfranchised themselves. Not by any school master-schoolmastery test was this done, but on the basis of their ignorance of or their indifference to the particular subject at issue. It is of the nature of direct legislation, of the initiative and referendum, that it secures government of all and for all by those who are fit, those who are fit by the only test of fitness, their own individual judgment upon their own intelligence and interest with reference to the common affairs upon which opportunity to vote is afforded them.—Chicago Public.

INDICTMENT OF WOOD

Further evidence of how the multi-millionaire woolen trust magnates "protect" their employees in return for sufficient protection to allow them to overcharge 90,000,000 American consumers on every article of clothing they buy, is revealed in the arrest at Lawrence, Mass., of William M. Wood, head of the Woolen Trust.

Mr. Wood is charged with placing dynamite in the homes of his $5, $6 and $7 a week foreign millworkers in an attempt to discredit their cause while they were on a strike last winter as a protest against a reduction of wages.

Mr. Wood's arrest is worthy of the attention of every man, woman and child in the country who wears woolens. Because of the fact that Mr. Wood and his fellow woolen trust magnates contribute heavily to Republican campaign funds, Congress has been in the habit of placing the tariff on woolens high enough to keep out all competition, so that the woolen trust could be free to charge any price they desired, up to the limit of the ability of the people to pay. The result is that Americans are paying from thirty to one hundred per cent more for woolen clothing and blankets than the residents of Great Britain pays.

The story of the career of Mr. Wood provides a curious paradox. He is the oppressor of 150,000 miserable New England textile workers, a few years ago he was one of them. In his youth he felt the sting of hunger himself, but now he is pitiless in his thoughts of his employees. He has grown enormously rich, but declares that from $4 to $5 a week is enough for those who labor in his mills.

It is said of many captains of industry that they are ignorant of the conditions of the workman who earn their fortunes for them; that if they knew the distress of their employees they would seek to remedy it. Not so with Wood. He knows. Their distress he sees. Their cries he hears.

Wood's father was a Portuguese-Jew emigrant. He labored in a cotton mill and died of tuberculosis, a disease common to cotton and wool spinners. The father's name is believed to have been Alphonse Lelair, or LaValt.

When the woolen mill employees which are composed of 42 different nationalities, most of whom cannot speak in English, went on a strike the fathers and mothers decided to send their babies and little children away to friends in other cities in order that they might not suffer from hunger during the strike. Mr. Wood's agents beat the women, and tore the little ones from their mothers' arms when the children were about to be placed on trains. Thus did Mr. Wood "protect" his employees.

Are the American people willing to continue to contribute to Mr. Wood by paying more for shoddy than good woolen clothing sells for in England? Or do they want the tariff on woolens reduced? There is only one day every two years when the consumers have an opportunity to express themselves on this subject. That day comes on November 5.

It would surprise you to know of the great good that is being done by Chamberlain's Tablets. Darius Downey, of Newberg Junction, N. B., writes, "My wife has been using Chamberlain's Tablets and finds them very effectual and doing her lots of good." If you have any trouble with your stomach or bowels give them a trial. Governor Wilson and Congressman Cox will speak at each meeting.

Treat For Newspaper Men.

Press headquarters will be opened in the Southern hotel and will be in charge of an attache of the state Democratic executive committee. All visiting newspaper men are expected to call at these headquarters to register, get their credentials and cards for breakfast Saturday morning at 8.

Never within the history of Ohio politics has an attempt been made to organize the Democrats of the commonwealth on the extensive scale that will be carried into execution at the big organization meeting in Memorial hall at 1 p. m. Special invitations have been sent to every Democratic candidate and every Democratic committeeman, state, county and precinct, to be present. Governor Wilson and Congressman Cox will talk on organization.

Wilson Speaks to Teachers.

With Governor Wilson, for many years one of the most eminent educators in the country, as principal speaker, and State School Commissioner Miller as presiding officer, a big meeting for students and teachers will be held in the auditorium at the Chamber of Commerce, East Broad street, at 2:30 p. m. Congressman Cox also will speak at this function.

At 3:15 p. m. in the auditorium of the City hall, which is just south of the state Capitol building, an educational meeting will be held. Governor Wilson and Congressman Cox will both make speeches that will appeal to them.

At 4 o'clock a public reception will be held in the Southern hotel, at which time Governor Wilson and Congressman Cox will stand at the head of the receiving line. Alumni of Princeton university will call on Governor Wilson at the Southern hotel.

Seem Democratic Clubs.

Officers of the Democratic clubs of the state will meet at 5 p. m. in the assembly hall of the Southern hotel, at which Chairman Bert S. Bartlow of the bureau of club organizations will preside.

The Democratic Glee Club of Columbus will give a concert at Memorial hall at 7 p. m., preceding the big evening meeting, which will start at 7:30 p. m. Chairman Finley of the state Democratic executive committee will call this meeting to order and Governor Harmon will preside. Governor Wilson and Congressman Cox will deliver formal addresses. If the weather is favorable a large outdoor meeting will be held simultaneously, which will be presided over by United States Senator Pomerene, and be addressed by Senator Gore, Mayor Baker and the candidates on the state ticket. These speakers will exchange places with the orators on the inside stage.

An I H C Manure Spreader Is an Investment—Not an Expense

A MACHINE that makes two dollars where one was made before is not an expense—it is a good investment.

Careful tests made at the Ohio Experiment Station showed an average increased crop yield of $15 an acre when eight loads of manure were properly spread. Spreading with a fork, it would take at least sixteen loads to an acre to produce the same result. By fertilizing twice as much ground with the same quantity of manure and doing the work better, an I H C manure spreader soon pays for itself. Add to this saving an increase of $15 an acre in the value of your crops, and you at once see why we urge the purchase of an

Ask the I H C local dealer to show you the self-aligning, removable boxes on the main axle; notice that the axles are roller bearing to reduce the draft; study the apron construction, and note the large rollers on which it runs. I H C spreaders can be used in any corner of the barnyard. There is no reach to interfere. The seat folds out of the way when filling the spreader.

If you appreciate machines of extra merit; machines that spread manure in ample range of quantities; machines which can be equipped with drilling attachments for use in market gardens, and above all, machines which are made in sizes convenient for every farm, investigate I H C spreaders. Go to the local I H C dealer and look carefully over the machines he shows you. Get catalogues and full information from him, or, write

MENTOR

There has been some of the warmest weather the past week of any in the season. The mercury stood at 97 in the shade of a certain north porch, at 4 p. m. on Tuesday afternoon, but it was much cooler the next day, and by Thursday furnace fires were in order again, yet we have heard no complaint whatever from Mentor folks, about the weather.

Mr. Clifford Freeman has been in one of the Cleveland hospitals quite ill with diptheria, and his wife and three small sons have been down here with Mr. and Mrs. Clark Bradway during the time.

Mrs. Leslie Root of Covena, Calif., together with her oldest daughter, Miss Virginia, are guests of their relatives here, the Justice and Carroll families and Miss Emily Haskell. Mrs. Root may be remembered as Miss Nettie Daniels.

The Mentor and Willoughby temperance unions are to serve a hot, good dinner at the Fair Grounds all day Wednesday, we were told, though too late for last week's issue of the Herald. The price, we are sure, will be reasonable.

The statement that the Miscellany Club would be postponed one week, on account of the Fair was afterward found to have been changed, and the first meeting will be on Tuesday instead of Wednesday and this week instead of next. The President and Social Committee had to do some tall telephoning in order to get the date changed, and everybody satisfied.

Mr. and Mrs Fitzsimmons of Geneva, with their son, Walter Mead, spent a portion of last week in our village with their sister, Mrs. Lewe and other friends.

Mr Scheffaer closed his year on yesterday, but did not preach anything like a "farewell" sermon, as he and everybody else expects he will be returned here. On Tuesday he will leave for Conference, which will convene in Cleveland this year, and the six hundred ministers of this District will make the old city look quite dignified. The pulpit of the Methodist church is to be occupied by Prof McMillan, who was at one time in active service in the ministry.

The Rexford sisters enjoyed a short visit from their cousins, Mr and Mrs. John McKee and their sister, Mrs. Charles Kirkpatrick and family of Lakewood, a suburb of Cleveland, a few days ago.

Miss Mabel Merrill of Burton is the honored guest of Mrs. Robert Case for a few days at present before resuming her studies at Oberlin College.

Mrs. Will Pershall of Akron accompanied by her daughter, Miss Inez, was a visitor at "Ivyside" the home of her mother Mrs. Blish, during a part of last week. Mrs. Pershall has just returned from a delightful trip through the great west, where she visited the Yellowstone National Park, and also spent some time in Salt Lake City and Denver.

Mrs. C. W. Bradway and her daughter, Mrs. Welcome Hardendorf, have just returned from a visit with friends in Spartansburgh, Pa.

Mrs. Mary Henry Kennedy of Cleveland, accompanied by her niece Mrs. Kelsey and son, spent a short time last week with her nephew Mr. Harry King and his family at their home "Southwood."

Mrs. Victor Draloard and two little daughters spent a day or so with her mother, Mrs. Thoron Wood, returning to their Madison home on Tuesday. Mr. Brainard has just sold his Madison property and is about to move his family to Nottingham to live.

Mr. William Ogden, one of the former superintendents of the Knitting Mill here, but now a resident of Perry, New York, has been in our small village some days, with former neighbors and friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Randall had the Little Mountain and Kirtland Districts a few days ago, some fifty or more being in attendance. We understand they go by the name of "The Hill and Dale Club."

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Loomis of Painesville and their sister, Mrs. James Ford and her husband of Cleveland, motored down here recently and called on a few choice friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Luhman Johnson of Hunstsburg, have just moved back to Mentor, and will make their home with their father, Mr. Henry Johnson on Hart street for the present at least.

Mrs. Eva Hanson McCrea is enjoying a visit from her oldest daughter, Mrs Pershall of Wyoming, and her two children.

Everybody is so excited over the County Fair that little else can be talked about at present. We hear some such remarks and questions as these: "Of course you'll enter that center-piece, there won't be anything half so nice;" "Are you not going to make one of your apple pies and so carry off Mr. Darrell's gold beads?" "I just thought if I had that pesky old cushion finished, I'd take it, for you remember it is being made from an old heir-loom that is more than two hundred years old!" "Somebody told me that you had a beautiful lace shawl, and so I have called to see if you will loan it for the Fair," etc.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rexford of Cleveland were in our village a few days ago, bringing home with them their mother, Mrs. Eliza Rexford, who had been making a visit in town.

Mr. James R. Garfield is in Old Mexico just at present on a business trip connected with his law office in the city.

Mrs. Charles Norton is in Los Angeles, Calif., where she is spending some little time with her son, Mr. Byron Norton, who is settled out there.

Mrs. John Randall is having a visit from her mother, Mrs Beardslee of Huntsburgh, just now.

Mr Fred Parker, the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs Leonard Parker of Fenton, Mich., together with his wife, have recently been guests of his uncle Mr. Ed Parker, and other relatives in this vicinity.

Mr Dean Snyors of Barnesville, O., spent a portion of last week here with the Sawyer boys and other school friends, and was expecting to start in a few days for Hiram College, where he hopes to take a course of study.

Mrs Cordelia Radcliffe and her sister, Mrs Grier, have been having a visit from their cousin, Mrs. D. A. Johns, this past week, whose home is in Van Wert, this state.

Mrs Orlso Woodford Cotelle is on the sick list, and confined to her bed, but Dr Ingersoll is in attendance and gives encouragement that there is no sign of fever, and that she will soon be up and around again.

Miss Nelly King was in Chardon several days last week, where she visited her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Randall, Mrs Shaw, Mrs Charles Witmot, Mrs Rudosill, Mr and Mrs. Will King, and others of the "clan."

Mrs. Robert Case returned home one day last week from New Castle, Pa., having spent more than a month by the bedside of her mother, Mrs. Jane Lawrence, whom she left very much better indeed, and whose friends are hoping to see her in Mentor before very long.

Mrs. J. W. Lowe is entertaining her uncle Mr. E. M. Green of East Orange, N. J., for a time now.

The new bungalow built by Mrs Florence Northcut, is coming on very fast, and she is expecting to be able to move into it before the cold weather sets in. The work is being done by her cousin Mr. Charles Pearce, assisted by Mr. William Eddy and others.

Mr and Mrs Clare Camp were in our village on business on Saturday and called on their friends the King girls. Mr. and Mrs. Camp have just sold their Cleveland property and are settled on the west side of the city for the winter, after that they may return to their home here.

The Painesville friends of Mrs. Abby Wyman Dorling will be glad to hear via her Mentor cousins, that she is spending the summer at Grand Island, Mich., with a maid, but sorry to learn that she has been quite ill while there. Mrs. Darling will return to her home in Joliet, Ill., as soon as cooler weather will permit.

Mr. Robert Case is doing considerable painting all through his store at the Center, and thereby proving himself really a "Painter from Painter Town."

Miss Lucila Kerr still continues to improve slowly, and felt the grass under her feet last week for the first time in over three years.

Mentor folks were quite gratified to learn that our Mr. T. D. Morley had secured another Agricultural school to be held in Painesville next March, as the last one was enjoyed so much, and everybody's love for the country, and enthusiasm over "growing things" was stimulated at each of its sessions.

The Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society held its monthly meeting on Thursday afternoon with Mrs Harry King, the program being in charge of Mrs Morley and Mrs Snall. The following officers were elected for the coming year: Mrs N. C. Frost, Pres., Mrs Charles Church, First Vice Pres.; Mrs William Eddy, Second Vice Pres.; Mrs. W. H. Johnson, Sec'y; Mrs T. D. Morley, Treas Foreign Society, Miss Nellie King, Treas. Home Society; Mrs. C. Harris, Temperance Pres.; Miss Sarah Richmond, Sec'y Literature; Miss Cleveland and Miss King, Program Com.

There was quite a mad dog scare here early in the week, two homeless (and doubtless hungry) canines were seen running through the streets, and so one of the young men took a revolver and gave chase on his wheel, but not being able to go in opposite directions at once, there was only one poor dog that got killed, the other making his escape in the direction of Kirtland.

The wedding of Miss Marion Amidon and Mr. Will Hagenberger last Wednesday evening, was without doubt the very prettiest ever in Mentor, especially on account of the decorations which were in the hands of Mr. Carl Hagenberger, who is an artist in his chosen profession, that of florist. In some mysterious fashion, he just covered the entire walls of the room where they were married with smilax and white flowers, and flowers were everywhere, all of them the most beautiful ones that the Hagenberger green-houses afforded. The bride was beautifully gowned in white satin trimmed with chiffon, and wore a long veil. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Huntsman, pastor of the Painesville Disciple church.

SYNOPSIS.

Harding Kent calls on Louise Farrish to propose marriage and finds the house in great excitement over the attempted suicide of her sister Katharine. Kent starts an investigation and finds that Hugh Crandall, suitor for Katharine, who had been forbidden the house by General Farrish, had talked with Katharine over the telephone just before she shot herself. A torn piece of yellow paper is found, at sight of which General Farrish is stricken with paralysis. Kent discovers that Crandall has left town hurriedly. Andrew Elser, an aged banker, commits suicide about the same time as Katharine attempted her life. A yellow envelope is found in Elser's room. Post Office Inspector Davis, Kent's friend, takes up the case. Kent is convinced that Crandall is at the bottom of the mystery. Katharine's strange outcry puzzles the detectives.

CHAPTER V.

Two Discoveries.

"Where are we going now?" I asked sarcastically.

I was thoroughly indignant at the levity with which the inspector had received my theory of Crandall's guilt. Firmly convinced of my sound logic, the thought of Davis laughing at me before Louise rankled. As I began to expound, as forcefully as I could, the reasons for my belief, he cut me short.

"Come along, Harding," he said in authoritative tones, "we've no time to lose."

Almost before I knew it I found myself by his side in the taxicab he had hailed. In my indignation I had failed to hear the direction he gave the chauffeur.

"According to your theory, Mr. Detective Kent," he said with assumed gravity, for he was still in a chaffing mood, "where would be the best place for me to go next?"

"To Hugh Crandall's apartments," I cried, determined to convince him of my view of the case.

"That is exactly where we are bound," he replied to my amazement.

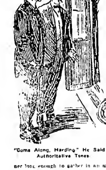
"But," I stammered, "I thought from your manner that you disagreed with me as to Crandall's guilt."

"I do. I doubt every man's guilt until it is definitely proved. I admit there is plenty of evidence of Crandall's connection with the case. I do not admit that any of the evidence yet shows it to be a guilty connection."

Again I started to explain my reasons for thinking Crandall guilty, but again he refused to listen.

"My dear fellow," he said, "in my years of investigating crimes I have thoroughly learned one lesson, and that is the unwisdom of jumping at conclusions. There is only one rule that never fails. Collect all the evidence possible first and then see to whom it points. Most detectives, both professional and amateur, make the fatal mistake of deciding on a theory and then setting out to prove it. That is the reason so many innocent men are convicted and so many guilty ones escape. You can prove almost anything about anybody if you work hard enough. Starting out with the theory that no such man as Napoleon ever lived, I could gather many convincing proofs—"

He stopped the taxicab at the corner long enough to gather in an armful of afternoon papers from a newsboy and began scanning their first pages and throwing them aside. From the disappointment in his face I judged he had not found what he was looking for.



"Come Along, Harding," He Said In Authoritative Tones.

"What did you expect to find?" I asked wonderingly.

"Other suicides," he said tersely, keeping on with his hasty reading.

Though I have known Miller Davis for years I must confess that I constantly find myself almost dazed by the seeming rapidity of his mental processes and their apparently erratic course. Here he was rejecting my theory of Crandall's guilt, yet jumping wildly to the conclusion that there would be other suicides, possibly connected with Katharine Farrish's act and Andrew Elser's death. It was entirely beyond my comprehension, and the next lack of his mind seemed even more puzzling.

"Do you know anything about art?" he asked as calmly as if we were having an after-dinner chat at the club.

"If any one asked you to define technique I doubt if you could do it. I do not believe there is a painter or an art critic who could give a satisfactory definition. Yet any one who [illegible] about painting [illegible] of technique. We know that every painter has his own technique. Show me paintings by Henri, Lawson and Glackens and you do not have to label them for me to tell them apart. I recognize the work of each man by his technique. Even if Lawson painted a portrait and Henri a landscape, the individuality of the artist would make his work recognizable, though masked by a subject unusual for him. Crime is like art in one respect at least—technique. Every criminal brain has its own technique. Any one who has investigated crime, who has studied evil doers under all conditions, who has matched his wits against theirs, inevitably comes to recognize types of crimes. Given any particular crime to trace, from the very nature of it he is able to say at once, 'This is the work of So-and-so.' Now in the Farrish case I am confident that a crime of some kind has been committed or is even now being committed. I may not know what particular thing it was that drove Katharine Farrish and old Elser to seek death—in fact I do not know as yet—but that makes no difference. I know the type of crime. I recognize in the case certain indefinable things which convince me that behind it all is a cunning criminal brain that has planned some far-reaching plot. If it was devilishly ingenious enough to drive two people to suicide, in all probability it will have the same effect on others. There may be no other suicides, but I believe there will be. I shall watch every report of a suicide for the next few days with particular interest. Who the criminal is, and who his associate is—for I am convinced it is a crime of the pair—I have no idea. Investigation of mail thefts and stamp counterfeiting never has brought me in touch with this particular sort of crime, so that as yet I am entirely at sea as regards the identity of the criminals."

"All you have said," I told him, "only convinces me that I am right about Hugh Crandall. An intelligent, educated man gone wrong, a respectable broker with a secret propensity for crime, would fit your theory, wouldn't it?"

"You saw Crandall's janitor last night, didn't you?" was all the response he chose to make to my question. "What kind of a chap is he?"

"If you can get him to admit you to Crandall's rooms you are a wonder," I replied, repeating word for word my interview with the janitor the night before.

"I generally go prepared for such fellows," he answered, smilingly drawing from his pocket a blank legal document on which the word 'attachment' was printed boldly across the back. Taking out a fountain pen he rapidly filled in Hugh Crandall's name, on the outside only.

Of course I saw through his ruse. He would represent himself as an officer come to attach Crandall's furniture and thus gain access to the rooms.

"But suppose the janitor insists on reading the document and sees that it is blank inside?"

"No one ever reads legal documents unless necessary. Besides, a man of the janitor type generally has considerable respect for the arm of the law. He is probably more or less familiar with its workings in dispossessions and such things and realizes how futile opposition would be, supposing that we really were sheriff's deputies, as he will undoubtedly take us to be."

We reached the place, and, dismissing the taxicab half a block away, marched boldly up the steps and rang the bell. As the janitor answered, Davis, carelessly flipping back his coat to show a badge of some sort, demanded admittance to Crandall's apartments.

"I've got an attachment, see?" he said, flashing the back of the document before the janitor's eyes.

"Oh, that's it, is it?" said the janitor. "That's why he beat it so quick yesterday and told me not to let any one into the rooms?"

"So he has gone," exclaimed Davis in mock surprise. "I don't wonder at that. Has he paid you the rent?"

"Come to think of it, he is a month behind," said the janitor, "though often it's been that way and he always made good."

Even as he was talking he began to lead the way upstairs. Respect for the law coupled with the insidious doubt of his tenant that Davis' remark had implanted, removed all obstacles to our purpose.

As he flung open the door to Crandall's apartment after unlocking it with his pass key, Davis turned and, handing him a coin, said:

"Can you get me a hammer and a couple of tacks till I put up a notice?"

"Sure," said the janitor, as he tucked the coin in his pocket. "I'll go down stairs and get one right away."

The apartment into which he had admitted us was a two-room-and-bath suite, with furnishings indicating that its occupant was a man of comfortable means and good taste. There were some well chosen pictures on the wall and a fine lot of books. There was none of the display of stage favorites and sporting pictures found in bachelor dens; but two framed photographs of Katharine Farrish, one with an inscription, smiled down from the walls, almost the only touch of femininity about the place.

As soon as the janitor disappeared Davis made a bee-line for a desk that stood open and began a hasty search of the papers. I stepped into the bedroom and glanced about. Something on the dresser caught my eye and I crossed and picked it up. I started as I realized what it was. The small [illegible] in my hand was [illegible] and more convincing proof of Crandall's guilt.

"Come on, Kent," called Davis from the adjoining room. "I've got what I came for."

Still clutching the object I had picked up, I returned to the sitting room to find Davis impatiently waiting for me at the head of the stairs.

"Quick," he said, "let's get out before the janitor returns. There is no use waiting to make explanations, so long as we have all we need."

As we reached the front door we heard the janitor shuffling up the stairs, but we were around the corner and safely seated in a hotel cafe almost before he could have discovered our absence from the rooms.

"See what I found," I exclaimed in triumph, drawing a silver hypodermic syringe from my pocket and laying it on the table. "Crandall's a morphine fiend."

"It does look like it," said Davis unconcernedly. "See what I found!"

Tearing off a corner of a menu card he wrote something on it and then tore it up quickly after showing it to me.

"Lock Box No. 17, Ardway, N. J.," I repeated after reading the words. "What does that mean?"

"That," said Davis positively, "is where the yellow letter came from—or the yellow letters."

"How do you know?" I asked in astonishment. I had supposed that the one thing of importance we would be likely to find in Crandall's apartments would be a bundle of Katharine Farrish's letters. In fact I took it for granted that they were what Davis had been searching for in the desk. It seemed to me such an obvious thing I had not suggested it to him, yet here we were after our visit to the rooms with only two things—the hypodermic syringe and a post-office address. Surely there must have been in those rooms something more definite, something more damaging to Crandall than the things we had obtained, and of the two I believed that my discovery was the more significant. How could Davis possibly know that this was the address from which the yellow letters emanated?

"It is a simple problem in addition and subtraction," said Davis. "The yellow letter connects the Farrish and Elser cases. Many things connect Crandall with the Farrish case. A criminal using the mails for illegal purposes naturally locates, if possible, in another state from the scene of his operations, foreseeing the better chance of legal delays and possible escape. A criminal working in New York naturally seeks New Jersey as headquarters. If Crandall was cognizant of the yellow letters, whether his connection was innocent or guilty, he naturally would have known or would have tried to find out whence they came. I went into his rooms with one question in my mind, and I soon found the answer. In Crandall's address book will there not be some address in New Jersey that may give a clue? Almost the first thing I turned to was this one of Lock Box 17. Now in the postal business one of the first things we learn is that the criminal always tries to get a post-office box. For that reason two references are always required. In spite of that precaution, many of the boxes are constantly being used for fraudulent purposes. When we find out who rented Lock Box 17 at Ardway, we shall be close on the trail of the yellow letter."

"Were there any letters of Katharine Farrish's in the desk?" I asked.

"I guess so," said Davis unconcernedly. "I saw a bundle of letters in a woman's handwriting, but I didn't even look to see whose they were."

I was disappointed thus far with the inspector's handling of the case. His disregard of what appeared to me to be vital evidence and the decision he had made about this address being that of the sender of the yellow letters seemed to me wholly illogical.

"You'll grant, of course, that Crandall is a morphine user," I ventured.

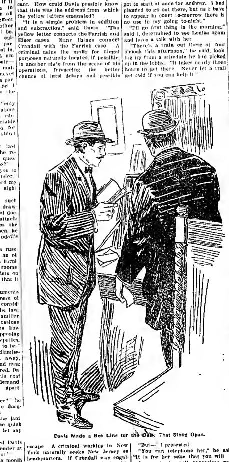
"A pair of swords in a man's room don't make him a fencer. Excuse me for a minute while I telephone my office."

While he was telephoning I reviewed the case in my mind. I was strongly tempted to break with him and continue the investigation my own way, and yet what had I to gain by it? After all, we had learned very little except that Crandall was connected with the mystery. Where were we likely to find Crandall? Davis had had much more experience in tracing men. He was resourceful, as the method in which he had affected entrance into Crandall's apartments showed. Just as I made up my mind that I would be wise to continue to follow his lead, lacking one of my own, Davis returned, an expression of annoyance on his face.

"Kent," he said, abruptly, "you've got to start at once for Ardway. I had planned to go out there, but as I have to appear in court to-morrow there is no use in my going to-night."

"I'll go first thing in the morning," said I, determined to see Louise again and have a talk with her.

"There's a train out there at four o'clock this afternoon," he said, looking up from a schedule he had picked up in the lobby. "It takes nearly three hours to get there. Never let a trail get cold if you can help it."



Davis Made a Bee Line for the Desk That Stood Open.

"But—" I protested.

"You can telephone her," he said. "It is for her sake that you will be going, and she will appreciate your energy in the matter more than anything else."

Since Time of Grandma

Remarkable Changes Effected in Dress and Social Activities in Feminine World

The modern society woman has a multitude of expenses that her grandmother never even dreamed of. Her visits to the masseuse, the hairdresser, the chiropodist, are a necessary part of her grooming today. While grandma tucked her switch guiltily away in the drawer of her dressing table and could not be bullied into the admission that she used powder, today her granddaughter unhesitatingly admits that she wears false braids and curls and that the soft glow of health on her rounded cheek was skillfully applied by a "perfect wonder" of a beauty doctor.

Social affairs have increased in number as well as in variety, and this has brought about a great change in my lady's wardrobe. Our grandmothers talked about their "best dress" and "best hat," the up-to-date lady speaks of her bridge gown, her dinner gown and her dancing frock. She has not one gown for dress up affairs, but 11 or 12. She has an appropriate outfit for each occasion. Not only must the gown be suitable, but all the accessories, including hat, wrap, gloves, shoes, veil, jewelry and even lingerie must be in absolute harmony.

When one stops to consider that the woman who is "in society" does remarkably well if she keeps within $100 for a year's supply of gloves some idea may be formed as to the amount which she spends for such items as tailored suits, ball gowns and furlined evening wraps.

Work Was Remedial.

The following report from the records of a probation officer is significant: "M. Z., of German descent, graduated from grammar school. Parents neat, respectable, and thrifty. Germans. Girl wanted to go to work. Parents would not allow this, as they did not need her wages and thought she should stay at home and help about the house. Girl became unmanageable, and stayed out several nights, whereupon her parents brought her into court as incorrigible. The probation officer urged that the girl be allowed to go to work. The parents agreed, the girl was placed on probation, and found work for herself in a department store. From that time she gave no trouble."

GEN. BOOTH'S WORK FOR THE FALLEN

Men Whose Labors Have Been Along the Same Lines Join in His Praise.

GENERAL WILLIAM BOOTH'S death ends a career that was unique in the world's history. Civilization is his debtor in a greater degree than it is aware, for it hardly appreciates the civilizing force of the religious and moral awakening which he wrought.

For nearly fifty years he had been the leader of a crusade which sought, not to recover the physical sepulcher of the Lord from the possession of the infidel, but to rescue and raise up the spiritual image of the Savior in the sin-smothered hearts of the lowliest and most debased of God's creatures; not to carry the gospel on the point of a sword, nor to evangelize the world by the fear of damnation, but to teach divine love and mercy by human ministrations to human ills and to stir stagnant souls with songs of sympathy.

He did not establish a new church or proclaim a new faith; he did not concern himself much about creeds; he did not despise sects or antagonize churches; he simply carried the old faith into dark places which the churches could not or would not penetrate.

His genius devised novel methods and he evolved a great organization which has spread to the four corners of the earth. The banners of Salvation Army float today in forty-nine lands and it preaches the gospel in twenty-four languages. A million people read its periodical publications and uncounted millions hear its word. Its drum beat, its fife and its tambourine sound around the world. It feeds the poor, it asylums the orphans, it nurses the babies, it ministers to the sick, it embraces the outcast and lifts up the fallen.

The lessons of his achievement are many. From the standpoint of human endeavor his life teaches the wisdom of doing well what the hand finds to do without measuring its present importance or appraising its immediate dignity. The pioneer preacher of the slums of London could never have conceived at the outset the ultimate personal triumph which he beheld in his last hours—more millions paying him the homage of love and gratitude and admiration than in modern times have sorrowed for the death of any ruler of church or state. And it all came to pass as a consequence of patient persevering effort in pursuit of humble opportunities which the great and the rich and the conceited despised. It is well for a man to have a vision of future accomplishment, but it is better for him to do the day's work with diligence.

From the standpoint of militant Christianity General Booth's wonderful work among the poor, the wicked and the abandoned of the cities seems almost like a rebuke to those who sit in cushioned pews once a week to hear learned discourse and artistic music. The rich need the gospel, to be sure, but more than they need eloquent speech and consoling anthem they need the sympathy that literally and heartfully suffers with their unfortunate fellows. At any rate, the Salvation Army has reaffirmed and exemplified the brotherhood of man in a way that was well nigh forgotten in many churches, and if it has not fraternized all Christian endeavor after the manner of the master it has at least brought Christianity down to the comprehension of the lowly and has made it real to those who otherwise would have looked upon it as an impossibility or a mockery.

The supreme lesson is the reward of faith. Of God's promises the dying man said: "They are sure, they are sure, if you will only believe." Interpreted by his life, these words mean no mere selfish hope of immortal being and future happiness, for always he wrought to save others and forget himself. They have a nobler, and a diviner meaning—the promise of satisfaction for unselfish service, of the visible harvest of cleaner and happier lives from the seeding of righteousness and virtue, of a loftier civilization built upon sacrifice, and of spiritual emancipation from the bondage of sin and selfishness.

It is good to know that his work will continue under the direction of his trained and consecrated sons and daughters. He built so enduringly that no individual is necessary for the maintenance of the army. He released a force which the world needed and which will continue under the spiritual law in the natural world until there is no longer a submerged part of humanity in need of preaching and healing.—Fort Worth Record.

FOREIGN BELIEFS ARE QUEER

Spanish Wedding Is Ruined If One Person Appears Entirely in Black—Some Other Signs.

In Spain the wedding is spoiled if one of the guests appears entirely in black, or if the bride looks into a mirror after orange blossoms and veil are fast in her headdress.

When a person's hair ends split, it's taken by the superstitious for a sign that she is either a witch or has been bewitched. As blond hair splits more readily than dark hair, all witches, spirits and sorceresses have blond or red hair, according to the standard of art.

On the marriage eve there is often much good-natured rivalry between the groom and the bride in the Slav countries as to who shall blow out the candle, for the person who does will be "first to die." It is impossible to trace the origin of this superstition, yet it prevails in aristocratic society as well as in the peasant's hut, even as like this, that "to insure the life and health of the children" the women must occupy the right side of the bed. In addition, she must not smoke before her forty-fifth year.

There is a superstition in this country and many others against burning a broom. The bud of birch broom is used in Southern Germany as a preventive against erysipelas. These buds, a piece of yellow wax and some other articles are enclosed in a pink silk bag, secured with red silk and worn on the back of the neck. The person must change his shirt every Friday.

Old Roman Wall Unearthed.

A part of the wall which once enclosed old St. Paul's, London, has been discovered in excavations at the corner of Paternoster Row and St. Paul's alley in London. The wall, which is about 60 feet long, is made of chalk and rubble, and was built in the twelfth century. On the same site pieces of a Roman amphora, Roman vases and some Samian ware have also been found. Other "finds" include a camel's skull unearthed in High Holborn and a large quantity of pipes of the eighteenth century. Under some old stables in Bartholomew Close—one of the oldest parts of London—three Norman arches have been found. They are close to one another, and are believed to have formed part of the cloisters of the priory which once stood on this site.

Compensation.

A fairly prominent local pugilist was injured several months ago in an automobile accident and had three ribs broken. Fully recovered, he was discussing the incident recently with friends.

"I got $100 out of the auto owner," he said. "Had to give the lawyer half and it cost $56 for doctor's bills, but I made them pay $100 for the thing, anyhow."

YOUNG WIFE SAVED FROM HOSPITAL

Tells How Sick She Was And What Saved Her From An Operation.

Upper Sandusky, Ohio.—"Three years ago I was married and went to housekeeping. I was not feeling well and could hardly drag myself along. I had such tired feelings, my back ached, my sides ached, I had bladder trouble awfully bad, and I could not eat or sleep. I had headaches, too, and became almost a nervous wreck. My doctor told me to go to a hospital. I did not like that idea very well, so, when I saw your advertisement in a paper, I wrote to you for advice, and have done as you told me. I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Liver Pills, and now I have my health.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS A REAL VEGETABLE PURGATIVE COMPOUNDED FROM FORMULA OF THE LATE DR. WM. WRIGHT

AT ALL DRUGGISTS

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY.

In this age of research and experiment, all nature is ransacked by the scientist for the comfort and happiness of man. Science has indeed made giant strides in the past century, and among the—by no means least important—discoveries in medicine is that of Therapion, which has been used with great success in French Hospitals and that it is worthy the attention of those who suffer from kidney, bladder, nervous diseases, chronic weaknesses, ulcers, skin eruptions, piles, &c., there is no doubt. In fact it seems evident from the big stir created amongst specialists, that THERAPION is destined to cast into oblivion all those questionable remedies that were formerly the sole reliance of medical men. It is of course impossible to tell sufferers all we should like to tell them in this short article, but those who would like to know more about this remedy that has effected so many—we might almost say, miraculous cures, should send addressed envelope for FREE book to Dr. LeClerc Med. Co., Haverstock Road, Hampstead, London, Eng., and decide for themselves whether the New French Remedy "THERAPION" No. 1, No. 2 or No. 3 is what they require and have been seeking in vain during a life of misery, suffering, ill health and unhappiness. Therapion is sold by druggists or mail $1.00. Fougera Co. 90 Beekman St., New York.

TRELLIS FOR HOME VINEYARD

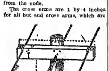
Contrivance Holds Vine Out of Way of Cultivation and Permits One to Pass Between Rows.

A grapevine trellis described by the Rural New Yorker, from which this cut and description are reproduced, has a middle wire which goes through holes in the posts. The middle slot sets down over the middle wire, while the two outside wires run through slots in the cross arm for two inches from the ends.

The cross arms are 1 by 4 inches for all but end cross arms, which are 2 by 4 inches. The cross arms are nailed to the posts, and should be braced by wire running from the ends of the cross arm, and then down to the post 18 or 20 inches below the arm. The stem of the vine is brought to a height a little above the level of the middle wire and tied to it.



Trellis for Grapevine.

Two canes that develop near this level the present year are left next fall, and next spring are tied to the right and left along this middle wire. Two short spurs are left near this location to furnish bearing wood for the year following and all else removed. The shoots developing from these grow out and over the outside wires, making a canopy, the fruit hanging in a natural position beneath, and protected from the sun.

This trellis simulates the position of the wild vine more nearly than any other. The growth is out of the way of cultivation, good drainage is insured, and one can pass readily from row to row. This trellis is recommended for the home vineyard. The expense of construction makes it prohibitive commercially except for fancy table varieties.

SELECTION OF ORCHARD SITE

Common Error Is to Choose Soil That Is Too Rich for Apples—Wood Is Not Wanted.

A common mistake in the selection of a site for the apple orchard tract, large or small, is that of choosing a soil that is too rich, that will cause abundant growth of wood, but mighty little fruit. In the valley in which the writer's ranch is located is an orchard of mature apple trees, as pretty a sight from a standpoint of foliage as one could ask to see, which has lately been felled because it did not deliver the goods.

The tract is fat, rich and well watered. Within a gunshot of this tract is a block of winter Nellis pear trees of the same age that for several years past have grossed their owners close to a thousand dollars per acre, says a writer in an exchange. Never was more emphatically demonstrated the fact that soil can be too rich for apples but not for pears. Within a mile of these unproductive apple trees, on thinner and lighter granitic soils, the apple trees bear prolifically to the point of breaking down.

HANDY LITTLE GARDEN TOOL

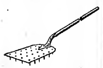
Implement for Pulverizing Soil Can Be Made of an Old Long-Handled Shovel, as Shown.

A handy garden tool for pulverizing the soil can be made of an old long-handled shovel, as shown, says the Popular Mechanics. Heat the shovel and flatten it out, drill holes about 2½ inches apart and rivet spikes in them. A board with large nails, having a long handle attached will also answer the purpose, but not so well as the shovel.



Earth Pulverizer for Gardeners.

Kerosene Emulsion.

Kerosene emulsion is one of the standard remedies in the combat against insect pests. It is made by boiling one pound of whale oil, or caustic potash soap, or one quart of soft soap in two gallons of soft water. When the soap is dissolved pour the solution into the sprayer, adding two gallons of kerosene. Then pump into itself until the compound has the consistency of buttermilk and its bulk has increased to nearly five gallons. This is the stock solution. For spraying dilute two parts of the stock with nine or ten parts of soft water. This is a never failing remedy against the aphis, onion thrips and other sucking insects. Biting insects, too, will succumb if the spray touches them.

Least Waste of Cream.

If the milk is separated immediately after it is drawn, and before the animal warmth has time to escape, there will be the least possible waste of cream.

AFTER-CARE OF STRAWBERRY

Special Attention Required for Future Production After the Crop Has Been Gathered.

After a strawberry crop is gathered the plants will require special cultural attention if they are to remain for the production of berries the succeeding year, says Michigan Farmer. The limited cultivation possible while the crop is developing in the spring is not sufficient to keep down weeds, so that under ordinary conditions these are present in a liberal number and generous size and demand removal by the time one can get to them after the harvest.

Old plants that have spent their energy will only obstruct the chances of the patch for another season. These need not be cut out with weeds. The soil, stirred but little and packed hard by the repeated tramplings of the pickers, is in a poor state to begin the growth of new plants and ripen another crop of berries.

Deep and frequent cultivation is the only way to put soil in condition, and if it lacks in the elements of fertility there should be added and worked into the soil a quantity of well-rotted manure or commercial fertilizers if the former is lacking, or both, to replenish the plant food taken out by the last crop. After this has been done the old crowns will send out runners in every direction.

If these are permitted to establish themselves at random it would be but a short time till all trace of the old rows is obliterated. The prevention lies in training the new plants into rows corresponding to those occupied by the old plants. This is done by following a special method of culture. Run a horse plow about six inches from the center of each row on both sides, throwing the soil away from the row, thus leaving an undisturbed portion one foot wide.

STORAGE HOUSE FOR APPLES

Structure as Shown in Illustration Is Partially Underground and No Refrigeration Needed

Where apples are produced on a large scale it generally pays the grower to have storage houses of his own, for then he is able to hold his fruit and put it on the market whenever he pleases. The accompanying illustration shows the exterior of a good structure for such a purpose. Depending on size and locality where erected, it will cost from $1,500 to $2,000. Dimensions about 35 by 40 feet, though it may be built larger or smaller as desired. It is a two-story—that is, it has a lower and upper floor, the former being partly underground. No ice or artificial refrigeration of any kind whatever is used, rather the temperature is controlled by means of the windows and the ventilator on top.

Apple Storage House.

Inside the house is boarded with matched lumber on the studs and closely sealed on top of this, in addition to which the ceiling is heavily painted. The outside is covered, first, with a sheathing of inch lumber, followed by a layer of building paper and the whole then covered with novelty siding. This, of course, seems like putting a great deal of material into the walls, but it is the only way to make them impregnable to heat and cold, thus insuring the safe keeping of the fruit stored within.

Insecticide for Summer.

Arsenate of lead is the leading insecticide for summer use. The formula is as follows: Eight pounds of arsenate of lead; fifty gallons water, or Bordeaux mixture. Arsenate of lead is in the form of a thick white paste, which dissolves readily in water. It adheres to the foliage for a long time and does not "burn" the leaves. For codling moth (apple forms) and plum curculio, also for canker worm, tent caterpillar and all insects which eat the leaves.

Picking Cantaloupes.

Just the right stage at which to pick melons or cantaloupes must be learned by practice. The netting on a cantaloupe is one indication of when it is ready to ship, according to distance from market, the netting will stand out and be pretty white for a five-days' journey; for close by it may be yellower and the stem ready to slip.

HORTICULTURAL NOTES

The effectiveness of sprays and emulsions is gained only by regular application.

Packages should be of full measure. To fall short in measure is to provoke a customer.

Fruit not perfect enough for other uses may be made into cider and then into vinegar.

The taste for good fruit may be so cultivated that it will be had, even at a larger price.

First-class fruit in first-class shape will probably create an inquiry for more of the same kind.

If you have a poor seedling pear or apple tree it may be entirely made over by top grafting.

A large orchard poorly planted and poorly tended will not produce as good results as fewer trees well cultivated.

Better ship fruit a little green than over-ripe because it deteriorates quickly after being packed and placed in hot cars and warehouses.

One of the good qualities of orchard grass is that it is ready to cut exactly with red clover or about a week earlier than timothy.

Health & Beauty Hints

By Katherine Morton

The most telling charm a girl can have is a sweet voice, and yet how often, alas, is the quality of the voice utterly ignored by young people. One hears the terrible twang indigenous to this country issuing from kissable coral lips, bears maids in the finest raiment speaking with the hoarseness of ravens or with voices as badly managed as those of monkeys. Yet there are elocutionists for training the voice to honeyed notes and the owner of the dulcet voice is a power in every circle of society. For although the voice is the easiest of all the points of woman's beauty to train into ways of loveliness it generally happens that the low, exquisitely timbered and beautifully used voice goes with the superior nature.

The deaf speak discordantly because they cannot hear the manner in which they are pitching their voices. So hearing is needed for voice training and it is possible to cultivate its sensitiveness with very simple home methods. Listen to all the beautifully pitched voices that come your way and then go into your room and practice with the contrast of your own naturally speaking voice. You will see your mistakes in short order, and by keeping the error in mind as important to your charm you will soon find yourself imitating the lovely voice, first copying the manner in which single words are uttered and then essaying some whole phrase caught up from the voice melodious. Little by little you will get the right inflections, and then somehow you will grasp at last the spiritual side of human speech. The feeling of words will appear and you will utter them in the right manner, telling your fairy tale with the right touch of gayety and your tale of sorrow with due solemnity.

According to voice specialists the commonest defect in young people is the pitching of the voice too high, and this is accompanied by a nervous tension which holds the throat taut and strained. The breath is short and hurried which cuts its overtones and destroys the vibrations. So the high pitch must first be overcome, and since reserve breath and a wholesome state of the throat and nose are needed these organs and the lungs must receive their due share of attention. The simplest breathing exercises, taken quite twice a day in a full and rhythmic manner, will undoubtedly improve a defective voice through the help the exercise lends to the vocal cords. Deep breathing, too, is often advised for bashfulness and stammering, those two great banes of timid youth which if not overcome in time will sometimes last until life's end.

For the girl whose general health is none of the best and whose voice soon wears out with class recitations, a diet of molasses and coarse bread is to be recommended. Sweet milk and buttermilk will also be of much benefit, while a raw egg, beaten up with a little lemon juice and taken before breakfast is almost certain to ward off hoarseness during the day. Raw eggs are very healing and feeding to the throat and lungs, and should be given far oftener to undernourished young people, whose very delicacy makes them ready victims to lung and throat diseases.

Anything which interferes with the general health will affect the beauty and strength of the voice, and since the membrane of throat and nose is so delicate it must always be given immediate care in time of trouble—or, better still, be kept in a healthy state with the frequent use of antiseptic washes.

But a lot of the ugliness in youthful voices comes from bad habits alone. The young people are not corrected for their vocal errors in time, they are allowed to sing at too early an age, they sleep and sit in rooms too hot and dry, they have the example of other badly trained children, or get the habit from their tone-deaf elders. But it is never too late for the girl who has been neglected in this way to improve herself if she will only realize that a sweet, well modulated voice is one of woman's greatest fascinations and that all her success in life attainment lies in herself.

New Ruffles.

Many new ruffles have appeared this spring. Foremost as a novelty is a soft taffeta in shot colorings edged all around with a broad frayed-out ruche of the silk, and another has a taffeta center and a soft marabout edging.

The neck ruche—or ruffle—now goes quite closely round, and is charming in ostrich feathers, just slightly curled, and the most amenable colors are black and white, ivory or gray—the latter mixed with white or in some pale self tone.

A neck ruffle with ostrich feathers with triple ends, finished with tassels, is effective when thrown over the shoulder, and the broad scarfs of marabout mounted on soft satin are not only becoming but of real utility.

New Stole.

To make the plainest of blouses look smart there is a new stole of Irish lace which has been causing not a little comment. It goes around the neck and finishes with only one band in the front. On each side from the shoulder to the belt is a dainty frill of English embroidery on fine lawn. Instead of the embroidery Valenciennes or Cluny lace may be substituted.

Social Forms and Entertainments

From a Masculine Reader.

I, as a young man, have found many helpful suggestions in your space in the paper, so I ask your help now.

I have a birthday about the middle of the month and would like to have a few friends in. Would this be proper for a young man to do?

What would you place on the invitations?

What would you serve that would not make too much work?

What could we do for amusement, as they do not allow card playing at home and there is not enough room to dance?—Art.

It is good to know that we have readers among the men in our big family. It makes us feel really worth while. It will be perfectly proper for you to entertain on your birthday, and I think as such affairs should be very informal that I would just phone the invitations or ask the friends when I saw them. All you need have at an evening party will be ice cream and a birthday cake. I am sorry you cannot have either card playing or dancing as both are such satisfactory means of entertaining. I fear you will have to rely on guessing contests or some of the schemes that I have in the paper each week.

New Games Requested.

A crowd of children ages from twelve to fifteen "play out," as we call it, nearly every night at different homes, and our favorite game was clay in and clay out, but now we are tired of that, and wish you would kindly publish some new games.—J. B. S.

When I was your age our great game was "Hide And Go Seek" and "I Spy." Do not tell any one but a party of grown up children played these self same games not long ago out in the moonlight. Of course one of the real children was having a birthday party, and to celebrate the achievement of nine "long" years the entire family, including parents, uncles and aunts, joined in the after-supper pastimes. It was the dignified college professor who proposed "Hide and Seek," and a jolly game it was. I am sure I do not need to tell any of you how to play it.

To a "Faithful Reader."

A man should take care of his own hat, laying it on the table or hat rack. Just say, "I enjoyed the dance very much;" its hardly fair to deprive a man of a dance, so explain to him and tell him to fill his program for that number. I do not approve of couples leaving by themselves and going other places during a dance. I cannot tell you how to keep up your correspondence if the young man does not care to write. It is not necessary to shake hands with everyone, a hostess usually does in her own house. It is polite to rise when guests enter the room. You know I am old fashioned, I do not like a young couple to go off on long jaunts by themselves. Neither do I approve of "touching hands." You will never be sorry for not doing these things.

Impossible to Say.

Kindly tell me the best cook book in use. I have several, but fail to find so many things in them.—H. M. O.

There are so many good books, it is impossible to make a choice, even if I were permitted to give names and addresses here, as I am not, will you kindly send me a self-addressed stamped envelope, in care of the paper?

Reply to an "Orphan Blonde."

You certainly did right in telling your aunt, and I hope you will never go with that boy again. He acted most ungentlemanly. A girl of fourteen or younger, as you say you are, has no occasion to be out so late or to have beaux (as you call them). It is plain that the boy you mention does not know how to act.

The Party Call.

I would like to know how soon after a wedding ceremony or reception, luncheon or party should one return a call?—M. H. T.

Ceremonious decrees of older days decreed that "party" calls should be made within two weeks after the event, but in this busy age within a month will do.

"Faith's" Answers.

By all means ride horseback and use any saddle you choose personally.

You have gotten your growth early. Large people, somehow, are taken for older than they are, especially young girls.

Your dresses should be a bit below your shoe tops. Come again.

Reply to "Little Brown Eyes."

It is impossible to tell you how to gain a man's love. It is a man's place to win a girl, and her privilege to accept. Look in the dictionary for the meaning of the names.

Reply to C. S.

My dear, go very slowly with a man who drinks; it's dangerous business marrying a man to reform him. I cannot advise you to do it.

MADAME MERRI.

TEXT TAKEN TOO LITERALLY

Ten-Year-Old Julia Gets Into Bad Graces of Mother by Giving Tramp a Half-Dollar.

"Be not forgetful to entertain strangers; for thereby some have entertained angels unawares."

The foregoing quotation is from chapter xiii, verse 2, Book of Hebrews, and it is introduced solely because it constitutes a vital part of this story. Julia is ten years old and she goes to Sunday school. It appears that on a recent occasion the Sunday school teacher had considerable to say about this matter of "entertaining angels unawares." Anyway it made a deep impression with Julia.

A few days after the lesson Julia's mother left her in charge of the house for a few hours. When the mother returned she went to a particular cup in the cupboard to extract therefrom one-half dollar. In this cup is kept the family pin money, and Julia's mother knew that she had put 50 cents there before she had gone out. But the half dollar was gone. There was an expression of anxiety on Julia's face and mother scented mischief.

"Did you take that money?" asked the mother, somewhat severely.

Julia broke into tears. "I gave it to a man that came to the back door," sobbed the little girl.

"Gave it to a man!" exclaimed the mother. "What for?"

"I thought he might be God," tearfully replied Julia.—Kansas City Star.

BURNED AND ITCHED BADLY

5.9 Lincoln Park Blvd., Chicago, Ill.—"A year ago I received a very severe burn on my left arm. I caught cold in it and it was all sore and ulcerated. The sore was as large as a silver dollar. It was all red and inflamed and had pus running out of it. I suffered terribly from burning pain; could not sleep for two weeks. It burned and itched so badly. I applied —— Salve, —— Salve and a salve my druggist recommended as his own, but got no relief. I then commenced using the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I bathed the burned parts with Cuticura Soap and applied the Cuticura Ointment on a linen bandage. I got relief from the first, and my arm healed nicely. I was soon able to be at work again. Had I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment at first I would have avoided lots of suffering." (Signed) Harry Junke, Mar. 8, 1912.

Wild Ones.

Charles Grafly, the noted sculptor, was talking at his summer home at Folly Grove, near Gloucester, about the quaint humor of the Gloucester fishermen.

"In Gloucester one day," he said, "as I idled among the shipping, an old salt began to narrate his experiences to me.

"'Wunst,' he said, 'I was shipwrecked in the South sea, and thar I come across a tribe of wild women without tongues.'

"'Wild women without tongues!' said I. 'Goodness! How could they talk?'"

Modern Education

> "There is nothing in all the world so important as children; nothing so interesting. If you wish to be of any real use in the world, do something for children. If you ever yearn to be truly wise, study children."
> —David Starr Jordan

Twentieth century education is a very different question from what education was a generation since or even ten or fifteen years ago. The educational world is having to adjust itself to new conditions of living everywhere and especially in the United States where the industrial changes have been so rapid. There has seemed to be an idea in the minds of many in the past that education meant a knowledge of certain subjects which were absolutely fixed as essential for an educated man or woman. That is, in order to enter the ranks of the educated or cultured one must have studied certain branches and be able to talk about them in a tolerably familiar way. And the whole course of instruction from the bottom up was arranged to carry the boy or girl on step by step into the ranks of the educated, which has meant college education.

But it has seemed so impossible for even a college educated person to include in his course everything which an intelligent man or woman ought to know about, that people have been wondering for a good while what was absolutely essential and what was not. Ex-President Eliot of Harvard has even gone so far as to say that the one indispensable thing is a reasonably good use of the English language. But if that test were applied today the number who would pass it would be surprisingly small.

Certain facts have been revealed lately concerning our school attendance which have made people think that the old ideals of education were not filling the bill. This is a day of investigation and statistics and certain scientific investigators have gotten after the schools and found out that 50% of our children drop out of school altogether between the sixth and eighth grades. That is, half of them do not even complete their elementary schooling. A very small proportion go on to high school; in the first high school year perhaps there are fifteen out of 100 who started in at the first grade, but by the fourth year there are fewer yet to graduate, only six or seven. When it comes to going on any further there are only three or four who ever think of it, and one or two from every hundred children who ever graduate from college.

There is something else that has been brought to the light of day, which has made us wonder about our schools. It has been found out that these boys and girls, who drop out with the fifth, sixth, seventh and eighth grades and those who stop with the first and second year in high school, are most of them anxious to get to work, but the only work they can do is known as "juvenile occupations." That is, a young boy doesn't like to go to school and his father lets him ask the superintendent for his "working papers." What can he do? Be an elevator boy or run on errands perhaps. But in most cases this does not mean working up to a better job next year, the boy doesn't know enough, he doesn't know enough arithmetic, he doesn't know enough English, his penmanship isn't good enough, and so he has to stick to the same mechanical thing he started in with, running on errands or tying up bundles. And by the time he has done this two or three years until he is seventeen or eighteen it is said that in the majority of cases the boy is unfit to do a man's job, because his mind has been hurt by not developing as it should in those formative years. Even if a boy stops school and goes to work on a farm he is unfitted to be a very good farmer, in these days of scientific farming, unless he can read intelligently and figure accurately and understand something about the science of the soils and what is going on in the markets of the country. To be nothing but a "chore boy," and not a very good one at that, is not an inspiring occupation for a young man.

And the same thing is true of girls. In the Manhattan Trade School for Girls in New York City there are three grades of girls who have stopped going to school. The most promising class are those who can understand millinery and dressmaking intelligently and learn how to do it fairly well so that they can get tolerably good positions in milliners' or dressmakers' establishments. Then there is a second grade that is not up to the first and must always take secondary positions even if they are helped, can never expect to do any work that is called skilled. But the third class is made up of girls who do not know enough even to enter such occupations and who can only hope for such jobs as pasting boxes together or cutting strips of paper for lamp shades or making articles sold at the ten cent counters. Some of these girls do not know enough arithmetic to measure accurately with the yard-stick, or enough of anything to make a success of it.

This is why we have a compulsory education law and a Child Labor Bureau just started in Washington, to look into these things and prevent as many children as possible from ruining their lives by not going to school long enough. And we are also having a very serious investigation of the subjects that are taught and how they are taught, to see if our schools are really preparing boys and girls to meet life in the best way when they do stay in them until they graduate.

This is something everybody ought to be interested in, fathers and mothers especially, teachers and board members and every citizen, because the schools belong to all the people and are for all the people. It is not just a few in the big cities, like Cleveland and New York, who are especially enlightened, who should be interested in the advanced movements in education, but the people in the smaller towns and in the country as well. For it has been found out that less than one-half of our population in 1910 lived in cities of more than 2500 and most of that half live in cities which would not be called large.

And what is so interesting as our boys and girls and upon what can we spend our thought and energies to better purpose than in helping them to get the best possible start in life?

LAURA H. WILD,
Lake Erie College.

Repels Attack of Death.

"Five years ago two doctors told me I had only two years to live." This startling statement was made by Stillman Green, Malachite, Col. "They told me I would die of consumption. It was up to me then to try the best lung medicine and I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery. It was well I did, for today I am working and believe I owe my life to this great throat and lung cure that has cheated the grave of another victim." It's folly to suffer with coughs, colds, or other throat and lung troubles now. Take the cure that's safest. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free at Gehring's pharmacy.

CONCORD

Mrs. Wealthy Loomis and William Hardy have been recent visitors at Mrs. Ella Radcliffe's.

Mrs. George Miller, who teaches school in Thompson was at home over Sunday.

B. P. Warren and wife of South Mentor were recent visitors at A. C. Warren's.

Mrs. J. H. Winchell and daughter Bessie spent Friday at Forrest Chamberlain's in Mentor.

A car load of coal is to be unloaded at Concord this week for the use of the schools.

Eugene Miller was at home over Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Winchell of Hambden, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Crellin of Leroy and Mr. and Mrs. Forrest Chamberlain and daughter, Jessica of Mentor, were Sunday visitors at J. H. Winchell's.

A much needed improvement has taken place at Wilson's Corners. The brush which for a long time has been a regular wilderness, has been cut and burned on the commons by the Town Hall and it now looks quite respectable.

Not much going on in Concord, everyone is at home working so they can get their work along where it can be left and all can go to the Fair this week.

There never was a time when people appreciated the real merits of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy more than now. This is shown by the increase in sales and voluntary testimonials from persons who have been cured by it. If you or your children are troubled with a cough or cold give it a trial and become acquainted with its good qualities. For sale by all dealers.

To the Guys of '75.

Stand your ground; don't fire unless fired upon, but if they mean to have a war let it begin here.—Capt. John Parker, at Concord, 1775.

BEST WISHES

REV. T. P. PHILLIPS HONORED BY MANY FRIENDS

"He is One of the Best Friends We Have Ever Known," Says John H. Dayton

It is seldom that a minister retires from a pastorate with so many earnest words of praise as were extended to Rev. T. P. Phillips last Friday night at the banquet held at the Cowles House.

Among the speakers were: Judge George H. Shepherd, Judge G. N. Tuttle, John H. Dayton and Rev. E. Lee Howard. Others took part in making the evening a most enjoyable one to the retiring minister.

Rev. E. Lee Howard's address seemed to voice the sentiment of all present. His closing words were as follows: "His colleagues admire, respect and love him, he has been a faithful pastor."

Rev. Phillips response to all these expressions of good will was short and characteristic of the man: "I appreciate this expression of good will marvelously, and I shall look back to this hour with a gladness in my heart. My brothers I thank you for this expression of kindly feeling."

The occasion was made more enjoyable by the presence of the Citizens band. The serenade was greatly appreciated. Mr. Lang of the Cowles house invited the band boys to gather round the tables and enjoy the good things for which the hotel, under Mr. Lang's management, is becoming famous.

Poor appetite is a sure sign of impaired digestion. A few doses of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets will strengthen your digestion and improve your appetite. Thousands have been benefited by taking these Tablets. Sold by all dealers.

Mrs. Sylvia Cody was an over Sunday guest of the Benjamin family.

Death of Mr. Bissell

Mr. E. M. Bissell passed away Thursday morning about seven o'clock. Mr. Bissell had been an invalid for over six years and his death was not unexpected. He had reached the ripe old age of 82 years, was a kind and devoted husband and father. He leaves a wife and three children, Mr. Frank Bissell of Cincinnati, Mr. Joe Bissell of Cheyenne, Wyom., and Mrs. A. B. Hickok, of Toledo, Ohio. His wife and daughter were the only ones present when the end came, Joe arrived Friday evening, but the son Frank was unable to come.

The funeral services were held at his late home Sunday afternoon at 2:30, conducted by Rev. Freeman, the pastor of the church to which he had belonged for over ... years. Mr. Bissell was born in Madison and his whole life has been spent in this place. An honest and loyal citizen, a kind neighbor and his precepts were always the "Golden Rule." He was highly respected by all who knew him. Burial was in Middle Ridge cemetery. Friends from out of town who attended the funeral were: Mrs. Frank Bissell, Cincinnati, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Hickok and Clarence and daughter Ruth of Toledo, Joe Bissell of Wyom., and other friends from Geneva and Ashtabula.

BACHELOR IS EXPOSED

TWO SPECIES, THE TROGLODYTE AND BUTTERFLY, KNOWN.

Their Unnatural Civil Condition Regarded by Woman as a Reproach to Her Charms and Reflection on Her Skill.

The bachelor is a man living in a singular and unnatural state; a social buccaneer, fawned on and followed by dowagers, feared and feted by daughters; whose type in all the ages has been considered a danger to society, a threat to civilization, a scandal to his race, a man to be chased, captured and chastened.

There are two species of bachelors—the troglodyte or hard-shell bachelor, and the butterfly or temporary bachelor. The former has his lair in a flat, his habitat in a club, and his atmosphere is smoky, alcoholic and cynical; the latter is a flutterer in drawing rooms, an habitue at four o'clock teas and ensembles, a smiling, elusive, sartorial male creature, who is netted and bobbed in due season. There is a large and negligible genus of male creatures who are merely quasi bachelors, men who are reluctantly single, and are captured and led away by any petticoat who happens along.

The bachelor is the pursuit and prey of woman, who regards his civil condition as a reproach to her charms and a reflection on her skill, and her aim is to snare him and lead him into captivity to the end that she may acquire a house, a home, a husband and a helot to harry, hector, bumble and humanize. To survive long in freedom a bachelor must be gifted with unusual wisdom and unwonted weariness. The female of the species camps on his trail eternally wise, wily and wistful, attentive, attractive and alluring, smiling in his face, praising his talents, luring him into corners where dangers lurk and traps are sprung, and where the helpless old he bachelor is hypnotized, held, hooked, haltered and harnessed, and where he speaks instead of holding his peace. Then in the meshes of his slim, silken, soft-eyed feline captor, the bachelor is led away to the church, tied up in a knot and reduced to serfdom. Then is his glory departed. The chase done, the quarry seized, he becomes merely a payer of bills, a honker of waists, a scalp hanging at a slender belt, pitied by those who chased and failed and stigmatized as a silly old fool as he is led around by the Diana who hunted and haltered him.

As a bachelor he was the envy of his sex, the desire of women, the welcomed of spinsters, the sought-after of mothers, the cynosure of eye, the inspirer of sighs, a lion among the ladies. As a benedict, none is so poor as to do him reverence; he is an ox in the yoke, a broken branch, a holder of hats, a carrier of cloaks, a buttoner of gloves, a shadow in the procession, a mere married man. Sic transit gloria bachelorum.—Life.

The Story of Scotch.

Scotch was a short-nosed collie, with a slight strain of shepherd blood and had a face that was exceptionally expressive and pleasing. When grown he was a trifle larger than the average dog and was surprisingly agile and powerful for his size. His coat was a shaggy, silky black, with feet, tip of tail, and breast of pure white.

Talking to animals appears to make them gentler and more responsive. Scotch never tired of listening to me and I often talked to him as though he were a child. He came to understand many of the words used. If I said "hatchet," he hastened to bring it; if "dre," he at once endeavored to discover where it was. Cheerfully and intelligently he tried to help me, and early became efficient in driving cattle, horses or burros. Instinctively he was a heeler and with swift heel nips quickly awakened and gave direction to lazy or unwilling critters.—Country Life in America.

How They Kept Their Word.

If you happened to be in the town of Scituate and should see two men engaged in an ordinary conversation with the exception that they were standing back to back and looking directly away from each other, you may be sure that they are the Litchfield brothers. And the wherefore of their strange relative positions originated many years ago, when both were young and lived at home with the old folks.

And although the passing years have obliterated the "casus belli," they still adhere to this traditional show of carrying out the letter of their passion fraught resolution.—Boston Record.

Death Notice.

"Old Skads lost every cent he had in the world yesterday." "Gee! His heirs will be furious." "Oh, I don't think so." "How'd he lose it?" "He died."—Houston Post.

ORIGIN OF THE WORD "STEEL"

Ancients Made It, but They Are Said Not Actually to Have Named It.

"We do not know much," writes C. W. Ernst in the Bulletin of the American Iron and Steel association. "We do not know where the word 'steel' came from, nor do we know the original meaning. A leading authority claims the word as having started in England; he is sure mistaken, as the records show.

"When the word first appeared in English or Anglo-Saxon it had become a proper name on the continent, showing the general diffusion of the term. We are equally disappointed in the Greek and Roman classics. They knew how to harden soft iron, but had no name for the finished product we call steel.

"The Greeks obtained a good brand of steel from the Chalybes at Sinope; that brand they called 'chalyhs' or 'chalybos,' and the Romans adopted the term. But the common people did not use the word, which occurs mainly in poetry. It was so used by Aeschylus about 475 B. C. and in Latin by Virgil a few years before the Christian era.

"When the writers of good Latin prose wished to convey the idea of steel they were apt to use the word 'acies,' which means a sharp edge or a sharp point. In the third century of our era we find the word 'acierie' and later still the word 'aciarium' whence the French 'acier,' meaning steel.

"The word 'steel' has not been found prior to the eighth century. It occurs in the so-called Epinal gloss, where 'steeli' is given as the Anglo-Saxon equivalent of the late Latin 'accearium' just mentioned. Students wishing to verify this may consult Henry Sweet's edition of the gloss, 1883, page 2.

"At that time the word was common on the continent and had become a proper name, both as simple 'stahl' or in compounds like 'stalhart.' We have no word like 'steel' before the eighth century, we have no trace of the French 'acier' before the third century. Yet men made steel in the days of Homer and before his time in India. But even in the best days of Greece and Rome they hardly knew cast iron. Their iron statues were made of wrought iron and only trivial examples of cast iron are of classical antiquity.

"To 'temper,' meaning to harden wrought iron by heating and then dipping it in cold water, is a term used by Pliny. The process of 'tempering,' of course, is much older. It is mentioned in Homer and may have been known long before."

Stocking Renovations.

Skill with the needle saves money at every turn, and in respect to few articles of apparel does this fact become more apparent than in the case of stockings. Even when stocking feet are past re-mending with darns it is possible to give the "leg" portions a new lease of life by providing them with new "feet," cut from the "legs" of similar hose. The objection frequently put forward that the seams which join the "feet" to the "legs" are uncomfortable in wear, is avoided if the following method is adopted:

From the pattern obtained by cutting off the out-worn "feet," cut new pieces from the "calf" portion of another older pair. Join the seam at the back of the heel with a run and backstitch. Then place the edges of the seam flat and stitch them down with the fine herring-boning.

Fix the "foot" in position on the "leg," and work from the center of the heel towards the toe, on each side, with a run and backstitch. Great care must be taken to get the toe portion to fit quite accurately. Then herringbone the raw edges down flat as in the case of the heel seam. Press the seams with a hot iron.

Brought Death to Pigeons.

At a meeting of the Linnean society of London, Professor Poulton presiding, a letter was read from Herr Paul Scherdlin, as follows: "For hundreds of years pigeons have nested on the spire of Strassburg cathedral. They increased so much that many attempts have been made to exterminate them, but in vain. During the last few years there has been a sudden and startling diminution in the number of these cathedral pigeons. I am of the opinion that this manifest reduction is due to the asphalting of the streets round the cathedral. Between the stone sets of the pavement the pigeons were able to pick up food in quantity. In consequence of the asphalting and daily watering and cleansing of the places in the immediate neighborhood the birds have gone."

Indication of Character.

Insincerity in dress is a very good indication of other kinds of insincerity, and if a woman's lingerie does not accord with her dresses, you may be pretty sure that her actions will not accord with her words.

There is, besides, nothing so satisfying as the feeling of being well dressed all the way through. There is nothing which gives such perfect poise and grace as the consciousness of well-fitting undergarments and a petticoat of which one need not be ashamed. The women who puts all her spending money into the "things that show," feathered hats, silk gowns, chiffon blouses, etc., and is willing to go about wearing the cheapest of underskirts and stockings, is rather like the hypocrite who could carry a whole load of secret sins hidden beneath a smiling countenance.

Worse.

"The children need something new every week. You have no children, hence you can't understand." "I understand, old chap; I have an automobile."

Only Making It Worse.

"You must take exercise," said the physician, "and, by all means, worry less. Play golf." "Doctor," replied the patient, "you mean well, but a man who plays my kind of a golf game can't help worrying."

BOYS AND GIRLS

WHO MADE EXHIBITS AT FAIR HAVE MADE RECORD.

The County Y. M. C. A. Part of the Show Eclipsed Anything of the Kind Ever Attempted.

We publish herewith a list of the young people in the county who took part, through the County Y. M. C. A., in making the most remarkable exhibit of farm produce ever shown by young people. In fact no one feature of the fair created so much enthusiasm as this evidence of well directed effort on the part of young people.

While the list of names published includes those who won prizes, all are truly entitled to share in the honors. The difference in exhibits was not great. Every boy and girl who made the effort, showing his and her willingness to try, earned and received the applaudits of older people.

The prizes are given not only on the best display at the fair but include the best yield and the best written report on the growth of the crop. Hence a boy whose exhibit did not win first, second or third place at the fair may still win a prize from the yield of his crop, and the completeness of his report or composition.

Poultry contest—Ford S. Hicks, first place, Virgil Titterington, second place; Herbert Spaller, third place. Special mention—Harry Frelick, Cecil Covert, Elizabeth Marriott, Dwight Bland, Robert Hardy, Hilma Killenen, Eddie King, Hiram Brown, Leo Sessler, Harvey Sigsby, Wm. Ahlstrom, Leonard Colby, Florence Reed, Esther Casler, Howard Crittenden, Frances Freshley, Nathan Stromberg, Irwin Shinner, Daniel Helmerdinger, Bryant Horton, Edw. Carpenter, Flora Helmerdinger, Edgar Hull, Harold S. Murray.

Onion contest—Clyde Foster, first place; Lyle Shaw, first place; Winslow Spafler, second place; Harry Hanks, third place. Special mention—Tracy Ruggles, Glenn Murphy, Donald Frink, Wm. Roth, Carl Forbes, Ben Forbes.

Corn contest—Donald Moore, Jack Hyland, Leon Genamore, Earl Johnson, Frank Heidsick, W. E. Genung, Raymond Cowles, Lewis Schupp, Cliff Whiting, Hiram Coffinier, Russell Walborn, Samuel Morley, Maurice Covert, Eva Ely, Lily Randasoje, Harold Morehouse, Johnie Boe, Leonard Colby, Maynard Freshley, Chas. Wakelee, Albert Pike, John Maier, Hubert Sherman, Robert Child, Karl Heidsick, Hallie Rose, Harold Walborn, Harold Covert, G. Earl Scott, Alfred Gaffney.

Potato contest—Herbert Chapman, Asa Logan, Ethel Smith, Vernon Chapman, Harry Port, Albert Parks, Lawrence Brick, Raymond Smith, Merritt Johnson, Clark Ferguson, John Wit, Paul Winter, Ernest Chifson, Melvin Wilson, Harold Merlin, Harland Kingsley, Edna Smith, G. Earl Scott, Harley Cowell, Harry McGee, Arthur Churchward, Earl Johnson, Lula Chase, Harold Densmore, Horatio Kile, Wade Brewster, Anthony Sivnn.

Bread—Dana Church, 1st; Hazel Jewell, 2nd.

Crochet lace—Elena Horvath, 1st.

Sofa pillow—Harriet Morley, 1st.

Repels Attack of Death.

"Five years ago two doctors told me I had only two years to live." This startling statement was made by Stillman Green, Malachite, Col. "They told me I would die of consumption. It was up to me then to try the best lung medicine and I began to use Dr. King's New Discovery. It was well I did, for today I am working and believe I owe my life to this great throat and lung cure that has cheated the grave of another victim." It's folly to suffer with coughs, colds, or other throat and lung troubles now. Take the cure that's safest. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free at Gehring's pharmacy.

ABOUT PEOPLE AND PLACES

The calamity howler of 1896 would not hold a candle in a contest with the Calamity Jane of 1912.

—o—

Father must now brush up on his algebra or the young hopeful who is entering high school will ... him out.

—o—

The Dickey boys of Jackson street are building a new house on Mentor avenue opposite the W. B. Cole nursery.

—o—

Frank Ganiefs of Willoughby was at the fair Friday and like many another Willoughbyite was enthusiastic over the big show.

—o—

Mr. H. G. Edwards of Concord won first prize at the fair on a peck of potatoes. Mrs. Edwards carried away a first prize for a quilt.

—o—

The Bull Moosers of the 19th district met in Cleveland and nominated State Senator W. S. Harris of Saybrook, well known here, for Congress.

—o—

Dr. A. J. Fisher of this city attached a White automobile belonging to H. L. Frost of Windsor, who, Dr. Fisher claims, owes her $150 for board and lodgings.

—o—

Bert Huntoon of Montville carried away quite a bunch of blue and red tickets in connection with his exhibition of hogs at the fair. He showed a fine breed of Du Roc Reds.

—o—

Wouldn't it be too funny to see Frank Crofoot leading a progressive choir with "Onward Christian Soldier." But Frank is just versatile enough to do it if it will make votes for Teddy.

—o—

The Willoughby Canning factory is taking in all the tomatoes that can be bought in that vicinity at fifty cents per one hundred pounds, and the fruit is coming in by the car load from outside points.

—o—

One good feature of the fair was the bringing together of people, old friends who had not seen each other for years. A common expression—"Well, how do you do, I have not seen you for a long time."

—o—

Well drillers are at work on the farm of H. A. Everett near Kirtland, and have a contract to make a thorough drill test for oil or gas, and if necessary will put down one of the deepest wells in the county.

—o—

Every one will agree that one thing necessary for the next fair is an "Information Bureau" where every particle of information about the big show can be given out by well informed men and women.

—o—

Louis Webster, who is the L. Webster of L. Webster & Son, grocers, of this city, has returned from Panama, and will remain in Painesville some little time before returning to his position on the Panama canal project.

—o—

It is a coincidence that H. G. Harrington and J. A. Beidler, who were rival candidates for Congress twelve years ago, should die within a week of each other. Mr. Harrington was about six years older than Mr. Beidler.

—o—

The Ohio State Journal observes with a measure of truth which the average man will appreciate at this season of the year: "If Lloyds should go into the business of insuring cantaloupes, doubtless the odds would be fixed at about 1 to 7."

—o—

Judge Nye and Martin A. Tuttle got busy when the Y. M. C. A. and the Grange gave the hospital all those good things to eat. They saw to it that nothing got away. It is claimed that the Judge was a little excited over the good luck.

—o—

It seemed good to see our "gentlemen farmers" and the plain country farmers rubbing shoulders, and to notice how many things the two class of farmers have in common. Put a tailor made suit on the country fellow and he would look much like his city brother.

—o—

A valuable feature of "Lake County Illustrated" will be a new map of the County, made especially for this book. Those who desire copies of the publication and map should send in their orders at an early date. Phone the Herald.

—o—

There is a lively race on in Lake county between the Democrat and Republican parties. It is to test which party can furnish Wilson with the greater number of votes. Already there are a number of old moss-back democrats kicking because of the company they are compelled to keep.

—o—

T. D. West of Perry, and W. B. Cole of Painesville, are two of the best workers in helping to boost the horticultural part of the Lake county's first fair, and of course there were many others who took an important part in making this part of the show the great success that it was.

W. W. Thompson of Montville, a former resident of Painesville, came to the fair last week. On Thursday he found a pocket book containing many valuable papers. The pocket book belonged to a prominent business man of this city, who, it is claimed, was held up the night before and his pocket book and about twenty-two dollars in money taken.

—o—

After seeing the fine displays of grasses, grains, vegetables, fruits, flowers, chickens, pigs, sheep, cattle and horses at the fair, and all raised right here in Lake County, why will people chase all over the United States to hunt for better land and climate? This Lake Shore country has a lot of advantages and conveniences not found in many other sections.—Madison Echo.

—o—

An article entitled "Modern Education" by Laura H. Wild, of Lake Erie college, published in last week's Herald, was full of subject matter that deserves thought and reflection. The writer closes the article with this question: "And what is so interesting as our boys and girls and upon what can we spend our thought and energies to better purpose than in helping them to get the best possible start in life?"

—o—

Leroy Grange was given first prize on an exhibition of products at the county fair in competition with other township granges. Leroy township has always been considered about the poorest, agriculturally, of the Lake county townships and the display of fruits and vegetables was certainly a wonder. Leroy has no "gentlemen farmers" and not very much thoroughbred stock but when it comes to eatables, it is a world beater.

—o—

A church in Georgia, which had some cause to be dismayed by the scanty attendance at the Wednesday evening prayer-meeting, advertised recently that watermelons would be given free to all who should attend the meeting on the subsequent Wednesday. The supply of watermelons was a large one, but not any larger than was necessary, for the people simply packed themselves into the meeting-house. Some of us would prefer peaches or cantaloupes, but the idea is certainly progressive.

—o—

We clip this item from a prohibition paper and do not vouch for its truthfulness. But it reads good: "There is said to be only one policeman in all Iceland, which has a population of 78,000. This is one of the many things in the world due to booze—or, in this case, the absence of booze. The inhabitants are all total abstainers, making no alcoholic beverages themselves and permitting none to be imported. And in this Utopia there is not an illiterate person."

—o—

Wages are higher in Winnipeg than in Minneapolis, but for comparison we will call them the same—common labor $3 per day in either city. In Canada the laborer will buy a much better suit of clothing for $12 than he can get in the United States for $18. In the two countries, in trading labor for clothing, we have this result:

In Canada—
One suit of clothing, 4 days' work $12
One overcoat, 4 days' work .... 12
In the United States—
One suit of clothing, 6 days work $18
One overcoat, 6 days' work.... 18

—o—

Plans are being considered by the deputy supervisors of elections in this county for the division of some of the larger precincts. The precincts in Painesville and Perry township are too large and election officials are required to serve in some of these larger precincts for 24 hours on election day. In the larger cities no precinct contains over 250 voters while in this county some of the precincts have over 500 voters. Election officers in country precincts receive but $3.00 for their services on an election day and when 24 hours work is required it makes it a difficult matter to get competent men to serve on the boards.

Painesville as a Business Center Looks Good to McKeesport Man, Store to Open Soon

The United 5, 10 and 25 cent store known formerly as Warner's Bazaar, which recently went into the hands of an assignee, was leased on Monday afternoon to M. W. Meredith, of McKeesport, Pa.

Mr. Meredith is a former manager of a large chain of department stores and is well fitted to handle his new purchase.

The lease is for a term of five years, and it is the intention of Mr. Meredith to remodel the store and put an up-to-date and complete stock in the new institution.

PARCELS POST LAW

Will Be Operative January 1, 1913.

In response to many inquiries for information Senator Jonathan Bourne, Jr., chairman of the Senate Committee on Post Office and Post Roads has prepared the following summary of the new Parcels Post law, which will become effective January 1, 1913.

Any article is mailable if not over 11 pounds in weight nor more than 72 inches in length and girth combined nor likely to injure the mail or postal equipment or employes.

Flat rate of 1 cent per ounce up to 4 ounces regardless of distance.

|---|---|---|---|
| Rural route and city delivery | 05 | 01 | 15 |
| 50 mile zone | 05 | 03 | 35 |
| 150 mile zone | 06 | 04 | 46 |
| 300 mile zone | 07 | 05 | 57 |
| 600 mile zone | 08 | 06 | 68 |
| 1000 mile zone | 09 | 07 | 79 |
| 1400 mile zone | 10 | 09 | 1 00 |
| 1800 mile zone | 11 | 10 | 1 11 |
| Over 1800 miles | 12 | 12 | 1 32 |

The Postmaster General may make provision for indemnity, insurance, and collection on delivery, with additional charges for such services, and may, with the consent of the interstate commerce commission after investigation, modify rates, weights and zone distances when experience has demonstrated the need therefor.

UNIONVILLE

Mrs. J. P. Wisman and three children, of Mineral City, are visiting at E. L. Morris' while Rev. Wisman is attending the Methodist Conference in Cleveland.

Mrs. Harriet Harmon of Ashtabula and Mrs. Jennie Safford of Pique, who have been visiting Mrs. E. L. Morris have returned to Ashtabula. Mrs. Harmon to her home there, and Mrs. Safford to visit another niece, Mrs. E. R. Stanton.

Miss Retta Detling, who has been visiting her brother, Rev. W. C. Detling, has returned to her home in Cleveland.

Rev. and Mrs. W. C. Detling spent a few days in Cleveland last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan French have returned from a two weeks visit in Burton.

The Missionary entertainment which was to have been given in the Congregational church Sunday evening was postponed one week on account of the heavy rain.

Mrs. Babcock died Thursday a. m. at the home of her son, Mr. Frank Peck, after a few days' illness. She was 78 years old. Funeral was held at the home Saturday afternoon with burial in the cemetery here.

H. Roth of Harpersfield, while driving east to Geneva on North Ridge, Monday p. m., was struck by fast train and instantly killed. The buggy was smashed into kindling wood but the horse was unhurt. The body was badly bruised and cut. Mr. Roth had an aged wife and at least two sons in Cleveland. Burial will probably be in Cleveland, Mr. Roth being a Jew.

Mr. and Mrs. L. C. Kelsey and Mr. and Mrs. Averill drove to Painesville to the Fair on Wednesday.

Nearly every one in town went to the Fair on one day at least. Some who went on Wednesday were so pleased that they went again.

Mrs. E. R. Miller last week accompanied her mother who had spent the past year with her, to Chicago last week, on her way to her home in Salt Lake City. She would go to Omaha alone, where she was met by another daughter.

Miss Ethel Knaale of Oberlin was the guest of Miss Charlotte Forbes last week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Evans and two children of Jamaica Heights, N. Y. were on last week guests of Miss Mary Trunx.

Miss Laura Oleason has returned from a month's visit with friends and relatives in Grand Rapids, Mich.

We have just learned of the death of Mrs. Geo. Warner in Cleveland, last night, where she had been taking treatments at a hospital.

WICKLIFFE

Mr. Frank Sherman went to West Virginia last Sunday.

Mrs. Riley from Michigan has been a visitor at the Walkley home the past week.

Miss May Lynn spent Sunday with a friend in Cleveland.

Mrs. Hattie Hawthorne, South Euclid, spent the latter part of last week with Mrs. L. Oldfey.

Mrs. Mert Kellog went to Cleveland Monday to do some shopping.

Mr. George Garnett while coming from the Lake Co. Fair Friday, was robbed of his pocket book containing $5.00.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hardaker went to Cleveland to transact business last Saturday.

Quite a number of people from here attended the Lake Co. Fair last Wednesday. They all say the Fair was good.

Mr. Arthur Armington who was injured some time ago while riding his motorcycle in Willoughby, is able to be about now.

O. K.'S WEARING RELIGIOUS GARB

PRESIDENT TAFT SAYS TEACHERS IN INDIAN SCHOOLS NEED NOT REMOVE INSIGNIA.

UPHOLDS HIS REVOKING ORDER

Chief Executive of the United States Issues Statement in Which He Explains How Controversy Has Been Settled.

Washington, D. C.—President Taft has just given out a statement concerning the controversy over the wearing of religious garbs in Indian schools and explaining how it has been settled. Last January the then commissioner of Indian affairs, Robert G. Valentine, issued an order to superintendents of the schools directing that all insignia of any denomination be removed from the public rooms of the schools and that members of any denomination wearing a distinctive garb should not wear it while engaged in lay duties as government employes. The order was revoked by the president and the secretary of the interior investigated the question. The president's statement says in part:

Explains Controversy.

"In the first place it appears that all religious insignia have already been removed from the walls of government schools by the voluntary action of those who put them there before the schools were transferred to the government, and no question arises, therefore, with respect to such insignia and no order is necessary. The issue therefore is confined to the question whether those persons engaged in teaching Indians in the government Indian schools, and who are members of the government civil service, should be required to lay off their distinctive religious garb while they render service as government teachers. The secretary of the interior, after a very full and patient consideration, has reached the conclusion stated in a letter to the commissioner of Indian affairs, that the order ought not to be made and that those persons who are now engaged in teaching in government schools as members of the government civil service, and who are wearing the garb, should be permitted to remain in the service and while discharging their duties to wear the garb. [illegible] in this view and the order is revoked [illegible] not be revived.

Nonsectarian Teaching.

"The action of [illegible] of the interior [illegible] who are now engaged [illegible] teaching, although wearing a distinctive religious garb [illegible] tention strictly to pursue the policy hereafter of maintaining only nonsectarian teaching by government teachers in government schools and, on the other hand, to leave to the various denominations interested full opportunity out of regular schools hours in the rooms of such government schools to conduct religious education according to the customs and the tenets of each denomination for the children who themselves or through their parents have elected to become members of such denominations. This solution, it seems to me, is very equitable to existing conditions."

INCREASE OF FOOD PRICES

Two Bulletins Issued by Department of Labor Show How Cost of Living Has Soared in 22 Years.

Washington, D. C.—Two bulletins just made public by the bureau of labor of the department of commerce and labor show that the average increases in the cost of food between the years 1890 and 1912 is approximately 40 per cent. The increase in the price of meats amounts to nearly 66 per cent.

The increases in prices of 1912 over those of 1911 are: Meats 13.3 per cent, bacon being the only meat which has decreased, the price having declined one-tenth of one per cent during the year; lard, 11.3 per cent; hens, 5.5 per cent; wheat flour, 10.7 per cent; corn meal, 12.7 per cent; eggs, 11.6 per cent; butter, 12.3 per cent; potatoes, 7.6 per cent; sugar, 6, and milk 2.4 per cent.

The chief reasons for these increases are the desertion of the agricultural industries by the people and the middleman's profit.

Heir to Millions Is Born.

London, England.—A son was born on September 22 to Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, who have been anxiously awaiting the event for some time. The accouchement occurred at Caesar's Camp, Wimbledon, which is just outside of London and near the range of the British army.

Two Killed, Scored Injured.

Rochester, N. Y.—W. A. Harris of Fillmore, N. Y., and Grace Marsh of Portville, Ky., were killed and a score of persons injured when an excursion train on the Pittsburgh, Shawmut & Northern railroad crashed into a coal train at Nile, a few miles west of here. Misunderstanding of orders caused the wreck.

Three of the injured, W. H. Johnson of Olean, engineer of the passenger train; Mrs. E. J. Scott of Bolivar and Mrs. Ida Costello of Portville, probably will die.

Use Hair Tonic to Get Votes.

Topeka, Kan.—The feminine vote chasers of Kansas are swapping hair and hair tonic for votes. The women who are leading the Kansas equal suffrage battle are reaching out for the bald headed man. Listen to what Mrs. Lillie Day Monroe, foremost suffragist of Topeka, has to say about it:

"If we can make hair grow on every bald head in Kansas before the 5th of November," she declares, "we will win the battle for the ballot and for[illegible]."

MAN HAS APE'S STOMACH

SUCCESSFULLY TESTS HIS NEW DIGESTIVE APPARATUS.

Surgical Operation Performed by French Doctor in Hospital Is the Sensation of Paris.

Paris, France.—Trading his old and worn out stomach for the new and healthy one of an anthropoid ape, Pierre Laurent, after resting a few days in the hospital, tested his new digestive apparatus by becoming intoxicated. The young farmer got himself "as full as a goat," but the stomach stood the test and aside from a slight wobble in his walk Laurent is as well as ever.

The surgical operation performed by Dr. Roulies at the hospital of Agen, is the sensation of Paris. The famous surgeon took the entire stomach from the young farmer and, when the organ was found to be worn out, it was replaced by a complete stomach of the anthropoid. Laurent, who is a prosperous farmer of Agen, remained in the hospital 25 days, at the end of which time he was eating the heaviest foods with perfect ease. His stomach, which was from an ape two years old, fited so perfectly into the 27-year-old interior of the patient that it withstood the surcharge of liquor without a protest.

Dr. Roulies speaks with certainty of the benefits of his surgical discovery and is preparing a paper to be presented to the Academy of Medicine on the subject.

WIFE SLAYER DIES IN CHAIR

Chester S. Jordan Who Murdered Vaudeville Actress Maintains to the Last His Self Control.

Boston, Mass.—At 12:14:30 in the morning in the state prison at Charlestown, Chester S. Jordan, 31, expiated in the electric chair the murder of his wife, Honora [illegible], who was a vaudeville actress, in their home in Somerville [illegible] years ago.

Like Bertram G. Spencer, who died in the same chair recently, Jordan maintained to the last the self control which has sustained him during all these months, and, like Spencer, he chose a Christian Science reader to attend him to the chair.

On the march from the death cell he was as erect as his official escort and his step faltered no more than theirs. He took his seat in the chair [illegible] and the current was turned on. A second shock was given and he was pronounced dead at 12:17:25. The body is to be buried in [illegible].

GREENBACKS OF THE FUTURE

Faces of Famous Men Who Will Adorn Fronts of Bills Are Picked by Federal Official.

Washington, D. C.—Robert O. Bailey, assistant secretary of the department, has just completed a list of famous men whose faces will adorn the fronts of greenbacks in the future.

In the new bills all branches of the government, executive, legislative and judicial will be represented. All of the men selected were presidents excepting Alexander Hamilton, Benjamin Franklin, John Marshall and Henry Clay. John Marshall, who for years was chief justice of the supreme court, will be the jurist represented on the bills. Henry Clay will be there for the legislators.

WIDOW'S DEATH A MYSTERY

Corpse of Rich Woman Who Was Prominent Figure in Society, Is Found in Bloodstained Room.

Baltimore, Md.—Complete mystery surrounds the death of Mrs. Lavania Reese, widow of John B. Reese, who with his wife was a prominent figure in Baltimore society.

The body, clad only in an undergarment, was found on a couch in the sitting room of Mrs. Reese's flat. Blood was dried about a gash in the back of the head and cushions, couch and wall were stained with splashes of blood. Scattered around the couch were a number of empty whiskey bottles, and it was said that Mrs. Reese had been imbibing heavily since Friday, the last time she was seen alive.

Held for Ohio Murder.

Mt. Vernon, N. Y.—It has just developed, according to Chief of Police Foley of Mt. Vernon, that Harry Jones, known as "the whispering burglar," who is in the White Plains jail awaiting trial for robbery, is wanted in Youngstown, O., for murder. Chief Foley says the prisoner, according to information he has received, is under indictment at Youngstown for the killing of Patrolman Allred Evans November 4, 1911.

Gets Jail for Bad Milk.

New York City.—Adam Trenger, a wholesale milk dealer who furnishes the East Side alone with more than 3,000 quarts of milk daily, was sentenced to serve 10 days in the city prison and to pay an additional fine of $150 by Justices O'Keefe, Zeller and Collins in the court of special sessions following his conviction on a charge of keeping and selling milk which lacked 16 per cent of its standard.

Auto Bandits Keep Busy.

New York City.—Two automobile bandits blockjacked and robbed John Popper, a wealthy merchant, senior member of the firm of Popper, Orey & Co., on one of the busiest streets of New York, securing $500 in cash and $3,000 in negotiable paper and escaped in a large red touring car. As they sped away a patrolman gave chase and the bandits opened fire on him with automatic pistols, finally disappearing from sight in one of the crowded side streets of the city.

NORTH EAST M. E. CONFERENCE ENDS

MOST SUCCESSFUL MEET EVER HELD, ALL SESSIONS BEING LARGELY ATTENDED.

CLERGYMEN ARE ASSIGNED

Appointments Are Made Public, Former Sandusky District Being Now Designated as Norwalk—Bishop's Cabinet.

Cleveland.—The first annual convention of the North East Ohio conference of the Methodist Episcopal church has just closed its sessions here. It was a most successful meeting, all the sessions being largely attended. One of the features of the convention was the address of Ex-Gov. J. Frank Hanley of Indiana. Bishop W. F. Anderson of Cincinnati was present, together with his cabinet, the members of which are as follows: Reverends W. B. Winters, Alliance; H. W. Dewey, Cambridge; W. H. Dickerson, Steubenville; T. #### Prosecutor Is Indicted.

Ashland, O.—The grand jury which has been investigating charges against George J. Frey, "blacksmith prosecutor" who fought the lawyers' trust here and broke it up, indicted him on seven counts. These are embodied in two indictments—abusing and resisting officers, four counts; assault and battery, three counts. There indictments disqualified Frey. Judge William T. Devor, who ordered Frey's record investigated, appointed former State Senator Frank J. Patterson special prosecutor.

Denounces Low Cut Shoes.

New York City.—Dr. Ida Nahm says low cut shoes are the greatest evil of the present day. High-topped boots and thick lisle stockings are the real things, she says, for health.

"Half the sickness in this country is caused by the absurd idea of wearing ties and pumps," said Dr. Nahm. "They never should be worn outside the house, and even then only with warm stockings.

"I don't know where the style ever originated, but I am sure it should be abolished."

Poisoner Is Sentenced.

Springfield, O.—"If I had 10,000 minds and 10,000 bodies I would be willing to endure the most severe punishment to each one of them if I could only restore my daughter to life," cried John C. Miller, a former Dayton drug clerk, just before he was sentenced to serve 20 years in the penitentiary when arraigned in court here. Miller was charged with poisoning his eight-year-old daughter Olidyn. It is said he was prompted to the act by worrying over domestic troubles.

Desperate Criminal Is Caught.

New York City.—Reynolds Forsbrey, double murderer and known as "the most desperate criminal in the world," who made a sensational escape from an isolated cell in the Tombs prison on September 2, was captured by headquarters detectives under command of Second Commissioner Daugherty. The young plumber's son, whose jewelry robberies have been little less daring than his murders, was pulled from under a bed in a three room flat in Fox street, the Bronx.

VETERANS IN REUNION

SURVIVORS OF THIRTY-FIFTH O. V. I. GATHER AT MIAMISBURG.

Widow of Colonel Is In Attendance For the First Time Since the Civil War.

Miamisburg, O.—Members of the Thirty-fifth O. V. I. met in the 43th annual reunion here. The regiment was officered by Col. Ferd Vanderveer, who became a brigadier general, and was then commanded by Col. H. V. Boynton, was in attendance for the first time in the history of the regiment. Addresses were made by Maj. Lyons, Judge Joseph O'Neal, of Lebanon; Capt. Bussard, of Dayton; Mrs. Boynton, and Dr. F. W. E. Peschau.

The next meeting will be held in Hamilton. The officers for next year are: President, James Fitton; vice president, James Nicholas; recording secretary, Joseph Myers; corresponding secretary, L. B. Porter; treasurer, James O. Ratliff; historian, L. B. Porter.

CLEAN MONEY FOR BANKS AND PEOPLE.

Currency Cleansing Is Simple Process—Subtreasury Plant Begins Operations December 1.

Cincinnati, O.—The "money laundry" which is to keep the banks and people of Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky in clean money all the year round will be ready to begin business here by December 1. Assistant Secretary of the Treasury R. O. Bailey, in his visit here for conference with Subtreasurer George Puchta, detailed the plans for this new branch of subtreasury work.

The laundry outfit is a very simple concern. The washing of the paper money takes place in a bath of hot water, good washing soap being the sole added ingredient. No chemicals are required at any stage. The paper bills starting in at one end of the machine and passing through the bath are received on a flat canvas belt, by which they are carried to a series of rollers to be rinsed, starched, dried and ironed in succession. When the bills leave the last roller they are clean, crisp and smooth, without sign of their former wrinkles and crumples, looking in every respect just as good as new.

It takes a bill just three minutes to go through the laundering operation, Mr. Bailey says, and a single machine can put through 30,000 bills in one day. Two girls are required to run the laundry. And by having the laundries located at the subtreasuries throughout the country the government calculates [illegible] saving $[illegible] a year over and above the cost of printing new money. The banks are to benefit too by being able to exchange their worn or soiled currency for clean money without [illegible] of the [illegible] now occurring.

MEN WANTED IN CLARK.

Springfield, O.—Laborers to cut corn are scarce, according to statements of numerous farmers of Clark county who have been endeavoring to secure good workers to help with the work. The corn cutting season will begin soon and the farmers declare it will be almost impossible to secure men. In previous years it was the custom for men to be hunting jobs instead of the jobs hunting the men. The corn crop is heavier this year than usual in spite of the fact that weather conditions have been unfavorable for ripening rapidly part of the time.

JUDGE STEWART INDICTED.

Columbus, O.—Judge Gilbert H. Stewart, president of the Columbus Law Library association, was indicted by the Franklin county grand jury on a charge of embezzling $12,000 of the association's funds.

A finding of the amount charged in the indictment was made against Judge Stewart by the state bureau of accounting.

Judge Stewart formerly was a common pleas judge in Franklin county. He stands high socially.

The time involved in the embezzlement extends over a period of more than 10 years.

WOULD ELIMINATE VAUDEVILLE.

Dayton, O.—The Motion Picture Exhibitors' league of this city is agitating the proposition of eliminating amateur performances and cutting out entirely the vaudeville features and the adoption of a uniform length of program of showing three films.

DEAD MAN IS IDENTIFIED.

Lima.—After being held at a morgue for more than a week the body of an unknown man, who was murdered in an abandoned barn by foreigners, was identified as that of A. O. Rohrdanz, a skilled machinist of Milwaukee.

LARGE BARN IS BURNED.

Springfield, O.—Fire caused by flying sparks from a traction engine almost entirely destroyed a large bank barn [illegible] hay loft, a threshing machine and a large quantity of feed belonging to George Bell, who resides near the intersection of Jackson road and Clifton pike. The loss will aggregate about $3,000 and is partially covered by insurance. Mr. Bell had been having his grain threshed and the engine was left standing near the barn while the men went to dinner.

Springfield, O.—When a scaffold which they were erecting preparatory to painting a barn on the farm of Edward Bowman, near the Harmony bridge, east of the city, slipped, Arthur and Charles Farrish, brothers, were thrown to the ground, a distance of about 20 feet. The ladder fell on them and they were badly injured. Charles Farrish alighted upon his feet while the brother fell on his side. The ladder hit both of them, bruising Arthur's left leg between the knee and thigh.

A BONA FIDE OFFER

Made To County Commissioners For Infirmary Site, But No Action Is Taken.

Springfield, O.—The county commissioners have under consideration the first bona fide offer for the purchase of the buildings of the county infirmary and the 69 acres of county land used by the infirmary. Three more offers are said to be ready for submission to the commissioners, and will be handed in as soon as the premises are put up for sale.

The proposition of disposing of the buildings and grounds now occupied by the infirmary in the north end of the city, and procuring a larger site in the country, is being considered by the commissioners.

The proposition rests with the voters of the county and will be decided either at the regular or special election. The commissioners, it is understood, have set a minimum price on the premises, which is near $100,000. Nothing will be done in the matter, however, until some time next year.

BOYS GROW WHEAT.

Hope to Redeem State of Ohio Through Boy Agriculture.

To help redeem Ohio's wheat production, which is at lower ebb now than it has been for many years, the state board of agriculture has inaugurated a boys' wheat-growing contest and will give cash prizes and probably a free trip to Washington to the boy who raises the best acre of wheat in any township or community in the state.

The success of the boys' corn-growing contest prompted the board to have one also of wheat. The winners of the corn contest get a special trip to Washington in December and the plan is to give the winners of the wheat contest the same kind of a trip next year.

The funds for the corn contest trip are being furnished by bankers, millers, elevator operators, merchants, teachers, grangers, agricultural societies and others interested in the promotion of rural improvement. Those giving for this contest are also willing to give for the wheat contest.

Good Advice For Boys.

Secretary Fred Sandles of the agricultural board epigrammatically tells the boys that "the mixing of a little brain with brawn and American endeavor will redeem Ohio's wheat production." Says he: "To be an all round farmer one must know how to raise wheat. Learn now. Avoid ruts. There is a future in farming. No one can cheat you out of it in a business but yourself. [illegible] and philosophy that."

Any resident boy between 12 and 21 can enter the contest. Entry regulation must be made to the board at its office in Columbus on or before November 1. The boy contestants must individually select the seed, know the variety and do the work. He may select an acre of ground already plowed.

The contest is for the production of the greatest weight yield of red wheat. The acre entered must be rectangular and shall be selected and designated before November 1.

Referees To Decide.

The county commissioners are to appoint one disinterested referee, resident in the township in which the wheat is grown, to referee the cutting, threshing and weighing. A referee may serve in refereeing more than one acre. The wheat must be threshed before August 10, 1913.

It is required that five or more contestants shall be necessary to constitute a township or local contest and ten or more to constitute a county contest. No contestant shall participate in more than one contest for the Washington trip, though in addition to the trip he may contest for the cash prizes.

The cash prizes will be: Best acre, $100; second best, $75; third best, $50; fourth, $40; fifth, $30; sixth, $25; seventh, $20; eighth, $15; ninth, $10; tenth, $5.

FINDS MOTHER NEARLY DEAD.

Lima, O.—Bursting through the doors of his mother's home, M. H. Sanford, a prominent attorney, found his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Sanford, aged 81, nearly asphyxiated from gas. She was in a serious condition from the fumes, which she inhaled for 12 hours, due to a defective fixture.

COLBURN GOES TO BELLEVUE.

Marysville, O.—Rev. Harvey C. Colburn, who has been filling the pulpit of a Congregational church at Marion, Ind., for several years, has tendered his resignation there and accepted a call to the pulpit of the Congregational church at Bellevue. Rev. Mr. Colburn was at one time pastor of a Congregational church in Columbus.

ODD FELLOWS CELEBRATE.

Hamilton, O.—The 63d anniversary of the founding of the Rebekah degree of Odd Fellowship was celebrated in Hamilton by Silver Link lodge No. 508, at Odd Fellows' Temple on South Third street. The members of the different lodges of Odd Fellows in Hamilton were present, and an interesting program was rendered by the members of Silver Link lodge. Short talks on "Fraternalism" were given by Rev. J. Benjamin Myers and William Allen.

Toledo, O.—What are regarded as preliminary steps leading to ward the sale of the Toledo Railways and Light Co. took place when Dr. L. C. Netherlands, of Louisville, Ky., a heavy stockholder, and director of the company and also a member of the stockholders' committee, came here and made another inspection of the rail-light property. While Dr. Netherlands declined to discuss his visit, other members of the party stated that the information gained by inspection in all probability would be used for a syndicate which is known to seek the property.

COLONEL IS CRAFTY

AUDACIOUS EFFORT TO CORRAL ALL THE PROGRESSIVES WILL PROVE FUTILE.

SHOWS WILSON'S STRENGTH

Roosevelt Presumes on Ignorance of His Hearers and Readers When He Says Bosses and Representatives of Privilege Are Flocking to Democrats.

Colonel Roosevelt, with that aggressive audacity so strongly characteristic of his nature, in the effort he is making to stampede progressive Republicans who are disposed to stay with the regular organization and then under the cracking noise of his own whip to corral them in the Bull Moose pen, is giving testimony of the growing strength of the Democratic nominee.

For instance, in his speech delivered before the state Progressive convention at Des Moines, he is quoted as saying that he found everywhere among reactionary Republicans a growing purpose to support Woodrow Wilson, on the theory that President Taft was beaten already, and that the only hope of preserving the old parties was to support the Democratic ticket and defeat the Progressives. He then added: "Where Mr. Wilson is getting support of that type, we have the right to ask independent Democrats who believe in the principles for which Democracy nominally stands, to come with us. I ask every Democrat who really believes in the right of the people to rule to come with us, for every representative of privilege, every boss is going to his side."

Of course, in making this statement, Colonel Roosevelt was presuming upon the ignorance of those who might hear or read his utterances, for, as Col. Henry Watterson has well said of him, "Intelligent persons who choose to be led, by interest or by curiosity, to attend Roosevelt orations will feel that their intelligence has been insulted, or that the orator should be attended by a keeper." True, Republicans as well as non-partisan voters, are flocking to the support of Governor Wilson, but none of those Republicans are reactionaries or standpatters, as Colonel Roosevelt well knows. He is thrusting forward a man of straw to frighten Progressive Republicans away from the support of President Taft. Especially audacious is his assertion that "every representative of privilege, every boss is going to the (Wilson's) side," when the fact has been indisputably established that the two biggest and brazenest representatives of special privilege in the world, the steel trust and the harvester trust, are the inspiration and chief support of the new party movement. Without the influence of these two concerns in his behalf, Teddy would hardly be known in the running.

The truth is, Colonel Roosevelt is both an opportunist and a Jesuit in politics. He seizes upon the present time, when discontent is general in the land over the effect of policies for which he himself is partly responsible, as the opportune moment, with the assistance of the dominant trusts of the age and by making platitudinous promises to gather the army of discontented to his standard and augment this strength by fooling others who have admired his wonderfully vigorous personality, to again ride into power, only to be dislodged by revolution.

PROTECTION; HOW IT WORKS.

Rhode Island, a Tariff Made State, as Described By Miss Ida M. Tarbell.

"The doctrine of protection is worth looking at as it works," declared Governor Wilson at Easton, Pa., the other day. He added, in characteristic phrase:

"I haven't any reverence for any economic doctrine whatever except as it works."

Ida M. Tarbell is admittedly one of the foremost tariff experts who have taken sides with the people in the tariff controversy. She is a sober, thoughtful student and writer whose conclusions, though often annoying to some highly placed gentlemen, have almost invariably been found correct. Here is what Miss Tarbell says of that "tariff made state," Rhode Island:

"This, then, is high protection's most perfect work—a state of half million people, turning out an annual product worth $187,000,000, the laborers in the chief industry underpaid, unstable, and bent with disease, the average employers rich, self-satisfied, and as indifferent to social obligation as so many robber barons. It is an industrial oligarchy made by a nation's beneficence, under the mistaken notion that it was working out a labor's paradise. . . . It is feudalism, and not even benevolent feudalism."

No one can question the justice of Governor Wilson's statement, that economic doctrines are to be judged by their works.

By their fruits ye shall know them. The fruits of the Aldrich tariff are bloated fortunes, corrupted politics, enhanced cost of living.

The Wisconsin Progressives.

If the Progressive Republicans of Wisconsin are to maintain the integrity and efficiency of their movement, they will not only continue to follow Senator La Follette in utter disregard of any false god, but they will vote, as the senator has frequently voted, for principle irrespective of artificial party lines.

The hope of the Progressive Republican cause lies in the stanch, uncompromising leadership of men like Senator La Follette, of men who for the mere sake of gaining office will neither change principles as they would a suit of clothes, nor will profess one thing when they really believe another.

In the coming campaign the fight is one of principle. Principles are unreal. The fight is not between this party and that party, it is between Tories and Progressives regardless of party. Among the presidential candidates there is only one man who has shown by deed as well as by word that he is a thorough-going Progressive, with ability to do things. That man is Woodrow Wilson. He deserves the support of every voter, Republican, Democrat or Independent, who believes in interested public service and desires the general welfare.—Milwaukee Journal.

T. R. and the South.

Having failed to abate a crying political nuisance while he had the power to do so, few thoughtful persons are disposed to take as more than a demagogic appeal Mr. Roosevelt's present protestations of regret over conditions which he indorsed with perfect fortitude so long as he was a conspicuous beneficiary of them. Powerful as is the bid he has made for the southern vote, there is such a widespread distrust in this section of the country of the stability and integrity of his purposes political that there is small likelihood that there will be many takers.—John Marshall of Charleston, S. C.

Of Interest to Farmers.

Two harvesting machines, identical in all respects, manufactured by the harvester company, are on exhibition in Texas; one bought in Germany for $80, and the other in Illinois for $125. There will be reams of "explanations"—and just one reason.—Wall Street Journal.

Surely This Was Not All.

The Steel Trust's contribution of $10,000 to the Roosevelt campaign of eight years ago was not made till September 17. We cannot believe that so huge a corporation got off so cheaply as that; that the Steel Trust gave nothing till that late date in the campaign, or that the fast friendship and many favors of Theodore Roosevelt were secured by so trifling a contribution to his presidential campaign. It must be that the Steel corporation had made its regular contribution earlier in the summer, and that the $10,000 was a supplementary donation, made when the prospects of Mr. Roosevelt were so extremely dark that he sent for Harriman and appealed to him to raise money, and when Bliss was trying to get an additional $150,000 from the Standard Oil after $125,000 had been given earlier in the campaign. Herbert Knox Smith urged Mr. Roosevelt to stop the prosecution of the Harvester Trust to save the extensive influence of the powerful Morgan interests, and $10,000 from Morgan's biggest corporation would have been no more than a flea bite.

PROGRAM ANNOUNCED

OHIO FEDERATION OF WOMEN'S CLUBS TO MEET IN ATHENS IN OCTOBER.

Noted Speakers Will Be Heard and Vital Subjects Will Be Given Consideration.

Columbus.—Announcement of the program of the annual convention of the Ohio Federation of Women's Clubs to be held in Athens October 14-18, indicates a purpose not only to discuss business and departmental work, but to include in the scope of the work such questions as the relation of the individual to the state and nation.

The program opens Tuesday morning, October 15, with addresses of welcome and reports of officers. Mrs. Frances G. Richards, of Miami University, will speak in the evening on "The Drama" and Mrs. Frances Squire Potter, of Chicago, on "The Bible as Literature."

Discuss Home Topics.

Wednesday and Thursday mornings will be devoted to a discussion of work by the departments of art, household economics, public health and food sanitation. Frank Alvah Parsons, of New York, will deliver lectures Wednesday on "Art in Daily Life" and "Interior Decoration and Beautifying the Home." Prof. A. B. Graham and Mrs. C. W. Foulk, of Ohio State University, will speak on household economics; Mrs. Howard Higler, of Cleveland, on "Standardization of Household Service," Mrs. Ella Funk Muhse, of Washington, on "Heredity and Problems in Eugenics," and Miss Mary Gladwin, president of the Graduate Nurses' Association, will speak for that organization.

Howard Gross, president of the National Soil Fertility League, will lecture and Mrs. Cornelius S. Selover will conduct conference on parliamentary law. To bring the club women into closer relations with one another, a love feast will be held Wednesday evening.

Day For Education.

Education will be the Thursday afternoon theme. Edward J. Ward, of Wisconsin University, will speak on school social centers. A reception will be given by the women of the faculty of Ohio University and Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker, of Texas, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, will speak in the evening.

Friday morning Mrs. Pennybacker will conduct the endowment fund, to which Ohio is pledged for $3,000, half of which has been raised.

State Buys a Million Pounds.

The state of Ohio arranged to purchase 1,000,000 pounds of meat. It was contracted for by the board of administration and will be supplied to the state institutions under its supervision during the next three months. The average price was 10 cents a pound, or a total of $100,000.

The specifications called for 17 classifications of meat, but bids were returned on only 11. A price was made on each of these separately and the contract in each instance was awarded without regard to the entire supply needed for the several institutions.

For five institutions in Columbus, it is estimated that 90,000 pounds of beef and 190,000 pounds of all classes of meat will be required. The contracts for supplying these were awarded to local firms.

The lowest prices were, by the hundredweight: Beef, $8; corn beef, $8.62; mutton, $6; veal, $10; hogs, $11; fresh pork loin, $12; hams, $13.50; hams, California, $11; bacon, $13.50; pickled pork, $6.50; lard, $10.50.

The greatest increases over the prices of the last quarter were in pork, lard and veal.

Battery C Gets Prize.

Battery C of Columbus claimed the championship title in the revolver team shooting contests at Camp Perry with a score of 1,179. Company A, Signal Corp, of Toledo, stood second, with 877, and Troop B of Columbus was third with 875. In the individual revolver shooting contests Major Geo. Florance, of Circleville, ranked first and and Sergeant Major R. E. Pierce, of Battery C, stood second.

Road Contracts Are Let.

Many additional miles of good highway, with the revenue yielded by the automobile tax, were insured through awarded road contracts in several counties totaling upward of $120,000. The bids were received by State Highway Commissioner Marker.

Must Lay Transfer Tracks.

The service commission issued an order requiring the Pennsylvania and Baltimore & Ohio railways to lay transfer tracks at Wooster. Shnis Brick and three other industrial plants that are now required to transfer their product by teams.

To Be Great Musical Event.

Committees appointed by the Eisteddfod association to visit the larger cities of Ohio have returned with glowing reports, which indicate that the Eisteddfod to be held this fall in Columbus will eclipse those of former years. A mixed chorus from Cincinnati, a chorus from Lima, a mixed chorus from Cleveland and Lorain and a male chorus from Cleveland will be heard. Rehearsals are now being held. The number of contesting musical organizations is expected to be greater than ever before.

Merge Little Ones First.

In answer to persistent reports that a big merger of telephone properties in the state is to be consummated very soon, Frank A. Davis, of this city, head of the independent telephone interests of the state, declared that no big deals are yet under way. The larger mergers will be postponed until ample opportunity has been afforded for the consolidation of small systems. The consolidation of the telephone properties of this state is anxiously awaited by the people to see what effect it will have on existing rates.

O. S. U. Registration.

All previous registration figures were exceeded at Ohio State university, when students from all sections of the state and country and other nations elbowed and crowded each other to be enrolled. The registration in all courses was 2,407, an increase of 200 over the first day last year and 500 more than the first day in 1910.

The greatest rush was in the agricultural college, which has grown to be one of the most popular courses. Its registration for the first day was 819, an increase of 124 over the first day last year and only 100 short of the total registration in the regular agricultural course for the entire year. Including the six weeks' term last winter, the total registration in the agricultural college last year was 1,217.

It is expected that the enrollment in the agricultural courses this year, exclusive of the short term, will reach almost 1,100, and that including the six weeks' course, the total will exceed 1,500.

The total registration for all departments last year, not including the summer school term, was 3,198. Including the summer term, it was 4,0?8. These figures it is expected will be increased almost 500 before the semester is well under way.

Election Returns To Be Certified.

In the presence of Gov. Harmon, as required by law, Secretary of State Charles H. Graves and Auditor of State Edward M. Fullington have canvassed the official returns of the recent constitutional election and formally certified the result to the governor. By proclamation Gov. Harmon will announce to the people of the state the adoption of 34 of the 42 amendments to the constitution submitted to them by the constitutional convention. The talk of a possibility that opponents of the adopted amendments would attempt to prevent their going into effect by enjoining the issuance of this proclamation by the governor has entirely subsided, and no action of this sort is likely. Atty. Gen. Hogan has declared that there is absolutely no ground on which the new amendments can be considered to have been illegally or irregularly framed or voted upon, and lawyers employed by the Ohio Manufacturers' association have reported that there is no chance of success for action in court. With the governor's proclamation, amendments, except those for which special provision has been made otherwise, will be written into Ohio's fundamental law.

Cavalry Veterans Hold Reunion.

Capt. S. W. Fordyce, of St. Louis, was elected president of the First Ohio Cavalry association at the annual reunion held at Memorial hall. He was the first soldier of the regiment wounded in battle. This was at West Liberty, Ky., Oct. 23, 1861. He made a speech to the assembled veterans. Col. W. L. Curry was elected secretary and treasurer.

The afternoon was devoted to a camp fire. Reminiscences of the battle of Chickamauga formed the chief entertainment. It was the 49th anniversary of that battle.

Those who attended from a distance were Capt. Fordyce, Robert McMane, of Seattle; David Reese, of West Plains, Mo.; William M. Powers, of Hamilton, Ill., and Peter Egloph, of Columbia City, Ind.

Columbus was chosen for the next reunion, Sept. 20, 1913. Of the 1,845 who composed the regiment, less than 300 survive. Fifty-one were on hand.

To Fight the Cigaret.

"If you instill into a boy's mind the belief that cigaret smoking is harmful and save him from the habit you will do him a service which will last through life," said Prof. Frank V. Irish to fifty principals of Columbus schools, who met at the administration building in East Town street. He declared more cigarets were sold last year than ever before and that older boys in grade schools were using them in larger quantities. In connection with the cigaret habit and with general schoolroom discipline, Superintendent Shawan urged teachers to suggest good conduct to their pupils rather than attempt to drive them. Suggestion of right action is more powerful than warning against wrong, he declared.

After the Film Men.

M. A. Neff, president of the Moving Picture Exhibitors League of America, was in Columbus to confer with Attorney General Hogan. He urged prosecution of film production companies under the Valentine anti-trust act. He claims to have evidence which will prove that these concerns are combinations in restraint of trade.

Okey Succeeds Chapman.

George R. Okey, of Columbus, was named for presidential elector in place of Horace L. Chapman by the Democratic state central committee. Mr. Chapman withdrew because he is a bank director and therefore ineligible to serve as elector.

Prof. French Is Chosen.

Prof. Thomas E. French was elected president of the Ohio State athletic board to succeed Prof. George Hightmire, who resigned last spring. Other officers elected were A. H. Tuttle, vice president; A. E. Reilly, secretary, and R. M. Boyer, treasurer. The new officers will follow closely the policies that were established by Prof. Rightmire. Three assistant athletic managers were chosen by the board: Harvey Cary, Hugh Nesbitt and R. W. Jordan were detailed to look after the wants of the boys.

State Liability Board.

Claiming that a runaway race to get the benefits of the state insurance fund under the Green compensation act has virtually been started, the state liability board of awards announced that it has added 140 Ohio employers in the past two weeks. The record for accessions was broken. The total number of Ohio firms now insured is 458, and the board insists that if left undisturbed it will virtually bring all into the fund without necessity of making the insurance compulsory.

FIND WOMEN WORK IN SLAUGHTER PENS

FACTORY PROBERS UNEARTH INHUMAN CONDITIONS IN FEMALE LABOR IN NEW YORK.

WILL ASK FOR REFORMS

Investigators to Petition Legislature for Sweeping Laws That Will Protect Young and Old of Feminine Sex.

New York City.—"We have found that conditions under which women work in New York state are inhuman almost beyond belief," declared State Senator Robert F. Wagner, discussing the investigations of the state factory investigating committee. He predicted that similar organizations would soon be created in every state in the Union by the federal government.

The New York investigating body was appointed immediately after the Triangle shirtwaist fire to investigate working conditions throughout the state and to suggest legislative reforms.

"We have found men and women working in ill-ventilated, poorly lighted, congested quarters. Particularly were the conditions under which we found women working open to censure," said Wagner.

Doing Men's Work.

"In Buffalo we saw hundreds of women, young and old, working in the slaughter houses on wet and damp floors, doing men's labor.

"In Utica we found women working in core foundries, beside ovens of molten metal, lifting and straining at heavy burdens, with only the poisonous fumes from the metal to breathe.

"In Auburn in the Harvester twine plant we found women standing at big machines 'spooling twine.' They had no place to seat themselves for a rest, standing all day, breathing the dust from the twine that was so dense that every half hour one girl would brush another's clothes off with a heavy broom. No provision for carrying away this dust was made.

Ask Sweeping Laws.

"The reforms which we will ask the legislature will be sweeping and will revolutionize working conditions in New York. We will demand laws that will guarantee adequate fire protection, ventilation, proper hours, chairs with backs for all women workers, and restrictions as to the kind of work women may do.

"The workingmen are becoming awakened and while I am not a radical I believe that the present conditions under which they are working is the cause of the present labor disputes."

The commission heard objections by factory owners to the recommendation that drastic changes be made in loft building, fire protection and safeguards. The reform includes sliding doors, increased number of fire escapes, open courts and fire hose ready for immediate use.

WILSON MAN WINS IN JERSEY

Judge William Hughes Is Selected for United States Senate by Democrats in Primary Election.

New York City.—In the New Jersey primaries just held, Judge William Hughes, selected by Gov. Wilson to make the fight against former Senator James Smith, Jr., for the Democratic endorsement for United States senator, defeated Smith by an overwhelming vote.

The Progressives, who nominated candidates by petition in Hudson county and then fought for their endorsement by the Republicans, carried Hudson county, nominating the 12 men for the assembly and three for congress. The men named for congress over the Taft men are George L. Record, Harland Besson and Harold Bouton.

PRIMARIES IN MASSACHUSETTS

Foss Wins Democratic Nomination for Governor While Walker Is Victor in Republican Contest.

Boston, Mass.—The primaries just held in Massachusetts resulted in the renomination by the Democrats of Gov. Eugene N. Foss and the selection by the Republicans as his opponent of Joseph Walker of Brookline, former speaker of the legislature. The campaign of District Attorney Pelletier of Boston against Foss ended in an overwhelming defeat for the district attorney. Foss carried Boston by 3,000.

The Bull Moose partisans were instructed by their leaders to keep out of the primaries and it is evident that they did so in this city.

Brilliant Diplomat Dies.

Badenweiler, Baden, Germany.—Germany's most brilliant diplomat, Baron Adolf Marschall von Bieberstein, died here after a short illness.

The baron, who was a native of Baden, was 70 years old.

Baron von Bieberstein since the death of Bismarck has been considered as Germany's "strong man."

The baron, in fact, stepped into the shoes of Bismarck when the latter left office in 1890, becoming, on April 1 of that year, secretary of state of foreign affairs.

Rebels Release Railroads.

Washington, D. C.—That the revolutionists under General Mena in Nicaragua have acceded to the demand of Major Butler, commanding the American marines at Granada, and have released the railroads which they have held, was announced to the state department by Rear Admiral Southerland.

In addition to returning to the rightful owners all railroad property the revolutionists have agreed to surrender the steamboats which they have confiscated.

GOES BACK TO YEAR 1716

Oldest Structure in Berks County, Pennsylvania, Was Built by Swedish Settlers at That Time.

Douglasville, Pa.—Of much interest to automobilists passing through the Schuylkill valley is the old Swede house here. The historic structure, the oldest building in Berks county, marks the northernmost settlement in the state of the Swedes, who were the first white settlers of Pennsylvania. The building was erected in 1716 and with the exception of slight alterations stands as it did nearly two centuries ago.

The Swedes who penetrated the unknown wilderness here a part of the colony which effected the first settlement on the Delaware in 1638. At that time this section of Pennsylvania was known as New Sweden. The question of encouraging the settlement of this region by the Swedes had been considered by the king of Sweden a decade prior to that, but his war with the Germans and his subsequent sudden death delayed and nearly ended the project.

Oldest House in Berks County.

A part of the congregation of the old Swedes (Gloria Dei) church, which is now embraced in Philadelphia, under the leadership of Andrew Hudman, made an exploration of the Schuylkill in 1701 for the purpose of establishing an inland trading post with the Indians. They found suitable land several miles north of the Manatawney creek, where William Penn, the new proprietor of Pennsylvania, granted them 10,000 acres.

The settlement was named Morlatton and the Swedes lived in harmony with the Indians and thrived there long before the advent into the region of the English and German settlers. Their descendants are found in the locality to this day. Some of them, whose names are still perpetuated, were Andrew Henkson, Benjamin Burden, Peter Boon, Benjamin Boon, Justin Justason, Mounce Justice, John Cock, Peter Cock, Otto Ernest Cock, Jacob Culin, Matthis Hulston, Morton Murlis, Peter Yocum and Mounce Jones.

The old house above mentioned was built by Mounce Jones, who had one of the largest tracts under cultivation. It stands on the east bank of the Schuylkill, hidden on all sides by large trees. A road connecting the two highways on either side of the river now passes directly in front of it, from which the old date stone in its upper walls, bearing the date 1716, is easily decipherable. The building is now used as the headquarters of a boat club.

HIS TRUST IS IN THE BIBLE

Kaiser Declares He Solves All Questions, Even of a Political Nature, by the Scriptures.

Paris, France.—Rene Puaux, the military expert of the Temps, who was in close contact with the German emperor during the recent manoeuvres of the Swiss army, quotes the emperor as summing up his satisfaction with the work of the troops in a conversation with President Forrer in the words:

"Your army saves me six army corps."

The emperor in conversation constantly insisted upon the necessity of understandings as the best means of dissipating suspicion, and declared his personal desire to maintain peace. On one occasion, in emphasizing this in conversation with President Forrer, the emperor intimated to the president that he acquired much of his inspiration from the bible.

"I don't care much for priests and clergymen," said the emperor. "They dilute the gospel with too much of their own dogma. I hold to the bible, which I constantly read and reread. In it one find the solution of every difficulty, of every problem, even of a political description."

It is known that the emperor's main object in attending the manoeuvres was to convince himself of the ability of the Swiss army to make the neutrality of the country respected in case of war, and his remark is interpreted to mean that by the Swiss army forming a screen to prevent the French from invading Germany through Switzerland, the Germans could release six army corps in south Germany for service in Alsace-Lorraine or along the Belgian frontier.

Makes Plea for Alaska.

Seattle, Wash.—"I think it is unfortunate that powers so limited have been granted the new Alaska legislature, that laws to meet our needs can not be passed," said Gov. Walter E. Clark of Alaska, who, accompanied by his wife, arrived here today on the revenue cutter McCulloch from St. Michael.

"To develop any country, the first things needed are means of transportation and communication and for this reason I expect more from the newly created Alaska railroad commission than from our legislature, although the commission is powerless to do anything but recommend to congress. The big problems in Alaska today are railroads, coal, lumber and the fish industry, but our new legislature will have no power to legislate on any of these subjects. It will not have as great power to Alaska as a council has in a city of 10,000 people in the United States."

"Also," he said, "it has lately been found that the [illegible] body contains sulphur."

"Sulphur!" exclaimed a girl in a blue and white blazer. "How much sulphur is there, then, in a girl's body?"

"Oh," said Dr. Allen, smiling, "the amount varies."

"And is that," asked the girl, "why some of us make so much better matches than others?"—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Inspiring Experience.

A lady who must certainly have been related to the late Mrs. Partington recently returned from a seventy-day tour of Europe.

To her friends she said with enthusiasm that of all the wonderful things that she had seen and heard, she believed the thing she enjoyed most of all was hearing the French pheasants sing the mayonnaise.—Youth's Companion.

SUFFERED EVERYTHING

For Fourteen Years. Restored To Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Elgin, Ill.—"After fourteen years of suffering everything from female complaints, I am at last restored to health. "I employed the best doctors and even went to the hospital for treatment and was told there was no help for me. But while taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I began to improve and I continued its use until I was made well."—Mrs. HENRY LEISEBERG, 743 Adams St.

Kearneysville, W. Va.—"I feel it my duty to write and say what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered from female weakness and at times felt so miserable I could hardly endure being on my feet. "After taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and following your special directions, my trouble is gone. Words fail to express my thankfulness. I recommend your medicine to all my friends."—Mrs. G. B. WHITTINGTON.

The above are only two of the thousands of grateful letters which are constantly being received by the Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass., which show clearly what great things Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound does for those who suffer from woman's ills.

MEAT PRICES AND THE TARIFF.

Protectionist apologists for the high cost of meat may offer all the excuses, explanations and remedies for that outrage which they consider people capable of swallowing. But they can say nothing to explain away the fact that during the month of August, American sirloin of beef sold for 10½ cents in London and for 28 cents in New York. None of the rot about middlemen, increase in gold production, great rise in wages and similar insincere twaddle explains this difference in price. The only explanation that holds water is the tariff.

Great Britain levies no tariff duties on meat products. In the London market the American Beef Trust must meet competition from Australia, New Zealand and South America. The tariff protects the trusts from such competition at home for no more than abroad.

Of course when these facts are made known the howl goes up that the trust can not pay decent wages without the privilege of robbing the people. If the excuse were true it would indicate gross incompetence on the part of the beef magnates. But it is not true. It is so barefaced a lie that the use of it deprives the representative of the interest using it of all claim to confidence in anything he may say.

The census shows that the average wage paid in the packing industry is $570 a year, a trifle over $10 a week. How high a tariff is needed to enable the trust to pay such wages? All told, there were 89,728 wage earners employed in the year [illegible] in the packing industry, less than one-tenth of 1 per cent of the population. Even if it were true that to enable a rapacious trust to pay starvation wages to less than one-tenth of 1 per cent all the rest of the people must submit to outrageous extortion would that not be a foolish bargain to make?

An annual tax of about 60 cents a head on the meat consumers of the United States would raise a sum equal to the wages paid by the Beef Trust. Yet the tariff enables the trust to tax consumers more than that each week. And still we are told that this is all for the benefit of labor and those who tell that, ask to be trusted with seats in congress, the senate and even in the White House.

Here in this district Paul Howland, who voted in the interest of the Beef Trust and of all the other trusts every time he voted at all since entering the house, is asking to be returned to congress. The high cost of living doesn't bother Howland. But it is bothering a lot of less fortunate people who propose to vote for a congressional candidate who has fought the Beef Trust and all the other tariff-buttressed trusts consistently and effectively from the beginning.

Democratic Judicial Nominees.

The Herald has had several requests from readers to publish the names of the Democratic nominees for judicial offices upon the State, District and County tickets and they are given in the table below. While the following candidates were nominated by regular Democratic primaries or conventions, their names will appear upon the Non-partisan Judicial ticket, alongside the tickets carrying the nominees for National, State and County offices. For the information of voters the names of the Democratic Judicial nominees will be published from week to week in The Herald until the November election.

SHE BLAMES "SPIRIT WIFE"

Mrs. William Phelps Dodge Divorced Husband Because Uncanny Influence Ruled Him.

The uncanny influence of a "spirit wife" is said to have been responsible for the divorce action which Mrs. William Phelps Dodge has just won against her millionaire husband.

The decree, which was signed in Philadelphia, would have been granted several weeks ago, it is understood, but the judge wanted to make a longer investigation of the unusual charges brought by the girl wife of the widely known author and lawyer.

According to the papers in the case, Mr. Dodge, who is forty-eight years old, met his young bride here at Sherry's on election night, 1909, and after an impetuous wooing, married her in London on January 10, 1910.

Prior to that time she and her sister had been in the chorus of "Havana," a musical comedy playing at the Casino.

Despite the difference in their ages—the bride was only eighteen—the couple lived happily for a couple of months after the wedding. Then Mrs. Dodge charges that the spirit of Mr. Dodge's first wife, Ethel, appeared before him and began to "pick on" her successor.

Young Mrs. Dodge said that whenever she wore a jewel, a veil or anything that the first Mrs. Dodge had possessed, the latter's spirit would appear before her husband and demand that he have it removed at once.

And, according to the girl-wife, the spirit-wife was always obeyed.

This treatment got on the nerves of the youthful Mrs. Dodge finally, and she packed up and returned to this country, leaving Mr. Dodge in London.

Immediately on her arrival here, she applied for the divorce through her mother, as guardian, and charged that cruel, barbarous and inhuman treatment had been inflicted upon her by her husband.—New York Evening Mail.

Rather Unreliable.

"You say that you refuse to believe the sworn testimony of this man?" asked the examining barrister.

"That is so," replied the witness.

"What reasons have you?"

"Why, I know the man! He bates to tell the truth—it's absolutely foreign to his nature. He and I were at the same school, and he used to cry bitterly when the teacher made him repeat that two and two made four."

"Have you any further reminiscences, sir?" This rather sarcastically from the man of law.

"Oh, dear me, yes! Once he was ill and described his symptoms so that the doctor prescribed for water on the knee, when he was really suffering from inflamed tonsils!"

TELEGRAPH OF SAVAGE

SENDS NEWS SWIFTLY OVER GREAT DISTANCES.

Natives of the Sudan Use Horns of Elephant Tusks, Tomtoms and Whistles — Basutos Employ Large Gourd Drums.

The principle of telegraphy would appear to have been anticipated by the savage tribes of Africa in the heart of Africa. This barbaric system of communication, at once practical and effective, survives to this day and its value has been tested many times.

French explorers seem to have been the first to bring this system to the knowledge of civilized people. By means of it news of important events in the interior of the Sudan reaches all the trading ports on the coast in a very short time.

The communication is made by means of various instruments, the most common ones being horns, tomtoms and whistles. The horns are made of solid ivory, hollowed out of elephants' tusks. The mouthpiece is at the side. These trumpets are of various sizes, but the favorite ones are very long and give seven distinct notes, produced by plugging the mouthpiece with corks of different sizes. The ordinary tomtom is a hollow bit of wood, with a goatskin stretched over one end.

The following instance illustrates the manner in which this native telegraph is employed. The post commander at Stanley Falls was once informed by a native of a neighboring village that a provision train had been attacked two days before at a point 180 miles further down the Congo. A week later the party arrived and confirmed the story in part.

They had reached the scene of the alleged attack at the time reported, but the shots that the natives had taken as indications of a conflict with robbers had been fired at a herd of antelope.

At a later period, when an officer of the French Congo came to grief in the rapids, the accident was reported the next morning at a village 180 miles distant.

Among the Oongala tribe a sort of xylophone is used with four notes, by means of which the natives communicate over great distances in a kind of telegraphic language.

An American missionary working among the Basutos discovered that the villages had means of conveying messages from one chief to another or of transmitting the intelligence of defeat or victory.

The Basutos hollow out a large gourd and thoroughly dry it. Then kidskin, as hard and as thin as parchment, is stretched across the hollow of this gourd. When beaten with a padded drum stick this gives forth a sound that can be distinctly heard at a distance of from five to eight miles.

In every village there is a class of men who are utilized as scouts. Among these there are always some trained to use the gourd drum. The code is what might be called an African Morse alphabet and is beaten on the drum in the open air.

The sound is carried across the valleys and glens to the next village, where it is interpreted by another scout. If the message is for a distant village he repeats it on his drum and in this way it is carried from village to village, with very little loss of time until it reaches the person for whom it is intended.

Bear With a Thirst.

There are probably a number of men in Maine who remember the tame bear that used to live in Redington in days when lumbering was booming in that section. This bear was a 200 pounder, kind and docile, but the possessor of one bad habit. That was his penchant for intoxicating liquor.

Now and then lumbermen would get the bear drunk, which was an exceedingly easy thing to do. Bruin preferred rum, but would drink whiskey if nothing better was at hand. In the morning after a night's debauch he frequently had a typical "morning after thirst," which he learned to quench by turning a faucet outside the main camp, when he would lap up the water very eagerly that ran from the tap.

No efforts were made at reformation, although it is not stated that the animal filled a drunkard's grave. As a matter of fact he lived at the camps for a number of years without harming a person, although some of the men seemed to antagonize him at times.—From the Maine Woods.

Key Ring for a Bride.

At a marriage service at Cheltenham parish church recently, it was found that the bridegroom had forgotten the ring. At the suggestion of the clergyman the key of the church door, which had a ring at the end, was commandeered, and the ceremony was completed.—Pall Mall Gazette.

HAVE COLD IDEAS OF LOVE

With Chinese, Marriage Is a Business of the Head, Not an Affair of the Heart.

Perhaps there is no greater difference existing between the Chinese and the American people than that between their ideas of love. In fact, we Chinese do not believe in love, for we are not sickly sentimental creatures, but cold philosophical, fatalistic beings. We arrange our matrimonial affairs through hard reasoning and not through the tender passion.

To us marriage is a serious business of the head, and not a light affair of the heart. In these matrimonial transactions we apply the most rigid, keen, calculating business principles, and that is why we are so successful in the marriage enterprise, as we have never been buncoed by Cupid at the game of love.

We never pay homage at the altar of this stupid, brainless, yellow kid, the disturber of peace, the breaker of hearts, the destroyer of homes and the promoter of affinity stock companies. We cannot tolerate his presence in China, as China is not a land of lovers. Consequently the cool, quiet hours of our midsummer nights are not disturbed or spoiled by hot air from the wooing and cooing of sentimental creatures.

We do not believe in love, for love is not the greatest thing in the world. It is not even a thing nor substance. It is simply the product of an idle brain, the outgrowth of a drowsy mind. It is inconstant and unsubstantial, for its quantitative and qualitative character changes with the changes of scenery and environment, and its drawing and binding power increases as the square of the distance between subject and object increases or decreases, as the case may be.

Love is the antithesis of reason, for man sees with reason and only feels with love and it is the most violent form of brainstorm. Love is a symptom of a disordered brain, as a nightmare is a symptom of a disordered stomach. It is a deadly contagious disease, for it turns the strongest head and makes the wisest man a fool. Indeed, there is no fool like an old fool who is affected with amoritis. When a man has contracted this love disease and is under its influence he acts in the most idiotic manner and performs all sorts of antics, all of which he entirely renounces and repudiates when he is free from its hypnotic spell.—Ng Poon Chew, in Chinese Annual.

Healthfulness of Laughter.

Merriopathy is the science of the healing laugh. Merriopathy is better than homeopathy or allopathy for curing all the gloom diseases and grouch complaints that make life miserable. Some illness need drugs, some need the surgeon's knife, some can be smiled away, but neither you nor I ever knew of a sickness that was cured by a frown.

The wise physician well understands the therapeutic value of fun and a cheerful spirit. Medicine may be a necessary and powerful agent in the treatment of illness, but it may fail where fear and melancholy join hands with the disease. Laughter is one of the best medicines in the world, and lengthens life as well as brightens it. "A merry heart doeth good like a medicine," said the wise man, consequently we may employ it in many chronic cases without fear. Set the gloomy, discouraged, neurasthenic invalid to laughing. Study constantly how to provoke smiles. Cause a few thrills of humor to run, however weakly, through the veins and to tickle the risibles. The hostile forces of disease and worry and discouragement can be driven back by the benevolent mirches of mirth.—The Christian Herald.

The Latter-Day Girl.

"Girls nowadays are very queer creatures," says Bishop Creighton, in a passage not inapplicable at the present time. They like to do odd and independent things, and they will think for themselves, without considering if they have brains enough to think things out. It is all very well to think, if you go far enough; but most people stop in the middle, and so make a mess.

"Don't do that; don't regard yourself as an interesting object. Remember, the best thing to be is not a curious, original, flighty being, but a good, honest, simple, straightforward girl, which is what Nature intended you to be. Therefore, do not muddle up your mind too much."

Slender Figure—of Speech.

A Tacoma lawyer, arguing a divorce case recently, closed his address to the jury as follows: "My client is a beautiful woman, so beautiful that the sun seems to stand still while the stars gaze at her. Truthful! Falsity flies from her even as the jack rabbit flits from the greyhound. Sweet! Gentlemen, honey would freeze in her mouth. Tender and slender! My client could bathe in a fountain pen."—National Corporation Reporter.

Justified.

Judge—What have you to say for yourself for beating this man in such a brutal manner?

Prisoner—Your honor, he asked me if my name was Ismay.

Judge—Discharged.

Her Tribute.

"I think I know my own failings," he said.

"If you do," his wife replied, "your knowledge takes a much wider range than I have ever given it credit for."

MENTOR

The equinoxial seems to have come and gone with the Fair, and now the sky is quite cleared up again, and somewhat cooler so that grate fires are quite in order. There seems to be something of a difference of opinion around here about the kind of a winter that is before us. Some of the pioneers declare we are in for it again, and others say there is sure to be a mild winter, as extremes always follow each other, a cold summer having followed a cold winter, now we shall be getting it more mild.

Mrs. Charles Justus entertained her husband's cousin, Mrs. Leslie Root and her daughter, Miss Virginia, over Sunday, and Mrs. La Verne Root Amidon, also another cousin, all of them from California.

Miss Dorothea Sanborn has been spending the week of the Fair, with her school friend, Flored Glenn.

Mrs. Sarah Robinson Miller of Cleveland, a former Mentor girl, was here several days last week, a guest of Mrs. Edgar Dunham and Mrs. Sarah Green and called on several of her old-time friends.

Mrs. Eva Hanson McCrea is over in Willoughby for a short time now, with her daughter, Mrs. Markell.

The old friends of Mrs. Mary Larned Shearer of Bay City, Mich., were very much distressed to learn of the automobile accident in which Mrs. Shearer and her daughter were both hurt, one of their friends instantly killed, and three others very seriously injured.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Warren have re- [illegible] Chas. Wilber of Cleveland, also Mr. Frank Daniels of Abington, West Va., and Miss Billington of Pomona, Cal.

Miss Frances Case left here for Washington D. C. on Saturday evening last, where she is to enter a boarding school for girls. She was accompanied as far as Cleveland by her parents, and will be a guest of her father's sister in Washington for a few days before the opening of school.

Mr. Charles Glenn has gone onto the road, traveling for the Mentor Knitting Mills, his "beat" keeping him in Michigan for the present.

Miss Mattie Merrill of Burton, who has been a guest of Mrs. Robert Case for several days past, leaves today to begin study again in Oberlin college. Miss Merrill has made many warm friends here who will be very glad to welcome her back at any time, not only because she is such a beautiful singer, but because of her gracious self.

Mr. and Mrs. F. I. Dunbar were down from Conference and spent the Sabbath with their daughter, Mrs. T. P. Cadle at "Lacwood." By the very urgent request of Mr. Schaffner, the old habituees of the Methodist church heard Mr. Dunbar preach one of his splendid sermons, which proved to be indeed, "meat in due season."

There is to be a concert Friday evening in the church, under the care of the "League," the tickets for which are twenty-five and fifteen cents, and the entertainment is given by some "family" we understand.

Mrs. T. O. Hart entertained at luncheon a few days ago, Mrs. La Verne Amidon and her daughter, Mrs. Leslie Root and her daughter, Mrs. Payson Carroll and her son's wife. All of the ladies hailed from California except the two last, Mrs. Raymond Carroll coming out from Painesville.

Mr. Otis Kennedy of Aurora, Portage County, spent most of last week here as the guest of his nephew, Mr. Harry King and his family.

Mrs. Lucretia Garfield left on Wednesday for Connecticut where she will spend a couple of weeks with her daughter, Mrs. Joseph Stanley-Brown and her family, before going on to visit her son, Irwin Garfield in Boston. About the middle of October she will meet her brother's wife, and go back to her home in Pasadena, California, for the winter.

Mrs. Joseph Rudolph leaves here tomorrow, for a last visit with her only sister, Mrs. Joseph Horn and her family whose home is in Allegheny City, before joining Mrs. Garfield and returning home to California.

Those who listened to the address given last week in the Disciple church here by Prof. Talcott of Hiram College, had opportunity to enjoy a good laugh—just as was promised.

Miss Ruth Bradway has just returned from spending her six weeks of vacation time with relatives and friends in Erie and other points in eastern Pennsylvania.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Hagenbarger returned on Wednesday from their honey-moon trip to New York City and other points in the east, and will be at home in their own home, after the first of October.

Prof. Harry Garfield and his family returned to their Williamstown home some days ago, having spent about two weeks here with their mother at "Lawnfield." Young Mr. James A. Garfield has just entered the law department of Harvard University, having graduated with the very highest honors from Williams College, his grand-father's old school.

Miss Evelyn Smith is spending some little time with Pennsylvania friends and relatives at date.

The Andrews school in Willoughby is taking still more of our students this year, clearly showing that it is growing in favor throughout this county. Miss Anna Norton, Miss Cecil McFarland, Miss Nina Onw, Miss Laura Otis, Miss Maze Parmelee, and others of our girls having already enrolled there.

The Mentor Ladies Aid took in some two hundred and sixty dollars at their tent where lunches were served through Fair time, but so much of that amount was expense out, that not more than two hundred will be clear gain for the Pipe Organ Fund.

It was with considerable pride that Mentor folks learned that our Mr. T. D. Morley took first prizes on his exhibit of Holstein cattle, over those shown by the "gentlemen farmers" of the county. Out of four entries, Mr. Morley carried off three prizes, two first's and one second. Those of the children of our village who made exhibits and won prizes, have been made so proud and glad, that we are sure the spirit of emulation will work for good. One little girl carried off first prize on a splendid loaf of bread made entirely by herself, and upon inquiry we learn that she has been making all the bread for the family of four all summer, in order to help her mother at the same time that she is learning how.

The idea of adding to the Lake Front Park now owned by Mentor, seems to find more favor than to buy land for park purposes up on the avenue.

The Miscellany Club was entertained by the Program Committee at their first meeting, which occurred last Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Jasper Gilbert in West Mentor. This most excellent committee is composed of Mrs. Gilbert, chairman, Mrs. Robert Case and Miss Elgie Hayford. Besides delicious refreshments served by the three hostesses a very interesting paper was read by Mrs. Robert Clapp on a trip down the St. Lawrence river, and roll call was responded to by naming some of the "Play grounds of the United States." The next meeting is to be with Miss Jennie Durban, at which Mrs. Chas. Justus is to take charge of a "Geography Lesson on Canada" which is already making the members squirm as they know from sad experience what a thorough teacher Mrs. Justus is, and to appear before her with an unstudied lesson is to court a shameful defeat.

The Miscellany Club now numbers thirty-nine, and there are several more who would like to join, so anxious are our Mentor women for hard study, but the number (unfortunately) is limited to forty.

It would surprise you to know of the great good that is being done by Chamberlain's Tablets. Darius Downey, of Newburg Junction, N. ## ALGERNON IN DISTRESS

Apparent Mixup in "Medsums" Alarmed Him Exceedingly, for It Might Have Killed Her, and "Life Is Very Scarce."

"Good ebenin', sah, good ebenin'," responded Algernon to Mr. Topfloor's greeting, but his voice sounded distraught and Mr. Topfloor glancing at his troubled countenance, inquired:

"What's the matter, Algernon? Elevator on the blink?"

"No, sah, dat ain't it. I's mos' distress, an' I's mighty glad yo's come in, 'cos I wan' ast yo' advice 'bout a mos' ser'ous mattah. I was to my doctah's dis af'ernoon to deport to him 'bout de condition oh my sister, an' w'ile I was dere, I t'ought I might's well git some medsum fo' myse'f, too. So I ast him to gib me some pills, or a lotion or a tonic, or some'pin oh dat kin'. An' he say, 'Wot yo' wan' medsum fo' Algernon?' he say, an' I tol' him dat fo' de las' t'ree days I b'en troubled wif a sort o' dizziness in my feet dat was mos' 'norin', 'specially w'en I'm runnin' de elebator. So he say he gib me some'pin fo' dat, an' den he han' me a box pills fo' my sister an' a box pills fo' myse'f. He didn't put no name on de boxes but de one dat was my box, it had de leastes li'l brach speck on de side, so of cos' I know which it was. I lef' de medsum at my sister's do' an' didn't take notice dat I lef' her de wrong box till af'er I b'en heah 'bout a hour. I's 'fraid, Mistah Topflo', dat my pills wouldn't be de kin' fo' her an' dat dey mabbe kill her ef she take 'nuff ob dem, an' I's jes' b'en mos' crazy 'bout it! W'ot does yo' t'ink, Mistah Topflo'—does yo' t'ink dat pills fo' dizziness in de feet would be bad fo' amonia oh de lungs?"

"I can't say, Algernon, but I think they might be," replied Mr. Topfloor; "you'd better go to your sister's house as quickly as you can and tell her not to take them."

"I cayn' leabe dis heah elebator at de presum' time, no how, dere's too much 'pendin' on me fo' dat. Yessah, I could get de janitor to run it fo' me fo' a half hour or so. I nevah t'ought o' dat. Yessah, dat would be de va'y bes' way. I know yo' 'vide me so I fin' some resolution ob de question. Yessah, I go right down to de janitor an' tell him de state ob de 'fair. Min' yo' [illegible] de elebator ain' [illegible] do fo'. Yessah, I come tell yo' de suit ob de vestigation, des' soon as I know myse'f, t'ank yo' sah," concluded Algernon as the elevator passed down the shaft out of sight.

An hour later Algernon appeared at the Topfloors' door and announced beamingly: "It's all right, sah. De janitor he resented to run the elebator fo' me w'ile I went to 'vestigate 'bout de pills. It's a mighty queer t'ing, Mistah Topflo'. My sister she hadn't took one oh dem pills ob mine. She say she has de queeres' ticklin' in de p'am of her raight han' dat tol' her de pills wasn't hers, an' dey couldn't git her to swaller one, no how. But de queeres' ob de whole cucumstance am dat I foun' dat de box I lef' her was de raight box, af'er all! So de whole t'ing tu'n out fo' de bes'. Out el it had a-be'n dem pow'ful pills ob mine, I reckon she be daid now an' I'd o-b'en mighty sor'y, 'cos life is ve'y scarce, Mistah Topflo'—very scarce."—New York Press.

A Greek Name.

Greek may have gone out of fashion, but Greeks have not. The being who used to live for us only in the pages of ancient history is now a familiar figure in every American city.

"Mention the name of some well known Greek," said the teacher of a juvenile class in history.

"George," spoke up a curly haired little boy.

"George who?"

"I don't know the rest of his name, ma'am. He comes round to our house every Thursday with bananas and oranges."

Such a Nice Time.

Dorothy was so homesick at her first party and cried so bitterly that the hostess's mother suggested that it would be better for her to go home.

Dorothy accepted the idea, but a few minutes later, upon answering a timid ring at the door, the hostess's mother found Dorothy bathed in tears.

"Well, Dorothy, I am glad to see you again. Did you decide to come back to us?"

"No'm'm, I forgot t-to say I h-had such a nice time!"—Browning's Magazine.

Heirlooms.

"And is this an heirloom, too?" asked the visitor, picking up a brick that lay on the center table.

"Yes," said the lady of the house. "That is the brick my mother threw at the prime minister."

"Ah, indeed, how very interesting," said the visitor. "And whose portrait is that on the wall?"

"That is my mother herself," said the lady.

"I see," said the visitor. "The power behind the thrown, as it were."—Harper's Weekly.

Discovered.

"That man has an idea that he understands women. He's a widower, I believe."

"Nope. If he's got any such idea as that he's a bachelor."

Tacoma Figures of Speech.

A Tacoma lawyer, arguing a divorce case recently, closed his address to the jury as follows: "My client is a beautiful woman, so beautiful that the sun seems to stand still while the stars gaze at her. Truthful! Falsity flies from her even as the jack rabbit flits from the greyhound. Sweet! Gentlemen, honey would freeze in her mouth. Tender and slender! My client could bathe in a fountain pen."—National Corporation Reporter.

Simple Cure for Indigestion.

When suffering from indigestion drink a cup of hot water, and at once lie on the right side. This will promote the passage of the food from the stomach to the intestine.

Glorious News.
comes from Dr. J. T. Curtiss, Dwight, Kan. He writes: "I not only have cured bad cases of eczema in my patients with Electric Bitters, but also cured myself by them of the same disease. I feel sure they will benefit any case of eczema." This shows what thousands have proved, that Electric Bitters is a most effective blood purifier. It's an excellent remedy for eczema, tetter, salt rheum, ulcers, boils and running sores. It stimulates liver, kidneys and bowels, expels poisons, helps digestion, builds up the strength. # The Yellow Letter

SYNOPSIS.

Harding Kent calls on Louise Farrish to propose marriage and finds the house in great excitement over the attempted suicide of her sister Katharine. Kent starts an investigation and finds that Hugh Crandall, suitor for Katharine who had been forbidden the house by General Farrish, had talked with Katharine over the telephone just before she shot herself. A torn piece of yellow paper is found, at sight of which General Farrish is stricken with paralysis. Kent discovers that Crandall has left town hurriedly. Andrew Elser, an aged banker, commits suicide about the same time as Katharine attempted her life. A yellow envelope is found in Elser's room. Post Office Inspector Davis, Kent's friend, takes up the case. Kent is convinced that Crandall is at the bottom of the mystery. Katharine's strange outcry puzzles the detectives. Kent and Davis search Crandall's room and find an address: Lock Box 17, Ardway, N. J.

CHAPTER V.—(Continued).

I had not looked at it in that light, yet I felt that he was right. There could not be a moment of happiness for the girl I loved until the black shadow that menaced her home and those she loved had been dispelled. Yes, Davis was right. I would go to Ardway that evening. I stopped only long enough to telephone Louise of my intention and to go to my rooms for a bag.

"If you have a revolver you'd better take it with you," said Davis.

"I never owned one in my life," I replied.

He drew out his own and handed it to me. It was of the hammerless variety, flat and almost square.

"Be careful how you use it," he warned me. "It's a magazine gun and goes off with a very light touch."

"What do you expect me to find in Ardway?" I asked him as a taxicab hurried us to the Hudson tunnel.

"There are two things. First, find out if Hugh Crandall is there, when he arrived and what he has been doing. Probably if he is at the hotel he will be registered under an assumed name. Second, find out who has Lock Box 17. There is a list of box-owners kept in every office, with the names of the two references. Find out all you can without arousing suspicion. I'll be out and join you there to-morrow evening. I'll come out on this same train. I'll leave it to you to find a plausible pretext for questioning the postmaster."

Tedious as the trip to Ardway would ordinarily have been, so absorbed was I in puzzling over the mystery I hardly noted the passage of time and was startled to hear the brakeman calling my station. I had learned from the conductor that it was a village of less than two thousand inhabitants and that there was only one hotel, about a block from the station. It proved to be a country hotel of the better sort, doing a thriving business in feeding motor-car folk who passed through and in taking care of traveling men and farmers' supply agents who visited the neighborhood.

As I signed the register I scanned the names, hoping to see that of Crandall, but it did not appear. Yet registered the night before was a name "Henry Cook" that caught my eye. Something about the writing made it as distinctively that of a city man as his clothes would have distinguished him from the country boy behind the desk.

"Where will I find the post-office?" I asked the clerk. "I want to get a special delivery letter off to-night."

"It's a couple of blocks up Main street," he told me, "but you'd better go in and get supper. The dining room closes at half past seven and the post-office stays open until eight."

I took his advice and after an excellent meal, lighted my cigar and walked in the direction he had indicated. The streets were lighted after a manner by oil lamps at the corners. There was no moon and the villagers for the most part seemed to live in the rear part of their homes. Few of the straggling stores had their windows lighted, so it was with difficulty I read the signs on the buildings I passed, yet I had little trouble finding the post-office. It was a one-story building that stood on a vacant lot in the middle of the block. It evidently had been built by some local politician for the purpose, as it was not quartered in the corner of a cigar or grocery store, as most country offices are. Peering into the darkness I read the sign "Post-Office," and noted with some surprise that the windows were without lights. I drew out my watch and striking a match looked at the time. It was half past seven. For lack of something better to do I walked round the building. To my amazement when I reached the end away from the street I found the rear door standing wide open. Thinking perhaps that the postmaster might merely have gone to supper, relying on the honesty of his neighbors to leave things undisturbed, I loitered in the vicinity for a full half hour. At last, growing impatient, I entered the rear door and striking another match looked about me. As far as the uncertain light permitted me to see, the place looked as if the postmaster had been unexpectedly called away in the midst of his work.

I recalled that in my bag at the hotel was one of those storage battery lights, which happened to be there because I often found it useful in the cabin where I went to shoot ducks. I decided to get this and investigate further. It had begun to rain and there were few people on the street. I returned with my light in a very few minutes and began to explore. I did not greatly fear interruption, for the mail-boxes on the street side served as a screen to shut off the shaft of light by which I worked.

My second inspection convinced me that the postmaster had left in considerable hurry. A pile of mail half-sorted, a stamp drawer left wide open and the books standing in an open safe seemed to bear out this theory. Even the cash drawer stood open, revealing a few bills and some change.

"If the cash drawer had been rifled," I said to myself, "I might suspect that the postmaster had been murdered and robbed."

I pushed the cash drawer shut and heard the automatic lock click on it, and then began a search for the list of box owners. At the back of each box a slip was pasted with the owner's name. To my great disappointment Box No. 17 was blank. I turned next to the safe and at last found the book in which the accounts of box rent were kept. In this were neatly entered the name of each box-holder and the two references given, for every box except No. 17.

As I stood poring over this book, perplexed by my failure to discover the owner, I became conscious that I was watched. A sixth sense convinced me that some one else was near. Quickly I pressed the button that extinguished my electric lantern. Noiselessly I turned toward the rear door by which I had entered. I caught just a fleeting glimpse of a man's face being hastily withdrawn. Undoubtedly it was the postmaster who had turned and caught me there. Of course he must take me for a burglar. It had been too dark for me to recognize the features of the man and I was certain he could not identify me. I stood motionless for a minute or two, listening intently, but I could not hear even a footstep—nothing but the patter of the rain.

Yet undoubtedly whoever had discovered me had gone to summon assistance. It would never do for me to be caught there. While I felt I was perfectly justified in my mission, it would be hard to make a satisfactory explanation. If I was captured there it certainly would mean an unpleasant night in a vermin-filled shack, perhaps in irons. It might take several days to establish my innocence. I decided to attempt an escape. The sense of having a revolver in my pocket comforted me, though I realized its possession would be most damaging if I should be caught. I moved swiftly to the door and peered out. There was no one in sight.

Thrusting my lantern in my pocket and turning up my collar I made a dash around the corner of the building and looked up and down the street. It was entirely deserted. The thought struck me that the man who had been watching me might still be in hiding on the other side of the building, but I did not stop to investigate. With the best air of unconcern I could assume, I walked, not over hastily, back to the hotel. There was no one in the office but the clerk behind the desk and I stood there for a moment beside the big old-fashioned stove drying my clothes. The door opened and a tall smooth-shaven chap came in and approached the desk to get his key. As he saw me standing there he gave me a keen glance of scrutiny. I had noticed that he had come from the direction of the post-office and he must have seen that my clothing was rain-soaked. He half halted as if about to speak to me, but changed his mind. I heard the clerk say:

"Good night, Mr. Cook," as he vanished up stairs.

If this was the man who had seen me in the post-office, plainly he was not the postmaster. If not, who was he? What was he doing there?

It was long after midnight before my mystified brain would let me sleep. Every step I had taken seemed only to be leading me deeper and deeper into darkness.

CHAPTER VI.

The Third Suicide.

Something had happened.

I awoke the next morning with a start and sat up in bed listening to the strange confusion in the hotel. Instinctively I recognized that the sensation of the unusual that so affected me was something more than the feeling every one experiences on suddenly awaking for the first time in a strange place.

I sprang from the bed and, opening my door, looked out into the hall. I could see nothing, for a turn of the corridor shut me off from the main hall. From the floor below came the confused murmur of many voices and the sound of men moving about—many men. My first thought was of fire, but there were no cries and there was no smell of smoke. The memory of my experience in the post-office recurred to me. I vaguely wondered if I had been tracked and discovered.

I hastened to dress. If they suspected me of robbing the post-office, the sooner I found out the sooner I could plan some method of action. As I put on my collar I heard footsteps in the corridor, and, coatless as I was, I flung open my door. A chambermaid was passing.

"What's the matter?" I asked.

"Haven't you heard about it?" she asked in wonder.

"Heard about what?"

"The suicide in the hotel—in the room right under yours. They discovered it hours ago. The coroner's just come and is getting ready to hold the inquest."

"Who was he?" I asked. I was thinking it might be Hugh Crandall, dead in some suicide pact with Katharine. A sense of disappointment began to take hold of me. I felt that if it were Crandall my efforts to clear the mystery would be still more futile, but the woman's answer quickly dispelled the thought.

"It wasn't a he—it's a woman."

She hurried on down the corridor and I hastened to finish my dressing, recalling as I did so Davis' belief that there would be other suicides. It seemed absurd that there could be any connection between the suicide of a woman in a country hotel in an obscure New Jersey village and the two suicides the day before in New York, and yet there was at least one link between them. It was Crandall who had telephoned Katharine. Some one had telephoned Elser, too. It was in Crandall's rooms that we had found the address of this place where the third suicide in the series had taken place.

With the triumphant feeling that my friend the inspector finally would have to accept my theory of Crandall's guilt, I hurried down stairs and forced my way into the room where the coroner had already begun his inquest.

On the bed, covered with a sheet, except for the face, lay the lifeless body of a woman perhaps fifty, the face still distorted from the death agony. A bit of rope attached to a rod among the rafters of the room showed that she had hung herself. The woman's outer clothing lay neatly piled on a chair near the bed. This much I had time to notice before the coroner finished selecting his jury. Near the coroner, too, I observed the man whom the clerk had called Cook. I thought he gave a quick glance in my direction, but I could not be sure. The first witness was called, Mahlon Williams, the proprietor of the hotel.

"Mr. Williams," said the coroner, "do you know this woman?"

"I can't say as I do."

"What was her name?"

"She was registered here in the hotel. The name's on the book. You can see for yourself. I don't know if it was her real name or not."

"Mary Jane Teller, Bridgeport, Conn.," was the entry in the hotel register which was produced and submitted for the jurors' inspection.

"Tell us, Mr. Williams, what you know about the deceased."

"Mighty little; nothing at all, in fact. She come here night before last. Got in on the seven-two train from New York, I calculate, from the time of her arrival. She had no baggage, only that little black bag yonder, and she asked for a room for the night—a cheap room. She seemed so feeble I gave her this room on the ground floor, No. 4, and only charged her seventy-five cents for it, though it's a dollar room, or a dollar and a half for bridal couples. She paid for it for one night and right after supper she went into it and stayed there. Yesterday morning after breakfast she went out somewhere and was gone maybe an hour or an hour and a half. I didn't see her when she come in but I heard—"

"Mahlon Williams," said the coroner severely, "you ought to know enough about the law to understand that what you heard ain't evidence. Tell only them things you know of your own knowledge."

"All I know," said Williams, perceptibly miffed, "is that she come out along about three in the afternoon and paid another seventy-five cents, saying she wanted the room another night. That's all I seen of her."

"Can I ask a question?" said one of the jurors, all of whom were townsmen of the class usually to be found around the hotel bar-room.

"If it is a proper question," said the coroner judiciously.

"Where did she go when she went out?"

"The question is a proper one, if the witness can answer it of his own knowledge," the coroner ruled.

"If I knowed I'd a told already," said the hotel keeper.

One or two of the other jurors asked questions, prompted plainly more by curiosity than by intelligent effort to ascertain the facts; but it was plain that Mr. Williams had revealed all that he knew, and he was dismissed.

Doctor Allen, who had been sent for as soon as the suicide was discovered, gave it as his opinion that the woman had hung herself early the evening before, as nearly as he could judge about five o'clock.

"Who was it found the body?" the coroner asked.

"Mary Evans, the chambermaid," the constable volunteered. "Here she is, right here."

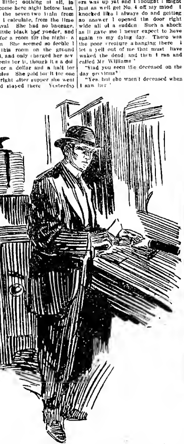
The coroner proceeded to examine her.

Much embarrassed by the prominence into which she found herself thrust, but manifestly enjoying the unusual situation, the girl told how, early in the morning, as soon as she began her work, she had gone to the room.

"I didn't know there was anyone in No. 4," she explained. "I knew the woman had taken it for just one night and I hadn't bothered making it up the day before. None of the other roomers was up yet and I thought I might just as well get No. 4 off my mind. I knocked like I always do and getting no answer I opened the door right wide all of a sudden. Such a shock as it gave me I never expect to have again to my dying day. There was the poor creature a-hanging there. I let a yell out of me that must have waked the dead, and then I ran and called Mr. Williams."

"Had you seen the deceased on the day previous?"

"Yes, but she wasn't deceased when I saw her."



I Stood Motionless for a Minute or Two, Listening Intently.

"Did you have any conversation with her?"

"No more than to pass the time of day with her you might say."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

Nothing Is Ever Destroyed

Matter Changes, But Does Not Cease to Exist—Simple Experiment That Proves Proposition.

When a candle burns it is not destroyed. What seems like destruction is merely change. Any one can prove this for himself by a very simple experiment.

Take a glass tube and fit a cork into each end. Bore some holes in the lower cork, one of them in the middle large enough to hold a candle. Bend a smaller glass tube to U shape, fill it with small pieces of caustic soda and cork one end. Now connect the two cylinders by a small glass tube through the corks. Insert the candle through the lower cork and suspend the whole apparatus from one beam of the chemical balance. Weigh it carefully.

Connect the free end of the U tube to an aspirator so as to establish a uniform current of air through the tubes. Remove the candle, light it and instantly reinsert it. Let it burn down until entirely consumed. Now reweigh the apparatus. You will find that it actually weighs more than it did before the candle was burnt.

What had happened? The carbon and hydrogen of which the candle was composed have been separated, have drawn oxygen from the air and combined with it, forming water and carbon dioxide or carbonic acid gas. The caustic soda has absorbed the carbon dioxide and made sodium carbonate, and has also caught the water. The extra weight is simply that of the oxygen taken out of the air.

This is a practical illustration of the great truth that nothing is ever destroyed. Matter changes, but does not cease to exist. St. Thomas Aquinas taught this in the thirteenth century—thus as in so many other ways anticipating modern scientists—and some of the ancient Greek philosophers understood it. It has only been proved experimentally in recent years.

Dolly in Dismay.

Mother—Certainly, my dear.

Dorothy—And if I stay single shall I be an old maid like Aunt Anna?

Mother—I think you will.

Dorothy (with a deep sigh)—Well, I am in a fix.

"Do you think it is possible to make an airship absolutely safe?" "Sure," replied the mechanician. "How?" "Disable it before it gets a chance to leave the ground."

Health & Beauty Hints

By Katherine Morton

For the restoration of energy after a hard day's work there is nothing like a warm bath and a rest for ten minutes or more in a darkened room. You may think you are too tired for the bath, but you are wrong. It is just what you need, the tub so soothing to nerves, so cleansing to the skin and rejuvenating to looks.

The skin plays a most important part in the economy of human health and good looks. According to science, it has a remarkable history, this wonderful covering of the body with the innumerable ducts and underlying glands. From it, we are told, all the senses are derived, and it is now the seat of several important bodily functions, while it seems to play some very mysterious part in the moral life. It performs the duties of kidneys and lungs, warns us when we are too cold or too warm, and casts off much of the poisonous wastes of the body in the form of water and oil and rancid odors. The cleansing bath, then, is a necessity for health and looks, and our need of the watery element does not seem strange to scientists who argue that all animal forms, including the progenitors of man, once lived in the sea. Whether they did or not, the woman used to the daily bath knows that she looks better after one, just as she knows that life has more snap when she is well dressed and is going to have a good time.

For the business woman who carries her office troubles home with her the prolonged bath at bedtime will be found an excellent sedative, although it occasionally happens that one must get used to late tubbing. The water should be of the temperature of the body or higher, as it is pleasant, with the room comfortably warm. The bath may be continued for 15 or 20 minutes, for the long moment in the water is needed to reduce the mental stress. For constant sleeplessness many doctors consider the warm bath the best of all treatments.

The daily bath must be taken according to individual preference, but it is generally agreed that more benefits are obtained from a warm tub and a gradual cooling of the water than from a cold plunge. The needle spray with the temperature of the water first hot and then changing to cold, has a very tonic effect on the skin, and gives all the body a refreshed and delicious feeling. But the daily bath, however taken, is an absolute requirement for the woman who needs to appear well groomed and whose desire is to keep herself in a good physical condition.

Eat slowly at meals and talk with the pleasant people at table, for the stomach takes kindly to a little gossiping, doing its work far more serenely with pleasant table talk than without it. If you feel sleepless on going to bed try sipping a glass of warm milk, for in all probability the wakefulness comes from the emptiness of the stomach. The warm milk will act as a soporific, particularly if you stop thinking about the worries and do a little deep breathing after you are in bed.

All work and no play will make the business girl a dull one, so pray lay out some little part of the week's wages for entertainment. Go to the theater, accept a week-end invitation whenever you can, give little Sunday afternoon teas and go to them. Amusement, remember, is an actual need of heart and mind, but the more of it taken in the open air the better. A taste for golf and tennis and the wit to get time for these games have saved more hardworking people from the asylum than "you could shake a stick at." After any hard mental application a change off into some little manual job or other is also very beneficial, for some work of the hands seems to be necessary for the entire bodily health.

A good book is also a great rest, and even a foolish book can be read with benefit to overwrought nerves.

Dress is never to be despised by any woman who has her living to earn, for becoming and appropriate attire stimulates a woman's pride in herself, and is all powerful at this time, so adding to her looks in a double way. In fact, even if you fancy yourself actually plain with a systematic study of the art of dress it is in your power to make yourself invincible both in a business and a social way—but this means, of course, that office clothes and the coiffure must be appropriate to a busy sphere.

Fads.

There is nothing more delightfully suggestive of an invigorating breeze than a frock made mainly of fine lace and gauze with loosely arranged draperies that flatter as their wearer walks. Such draperies are almost formless, suggesting a very loosely fitting coat, a scarf wound about the figure, with long floating ends, or a heraldic mantle dropping from the shoulders.

The handsomest and smartest tea gowns are made with long trains, but there are a number of models this season that have short skirts and yet are smart. However, it is better to choose the long skirt if there is any doubt.

White is again the most conspicuous choice among girls for open air occasions, and white and black or blue and gold is the choice of their mothers, usually interpreted in tulle, chiffon and lace, but sometimes in wonderful manifestations of embroidery. There is a very effective union of soft and thin white satin and [illegible] embroideries in jet and soutache, making a mosaic-like design.

CONVENIENT IN SEWING ROOM

Handy Apron Will Save Time for the Woman Who Has Much of This Work to Do.

A very convenient apron to don when in the sewing room is made of white lawn and white dotted swiss. This is cut 18 inches long and 27 inches wide. The swiss is placed over the lawn and both cut rounding on the lower edge. About nine inches from this edge the swiss is cut away in a sweeping curve toward the waist line and the edges are bound with narrow bias bands of lawn or narrow satin ribbon in some pretty light shade. This forms two openings like pockets, for the upper part of the swiss is caught into the waistband with the lawn; this band, by the way, may be of ribbon matching that which binds the apron. In this deep pocket can be slipped the spools of thread, scissors and pieces of material on which you are working. It solves the problem of sewing on the porch, for in it are held all the necessary materials, and it can be taken off and folded with the work inside, if you wish to discontinue your sewing for a little while.

Bracelet Watch.

To travel without having a timepiece in a place where it may readily be consulted, is generally acknowledged to be so great a nuisance, that nearly every woman or girl who is contemplating a journey of any extent, is providing herself with a bracelet watch to be worn on the left arm between the wrist and the elbow. This timepiece may be as expensive as the prospective traveler can afford. It may be of solid gold or silver, the mechanism of Swiss workmanship imbedded upon a bracelet formed of a band of metal or of a succession of links. Or it may be of enameled metal, of gun or or plated silver. Eminently practical bracelet timepiece outfits show the watch works imbedded in a pigskin, sealskin or morocco half-case that is cut in one with a broad band fastening at the under side of the forearm with a small buckle of the trunk type.

Save the Pins.

A good idea after buying a paper of new pins is to cut one line off at a time and not to dive into the whole paper at once. A sewing basket should have its pincushion well supplied with pins, and when sewing a box should be near at hand into which all the pins can be tossed in a hurry, says the Philadelphia Times. In this way the floor will be spared its usual pin collection when sewing days come around.

A pin tray or small pincushion should be on every girl's or woman's bureau, and the pins should be put into these at night, when, perhaps, a pin or two will have to be taken out of the stock collar or belt. The pins used in pinning on a veil should always be put back in the veiling after it has been carefully folded up and before placing in the hatbox or bureau drawer.

Dainty Waists.

White satin waists are exquisitely dainty, but it is to be feared that the daintiness of such a waist will be very evanescent. So only the woman who can afford the somewhat high cost of constant dry cleaning may indulge in white satin fall shirts—unless she cares to "do them up" herself. There is a special washable satin that comes for these white waists, but the best of tub satins must be handled with extreme care if it is to survive even one laundering and retain its pristine luster and richness of texture. Wash the washable satin in soft water and a suds of pure white soap. Wring it not and rub it not, but rinse in several clear, cool waters, and iron when almost dry, with thin muslin between the satin and the iron. So only will you save the luster and the texture of the white satin shirt.

Back of Mother's Gown.

Not for years past have fashions in gown backs been better adapted to the development of a matronly figure. The habit and the panel back have gone out of favor and in their place are the inverted plait which obviously cannot draw below the hips, the position back which may be extended to the hem of the skirt, if desired, and the position sash-end with wide length of silk or satin or fine cloth may be made to disguise the shape of the figure as completely as does an undraped tunic. If mother fancies a separate skirt and blouse she may have that sort of costume and feel certain that it becomes her, since the narrow skirts of taffeta and soft fabrics often have smoothly fitted front and side forms, but backs cut straight and gathered into a waistband, the plackets coming at the left side and fastening invisibly over that slip.

Choosing a Hat.

Women cannot grumble this season at the nonsuitability of models, for styles are so varied that there are shapes enough to go round and to set off to the best advantage each individual type of face.

Some women have a way of selecting their hats rather at random, without sufficiently studying effect. Now, it takes time to choose properly, and it needs a sympathetic friend or saleswoman. One has respect for the woman who is courageous enough to express an opinion and is not only an automaton paid to sell for some despotic manager. A successful milliner is an artist; her assistants should be artists, too—clever enough to understand that their clients are there to be suitably hatted.

The Newest Collar.

A variation of the Robespierre collar which is precisely suited to a rather low-cut afternoon frock has the double front revers of familiar type, but about the neck goes a collar composed of two flat, wide strips of lace all-over and plaited net or of hand embroidery frilled with lace. Only the upper edges of these strips join at center of front and back. From these they slope abruptly to form sharp Vs and the strips crossing each shoulder smoothly give the effect of a sailor collar and are very decorative.

A HIDDEN DANGER

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

It is a duty of the kidneys to rid the blood of uric acid, an irritating poison that is constantly forming inside.

When the kidneys fail, uric acid causes rheumatic attacks, headache, dizziness, gravel, urinary troubles, weak eyes, dropsy or heart disease.

A Missouri Case

Mrs. H. J. Linnebur, 308 Madison St., St. Charles, Mo., says: "I was miserable from backache, pains in my head, dizziness and oversensitiveness in the small of my back. My ordinary housework was a burden. Doan's Kidney Pills corrected these troubles and removed annoyance caused by the kidney secretions. I have much to thank Doan's Kidney Pills for."

Passengers Had to Work Their Way.

A drummer and a friend climbed aboard a ramshackle train in an isolated Missouri town. The train was a feeble asthmatic piece of mechanism, and the Humane society should have prosecuted its owners for allowing it to run at all.

It finally came to a dead stop just in the edge of town and after a long interval of trying to make it go, the engineer stuck his head in the door and bawled:

"'No, sir!' the boss answered, striking himself upon the chest. 'No, sir! I'm a free-born American citizen and I'll sell my support to no man.'

"'But,' said the millionaire, blandly, as he drew out his checkbook and fountain pen, 'but, if you won't sell me your support, perhaps you'll rent it to me for the term of this campaign?'

"'Now you're talking,' said the boss, in a mollified tone."

CAREFUL DOCTOR

Prescribed Change of Food Instead of Drugs.

It takes considerable courage for a doctor to deliberately prescribe only food for a despairing patient, instead of resorting to the usual list of medicines.

There are some truly scientific physicians among the present generation who recognize and treat conditions as they are and should be treated, regardless of the value to their pockets. Here's an instance:

"Four years ago I was taken with severe gastritis and nothing would stay on my stomach, so that I was on the verge of starvation.

"I heard of a doctor who had a summer cottage near me—a specialist from N. Y.—and as a last hope, sent for him.

"After he examined me carefully he advised me to try a small quantity of Grape-Nuts at first, then as my stomach became stronger to eat more.

"I kept at it and gradually got so I could eat and digest three teaspoonfuls. Then I began to have color in my face, memory became clear, where before everything seemed a blank. My limbs got stronger and I could walk. So I steadily recovered.

"Now after a year on Grape-Nuts I weigh 153 lbs. My people were surprised at the way I grew fleshy and strong on this food." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

NO CLEW TO HISTORY

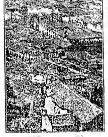
STUDENTS OF ARCHEOLOGY ALL PUZZLED OVER YUCATAN.

Art and Architecture of Once Great People Are There, but Hieroglyphics Baffle All the Knowledge of the Scientists.

Pittsburg.—Through the efforts of Henry Hornbostel, head of the building bureau of the Pittsburg Carnegie Institute of Technology, there will be in the Carnegie institute before a great while specimens of distinctive American art and architecture, the legacy of that mysterious people who lived ages ago in America, attained a high degree of civilization, developed a beautiful and cultivated art, and then passed away, leaving only these treasures of art and architecture to tell what their civilization had been. Already Mr. Hornbostel has been instrumental in arousing the Carnegie Museum of Washington to an interest in this field and it has set aside an appropriation for exploration of the art of Yucatan. In company with Lloyd Warren, Mr. Hornbostel made a pleasure trip to Yucatan during a recent vacation, going far into the interior of the country where lies waiting a storehouse of material for students of archaeology with reference to hieroglyphics as well as art and architecture. The hieroglyphics are all the more alluring because of their baffling conditions, with never a clew yet discovered to work from in deciphering their meaning, which would reveal to us the minds of the wonderful ancient inhabitants of America. The priceless heritage has lain neglected and crumbling to ruins while at the same time huge sums are being paid by our museums for replicas of works of art of the eastern hemisphere.

With the completion of the Panama canal all signs point to a vast influx of northerners into these southern states and an awakening of interest in the study of the arts. Their pottery and decorative designs are already being made use of by enterprising dealers and advertisers in all kinds of wares as souvenirs of the celebration of the opening of the great canal.

"The day will soon come," says Mr. Hornbostel, "when excursioning to the ruins of Yucatan will be made as easily as to the Holy Land or to Egypt. It is now impossible for petticoats to travel into the interior of the country, as it is as wild and densely forested as the interior of Africa. Mr. Warren, myself and our guide made the journey from Merida, the capital of Yucatan, in the most primitive of wooden wagons drawn by three burros, and because of the loose construction of its wooden wheels and axles, which allow it to wabble from side to side without injury, wonderfully adapted to the rough stone roads of the country."



On the Plains of Yucatan.

Two absolutely unique characteristics of the ancient people who built these ruins thousands of years ago, and of whom they and the pyramids on which many of them are built are the only trace, were noted by Mr. Hornbostel. The first is that the towns were built without walls or fortifications of any kind, there were no roads and the houses were far apart, making them indeed garden cities, and there were no beasts of burden. "This vanished race was a peaceful people," said Mr. Hornbostel, "and such architecture of a primitive race is absolutely unique in history. They had no fear of an invading army and no preparation to repulse one. They had no means of moving either an army or supplies." The second peculiarity noted by the travelers is the original form of architecture in the construction of the buildings, which are made of small stones cut and dressed, with an original cantilever construction of arches. This structure, Mr. Hornbostel claims, he has not found anywhere else in all his study of architecture, ancient, medieval and modern.

FINED ONE CENT FOR TALK

Attorney Draws Crowd by Argument, Obstructing Sidewalk—Will Appeal Case.

Crawfordsville, Ind.—Wilbur G. Houk, charged with obstructing a public sidewalk, was found guilty and fined 1 cent and costs, the latter amounting to $30. Houk, a local attorney, was arrested by Officer Ike Walderlip for obstructing the sidewalk by collecting a crowd in front of the Crawford house by having a heated argument with a traveling man. Attorneys for Houk state that the case will be appealed.

Rat Attacks Sleeping Girls.

WOLVERTON TO REMAIN WITH HIGHLANDERS

Manager Harry Wolverton of New York Americans.

Within a short time Harry Wolverton, manager of the Hill Top forces, will put his signature to a contract to manage the club next season. President Farrell is pleased with the measure of success that has greeted the light haired boss. Wolverton has had more to contend with than any manager that ever broke into the big leagues, and through it all he has shown remarkable fortitude and patience.

There has been much speculation as to whether Wolverton would be retained by President Farrell as leader of the Highlanders in 1913, but he feels satisfied that Harry has done as well as anybody could under the circumstances.

Not only did the two promising infield recruits, Dolan at first and Gardner at second, fail to make good, but the pitching staff failed to show anything until lately, while the star outfielders of the club, Wolter and Cree, had to quit the game for the season on account of injuries received early in the season.

Among the Baseball Players

Manager Wolverton says Del Paddock, his Dubuque recruit, will be a fixture at third base.

Atlanta of the Southern association has had nineteen pitchers on its roster since the first of the season.

The White Sox now have four players named Johnson on their pay roll. Will it be a case of "Too Much Johnson?"

Bobby Wallace is playing ball like a youngster and is responsible for many of the victories that the Browns are making.

Ted Easterly alone is keeping up the batting average of the Sox these days. As a pinch hitter he has few if any equals.

Captain Lord is developing into a first-class outfielder. He can go back or come forward on a hard drive as well as any of the stars.

Tommy Leach makes about as pretty a sight as the fans want to see when he is racing around the bases trying to beat out a home run.

Harry Davis is still undecided about his future plans. The chances are he will be able to get another job as a manager before the start of next season.

Topsey Hartsell, who is making a good record as leader of the Toledo team this season, is most likely to be appointed to manage the Naps next year.

Umpire O'Brien says the job of umpiring in the major leagues is easy. That's the reward an umpire gets when he does good work. Others please take notice.

Manager Griffith of the senators will have Walter Johnson and four other members of his pitching staff operated on for the removal of their tonsils after the season is over.

With the release of Chouinard and Curtis Des Moines has an entirely new outfield, in Collins, Morris and Wetzel. Curtis has gone to his home in Philadelphia. Chouinard may be back next year if his health permits.

Decide Against White Sox.

In a finding handed down by the National Baseball commission, the Elmira club of the New York State league is given the services of Player Leo Callahan. The White Sox had asked the commission to award the services of the player for the season of 1913 to Chicago, claiming that the player had accepted its terms. The commission held that there was no written acceptance or money advanced and that no other acceptance is binding.

TERRY TURNER "CAME BACK"

Clever Cleveland Infielder Playing Great Game This Season—Also Batting Quite Hard.

Terry Turner, the third baseman of the Cleveland team, is having one of the best years he has experienced since joining the ranks of the major leaguers. Terry has been hitting in fine shape all season and has been fielding like he did in the days when he broke into fast company and was known as the demon shortstop of the Naps. While the Clevelands, under Manager Harry Davis, have been a disappointment this year, the playing of Turner has been one of the bright spots in the work of the club. Terry, once regarded as among the greatest shortstops on the diamond, had considerable trouble with his arm, which kept him out of the game for a long time. It was reported at one time that he would never be able to play again, but Terry seems to have come around in good shape of late. He has been batting in the neighborhood of .320 all season and has regained the place in the hearts of the Cleveland fans he occupied a few years ago.

Terry Turner.

Unknown Makes Good.

Of the trade wherein Washington got three players from the Yankees, the only one to make good was an unknown. Williams is showing up well now, but Street and Knight, the other two ex-Yanks, have been handed the hook.

Jack Lelivelt's Improvement.

Those who have seen him since he came back to major league company say that Jack Lelivelt's improvement is due chiefly to the fact that he has rid himself of his slowness.

INSECT DOING CONSIDERABLE DAMAGE TO PEAR ORCHARDS IN EASTERN STATES

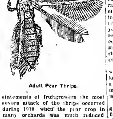
Productiveness of Many Trees in Fruit Growing Sections Has Been Greatly Reduced by Thrips, a New Pest—Most Effective Control Is Spraying.

(By P. J. PARROTT.)

For a number of years pear blossoms in orchards in the state of New York and other parts of the east have blighted, resulting in more or less extensive losses in fruit yields. Careful studies during the past year have shown that the injury is caused by the pear thrips, a new orchard pest, which has attracted considerable attention in recent years in California because of its destructiveness to various deciduous fruits.

The adult thrips, which is largely responsible for the injuries to the trees, is a small, darkish brown, winged insect measuring about one-twentieth of an inch in length. It appears in destructive numbers when the buds are opening, attacking the tenderest of the flower parts. The eggs are mostly deposited beneath the epidermis of the blossom and fruit stems. Hatching takes place within a few days, and the larvae seek preferably the calyx cups, undersides of calyces, and the folds or under surfaces of the tender, expanding leaves. The larvae feed for about two weeks and drop to the ground, in which they form a protective cell. In this cell the insect completes its transformations and emerges from the ground in the spring as an adult. The thrips is single brooded, and the most active and destructive stages are coincident with the period that includes the life events of the swelling and opening of the buds and dropping of blossoms and calyces.

Injuries by the thrips in the Hudson valley have apparently occurred over a period of five years. During the past three years fruitgrowers generally have noticed blighting of blossom clusters of pear trees, although the nature of the causal agent seems not to have been suspected. According to statements of fruitgrowers the most severe attack of the thrips occurred during 1910 when the pear crop in many orchards was much reduced. Besides losses to yields the trees were seriously checked by injuries to leaf buds and leaf clusters, and in some orchards the season was much advanced before the trees presented normal conditions of growth. The productiveness of pear orchards during 1911 was greater than the preceding year, but blighting of blossom clusters was general and orchards suffered losses in yields according to the severity of the attacks by the thrips.



Adult Pear Thrips.

Severe attacks by the thrips are a serious drain on the vitality and productiveness of the trees. In their weakened state they are also more subject to injuries by adverse weather or environment, and to attacks by various wood-boring insects. The needs of the orchard with respect to cultivation, fertilizers, pruning and spraying for other insects and diseases should be carefully considered in order that the most favorable conditions for recovery to health and productiveness may be afforded to the trees.

The thrips is a difficult pest to combat because of the nature and suddenness of its attacks. Spraying is the most efficient method of control. The period for effective spraying is during the time when the buds are breaking and until they are entirely opened at the tips. The most promising spraying mixtures are the nicotine preparations in combination with kerosene emulsion or soap. Two or three applications on successive days during the past year largely prevented important injuries to pear trees. The physical features of the locations of the orchards, such as the direction and elevation of the slopes of the land, and character of the soil, have a marked influence on the development of the buds and the time of blossoming. The time for effective spraying will therefore vary with individual orchards.

REWARDS OFFERED IN FRUIT GROWING

Great Crops Are Possible When Conditions Are Created to Produce Them.

Fruit growing offers many rewards in the way of great possibilities to those who get the most out of it. The careful planter and the liberal feeder and culturist, as a rule, gets what he is working for.

In all kinds of fruit culture great crops are possible when the circumstances are created to produce them. A well-cared for strawberry plantation, says a writer in Green's Fruit Grower, often yields wonderful results, and the same can be said of raspberries, currants, gooseberries, etc., and yet it is not best to engage in fruit culture with that as an incentive. Figure on a fair crop and if you get a large one, so much the better. I would not be understood to discourage aiming high—not by any means—simply to caution the inexperienced against building on these exceptional yields.

Do not plant too closely and give what you plant close attention. We know a man who may not be termed a model fruit grower, yet this man makes the most of what he has, and is successful.

Good varieties, good plants, suitable ground and proper care will produce fine fruit. Economy is very essential to success, and yet one must not be penny wise and pound foolish. There must be thorough work done, and plants must not be crowded. It takes some thought to know just how much work and money to bestow upon a crop to make the most possible profit from it.

It is difficult for the inexperienced to realize the great value of experience in fruit growing. After one has traveled the road he can see the value. To those who are about to establish themselves in this interesting industry, I would say to go slow at first, make small beginnings, gain your knowledge as you go on, study your location and soil so that you will know better than any one just what is possible to accomplish with it.

EXCELLENT STORAGE FOR THE ROOT CROPS

Cross Section of an Easily Constructed Pit for Roots.

E. J. Delwiche of the Wisconsin station makes the following recommendations regarding the storage of roots for feeding purposes:

The best place to store roots is in a root cellar near where they are to be fed. Such a cellar may be a part of a barn basement or it may be built conveniently near to the stock barn. In most places the root house can be built most economically of concrete. Ordinarily cement is the only material that has to be purchased. The gravel and sand are usually available at no great distance on most farms. While the temperature in a root house should never fall to the freezing point it should be at a low point for best results in keeping roots.

When no cellar is available roots may be stored in pits. For fall and early winter feeding they need not be covered to any great depth. The roots are put in conical pile about four feet in diameter on a bed of clean straw, then covered with a layer of two inches of long straw. Clean rye straw is preferred for this purpose. The straw at the apex of the pile is made to form a chimney five or six inches in diameter for ventilation. Dirt is thrown on the pile to a depth of six inches. The roots are piled as high as possible so as to shed water. When wanted for feeding the whole pit is taken into the barn at once. For early winter feeding the layer of dirt should be thicker, and in addition a covering of straw should be placed over the whole pile.

The illustration shows a pit intended to remain over winter. This provides for two layers of straw and two of earth. A ventilator made of four-inch boards is placed at the apex. When severe freezing weather sets in, the ventilator is stuffed tightly with fine hay. In such a pit roots will keep without freezing even in the coldest winters. If desired the piles may be made oblong instead of conical in shape, retaining the gable form. While pits do very well so far as keeping the roots is concerned, it must be understood that they are but makeshifts at best. A root house which is accessible at all times is much more satisfactory and more economical.

Hay Should Not Sun-Burn.

The feeding value, as well as the market value, and palatability of hay, is lowered by being sunburned. The feeding value is probably hurt most by the loss of leaves. Sunburned clover and alfalfa lose a large part of the leaves in handling, and this is the best part of the crop.

When the sun is shining very brightly the alfalfa or grass should not be left in the swath long. A large part of the curing should be done in the windrow and then the cock. Most of the hay is then shaded and so the damaging effect of intense sunshine is reduced to the exposed portion. And a stock cover will still further lessen the injury from sun as well as from rain.

Cutting Weeds.

With a sharp hoe one can cut thistles, dock, dandelions and other noxious weeds with quickness, dispatch and ease. It is light to handle, easy to use and more effective than any other implement for many purposes.

MADE THE WRONG QUOTATION

Nervous Swain Meant Well, but It Was Not Likely He Won Love of Fair Maiden.

He was diffident and unversed in society's ways, but he was badly smitten with a reigning belle, and had nerved himself to woo and win. So he secured an introduction, and in due course went to pay his first call.

He thought it would help him out a bit if he took her some flowers, so he bought a superb bouquet for her. As he reached the house, however, he remembered that she had a splendid conservatory, and he tried to think of a way out of the difficulty. Suddenly he recollected the saying anent "taking coals to Newcastle," and determined to make use of it. But he was dreadfully nervous. He broke into a cold sweat as he rang the bell, and when the divinity appeared in the reception room he didn't know whether he stood on his head or on his heels.

"I—I—thought," he stammered, "that I would b—bring you a bouquet, b—but it's like casting p—p—pearls before swine!"

HOW TO TREAT PIMPLES AND BLACKHEADS

For pimples and blackheads the following is a most effective and economical treatment: Gently smear the affected parts with Cuticura Ointment, on the end of the finger, but do not rub. Wash off the Cuticura Ointment in five minutes with Cuticura Soap and hot water and continue bathing for some minutes. This treatment is best on rising and retiring. At other times use Cuticura Soap freely for the toilet and bath, to assist in preventing inflammation, irritation and clogging of the pores, the common cause of pimples, blackheads, redness and roughness, yellow, oily, mothy and other unwholesome conditions of the skin.

To Fortune and Happy Life in California

Messrs. J. S. & W. S. Kuhn, the Pittsburgh bankers, are doing in the Sacramento Valley what the U. S. Government is doing elsewhere for the people.

There is ten times more net profit per acre in California irrigated land than in the East and with less labor.

Let us take you where there is comfort and happiness besides profit, climate equal to that of Southern Italy, no frosts nor snow, no thunderstorms nor sunstrokes.

Let us take you where big money is now being made, markets are near, demand for products great and income is sure.

Let us take you where railroad and river transportation is near, where there are denominational churches and graded schools.

Now is the time to buy this land—get in with the winners, the great Panama Canal will soon be ready and you can share in its triumphs; farms are selling rapidly, and we strongly urge you to purchase as soon as possible.

You can buy this land on very easy terms—$15.00 an acre now and the balance in ten yearly payments.

Got Right One That Time.

"Crack" went the baseball bat, and "crash" went the big windowpane of a kosher butcher in East Eighty-sixth street as the ball found its mark, says the New York Daily Mail

Like a flash, out darted the butcher and with multitudinous outcries started in pursuit of half a dozen small boys, who were legging it for dear life in the direction of Carl Schurz Park

His chase would have proved fruitless had not a policeman, by one of those miracles that occasionally happen, come around a corner just ahead of the fugitives and proved nimble enough to grab one of them.

The prisoner, knuckles in eyes, protested that he hadn't "done nothin'" and there was growing a doubt as to the value of the capture until a powerful female voice descended from an upper window across the street, saying:

"Dot's de boy! Dot's de boy! I haf him myself seen from my upstairs window down."

Where the Danger Lay.

"WHY DR. WILEY IS FOR WILSON

He Says Taft and T. R. Are Soldiers of Fraud.

ENEMIES OF PURE FOOD LAW.

Famous Chemist Believes the Health of the Nation Demands Election of the Democratic Ticket—He Appeals to Those Who, Like Himself, Have Been Republicans.

By HARVEY W. WILEY.
(Former Chief Chemist of the U. S. Department of Agriculture.)

My appeal is chiefly to those who, like myself, have been lifelong Republicans. I believe that no kind of an administration is going to ruin the country. I have a high personal regard for each one of the candidates for president and vice president on all the tickets All the political platforms are mainly sound, and all promise effort in behalf of the whole people. My choice is not based on a platform. It was determined by my impressions of the real attitude of the candidates respecting the public welfare. We are creatures of heredity and environment. In our attitude toward great public questions we are almost altogether creatures of environment.

What two men are by environment least likely to be swayed by special interests and most likely to be guided by devotion to public welfare? Two of the candidates have already been tried in the presidential chair, and we know by experience what may be expected if either of them resumes his former seat on March 4, 1913. Mr. Roosevelt by reason of his attitude toward the food and drug act abandoned the consumers of the country to the rapacity of a few mercenary manufacturers. Under authority of congress I had carried on extensive experiments with my so called poison squad and found that certain substances—viz. benzoic compounds, sulphurous compounds and sulphate of copper (bluestone)—were injurious to health.

The law conferred upon me as chief of the bureau of chemistry the duty of acting as a grand jury and determining whether foods and drugs were adulterated or misbranded. Instead of appealing from my decisions to the courts, as the law requires, the users of these poisons appealed to President Roosevelt. He not only listened to them, but he abrogated the plain provisions of the law, appointed a board not contemplated by the law and directed that these predatory interests might continue their attacks on the health of the people until this board, unknown to the law, should decide otherwise.

Can we safely trust the campaign for public health to Mr. Roosevelt? I cannot believe that to be the proper course. Mr. Taft inherited this exceedingly bad condition of affairs from his predecessor and has not only continued this illegal board under whose patronage adulterators are still poisoning the people, but he did worse. In the matter of the adulteration of distilled beverages in which Roosevelt upheld the legally constituted authorities Mr. Taft reversed that policy and threw the mighty weight of the executive office to the support of the worst lot of adulterators that ever disgraced a country.

Mr. Wilson and Mr. Marshall by their strenuous efforts in behalf of the food laws of their respective states have given a positive promise to end such a threatening state of affairs. They will support to the utmost the officials under the law who are trying to protect the public health and will make short shrift of those who have brought about these present unbearable conditions.

Wilson and Marshall by their education and environment are free from bias in favor of predatory interests and are inspired by true patriotic zeal in behalf of public welfare.

I support the Democratic nominees in full knowledge that many of the prominent Democrats in congress have been in full sympathy with the paralysis of the food law in behalf of the unholy dollar. But when the Democratic presidential and vice president lend the aid of their powerful sympathy in behalf of the public health those of their own party not in sympathy with them will be robbed of their power for evil. If Roosevelt or Taft be chosen the soldiers of fraud and adulteration will be impregnably intrenched for another four years and benzoates, sulphites and adulterated alcoholic beverages will have a new lease of life.

I believe also that President Wilson will renovate the department of agriculture, reeking, as it has been for the past twelve years, with scandals and favoritism. He will see to it that the bureau of animal industry will protect the public health instead of the efforts of the packers to sell diseased meats under the deceptive phrase "U. S. Inspected and Passed." Under President Wilson no more Pinchots will be kicked out of the service, no more unspeakable McCabes will exercise dictatorial powers. There will be no more cotton leaks and jungle atrocities, no more Everglade swindles. Buccaneering, boasting and buncombe will give place to sane efforts for the promotion of real agriculture and the public health.

Under Wilson the department of agriculture will be restored to speaking terms with the state agricultural colleges and experiment stations, and the state officials will no longer be regarded as inferior beings, living only on the largess of a Washington salary.

I ask all who want honesty and faithful service in the department of agriculture, the promotion of public health and executives who have grown to manhood and lived in an environment favorable to that which makes for the public welfare to vote for Wilson and Marshall.

TRUTH ABOUT THE TRUST.

"Expected Economies From Combination" Do Not Materialize.

[Louis D Brandeis in Collier's.]

Leaders of the new (third term) party argue that industrial monopolies should be legalized lest we lose the efficiency of large scale production and distribution. No argument could be more misleading. * * *

It may be safely asserted that in America there is no line of business in which all or most concerns or plants must be concentrated in order to attain the size of greatest efficiency, for, while a business may be too small to be efficient, efficiency does not grow indefinitely with increasing size. What the most efficient size is can be learned definitely only by experience. The unit of greatest efficiency is reached when the disadvantages of size counterbalance the advantages. The unit of greatest efficiency is exceeded when the disadvantages of size outweigh the advantages The history of American trusts makes this clear That history shows:

First.—No conspicuous American trust owes its existence to the desire for increased efficiency. "Expected economies from combination" figure largely in promoters' prospectuses, but they have never been a compelling motive in the formation of any trust. On the contrary, the purpose of combining has often been to curb efficiency or even to preserve inefficiency, thus frustrating the natural law of survival of the fittest

Second.—No conspicuously profitable trust owes its profits largely to superior efficiency. Some trusts have been very efficient, as have some independent concerns, but conspicuous profits have been secured mainly through control of the market, through the power of monopoly to fix prices, through this exercise of the taxing power

Third.—No conspicuous trust has been efficient enough to maintain long as against the independents its proportion of the business of the country without continuing to buy up from time to time its successful competitors.

FARMER GETS LESS, BUT—

He Has to Pay More For What He Doesn't Raise.

The United States department of agriculture has just announced that notwithstanding the increased cost of living among the people as a whole there was a greater decline in the prices paid to farmers from Aug. 1 to Sept. 1 this year than there was last year.

The average farm prices of the important crops (corn, wheat, oats, barley, rye, flaxseed, potatoes, tobacco, cotton and hay, which represent about three-fourths of the value of all the country's crops) declined 7 per cent during the month, while in that time last year they declined in price only 4.4 per cent, and during the last four years the decline in price averaged 3.8 per cent. The average of farm prices on Sept. 1 was 2.8 per cent lower than on that date last year.

|---|---|---|
| Corn | $0.776 | $0.659 |
| Wheat | .858 | .848 |
| Oats | .350 | .404 |
| Barley | .585 | .770 |
| Rye | .706 | .709 |
| Buckwheat | .706 | .740 |
| Flaxseed | 1.626 | 2.036 |
| Potatoes | .650 | 1.137 |
| Hay | 12.140 | 14.610 |
| Cotton | .113 | .116 |
| Butter | .242 | .221 |
| Chickens | .113 | .111 |
| Eggs | .182 | .174 |

But the prices on tariff nurtured articles of manufacture which the farmer has to buy continue to soar.

The third term candidate's favorite reply to the telling, unanswerable arguments of Governor Wilson is that the latter's opinions are based "not on actual knowledge and experience, but by reading musty books on political economy." The colonel himself at a tender age was put at hard labor! It is not often that a man whose whole life has been given up to politics and officeholding gets as horny handed as Mr. Roosevelt in the ranks of labor and high finance.

Governor Wilson said to the newspaper men at the New York Press club banquet: "Suppose you had a house of representatives mixed like the present senate. I think we could all go fishing for the next two years." But he's at the helm, and there won't be any mixing Democrats—that's all.

How many of those who are struggling with the "high cost of living" believe there is to be any relief if the Republican party, which brought it about, remains in power?

The card stacking at Armageddon goes merrily on. Eight Taft-electors in Missouri announce that if elected they will vote for the third term candidate.

By applying the common sense test to Rooseveltian romance Governor Wilson manages to keep the country both amused and thoughtful.

ABOUT PEOPLE AND PLACES

A well is being drilled on the Lewis Williams farm near Chardon. The prospectors hope to get oil or gas.

—o—

Mrs. C. C. Viall and her son, Mr. Kenneth Viall of Painesville, are spending a few days at the Hotel Wolcott, New York.

—o—

Mr and Mrs. John T. Robinson announce the engagement of their daughter, Gladys Amy, to Mr. Arthur A. Canady, of Pittsburgh, Pa

—o—

The new pastor of the Methodist church, this city, Rev E W. Morton, delivered his first sermons Sunday of this week He is an interesting and earnest speaker.

—o—

We are certain that the new book "Lake County Illustrated" will have the same effect that the Lake county fair has had. Bring the people of Lake county a little closer together.

—o—

People living in this part of the county have no idea of the bushels of apples that Kirtland township will produce this year The crop will be large and the quantity of the very best

—o—

The Elks of Painesville will expend about $4000 in remodeling the Darrow house When the work is completed the local order will have one of the finest lodge homes in this part of the state.

—o—

Just as long as the world finds you of use you will be sought and "preserved." But when you no longer serve humanity you will be pickled—and perhaps labeled as of last years product and shelved as a brief memory.

—o—

We want to ask Mr Homer Harper if it is not just possible for a house to get in such a bad stage of disorder that one could not "push the dirt out"? In such cases we recommend formaldehyde, sulphur or a spray of carbolic acid

—o—

The Herald hears all kinds of compliments for the Lake County Fair, but there is one loud complaint that comes from all over the county and that is against the gambling devices which were permitted to do a thriving business upon the grounds.

—o—

Mr. Wick Hathaway, the expert Horticulturist of Madison, Ohio, called at The Herald office Tuesday and left the Editor a few quarts of red raspberries, just plucked from his ever bearing plants which are now yielding abundantly Call again soon Mr. Hathaway.

—o—

The Superior Clothing Co. is now counted as one of the substantial business firms of the city Their fall opening was a great success, and the young men, Messrs Sarslow and Warsaw, proprietors, are highly elated over the good will and patronage extended by the people of Painesville and vicinity.

—o—

The Up-to-Date fall opening on Saturday of last week was a great success. Doolittle's orchestra furnished music and beautiful souvenirs were given away. Counting those who came to purchase, and those who came to congratulate Messrs Abramson and Rottenberg, there were nearly two thousand people at the store during the afternoon and evening.

—o—

Mr. and Mrs J. T Spaulding have sold their farm in Montville and moved into Painesville where they are nicely located. Both of these people are former residents of the county. Mrs Spaulding lived in Concord while Mr. Spaulding was for years in the employ of S. L. Malin & Son and since returning to Painesville he has again secured a position with his former employers

—o—

Ralph Abramson of the Up to Date Department store has a well-earned reputation as a successful advertiser He has never shown his ability as a young man of good taste to better advantage than in the window display for the firms' fall opening Not only is the display of goods in perfect taste, but the richness of goods shown and the harmonious arrangement as to color effect is most pleasing

—o—

The oldest, if not the very oldest, person to have the honor of attending the new Lake County Fair last week was Mrs. Benjamin Hughes, 87 years, residing just east of town. She was the guest of her son, Mr. Frank G. Hughes, and family, and made daily trips to the exposition. This venerable lady is still clever with the needle, and some of her embroidery work was awarded second prize.—Willoughby Independent.

Mayor A. J. Trunkey of Geneva is out for Common Pleas Judge. His many friends say that he has a mighty good chance of being elected too. It is being said that if a democrat is good enough to be elected Mayor of Geneva, which is about 6 to 1 republican, he is good enough to be elected to the Common Pleas bench in this division. Mr. Trunkey is a lawyer of many years experience and would make a fearless judge.

We want to ask our Mentor correspondent why we were not favored with information about that progressive circle. "The latest at Mentor is talk of the organization of what is to be known as a Progressive circle. The object, among other things, is to aim at the correction of error, the prevention of prejudice, the destruction of evil, the enlargement of mind, the development of progressive ideas and the guarding against the crystallization of intellect. This circle, if successful, is said to promise a higher degree of honor, justice and equity in all who become members. The list of charter members is not yet ready for publication, neither has the date of institution been announced.—Mentor correspondence, Chagrin Falls, (O.) Exponent."

—o—

One of the most effective exhibits of patent medicine fakery made at the congress of hygiene in Washington is an exposure of a nerve food which is simply cottage cheese with a little sodium glycero-phosphate added The advertisement claims "over 700 per cent more tissue-building, life-sustaining nourishment than wheat flour." But the experts showed that more than a dollar's worth of the stuff can be made from 10 cents' worth of skimmed milk, and that 5 cents worth of wheat flour is more than an equivalent to "tissue-building, life-giving nourishment." Another medicine, this time an eye wash, mainly borax, cost five cents a gallon and sells at $1 28 a gallon. Col Mulberry Sellers was quite right when he said, "There's millions in it," though some one else gets the millions In this case, however, the medicine is harmless and for a simple inflammation soothing, the victim has nothing worse to complain of than paying a trifle for what costs practically nothing It is quite different with medicines that are habitually swallowed and which may have a positively injurious effect

Good Roads

A correspondent to the Chardon Republican says that the value of all farms along a certain macadam road in that county have been enhanced about 20 per cent But here is the letter Read it

Ed Republican We were shocked to learn through the columns of your paper that in all probability the worst stretch of dirt road in Geauga County, was the one leading from the macadam at the west line of Windsor through to the little city on the hill, whose pride in public buildings is everywhere displayed, together with the neatness of its surroundings.

When the move for a macadam road to extend from Orwell through the entire township to the Huntsburg line was first made, we were among the kickers on account of the great burden to be borne by the taxpayers, especially those within the mile limit. But when the fight came the antis were whipped like most of the Johnnies in the South to-day. We are glad of it; all of the objections on the part of the taxpayers having disappeared.

We were told that when the road was completed, Windsor would be left out in the cold; that Orwell would get all of the business But time has proven the fallacy of that prediction, as the merchants here never had a better trade than now. And further, to any who are in search of high-priced farms, let them look along the line of the macadam road, where land has advanced more than 20 per cent

We well remember when the "old plank road" was in its glory, and how everybody sought it in the muddy days of spring and autumn, and at a price of 2 and 3 cents per mile in tolls. We have seen teams that had been tugging along with heavy loads through the mud, break into a trot of their own accord when they struck the plank, and now history repeats itself on the macadam

When we were a boy, Abe Rinker, a tailor of Windsor, had a tough and hardy Indian pony which he once drove to Cleveland and back between sun and sun during one of the longest days in June Now when Huntsburg, Claridon and Munson fill the gap in the good roads to the east of Chester, we expect to reach the city in an hour by auto

Our macadam road is moving on to the eastward, and before long it will reach the Pennsylvania line Then with the road completed to Cleveland, farmers with their taxicabs loaded at eight, will be able to reach Cleveland in time for the early market in the morning. And if they meet with ready sale, be home again by noon, with their money in their pockets.

Huntsburg, wake up, and meet the other fellers who are coming towards you from the west. Don't wait for State laws to be passed that will build the road for you. Bond your town as Windsor did, and the money will all come back in the increase of value in your property, and the higher price that you will get for your products; for when the line is completed, it will become one of the greatest thoroughfares in Northern Ohio. Don't wait, or the other fellers to the south of you may get the road.

County Y. M. C. A. Convention Next Week at Madison.

The third annual report of the Lake County Y. M. C. A. which has just been published contains a most encouraging account of the special work the Y. M. C. A. is doing in our country communities The educational work that was done in conducting the Boys' and Girls Agricultural Contests, which were so successful at the County Fair, is but a small part of its community-wide activities The promotion of the Farmers' Short Course and the Home Makers' Course last February which enrolled 200 men and 75 women, assistance in conducting English classes for 25 foreign born men at Fairport and the Nurseries, are some of its other educational features. The recreational and athletic life seems not to have been neglected when we learn that nearly 150 boys in the public schools of the county took part in athletic activities under the direction of the Association. The promotion of clean sport for the sake of building character is something that the Association emphatically believes in Another feature which has had a strong influence is the boys camp which is conducted every summer for 10 days at the Akron camp

Religious work has been carried on in Bible Study groups which meet weekly in five different communities Gospel teams have also had splendid success in preaching the gospel of good cheer, unselfishness and fair play Besides these features of religious emphasis Sunday afternoon meetings have done much to promote Christianity An outstanding feature last year was the series of "Leaders Training Conferences," which were conducted by Prof. G Walter Fiske of Oberlin, who is an expert on "Boy Life" and who is also a thorough student of rural social and religious conditions

The Association goal for this year is to have additional play and recreational features introduced into the schools, to have a one day program by school pupils at the County Fair, to have a Boys' Bible Class in each community and Gospel Teams and Men's Sunday meetings in each community The Association is also striving to have a corresponding member in each community who shall report the names and addresses of all young men who move out of the county to other places and of newcomers who move into the county, in order to help these young men become adjusted to their new quarters

Special services will be held in most of the Lake County churches next Sunday, at which Y M C A. leaders will speak of the importance of Christian work for young men in country communities The Annual Banquet of the Lake County Y. M. C. A. will be held next Monday evening, Oct 7th, at the Town Hall, in Madison. At this Banquet Judge A. R. Webber of Elyria, who is favorably known to many in this community will give an address Judge Webber was for several years a member of Congress, and is known as one of the best all-around speakers in the country Mr. Carl R. Kimball, of Madison, will be toastmaster, and the ladies of the Madison M. E. Church will serve a very appetizing banquet. Tickets may be secured for 50c from any of the following men: J. R. Dayton, T. B. West, T. D. Morley, B. F. Upham, C. W. Searls, C R Kimball, F. M. Leyda, C B. Eldredge, A M Thompson, E. F. Birkholz, E. E. Lawrence, C. E. Ortman. All men and young men are invited to attend this banquet

The Ohio Vote

Two hundred ninety-four thousand four hundred and twenty men voted "yes" on Woman Suffrage at the special election in this state September 3rd; 336,875 men voted "no." The total vote cast was 586,295, the adverse majority being 87,455.

But mark these facts (1) That Woman Suffrage received the largest vote of any of the 42 proposed amendments (2) More men voted for Woman Suffrage at this election than have ever before voted on the question pro and con, in any other state in which the question has been submitted to a vote

Let our enemies take such comfort as they may from these facts

If the suffragists of Ohio had had six months instead of three in which to campaign, they would have carried the Woman Suffrage amendment beyond the shadow of a doubt

On September 30th, a conference of woman suffragists will be held in Cleveland, to decide upon the next steps in the new campaign That they will initiate a petition under the new Initiative and Referendum law is a foregone conclusion The kind of organization to be recommended to the workers in the various counties and the length of time to be devoted to the campaign are the principal matters which will be discussed at this conference, which will be presided over by Mrs. Harriet Taylor Upton of Warren.

THREE ARE KILLED ON U. S. WAR BOAT

SIX OTHERS BADLY INJURED

Accident Occurs on Torpedo Destroyer Walke When Little Terror Was Beginning Her Speed Tests Off Newport News.

Newport, R. I.—Lieut. Donald C. Morrison of the United States navy, Chief Machinists' Mates H. L. Wilder and J. W. Rumpf were killed and Lieut. Robert L. Montgomery and five petty officers seriously injured when the steam chest of the forward port turbine on the torpedo boat destroyer Walke blew out while the little terror was beginning her speed tests off Newport. News of the casualty reached here in a wireless call and all the medical officers of the fleet were on board the hospital ship Solace, to which the Walke was able to run on her starboard engines.

Those Seriously Hurt.

The seriously injured are: D. F. Kelly, chief machinist mate; J. Delaney, fireman; W. C. Krause, oiler; E. P. Crawford, chief gunner's mate; F. Patterson, an umpire for the test; Lieut. R. L. Montgomery of the Fanning, another umpire; F. B. Conway, oiler, and O. H. Hargrave, fireman, were less seriously hurt. All are on board the Solace.

No one can tell whether Lieut. Morrison was killed by receiving the full force of the escaping steam or from a blow when the head of the turbine split.

Victim Did Gallant Act.

Recently Lieut. Morrison rescued a fireman from drowning and for this act of gallantry Capt. E. W. Eberle, commodore of the Atlantic torpedo flotilla, recommended him for commendation by the navy department.

Lieut. Morrison was married a trifle over a year ago to Miss Monroe of Annapolis and about two months ago a son was born to them. Mrs. Morrison was told of the death.

Lieut. Morrison was 25 years old, a native of Missouri, when he was appointed to the naval academy in 1902.

AUTO KILLS BUCKEYE SOLON

Machine Crushes to Death Congressman Carl C. Anderson and Injures Two Others.

Fostoria, O.—Congressman Carl C. Anderson of Fostoria was instantly killed when the automobile in which he was returning from a Democratic campaign meeting overturned near this city. Accompanying the representative from the Thirteenth Ohio district was Russell Knepper of Tiffin, Democratic candidate for county prosecutor. Knepper was seriously injured and Paul Myers, the chauffeur, suffered a broken arm.

The accident occurred two and one-half miles south of here, about 10:30 p. m. The automobile was running at high speed and turned a corner so fast that it overturned in a ditch. Congressman Anderson was crushed by the seat back, which pinned him down by the shoulders. Knepper and Myers were rendered unconscious, remaining senseless until they were found by Alvin Marks of New Riegel.

NOTED AUTO RACER IS KILLED

David Bruce Brown Dies When He Loses Control of Machine Which Crashes Into Fence.

Milwaukee, Wis.—David Bruce Brown, world famous automobile race driver, died in Trinity hospital here from injuries sustained in an accident while practicing for the grand prize race.

"Tony" Scudelari, mechanician for Bruce Brown and who has shared Bruce Brown's successes and failures in contests both in America and in Europe, sustained injuries from which there is small chance of recovery in the opinion of the surgeons at the hospital.

Both Bruce Brown and Scudelari were found to have fractured skulls when they were picked up after their high powered car had dashed into a fence bordering the extremely narrow and dangerous course over which the Vanderbilt cup race was contested.

Shoots Wife, Kills Himself.

West Pelham, Mass.—Mrs. Jennie Shaw, wife of a wealthy farmer from whom she has been separated for more than a year, was probably fatally shot and beaten by her husband, George Shaw, near here. Immediately after the attack on his wife, Shaw blew himself to pieces with dynamite.

Accused Attorney Loses.

Goshen, N. Y.—All color gone from his face, his hands twitching and his manner indicating baffled rage and despair, Burton W. Gibson heard himself named as the murderer of Mrs. Rosa Szabo by Judge Herbert Royce, who ordered the accused lawyer back to jail without bail to await the action of the grand jury. The accused man bit his lip and half arose as if to make a protest. Then he fell back limp into his seat, as Mrs. Gibson leaned over and patted him on the back.

Fiendish Murder Unearthed.

Washington, D. C.—A fiendish murder which is believed to have had its sequel in the suicide recently of Lenlla L. Jett, was brought to light by the discovery of the charred fragments of the body of Arthur Webster, a navy yard mechanic, in the combustion chamber of a furnace at a local brewery. Webster left his home September 18, telling his wife that he was "going down to the brewery to see the boys." Jett, in whose furnace Webster's remains were found, shot himself with no known motive.

STRIKERS CLASH WITH POLICEMEN

STAB ONE OFFICER IN BACK AND CRUSH IN HEAD OF ANOTHER WITH CLUB.

SERIOUSLY INJURE OTHERS

Textile Workers at Lawrence Wound Patrolmen When Latter Try to Disperse Crowd of 5,000 Parading the Streets.

Lawrence, Mass.—Closing in on a squad of policemen who, with drawn revolvers, had attempted to force them to disband, the leaders of a procession of 5,000 textile strikers stabbed one officer in the back, crushed in the head of another with a blow from a club and seriously injured several more.

Hundreds of shots were fired during the street battle and in the rioting that followed. The police were completely routed and the strikers continued their parade. The city, which is largely composed of mill workers, is practically in a state of insurrection.

Try to Disperse Parade.

Three thousand of the workers had gathered at the railroad station at noon to welcome several hundred visiting sympathetic workers from nearby towns who had come to indorse the twenty-four hour strike. After the arrival of the trains 5,000 of the workmen and their sympathizers formed in line to march to the center of the city. At their head was Carlos Presca, a prominent member of the Industrial Workers of the World, waving a red flag. A squad of policemen was rushed out to meet the marchers with orders to disperse them. The marchers refused to break step. The policemen drew their revolvers and charged. The crowd fell back as they saw the weapons, but, gaining courage as Presca and his aides spurred them on, they closed in on the officers, many of them with drawn revolvers, and a pitched battle ensued. Policeman Thomas McCarlie and Special Officer Ludwig seized Presca. Firing their revolvers into the air, the officers were about to escape with the prisoner between them when McCarlie fell to the sidewalk with two stab wounds in the back. A moment later Ludwig collapsed from a blow on the head from a club. The assailants made their escape.

Strikers Rush Police.

Freed, Presca waved his red flag aloft again and exhorted his followers to shoot to kill. The strikers rushed the police, wounding many of them, and exultantly resumed their march to the headquarters of the Industrial Workers of the World.

The cause of the interference by the police with the parade was the appearance of red flags bearing anarchistic inscriptions. Not an American flag was carried. One of the banners read:

"For the progress of the human race we have jails, gallows, guillotines and electric chairs for the people who pay to keep the soldiers to kill them when they revolt against Wood and other czars of capitalism. Arise, slaves of the world. No God, no master. One for all, all for one."

Four Believed Murdered.

Quincy, Ill.—Mystery surrounds the death of C. A. Pfanschmidt, 47, his wife, 45, their 15 year old daughter, Blanche, and Miss Emma Kaempen, 24, whose charred bodies were found after the Pfanschmidt home had burned.

The residence was located on a farm two miles from Payson, Ill. Indications point to murder and the burning of the house to cover up the crime.

Boy Makes Good His Offer.

Chicago, Ill.—That a girl whom he never had seen until she was placed at his side on a hospital operating table might live William Rugh, Jr., a Gary, Ind., newsboy, allowed his crippled leg to be amputated and the skin grafted to the limbs of Miss Ethel Smith, "the prettiest girl in Gary." Both Rugh and the girl will live. Less than five weeks ago Miss Smith, who is 18 years old, was severely burned while riding with Ray Roberts, her sweetheart, on his motorcycle.

Dies While Examining Gun.

Hartford, Conn.—Married only two weeks ago, Mrs. Catherine Perry accidentally killed herself while lying in bed examining her husband's revolver. Young Perry decided to put on an old flannel sailing shirt because of the cold, rainy weather. As he unrolled the shirt the revolver fell on the bed where his wife lay watching him. She picked up the shining weapon and, looking into the muzzle, pulled the trigger. A bullet sped completely through her head, causing instant death.

WOMAN SLAYER ESCAPES

FREES HIMSELF FROM A CONDEMNED CELL IN PEN.

Makes Perfect Dummy, Which He Leaves in His Bed and This Was Seen by Guard Every Hour.

Reno, Nev.—Fred Kinnera, murderer in the condemned cell in the state penitentiary, early in the morning freed himself from the cell, broke the door leading from the death chamber into the gallows room, mounted the gallows and dropped through the gallows in his stocking feet as the guard passed through the darkened room, tore up the wooden flooring, crept on his stomach under the building and sneaked through the prison yards to the electric fence carrying a high voltage. With a thorough knowledge he short circuited the wires, passed through the fence, re-established the circuit and slipped away for the mountains.

Kinnera murdered a woman in Ryolite. He has been feigning insanity and asked to be locked in the hospital. Fearing a scheme to escape he was locked in the condemned cell. He made a perfect dummy, which he left in his bed and this was seen by the guard every hour. Kinnera's escape is most remarkable and was accomplished single handed.

PLANS REAL ARISTOCRACY

Noted Scientist Urges Segregation of Best Specimens of Humanity in the United States.

Washington, D. C.—The real who's who of America according to the laws of eugenics, is being compiled at the eugenics record office at Cold Springs Harbor, N. Y., declared Dr. Vernon M. Cady, who lectured before the American Federation for Sex Hygiene. The best blood will comprise the real aristocracy of America, and Dr. Cady said further:

"Marriage into these lines will be considered a great honor and they will be kept untainted by poorer stock. We then shall have an aristocracy of ability, rather than one of nobility. As an example of what practical eugenics can do toward raising the race standard are the Herreshoff and Abbott families. By exercising discretion and marrying only persons of sound physique and high mentality, who belong to strains showing no hereditary weaknesses, the family of which Lyman Abbott is a member turned out 25 authors, inventors and musical geniuses in three generations. Under the same conditions the Herreshoff family produced 11 brilliant boat designers in a like time."

INSURANCE MEN ARE INDICTED

Defendants Are Charged With Conspiring to Defraud Policy Holders of Fraternal Concern.

Washington, D. C.—An indictment for conspiracy was found by the District of Columbia grand jury against Samuel J. Masters and John B. Kinnear of the fraternal organization known as the Modern Workmen of the World, and Charles A. Hartman, Frank T. Evans and Bion H. Cohill, heads of the Royal Life Insurance Co.

It is charged the defendants conspired to defraud the policy holders of the fraternal concern out of $42,138.44 by turning the assets of the Modern Workmen over to the insurance company, a District of Columbia corporation. The two concerns were to be merged, it is alleged, and Masters and Kinnear were to receive $22,000 out of the assets transferred as salaries for alleged service to the insurance company.

Can't See Cheaper Beef.

Washington, D. C.—"I see no hope of beef getting much cheaper," said Secretary Wilson of the department of agriculture. Fresh from a vacation in the west, Wilson declared there was a much greater scarcity of cattle than he had realized.

"The breeding grounds of stock cattle," said Wilson, "heretofore sent to the cornfield to be finished by fattening on corn, cannot furnish much more of that class of cattle. Homesteaders have compelled the ranchman to dispose of their cattle stock."

Auto Kills Press Agent.

New York City.—As a result of injuries received by being knocked down and run over by an automobile, John Murray, 40, general press representative of Klaw & Erlanger, theatrical producers, died in Roosevelt hospital.

After a dinner tendered to National Chairman William F. McCombs at the Hotel Astor, Murphy started for his home and was knocked down in front of the Hotel Astor and rendered unconscious. Murray had been general press representative with Klaw & Erlanger for the past four years.

NOMINATE JOB HEDGES

NEW YORK REPUBLICANS PICK LAWYER FOR GOVERNOR.

Delegates Choose James W. Wadsworth for Second Place on Empire State Ticket.

THE TICKET.

For governor—Job E. Hedges of New York.
For lieutenant governor—James W. Wadsworth, Jr., of Geneseo.
For secretary of state—Francis M. Hugo of Watertown.
For controller—William D. Cunningham of Ellenville.
For state treasurer—William Archer of Westchester.
Attorney general—Meier Steinbrink of Brooklyn.
State engineer—Frank M. Williams of Orange.
Justice court of appeals—Frank H. Hiscock of Onondaga.

***

Saratoga, N. Y.—Job E. Hedges, a New York City attorney, was nominated for governor by the Republican state convention on the third ballot. Upon motion of Mr. Cole of Queens county, Hedges' nomination was made unanimous.

From the very start of the balloting Hedges was in the lead. The first ballot gave him 880 votes against 288 for James W. Wadsworth, Jr. On the second he jumped to 384 and the third roll call gave him the victory.

Delegates who had been voting for "dark horses" then came to his support and he was nominated.

Mr. Hedges was born in 1882 at Elizabeth, N. J., and graduated at Princeton and the Columbia Law school. He is not married. He was admitted to the bar in 1888 and is a member of the law firm of Hughes, Ely and Frankel of New York. He was secretary to ex-Mayor Strong in 1895-97, city magistrate in 1897-98 and deputy attorney general but resigned in 1902 and resumed the practice of law.

James W. Wadsworth, Jr., an earnest aspirant for the chief honors, was nominated for lieutenant governor.

For only one other nomination, the attorney generalship, was a second ballot necessary. That was due to a misunderstanding. The trouble was swiftly adjusted and Meier Steinbrink, who secured the evidence in the Queens county judiciary scandal last fall, was made the nominee.

DICTATES WILL, THEN DIES

Wealthy Man Who Had Been Bitten by Stray Dog Bids Family Good-by and Expires.

New York City.—Notified Wednesday night that he was suffering from rabies in an advanced stage and that his death was a matter of hours, John Muter of Haledon, N. J., spent the time until his death Thursday calmly in settling his worldly affairs and preparing for the end. When he returned to his home Wednesday night after having been told that science could do nothing for him he summoned his wife and four children together with the Rev. Warren P. Coon, pastor of the Methodist church in Haledon which Mr. Muter, a wealthy man, had founded years ago.

"My journey here is ended," he said.

At his request the entire family knelt while Mr. Coon prayed. It was almost daylight Thursday morning before the minister left the stricken group. Mr. Muter then dictated his will, dividing his large estate among the members of his family and went to his bed. That night he became violent and later sank into a stupor, from which he never rallied.

Mr. Muter, who was almost 60 years old, was bitten by a stray dog while sitting on the porch at his home last June. He had the wound cauterized and thought no more of it.

Campaign Funds Are Made Public.

Washington, D. C.—The official figures of the Republican campaign funds from 1892 down through 1904 were made public here for the first time. Cornelius N. Bliss, Jr., submitted to the Senate investigation committee a letter written by his father, who for many years was custodian of the Republican war chest, giving the amounts from the official records.

It has been charged repeatedly that Mark Hanna spent many millions of dollars to elect McKinley in 1896. Some estimates have been as high as $18,000,000. The total receipts of the Republican national committee for that year, according to the Bliss figures, were $3,500,000.

The other campaign figures taken from the record of the national treasurer were: 1892, $1,600,000; 1900, $3,000,000; 1904, $2,088,000.

Mock Lynching Brings Confession.

Kenosha, Wis.—A mock lynching, managed by Sheriff Andrew Stahl of Kenosha county, was productive of a confession near here from Wiley Davis, a negro accused of grand larceny. After the rope had been put around his neck by the "lynchers," the man confessed to stealing a $60 gun.

Kills Three and Himself.

York, Pa.—John Caskey, aged 60, a hermit living in Southern York county, left his shanty in the hills and, with a 38 caliber revolver, murdered Frank Hendrix, 45, a wealthy farmer and his two sisters, Emma and Hester, 53 and 55, respectively. He then turned the weapon upon himself and sent a bullet through his head, dying shortly afterwards. Only four shots were fired in the killing of the four people. Caskey had been employed by Hendrix some years ago and it is said that he was paying off an old score.

Makes Startling Statement.

Washington, D. C.—That 10 per cent of the population of the United States are socially unfit, constituting a moral drag and danger to the other citizens of the country was the somewhat startling statement made by Mr. Bleecker Van Wagenen of Orange, N. J., a famous investigator of mental degeneracy, in the sex hygiene section of the International Hygiene and Demography Congress.

To reduce this army of defectives Mr. Van Wagenen advocated the [illegible] of all feeble minded persons.

IDEAL FOR THE FISHERMAN

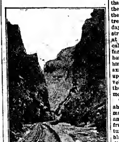
Gunnison River, Colorado's Famous Stream, Has Reputation That Is World Wide.

Denver.—The Gunnison river flows, or rather leaps, down the western slope of Colorado and is famed for its trout. Enthusiastic anglers frequently journey there from England to whip its turbulent waters during the fishing season, as the trout in this ice cold stream are celebrated for their exquisite flavor, and for their fighting qualities as well.

This picturesque stream after flowing placidly through a beautiful broad valley, hemmed in by snow capped peaks, suddenly breaks its leash and plunges into a series of rapids and cascades where it enters the Black Canon at Sapinero, whose granite walls rise on either side to a perpendicular height of from two thousand to three thousand feet above the foaming stream. It continues its tortuous course through this chasm for upward of thirty miles before it emerges into another valley at State Bridge, three thousand feet lower than where it entered the canon.



In the Black Canon.

The trout fishing is along the upper half of the canon, which is traversed by a narrow gauge railroad. The lower half of the canon is impassable. Only three men ever made the trip through it. They were government engineers who were reconnoitering for a location for the Gunnison tunnel to irrigate the Uncompahgre Valley. Their strong raft was wrecked, their instruments and clothing were lost and they were rescued in an exhausted condition.

Below the canon so much alkali and soil are discharged into the stream by the irrigating ditches that trout cannot live in it but suckers flourish there, often attaining a length of from eighteen to twenty inches. During the latter part of May the suckers go up the small tributaries to spawn. After spawning they return in schools, tail first, to the river. These small streams are rocky and swift and if the fish did not slacken speed by swimming against the current they might be bruised against the rocks.

In the pools where the water was two or three feet deep the fish were so numerous that it was no uncommon occurrence to throw out three and four fish with each thrust of the fork. The fish were weak and sluggish after spawning and did not make much effort to get out of the way. The old woman brought out two washing tubs, a washboiler and a large dishpan, all of which were filled within half an hour with fish from twelve to eighteen inches in length, which she skinned and salted down for future use. She lamented that the fish were "a-gettin' skearcer every year."

"Why, at comin' down time three years ago me and my old man got nigh onto a wagon load in no time," she said.

BEAR IS UNINVITED GUEST

Enters Sleeping Room, Whose Occupant Vacates Instanter Without Waiting to Dress.

Hood River, Ore.—The citizens of the Oak Grove district, armed with the family weapons and followed by all of the dogs that qualified for the event, are passing the time in a bear hunt. A big brown bruin came down out of the Green Point hills a few days ago, raided a raspberry patch at the ranch of Esquire C. C. Lemmon, destroyed the apiary of another rancher and entered the kitchen of the Appledel.

Robert Shinn, a graduate of the Oregon Agricultural college, who is caring for the Appledel tract, keeps bachelor's hall there. His slumbers of the early dawn were disturbed by the noise of the bear raiding the culinary department.

In a few seconds the bear had entered his sleeping apartment. Shinn left hurriedly through an open window by his bed. The flapping of his night shirt waving an adieu so suddenly in the cool morning breeze frightened the bear, which turned over a cupboard of jams and canned fruits in its hasty exit through the pantry.

The bear is said to be one of the largest ever seen in this region, and the ranchers fear that unless it is killed it will begin to raid barnyards.

SCHOOL BOARD BARS CUPID

Applicants for Positions at Wilkesbarre, Pa., Must Make Written Promise.

Wilkesbarre, Pa.—Before successful applicants for positions in Hazleton township schools are permitted to start work they must submit to writing a promise that they will not fall victims to Cupid's darts during the school year.

Some of the teachers who refused to give the written promise have been informed that their services will not be required. It is understood that the new rule has delayed a few midwinter weddings. The school board made the demand to prevent a scarcity of teachers after the term was under way.

MAIN CITY OF CEYLON

COLOMBO ALWAYS INTERESTING TO THE TRAVELER.

Its Origin Goes Back Beyond the Pages of History and Has Record in Writings of the Earliest Geographer.

Colombo, Ceylon.—Apart from its importance as the chief city of Ceylon, Colombo, in consequence of its selection as port of call on the Australian route, has a special significance. To so many English eyes it is the first glimpse of tropical luxuriance, and, however much a man may afterward explore Equatorial regions, it still remains in his recollection as essentially typical of the Tropics.

One day early in November I had my first view of Colombo, and beheld the low promontory which Ptolemy the geographer marked on his map in the second century A. D. as "Jovis Extremum." I thought on this, my first day in Colombo, as I stood in the streets—streets as busy as Cheapside at one o'clock—that it might well be called "The City of the Silent Feet," for the fact that nearly everyone goes barefoot lessens enormously the amount of noise. The heat and the extreme humidity at first press hard upon the stranger, and a baffling envelope of lassitude seemed trying all the while to clog and hamper every movement of body or of limb.

Two-wheeled bullock-carts innumerable passed along at a leisurely pace, many of them loaded with tea-chests and some with plantains or other fruit. The bullocks were little creatures for the most part, sometimes black and sometimes fawn or a reddish brown, and the wooden yokes that lay across their necks were heavily fashioned. A thatch of palm-leaves protected the goods from rain and sun. In the main thoroughfares tramways echoed the modernity of shops and office buildings, but the old order jostled with the new. A herd of water buffaloes obstructed the tramlines; on the steps of the pretentious general postoffice native letter-writers, under wide umbrellas, scribbled missives for their clients, and at every street corner squatted the sellers of betel, generally women.

Of the wonderful Dagobas remaining at Anuradhapura space will permit no description—not of the Thuparama, the most beautiful, where the right collarbone of Buddha was enshrined, nor of the vast mass of the Ruanweli and the four statues recently discovered among its ruins of the great Abhaya-Giri, the Jetavanarama, or the Lankarama. They and the scattered ruins in the depths of the forest show still the extent of the buildings of that sacred city beside which ancient Rome and Byzantium were but pigmy towns.

TAKES BEAR IN BATHING

Maid in Silk Bathing Suit, When Dared to Take Bruin Along, Promptly Does So.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Miss Anna Fredericks, a comely beach girl, went swimming through the breakers at Venice accompanied by a half-grown cinnamon bear.

Miss Fredericks was one of the thousands of bathers along the ocean front. She was clad in an attractive silk bathing suit and was accompanied by several friends, when R. F. Pierce of Pasadena strolled by, leading two half-grown cinnamon bears, which he secured in Northern California when the bears were only a few weeks old.

"I dare you to take one of the bears in swimming," said a friend to Miss Fredericks.

The young woman took the [illegible] escort, after futile attempts at dissuasion, secured one of the bears. The little animal was quite tame and trotted down to the surf line with Miss Fredericks.

Thousands of beach visitors thronged the water front to watch the novel performance. At first the little bear snorted and fussed as the spray splashed over his nose, but finally, with a little grunt, he ducked into the breakers and followed the leash which Miss Fredericks carried.

CORTELYOU IS MUM

WHY DOESN'T HE TELL WHAT HE KNOWS CONCERNING THE ARCHBOLD CHARGES?

LOOKS DARK FOR ROOSEVELT

Assuming the Standard Oil Man Told the Truth, All Others Concerned Are Involved in What Was a National Disgrace.

Where is Cortelyou and what has he to say regarding the Archbold charges? Alone of the living participants in that famous deal, he has kept silent. Yet it was to him that Mr. Bliss reported, and to him that Roosevelt "appealed" in his letters and telegram. He knows and should tell whether Archbold has concocted this story in order to cast discredit upon Roosevelt and the Progressive campaign or is reciting facts. His apparent unwillingness to say anything on this case is certainly an alarming phase of the situation. It can be construed in either way, for or against Roosevelt. Cortelyou's loyalty to his old friend and patron may make him reluctant to expose that friend. On the other hand, he is now president of the New York Gas company, brought to New York by Frank Vanderlip, president of the National City bank, and if he were minded to dispute Archbold, his new alliances might give him pause. Yet in the very nature of things he must speak and give his version of the dispute. Without his testimony or with it even the affair may not be settled. Indeed it bids fair never to be settled. One item remains for Mr. Archbold to produce and that is Mr. Bliss's receipt. That certainly ought to be somewhere in the Standard's files, and if it is not found the failure to find it will be cited as a point in Mr. Roosevelt's favor. Thus far the colonel's denials have lacked substance and verisimilitude. In the old days he was lavish with documents and other material with which to overwhelm his critics. Now he indulges in lurid adjectives. The case looks dark for him.

But, assuming that Archbold told the truth, it looks almost as dark for all others concerned. Mr. Archbold acknowledges or claims that he gave the money with the distinct understanding that Roosevelt should know of it, which means that the president of the United States was thereby to be put under obligations to the Standard Oil company. Quid pro quo, clearly. Later there was demand for more and when Archbold hesitated, Mr. Bliss feared the Standard people were "making a mistake"—which freely translated, meant that unless they came down again they would feel the pressure of governmental disfavor. In other words, blackmail. And in this blackmailing were involved the president and his adjutants in the salt trust hunt on the one hand and Mr. Archbold and his ramifying associates on the other.

"Dear Mr. Bliss" was involved, too, in a sense, for he later expressed to Mr. Archbold his deep regret at the president's actions, bewailing his own failure to influence him. Mr. Cortelyou is involved too, for he must have known what was going on, at any rate during the campaign. There were thus two parties to the transaction, the bribe-givers and the bribe-takers. All the bribe-givers seem perfectly at ease in their consciences at their action, regarding it as simply a phase of politico-commercial life. How their acts will appear to posterity and to the world at large may be another matter. The only justification for them lies in the fact that they were approached by the other side in the beginning. That, of course, is usual, but not invariable. Then, too, they had courage enough to refuse to be bled still more, although warned that they would suffer for it. But it all shows the horrible plight of politics in this country and is a disgrace to the nation. How the London dailies and weeklies will exult at these revelations! How especially will the Saturday Review rejoice at a justification of almost every fling it has made at American corruption!

Can anything be said in reply? Very little. We can only construct a diabolical plot by Archbold, Penrose, et al., to ruin Mr. Roosevelt and the Progressive cause. There are very few things to justify such a theory. Among these is the death of Mr. Bliss and the fact that his books as treasurer of the committee were destroyed by him; so that any accusation whatever could be made and no proof of its falsity could be produced. Of course this argument will apply as well to the other side of the case. Naturally the Standard Oil people are furious at Roosevelt for his prosecution of the trust and would do almost anything to checkmate his ambition to be president again, but that they would devise such a plot is hard to believe. If we inject Mr. Penrose into the affair, we may say that his $3,000,000 story about the Progressive campaign this year is so absurd that it is difficult to credit any of his charges. On the other hand, Roosevelt's relations with Harriman during this campaign were such as to make it probable that he welcomed contributions. We know that he asked Harriman to help in the New York state campaign of that year. And it was no worse to ask Harriman than it was to ask Archbold. Moreover the distinction between state and national campaign funds is mythical. The burden of proof is decidedly on the colonel. He ought at once to produce some proof. Let him testify himself, and especially let him produce Mr. Cortelyou. Then we shall still have an unsolved question but the burden may not seem so heavy against the ex-president.

EXPOSES THE TARIFF FRAUD

American Company's Offer of Steel Rails to Manchester, England, Is Illuminating.

Recently the city of Manchester, England, wanted steel rails for its roads. The contract was not a large one, but when it was advertised the bidding for it was sharp and bitter. Manchester is in the iron and steel district of England, and in a position to command the lowest price on the domestic product.

When the bids were opened, however, it was found that an American concern, the Lorain Steel company of Johnstown, Pa., had made the lowest offer. In round figures, the Lorain company would sell for $51,000 what its English rivals demanded $55,000 for.

The American company was prepared to manufacture the rails, pay freight and handling to the Atlantic seaboard, pay freight and handling by sea to England, and again pay freight and handling to Manchester, and still make a profit on its sale at nearly ten per cent. under the British price.

And yet, in the face of such a showing as this, the stand pat Republican still maintains that the present tariff on steel rails is absolutely essential to the prosperity of the industry in this country. The steel business is still to him an infant industry, even though it can go into the heart of Britain and win contracts in competition with hard-headed, close-calculating manufacturers of the tight little isle.

As it is with steel, so it is with a number of other products of our manufacturing plants, and with much of our raw material. Some day the American citizen will wake to the fact that he has been swindled by the tariff mongers who have fattened on his toil, and then the day of reckoning will come.

Doesn't Remove the Odium.

Secretary Fisher's order that the entries upon Alaskan coal lands, commonly known as the Cunningham claims, be canceled, was really the confirmation, after a rehearing, of a decision rendered by him some time ago. This reversal of the Alaskan land policy, which has become identified with the name of Secretary Fisher's predecessor in office, is a gratifying termination of a painful episode. It will hardly relieve the Taft administration, however, from the discredit attached to it because of the countenance given to Ballinger and of the persecution of subordinates in the land office, who dared question the actions of their chief. Attorney General Wickersham's back-dated opinion, moreover, has not been explained away.

Reveal Their Own Shame.

It has been the unpleasant task of the Record for the last thirty years to bring to the attention of the voters of the country the systematic debaucheries practiced by Republican campaigners in the use of vast sums of money for carrying elections. To gather together the proofs of corruption from unwilling witnesses and to cite last year misdoing as a warning against this year and next year repetitions has been a labor of difficulty now happily no longer necessary. The Record can find better employment for its employes. The Taft and Roosevelt shouters and statisticians are busy in uncovering mutual default and criminality. They are diving into the records of past campaigning income and outgo and publishing the scandalous truth. There never was, nor ever will be, a more shameless exhibit since Sodom and Gomorrah.—Philadelphia Record.

OHIO COUNTIES EARN $710,570

ON MONEY DEPOSITED IN BANKS, DUE TO RATES FIXED IN COMPETITIVE BIDDING.

ARE MANY WILLIS TAX DELINQUENTS

Many Ohio Farmers Not Making a Living in the Report of Dr. Wilson's Staff Investigating Rural Conditions.

Columbus.—During the last half of 1911 and the first half of 1912 the counties of the state earned $710,570.98 as interest on county funds deposited in banks under rates fixed in competitive bidding. This sum represents only the interest on funds belonging to the counties, the moneys deposited by cities not being included.

Cuyahoga earned the largest sum of any county, $180,843.24. The city of Cleveland earned more than that, having large sums on deposit in the banks for the entire time.

Hamilton county was second, its earnings being $117,448.35. Summit county was third with $34,891.48. Then came Lucas, with $31,872.92, Franklin, with $30,782.56, Stark, with $27,882.13, and Montgomery, with $14,921.69.

Many Willis Tax Delinquents.

A large profit is in sight for the state of Ohio because of delinquency in the Willis tax by a great many domestic corporations. Under the provisions of the law this tax must be paid before October 1 and failure is subject to a fine of 15 per cent on the annual tax in addition after that date. According to figures at the state treasurer's office only 5,305 of the 11,668 domestic corporations have paid so far. This leaves about $1,500,000 to be collected and 14 per cent additional on this amount would give the state a profit of $100,000.

Many Farmers Not Making a Living.

Columbus.—Many Ohio farmers are not making a living, scores of the state's churches in rural districts are dying because too many of them, of different denominations, try to find support, and social life has almost ceased to exist in some of the poorer counties—these are part of the findings of the Ohio rural life survey in an investigation of religious, social and economic conditions in Ohio by reports recently received here.

The survey was made during the summer under the direction of the department of church and country life of the Presbyterian board of home missions. Dr. Warren H. Wilson was in charge. Associated with the Presbyterian workers are a great variety of individuals and associations.

Sixty men who have worked in the field are now making their reports. The field covers the following counties, picked to give as wide a scope as possible to the investigation:

Western Reserve—Geauga, Ashtabula.
Eastern Ohio—Wayne, Holmes, Columbiana, Harrison, Guernsey, Muskingum, Licking.
Ohio river—Washington, Athens, Vinton, Lawrence, Adams.
Southwestern Ohio—Hamilton, Butler, Preble, Darke, Montgomery.
Northwestern Ohio—Defiance, Allen, Hancock.

"Of course," said Hermann Morse of Dr. Wilson's staff, in charge of the compilation of the results of the survey, "it is impossible to deduce from the reports any statewide conditions. We are simply finding what conditions are in certain localities."

Buy Clothes for Boys.

At the first sight of frost on the pumpkin the state board of administration has set about buying winter suits for the boys who are soon to leave the Lancaster industrial home. When the big family was checked over it was learned that 200 yards of woolens would be required. In addition, [illegible] pairs of brand new shoes have been ordered, while a generous supply of underwear also will be supplied each youngster to leave the institution.

Contracts for furnishing the suitings are being let as quickly as possible as the tailoring will be done by the men at the Mansfield reformatory. The new shoes will also be made at that institution.

Now in Full Effect.

Columbus.—Ohio's new constitution became an entity September 23 by issuance of a proclamation by Governor Judson Harmon declaring 34 of the proposed amendments to have been adopted by the people and eight to have been rejected by them. The proclamation specifies each proposition and tells the action of the voters at the recent election.

Appointed by Harmon.

Governor Harmon appointed Dr. Silas Schiller, Democrat, an eclectic, of Youngstown, to succeed Dr. J. M. Stephenson, Democrat, Chillicothe, as member of the state medical board. The governor also appointed Charles E. Chittenden, Toledo, and D. V. Voorhiss, Bowling Green, members of the Ft. Meigs Memorial association, and reappointed D. K. Hollenbeck, Perrysburg; C. W. Shoemaker, Waterville, and William Corlett, Waterville, members of the same association.

Harmon Fixes Trip Date.

Because of a faster schedule, Governor Judson Harmon said that he and the party which will make the trip to the Pacific coast to make the official selection of the site for the Ohio building of the Panama-Pacific exposition will leave Columbus October 8 over the Pennsylvania lines instead of during the following day. Mrs. Harmon and their daughter, Mrs. E. H. Wright, will be in the party.

The legislature has appropriated $2,000 for the trip, which will last between two and three weeks.

Pay-Patient Act Fund Doubles.

Noteworthy increases in the amounts collected by the board of charity from institutions classified under the pay-patient law are shown in a report of the fiscal year ending August 15, which has just been completed. In the aggregate $165,814.30 has been received by the board, as against $85,206.79 the previous year.

The 1912 amounts received were announced as follows: Athens hospital, $16,153.85; Cleveland, $17,254.38; Columbus, $26,193.62; Dayton, $19,941.83; Cincinnati (Longview hospital), $15,286.90; Massillon, $27,642.84; Toledo, $29,546.96; Gallipolis, $13,783.92.

Prior to the adoption of the pay-patient law, August 15, 1910, the institutions now under the new classification were sustained entirely by the state.

Disease Fixes Problem.

In considering a claim for damages filed by William Peters, an employe of the Cincinnati National Lead Co. of Cincinnati, the state liability board of awards was called on for the first time to take action regarding occupational diseases. Mr. Peters declares he is suffering from lead poisoning and asks indemnity.

What power the board has in such cases has never been decided and the attorney general has been asked for an opinion. The wording of the laws governing the board is that damages are to be paid for "injuries," but the question whether an occupational disease may be considered an "injury" is raised.

In case the board feels that it cannot grant an award an appeal will be made to the court of common pleas.

Must Receive "Drunks."

Columbus.—A superintendent of a state hospital must receive "drunks" if they are committed to the institution by a probate court, according to an opinion given by Attorney General Hogan to Superintendent H. C. Eyman of the Massillon State hospital.

Gets Inspection Fund.

The legislature at the last session added to the duties of State Labor Commissioner Lange that of inspecting mattresses but gave him no money to do it with. Realizing that mattresses are articles of necessity and are used by every voter and his family, Commissioner Lange decided they must be inspected and squeezed out of his contingent fund enough to pay the cost.

He told the state emergency board that fund was empty. The board allowed him $1,500, which he said was enough to continue the beneficent work of inspecting mattresses until the end of the year.

Bank Stock Value Increased.

Shares of live banks in Ohio have increased in value in the last year $7,231,983, according to the assessments of banks as announced by the state tax commission. On the face of the figures, it appears that there have been increases amounting to $5,719,713 and decreases amounting to $3,042,072, a net increase of $2,677,641, but the liquidation of three banks in Cincinnati and one in Columbus lost $4,554,342 to the tax duplicate or $1,512,270 more than the total decreases. The difference in the actual decreases and the loss by liquidation, $1,512,270, added to the increases, reaches the sum of $7,231,983, which is the real increase on the live banks.

Hurts Rural Social Life.

Columbus.—The telephone, rural delivery, automobiles, growth of cities and labor saving machinery are among the principal causes which contribute to the decline in rural social life, according to data in the hands of Secretary A. P. Sandles of the state board of agriculture. For the purpose of gathering information to be used in an address he is scheduled to give before the Farmers' national congress at New Orleans, November 7, Mr. Sandles mailed a list of questions to dozens of men prominent in business and educational circles in all parts of the country. He has received many answers. Because of automobiles and street cars, it is argued, that many from the rural districts seek their social life in the cities and towns which now easily may be reached because of the advantageous modern means of travel.

Two Crushed Under Auto.

Canton.—Jacob H. Minner and Miss Anna Keller of Youngstown were painfully hurt and had narrow escapes from death when an automobile in which they were riding was struck by a flat car pushed by a shifter engine as they were crossing the B. & O. tracks in West South street. The occupants of the automobile were pinned under the wrecked machine and dragged 40 feet along the track in front of the wheels of the flat car.

Vote to Join Branches.

Kenton.—After several hours of spirited debate at the Central Ohio Methodist Episcopal conference here, it was decided by a vote of 145 to 15 to merge this organization with the Cincinnati conference.

Chickens Are Vaccinated.

Columbus.—Four hundred chickens have been vaccinated at Ohio state university by the veterinarian department in order to prevent them from contracting croup during the winter. Department claims they will be immune for a year, and also lay more eggs.

Switchman Killed by Train.

Chicago.—P. J. Kane, 42, of Lima, a B. & O. switchman, was found in the yard here with his head severed. It is thought he fell from a car.

Akron.—Rev. W. S. Jenkins, pastor of the West Congregational church of this city, has resigned to engage in the real estate business.

Values Increase $5,000,000.

Increases amounting to almost $5,000,000 were made by the state tax commission this year in the values of the electric light companies in the state, according to figures made public here. The total increases made were $5,093,785 and there were decreases made amounting to $117,175, making the net increase $4,976,610.

OHIO STATE NEWS GIVEN IN BRIEF

DISCHARGED NURSE CAUSES INVESTIGATION OF ERIE COUNTY INFIRMARY.

CIRCUS FIGHTS MOB WITH ELEPHANT

Jewett, Ohio, Man Takes "Rough on Rats" and Also Drinks a Quantity of Chloroform—Doctors Then Save His Life.

Investigating Infirmary Conditions.

Sandusky.—Inmates have been drunk two or three days at a time without leaving the premises, Mrs. Caroline Schroeder, the discharged nurse who preferred charges against Supt. Ott; a nurse danced what was described as "the skirt dance" upon one occasion when a party was given, Ott himself told racy stories in the presence of women and girls, and misbehavior was general, according to testimony given before the board investigating conditions at the Erie county infirmary. Twelve witnesses were examined, including Ott's wife and daughter, who denied that immorality had been permitted.

Fight Mob With Elephant.

Bowling Green.—The Wood county fair ended in a semi-riot, in which a National Guard company was called out and an elephant was used to protect property of a circus. Lewis Oberdorf, a teamster, sought to prevent the removal of the side shows from the grounds because, it is said, C. E. Mack was hauling the property for only $1 a load. Showmen combined, it is said, and gave Oberdorf a beating, although he denies this. Members of the Second infantry, O. N. G., who have been acting as guards, were called out, as well as the police and sheriff's forces. No arrests were made.

Takes Two Poisons, Lives.

Canton.—Discouraged because he had failed in his first job away from home, Chalmers S. Spence of Jewett, O., was so determined to end his life that he took a large quantity of "rough on rats" and then drank part of a bottle of chloroform, in view of a large number of persons in the waiting room of the Pennsylvania station. He was rushed to a hospital and will recover. Attending physicians said that the two poisons had counteracted each other and that to this fact Spence owed his life.

Makes Love to Widows.

Toledo.—Ed Delahny, 26, of Columbus, advertised in the papers that he was a rich widower and he wanted a widow to take care of his home in Bowling Green.

Over 25 Toledo widows answered the advertisement. One of the widows, who owned a home on the East Side, became suspicious when Delahny advised her to sell her home. She had Delahny arrested. It was then discovered by the police that the man had a wife and child in Columbus and that he did not have a home at Bowling Green. Delahny was fined $100 and costs.

Puts "Hooks" to Prisoners.

Canton.—"Yes, we apply the 'hooks' to prisoners who deserve it," admitted Eli Boyer, superintendent of the workhouse, "but the treatment is not nearly as severe as some of the prisoners claim after they have been released. We take prisoners who persist in disobeying the rules to the 'torture room,' if you want to call it that, put their hands through a ring and fasten them up."

The assertion by Boyer was made in an interview on a claim made by a young prisoner from Akron that he had seen the "hooks" applied to several prisoners, and that they were made to stand on one foot for 12 hours at a time, one foot being strapped up close to the hip, and the arms fastened to a hook in the ceiling.

Ohio Woman Causes Suit.

Kenton.—The visit of a Kenton woman to Chicago has resulted in the filing of a $10,000 damage suit by a facial beautifying institute against the Chicago Y. W. C. A. and the Travelers' Protective association. Mrs. Peter Waldeck, Jr., of Kenton, landed in Chicago to take a course at the institute. Missing the representative of the institution at the train she was taken in charge by agents of the Y. W. C. A. and the Travelers' Protective associations, who aroused her suspicions as to the character of the institute, whereupon she returned to Kenton. The facial institute's officers are claiming damages for the alleged injustice to the reputation of their school.

Coffins Go Cheap at Auction.

Washington C. H.—"How much am I bid for these two coffins? You never can tell when you will need one. Life is mighty uncertain," cried Col. Sweepson of Chillicothe, auctioneer, in his most persuasive tones at the sale of household effects held by Lon Green. But even the eloquent Sweepson could not stir enthusiasm beyond a 5-cent bid for one and a 10-cent bid for the other. A carpenter who bought one of the coffins says he is going to make a tool chest out of his purchase.

Girl Rescued From Resort.

Akron.—Lillian Phillips, a pretty 17-year-old Lima, O., girl, was rescued from a North Howard street resort by the police. She had been held as a white slave for more than three weeks, having been lured to this city, she says, by a man and woman who gave their names as Bellows. She says they promised to secure her employment in one of the Akron factories. Three men, John Lorenzo, James Dello and Winifred Saunders have been arrested in connection with the case.

PORTRAYING THE LAMB OF GOD

The Savior as the Scriptures Have Revealed Him to the Eyes of His Followers.

In the gallery of the gospel the atoning Lamb is one of the many striking portraits of the Son of God. We read in the Old Testament that Isaac, who was the type of the race, was saved by a lamb, Abraham saying, "My son, God will provide himself a lamb." The place of the sacrifice was named Jehovah-Jireh—the Lord will provide."

Isaiah tells us that Christ was brought as a lamb to the slaughter. The Jews understood better than we do what John the Baptist meant when he introduced Jesus, exclaiming, "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sins of the world." All Israel knew that, for fifteen hundred years every morning at nine o'clock, and every afternoon at three o'clock, a lamb had been sacrificed on the altar of the temple, for the sins of the people, and now that the Great Messiah had come to be sacrificed once for all, he was most truly called "The Lamb of God," who offered himself without spot or blemish for the sins of mankind.

All believers in Christ delight in John's gospel, not only on account of its simplicity and its matchless portrayal of the Savior, but because John, the beloved disciple, was the only one so near to Jesus that he leaned on his bosom at the last supper; the only one of the twelve who watched with Christ in his crucifixion agony, who heard his dying words, receiving his tender request to care for the mother of Jesus. John was the only apostle who was last at the cross and first at the sepulchre, the only one to whom Jesus appeared after his ascension, who, surviving all the other apostles, was favored with a vision of the glories of the eternal world before his translation.

Not only in the gospel of John, but in his epistles, and in the Book of Revelations, Jesus is pictured as the Divine Lamb of God, whose precious blood cleanses from all sin. After John, on the isle of Patmos, heard once more the voice of his blessed Master, saying, "I am he that liveth and was dead, and behold I am alive forever more. Write what the Spirit saith to the churches," John looked, and beheld, and lo, "in the midst of the throne stood a lamb, as it had been slain, and he came and took the book, and the elders fell down before the Lamb, and sung a new song, saying, 'Thou art worthy to take the book and to open the seals thereof, for thou wast slain and hath redeemed us to God, by thy blood out of every kindred and tongue and nation.'"

John Bunyan said that the above passages first convinced him of the deity of Christ. Well they might, for the Lamb of God is the only one in heaven or in earth found worthy to open the book of reward and punishment, worthy to become the enthroned Judge of the universe. None but the Creator and Redeemer of men could be thus described. Christ also has opened the book we call the Bible, sending messages to the millions of earth, charging his apostles to proclaim his saving power, His heavenly home, rewards and retributions to men.

The Lamb of God attained his exalted throne through sacrifice, and his followers enter the holiest place through his blood, having washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. We are told that John saw no temple therein; for the Lord God Almighty and the Lamb are the temple of it. The Holy Trinity makes every place worshipful. "The city had no need of the sun, for the glory of God did enlighten it and the Lamb is the light thereof." John found true the words of his Lord when he said, "I am the light of the world," as well as the declaration, "I am the bread of life," "for the Lamb, which is in the midst of the throne, shall feed them."

The Lamb of God thus becomes a most familiar phrase in the last book of the Bible and is identical everywhere with Almighty God.

Jesus is the Lamb that died. The marks of redemption are upon him and will be the badge of his glory through eternity. "He is clothed in vesture dipped in blood." He is the great Conqueror; he has met all the enemies who made war with the Lamb, and the Lamb overcame them. His church has been going forth, conquering and to conquer; "and they who overcame by the blood of the Lamb" have joined the armies of the skies under the reign of their almighty King. "On his head are many crowns, on his thigh a name written, 'The Word of God.'"

Oh, wondrous scene when is celebrated the perfect triumph of the Lamb of Calvary. Then everything that hath breath will praise the Lord God of Hosts for a redeemed universe. —Rev. Edwin Whittier Caswell.

Sensitive to Others' Interests.

It is not a sign of power to make light of things that mean a great deal to the people around us. Even if people's interests are unworthy or misdirected, we shall not win them to higher ground by riding rough shod over those interests. But we shall find it easy to influence people if we show a genuine interest in some things that mean much to them. Dr. Winfield Scott Hall warning teachers and parents against the danger of throwing aside the worthless trinkets that a young boy carries in his pockets reminds us that "the boy loves the teacher who respects the thing that he holds dear." We may well respect, we ought to respect anything that anyone holds dear—if it is not something that stands for outright sin. For our respect is an evidence of our insight and sympathy, and the showing of such respect is a simple duty demanded by courtesy and love. An alert, appreciative sensitiveness to the things that make up the life of our fellows is a form of unselfishness that Christ can use mightily as he seeks to bless others through us.—Sunday School Times.

BACKACHE A SIGNAL OF DISTRESS

Pain in the back is the kidneys' signal of distress. If this timely warning is ignored, there is grave danger of dropsy, gravel, uric poisoning, or Bright's disease.

When you have reason to suspect your kidneys, use a special kidney medicine.

Doan's Kidney Pills relieve weak, congested kidneys—cure backache—regulate the urine. Good proof in the following statement.

"Every Picture Tells a Story."

CONVINCING TESTIMONY

James E. Payner, Thompson Ave., Roseville, Ill., says: "I was laid up with kidney trouble. The pain in my back was so bad that I couldn't move. The kidney secretions were in a terrible condition. An acquaintance advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills and I did so. They made me well and during the past four years I have had no further trouble."

Indignant Frenchman Had Some Fault to Find With Postmaster, and Said So.

A Frenchman with a name spelled a la Paris and pronounced something like Ca-choo had never learned to read or write, but he managed to disguise the fact pretty well until he moved to a new community where the name was not common. Going to the postoffice one morning he inquired:

"Got any mail for Joe Ca-choo?"

"What's the name?" inquired the clerk.

"Ca-choo. Joe Ca-choo."

"How do you spell it?"

"Can't you spell Joe Ca-choo?"

"No," said the clerk, "I never heard it before."

Then the disgust of the Frenchman, which had been constantly rising, boiled over and he snorted:

"Well, if you can't spell, why don't you sell your old postoffice to someone that can?"

Potteries Prospering.

The output of the pottery industries of the United States had a value of $34,518,580 in 1911, according to the United States geological survey chart of clay products production, by states, compiled by Jefferson Middleton. The pottery collection for 1911 was greater than for 1910, when the output was valued at $33,784,678, the increase being $732,882. Of the total production, Ohio was first, with an output valued at $14,773,265; New Jersey second, with $8,401,341; West Virginia third, with $2,880,202; New York fourth, with $2,178,364; Pennsylvania fifth, with $2,156,817, and Indiana sixth, with $1,004,727. The output of no other state had a value in excess of a million dollars.

HARD TO SEE.
Even When the Facts About Coffee are Plain.

It is curious how people will refuse to believe what one can clearly see.

Tell the average man or woman that the slow but cumulative poisonous effect of caffeine—the alkaloid in tea and coffee—tends to weaken the heart, upset the nervous system and cause indigestion, and they may laugh at you if they don't know the facts.

Prove it by science or by practical demonstration in the recovery of coffee drinkers from the above conditions, and a large per cent of the human family will shrug their shoulders, take some drugs and—keep on drinking coffee or tea.

"Coffee never agreed with me nor with several members of our household," writes a lady. "It enervates, depresses and creates a feeling of languor and heaviness. It was only by leaving off coffee and using Postum that we discovered the cause and way out of these ills.

"The only reason, I am sure, why Postum is not used altogether to the exclusion of ordinary coffee is, many persons do not know and do not seem willing to learn the facts and how to prepare this nutritious beverage. There's only one way—according to directions—boil it fully 15 minutes. Then it is delicious." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest. Adv.

DIVORCE THE PHILIPPINES.

One tremendous expense now being borne by American taxpayers that will be lifted in the event of the election of a Democratic president and Democratic House is the cost of governing the Philippine islands, which is being done against the desire of 95% of the Filipino people. Two years ago Senator Hoar stated in the senate that up to that time the cost had been $600,000,000. Since then we have kept in those islands an average of 12,277 troops. It cost the government $1,500 annually to maintain each soldier. The cost alone of maintaining the military forces in the Philippines last year was over $26,000,000. It is safe to affirm that the sum which would be annually saved, were the United States to relinquish sovereignty over the Philippine islands, would not fall short of $50,000,000. Democratic success means the divorcing of the islands and Republican success means their retention.

SENATOR CLAPP TESTIFIES!

Senator Moses E. Clapp, of Minnesota, says:

"You will hear it said constantly, with reference to something on which the price has been advanced, 'Oh, that isn't in the tariff at all. That increase has nothing to do with the tariff.' But the fact is that the tariff reaches all along the line. You can't raise the cost of living to a man who is producing something to sell without forcing that man to raise correspondingly the price of what he has to sell."

QUERY FOR PROTECTIONISTS!

If our protective system is not the "substantial" explanation of the abnormal increase in the cost of living in the United States, how does it come that British prices, under free trade, increased but 7.7 per cent in ten years, while American prices, under protection, increased 34.3 per cent?

Democratic Judicial Nominees.

The Herald has had several requests from readers to publish the names of the Democratic nominees for judicial offices upon the State, District and County tickets and they are given in the table below. While the following candidates were nominated by regular Democratic primaries or conventions, their names will appear upon the Non-partisan Judicial ticket, alongside the tickets carrying the nominees for National, State and County offices. For the information of voters the names of the Democratic Judicial nominees will be published from week to week in The Herald until the November election:

Draining Desert Lands.

One of the curiosities of irrigation is that it is sometimes necessary to drain such lands. When the lands are situated on a comparatively level, the water from the irrigation ditch above seeps along the line between the rock formation and in many cases accumulates in such an amount that it actually becomes swampy. Then it has to be drained, just as in the case of the the south. It seems strange to witness the laying of a drainage system in an arid country, but it has been done a great many times. The average user of irrigation who fails may trace his lack of success to the too liberal use of water. Instead of watering he really drowns his crops.

All That Was Left.

A large boarding house caught fire during dinner and much confusion resulted. After the worst was over the landlady, who was a philosophical soul, remarked that it was a blessing that the fire had not happened at night, as some life might have been lost.

A little later the colored boy, who heard this, mysteriously called her aside and cautiously exhibited a great bunch of dark, tangled hair. "Don't say nothin', Miss Nora," he whispered. "Dis fish is worse den it 'peers. One o' dem ladies in de room oveh de li'harry done got burnt up. I been up dar to see, an' I found her hair."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Best Way to Rest.

Sometimes the best way to work is to take a few hours of relaxation before plunging into troublesome duties.

It is impossible to rest unless there are quiet and calm in the mind and peace in one's heart and soul.

A trouble worried brain disturbs the entire physical forces, making one incapable of work or one's best efforts.

There is a great difference between the naturally lazy person and one who knows the need of rest. One cannot find pleasure in rest unless one works, for otherwise there is no contrast. It's like eating when one isn't hungry. No hurried, flurried, fussy woman can ever be beautiful.

TRAVELING MEN FOR WOODROW WILSON.

He Has a Record of Making Good His Promises to Voters.

The traveling man is a live wire.

Traveling men are decided factors in molding public sentiment.

No other class of men come in more forceful contact with the actual condition of the high cost of living without a corresponding increase in salaries.

The traveling men need Governor Wilson for their president because his record is that of making good promises and then honestly fulfilling them. Governor Wilson in his candidacy needs the help of every live traveling man.

Every genuinely progressive commercial man who is willing to help Governor Wilson's candidacy is urged to send his name immediately to the Commercial Men's Wilson committee, care Organization bureau, Democratic National headquarters, Fifth Avenue building, New York.

President Taft congratulates the Republicans of Maine on what Chairman Hilles describes as "an old fashioned victory." Another such and Vermont and Rhode Island would go Democratic in November.

Those who know and feel for Chairman Hilles say he really isn't to blame for the Republican presidential candidate's announcement that he "is out of politics."

What's a moosette? A third term peekaboo!

Avoid Sedative Cough Medicines.

If you want to contribute directly to the occurrence of capillary bronchitis and pneumonia, use cough medicines that contain codine, morphine, heroin and other sedatives when you have a cough or cold. An expectorant like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is what is needed. That cleans out the culture beds or breeding places for the germs of pneumonia and other germ diseases. That is why pneumonia never results from a cold when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used. It has a world wide reputation for its cures. It contains no morphine or other sedative. For sale by all dealers.

TAXING COAT OFF POOR MAN'S BACK

Concrete Illustrations of What Protective Tariff Really Means.

CAUSE WORKERS TO THINK.

Iniquities of the Payne-Aldrich Act, Taft's "Best Law Ever," Strikingly Told in Figures.

Concrete examples of how a protective tariff operates are causing the workingman, the "poor man," to do a lot of thinking nowadays. He is beginning to understand whether it is not about time to call a halt on the Republican practice of taxing the coat off his back and threatening him with the loss of his shirt and his socks if he does not submit.

All through the present tariff law, passed by a Republican congress and indorsed by a Republican president as THE BEST TARIFF BILL EVER PASSED, are to be found discriminations, the higher duty on the cheaper article, the lower duty on the dearer article, thus placing on the shoulders of those least able to bear it the greater burden of the protective system. Here are some illustrations:

The cheapest wool blankets bear a duty of 165.42 per cent, the dearest, 104.55 per cent.

Flannels not more than 40 cents a pound are taxed at 143.67 per cent, over 70 cents a pound, 76.37 per cent.

Wool plushes, cheapest, 141.75 per cent; dearest, 95.33 per cent.

Knit fabrics, cheapest, 141 per cent; dearest, 95.53 per cent.

Stockings, worth from $1 to $1.50 a dozen, 76.37 per cent, from $2 to $3, 59 per cent.

Hats and bonnets, worth not over $5 a dozen, 62 per cent; over $20 a dozen, 35 per cent.

Carpets, highest priced, 50 per cent; that used for mats and rugs, 126.88 per cent.

Women's gloves, unlined, 40 per cent; lined, 34 per cent; longest gloves, unlined, 42 per cent; lined, 29 per cent.

Men's gloves, worth less than $3 a dozen, 60.28 per cent; costliest gloves, 14.45 per cent; leather, unlined, 44.58 per cent; lined, 29.60 per cent.

Buckles, cheapest, 77.43 per cent; dearest, 20.33 per cent.

Uncut diamonds bear a 10 per cent duty; imitation diamonds, 20 per cent.

The humble firecracker bears a 97.02 per cent duty, while elaborate fireworks bear but 70 per cent.

Matting, smaller and cheaper grades, 43 per cent; costlier, 24 per cent.

Watch movements, seven jewels, 66.02 per cent; 11 jewels, 40.41 per cent; 17 jewels, 34.45 per cent.

Underwear, cheapest, 56.90 per cent; dearest, 50 per cent.

Dress goods of wool, cheapest, 105.42 per cent; dearest, 94.13 per cent.

Velvets, cheapest, 105.22 per cent; dearest, 49.65 per cent.

Silk handkerchiefs, cheapest, 77.44 per cent, dearest, 59 per cent.

Scissors, worth 50 cents a dozen, 52.21 per cent; worth $1.75 a dozen, 40 per cent.

Table knives, fancy grades, 57.40 per cent; bone handled, 69.43 per cent.

Butcher knives, best grades, 52.10 per cent; cheapest grades, 93.55 per cent.

Files, smallest, 81.29 per cent, longest, 36.51 per cent.

Shotguns, worth from $5 to $10, 47.67 per cent; worth over $10, 45.40 per cent.

These are only a part of the discriminations, gleaned from a swift scanning of some of the schedules. Reduced to simplest terms, they mean that the poor man is taxed higher than the rich man.

Need of Relaxation.

How shall our colleges assist American youth to secure the art of relaxation and to obtain the ability to relieve the tension of the workaday world by beneficial and delightful relief from business strain? Such gifts will often be the chief assets of a college man's training. Business men and professional men, too, frequently reach middle life with no interest outside their specialties. When business is over, life is a blank. There are no eager voices of pleasant pursuits calling them away from the common round and routine tasks. It is too late to form habits. The rich rewards that education may give in leisure hours are lost, swallowed up by a thousand things that are merely on the way to the prizes that count. This is a terrible loss, and for this loss our colleges are in part at least at fault.—The Century.

Keep on the Sunny Side.

Be sure to live on the sunny side, and even then do not expect the world to look bright, if you habitually wear gray-brown glasses.—Charles W. Eliot.

An Affirmative.

A suggestion has been made to the militant suffragettes that, as an alternative to window smashing, women should express their indignation at being denied the vote by refusing to be given in marriage. "Let the ladies of the land," says the masculine maker of the suggestion, "politely, but firmly decline offers of marriage until the votes of women are as secure on the statute books as the votes of men, and I warrant that the country will come to heel as quickly as it has come to heel at the bidding of the miners."

"A Great Friend of Mine."

Why is it that when people who are rather superior or distinguished are mentioned that phrase "a great friend of mine" is attached to them? Turn your thoughts to the best-bred people you know, the people in whose society it is a real privilege to be included; do you notice how seldom they refer to people whom you don't know? After all, their intercourse is with you and naturally well-bred people think of the interests of those they talk to and have no desire to drag in their private affairs and friends for the sake of forming an impressive picture in their friends' minds.

Relic of Sebastopol.

A Mr. Ormond of Portland, Me., has a piece of the bell of St. Nicholas's church in Sebastopol. It was secured by his father, who served all through the Crimean war. During the bombardment of Sebastopol all the spires of the church were demolished. When the allied armies took the city some of the soldiers cut up the bell and Mr. Ormond's father got one of the pieces.

Is Your Purse Full?

YOUR farm is the purse from which you take the necessities and luxuries of life. What provision are you making to keep your purse full—to insure a constant supply of food, clothing, heat, light, and protection?

No soil can produce constant yearly crops without an adequate supply of plant food. It is easier, and far cheaper, to maintain a fertile condition of the soil than it is to build it up after it is once exhausted. Be wise—begin now to use faithfully an

MENTOR

The weather is rather [illegible] on the whole, though there is every sign of frost; the chilliness of the air nights and mornings, seeming to indicate that summer weather, at least, need not be expected any more this year. From the fact that the berries are falling from clusters of grapes, seems to indicate that there has already been frost on some of the vineyards, and chestnuts too have begun to fall, we are told by the small boy.

Among other "Fair notes" we have heard the wish expressed many times that the gentlemen who have the matter in hand, will remember another year that the annual "Equinoxial" is due most any old time between the seventeenth and twenty-fifth, and that it is never quite safe to set any date before the twenty-second. Had our fair been a week later, it is safe to believe there would have been no rain to spoil the races, or the ladies feathers, to say nothing of tempers.

The schools at the Center are doing so well this year, that some of our scholars who went to Painesville High are attending school at home this year.

Mrs Charles Justus entertained at six o'clock dinner on Saturday, Mrs Amidon and her daughter, Mrs. Will Hagenberger, also Mrs Leslie Root and Miss Virginia Root. These California friends spent a portion of last week in Willoughby with Mrs E. J. Dickey, and Mrs. Louise Smith, and other relatives and old friends.

Mrs Sarah Belden of Mayville, N. Y., is here for a week or two at date, with her only sister, Mrs John Tyler, at the Center.

The Ladies Sunday School Class that is headed by Mrs T D Morley as the teacher, have been accustomed to spend one afternoon a month together, in order to promote sociability and get nearer each other, as well as nearer the lesson. Last week this meeting was held with Mrs Dunwell in her pleasant little bungalow on one of the new streets in West Mentor, where the object and the success of the meeting was verified.

Mr W R Anderson of Cleveland and his daughter Miss Mary Anderson, were guests of the King girls over Sunday.

Mr Wallace Dickey of Chicago spent a few days last week with his sister, Mrs. Helen Dickey Blish and her family at the Center.

If the truant officers here would enforce the School Law there would be fewer children in the Knitting Mill under sixteen years of age, and still fewer upon the streets at night time.

Mr Schaffner was duly appointed as pastor here in Mentor, and everybody is free now to take a long breath and get ready to be interested in his plans for the good of the village, and to help along all he possibly can.

Rev and Mrs Dye are about to move out of the parsonage, and Mr Schaffner and his wife, move in. We understand, that Conference granted Mr Dye a furlough of one year, hoping that by that time, he may again be well enough to take another charge, as he seems to be improving in a small degree.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Hagenberger spent the Sabbath just passed in the city with friends.

Miss Luella Kerr still continues to improve slowly, and is having many calls these days, from everybody who is delighted to learn of her beginning to travel along the road to recovery.

The Patterson family, consisting of parents and three daughters, gave a most delightful concert in the Methodist church on Friday evening up here on "The Street" and in the church building on the Plains on Saturday evening, and a "Sacred Concert" in the church here, on Sunday evening. So much has been going on during the last two or three weeks, that the concert was not as well patronized as it ought to have been, for it was indeed very good. This family came from Jersey City, and were supposed to divide profits (had there been any), with the Epworth League under whose auspices they were persuaded to come here.

Mr and Mrs N. C. Frost arrived at "Echo Hill Farm" their country home on Thursday afternoon, having spent the past two or three months up in Michigan, most of the time at Petoskey.

Mr. and Mrs. George Brown of Cleveland, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry King at "Southwood" over the Sabbath.

Robert Case has just finished a fine job of painting both inside and outside his general store at the Center.

Mr Sam Curtiss has rented his home near the Knitting Mills, and will move into a part of the McCrea house on the Avenue, some time this week or next.

Mrs. John Shupe of Kirtland and her friend, Miss Carrie Morrison, now of Chicago, were making some last calls on friends here on Saturday, as Miss Morrison was to leave here today for her home in the Windy City and is expecting to go to California very soon, where she will remain all winter with her brother, Mr Jay Morrison and his family.

The rumor is around here, that Mr. W. P. Murray and Mr. Ed Moore were so well pleased with the outcome of the Lake Co. Fair, that they have offered to erect at their own expense, a suitable and comfortable row of stables for the fine horses owned by them, and exhibited by them hereafter at our exposition; that said offer has been accepted, and that said stables are to be built of concrete.

The Miscellany Club is to meet with Miss Jenny Durban, in the edge of Willoughby, this coming Wednesday, when some new names will be voted upon.

The pipe organ fund has now reached the considerable proportions of $525.00 and subscriptions are soon to be solicited, when every cent given will be a help to the Ladies Aid who have so bravely taken upon themselves the frightful burden of raising this sum of fifteen hundred dollars. While there are some who covet a better organ than can be purchased for fifteen hundred, most of the congregation will be perfectly satisfied with that, and only too glad to get rid of the wheezy old thing that we have now, and that no one but Frances Cleveland can pump and make go.

Mr Charles Radcliffe of Detroit, has been a recent guest of his sister, Mrs. W. H. Johnson and her family for a short while.

Mrs. Maurice Markell (nee Miss Nellie McCrea) has a new little girl baby at her home in Willoughby, we understand.

Mrs Spencer Phelps has just bought a lot near the property owned by Mr Ed Dunham, and will soon begin house-building.

Mr and Mrs. M. T. Berry recently of Detroit, who are now occupying the E. D. Barber residence here, are enjoying a visit from their mother, Mrs. Berry, whose home is in Atlanta Ga.

Mrs Schaffner is at her father's home in Union City, Pa., getting packed up and ready to move to Mentor, we are happy to hear.

Mrs Delia Corning, accompanied by her daughter Mrs Perry Worcester of Oberlin, were guests of Mr and Mrs. Frank Corning, during the week of the Fair.

Some of the people here would like to know the name of the little eight year old girl, who won the prize on the best dressed dollie? Some of us thought Harriet Morley would surely get it, but she didn't as the other exhibitor was younger.

One of the most startling changes ever seen in any man, according to W. B. Holsclaw, Clarendon, Tex., was effected years ago in his brother. "He had such a dreadful cough," he writes, "that all our family thought he was going into consumption, but he began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, and was completely cured by ten bottles. Now he is sound and well and weighs 218 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for Coughs and Colds with excellent results." It's quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. ## PRESERVE FOES' HEADS

SOUTH AMERICAN TRIBE THAT EMBALMS THE TROPHIES.

Method Employed Reduces the Grisly Relics to the Size of a Billiard Ball Without Changing or Mutilating Features.

The little-known Indian tribes that inhabit the more distant provinces of the South American republic of Ecuador, in almost entire independence, have a strange custom of preparing the heads of their vanquished enemies in a manner which reduces them to extremely small dimensions, without changing or mutilating the features.

For many years a war of extermination has been going on between the various tribes. Ambushes and night attacks are of frequent occurrence, and the parties often march dozens of leagues to surprise their enemies.

The head of the vanquished chief is cut off and becomes the most esteemed booty of the victorious leader. It is then, in due time, dislocated and reduced by the latter by means of a process, the secret of which has so far been jealously guarded. As far as is known, the skull, jawbones and fleshy parts are entirely removed without the skin of the head and face suffering any damage, and the only trace of the operation is a small incision in the nape of the neck which is afterward sewn together again.

After removal of the bony and softer parts of the skull the skin is filled with hot stones and a vegetable concoction, the secret of which, as well as that of the process, is carefully guarded. This procedure is continued until the head is shrunk to the dimension of a good-sized billiard ball and has become as dry and tough as sole leather.

It is remarkable that during the process neither the natural luster of the hair nor its quantity is diminished, that eyebrows and lashes remain intact, and that even the grain of the skin with the fine hairs are plainly distinguishable after the preparation is completed.

The process lasts about one year, and the head during that time hangs in smoke, for which purpose a stout string is drawn through the upper part of it. The lips are sewed together in order to prevent the dead enemy from speaking and eating, and the long threads by which it is done remain attached and hanging from the mouth.

The trophy, which by the reduction has lost its ghastliness, is kept in a niche in the hut of the chief, stuck on the end of a spear. During the three years succeeding the killing, feasts, lasting three days, are held on the anniversaries of the victory, during which the shrunken head is exhibited. After three years the victor may dispose of his trophy in any way he sees fit, but this is rarely done, as the head forms a war trophy of the highest honor.

Case of Poetic Justice.

That was a case of poetic justice when a jury of women in San Francisco were called upon to pass on the fit of a man's clothes. A certain tailor in that western city sued a customer for money due for clothes. The customer pleaded that the suits did not fit and asked for a jury of women to decide the important point. The 12 good women and true, who from their own experience were no doubt eminently qualified to pass on the fit of clothes, found for the defendant. It must have afforded them infinite satisfaction to know that, after all the sarcasm with which their husbands treated their own troubles with dressmakers, their exasperating experiences should in the end be drawn upon to render a lawful judgment on clothes worn by men. All the fun poked at women and their dressmakers in San Francisco and all the jokes collateral to that engaging theme have been recalled.

Book Don'ts.

Good books are treasures, and they should be handled with the greatest of care by everyone. Here are a few rules that should be observed:

Never drop a book upon the floor.

Never turn leaves with the thumb.

Never lean or rest upon an open book.

Never turn down the corners of leaves.

Never touch a book with soiled or damp hands.

Always place a large book upon a table before opening it.

Never close a book with a pencil, tablet or anything else that is bulky between the leaves.

Influence of Clothes.

It is said that the average man is, to a great extent, influenced by the kind of clothes which he wears, in the same way as he is affected by his environment. A well-dressed man will walk better, talk better and, they say, even do better work than the man who is carelessly dressed. Therefore, the man who is neglectful of his personal appearance, is unneat, slouchy, his clothes not pressed or carefully brushed, his shoes unpolished, his linen soiled and his hat dented and covered with dust, discards one of the most potent instruments of success. Perhaps he cannot afford to buy linen or suits made at the best tailors, but every man can afford to be clean and neat in his dress.

Women in Deadly Duel.

There was fought in Tennessee not long ago a duel between women. They met after church service, setting upon each other with knives. Friends attempted to part them. With leveled revolver, the man over whom they had quarreled, ordered that the fight go to a finish. Soon one of the women lay dead and the other was badly wounded.

Considerable Begonia.

Mrs. Frank Ireland of Wilton, Me., has a begonia which she thinks cannot be beaten for size in the state. The plant is seven feet and one inch tall and the stalk is two inches in diameter at the base. It began to blossom in last month and has blossomed continuously since. There are now 60 pink and white cluster blossoms on the plant.

The Danger After Grip

lies often in a run-down system. Weakness, nervousness, lack of appetite, energy and ambition, with disordered liver and kidneys often follow an attack of this wretched disease. The greatest need then is Electric Bitters, the glorious tonic, blood purifier and regulator of stomach, liver and kidneys. Thousands have proved that they wonderfully strengthen the nerves, build up the system and restore to health and good spirits after an attack of Grip. If suffering, try them. Only 50 cents. Sold and perfect satisfaction guaranteed by Gehring's Pharmacy.

SYNOPSIS.

Harding Kent calls on Louise Farrish to propose marriage and finds the house in great excitement over the attempted suicide of her sister Katharine. Kent starts an investigation and finds that Hugh Crandall, suitor for Katharine, who had been forbidden the house by General Farrish, had talked with Katharine over the telephone just before she shot herself. A torn piece of yellow paper is found, at sight of which General Farrish is stricken with paralysis. Kent discovers that Crandall has left town hurriedly. Andrew Elser, an aged banker, commits suicide about the same time as Katharine attempted her life. A yellow envelope is found in Elser's room. Post Office Inspector Davis, Kent's friend, takes up the case. Kent is convinced that Crandall is at the bottom of the mystery. Katharine's strange outcry puzzles the detectives. Kent and Davis search Crandall's room and find an address, Lock Box 17, Ardway, N. J. Kent goes to Ardway to investigate and becomes suspicious of a "Henry Cook." A woman commits suicide at the Ardway Hotel.

CHAPTER VI.—(Continued).

I was thoroughly disgusted with the drivelling way in which the proceedings were being carried on. I could see little hope of any discovery that would establish connection with the similar events in New York. I turned from listening to the witness to studying the face of the man Cook. Could it be possible he was Hugh Crandall? I saw that he was watching the testimony with eager interest. Against my will I had to confess that his face was one that attracted rather than repelled me. While there was a shrewdness about the eyes, the chin was square and firm and the skull well-balanced. I tried to read in the shape of the mouth or the curve of the ears some sign of the criminal, such as I expected to find written on the countenance of Crandall, but it was not there.

"She was sitting there crying."

A sentence of the maid's testimony suddenly thrust itself forward from my subconsciousness as if demanding my attention and I listened intently to what she was saying.

"That was the way it happened that I didn't make up the room the day before. When I went in to do it she was sitting there crying and tearing a letter to bits."

A letter! It came on me in a flash that here was the clue, that this was the connecting link with the other two cases.

I pushed my way forward into the room, determined to learn all there was about this new phase of the case. The proceedings stopped abruptly at the bustle my movement made, and everybody, coroner, jurors and spectators, gaped at me.

"I am a lawyer," I said. "May I ask the witness one or two questions?"

Still the coroner gaped and I waited no longer for his permission.

"Was it a yellow letter?" I asked.

"Now that you speak of it I kind of remember that it was."

"Has the letter been found?"

"She was tearing it in pieces."

"Where are the pieces?"

The eyes of everybody present began roving about the room, as if in answer to my question. The constable instituted a hasty search, in which I myself, the coroner and the jurors joined. I felt that if we could only find those pieces, the mystery might be solved. While the room was being ransacked I kept my eye on Cook. As I asked the question about the letter's color I noticed that he looked startled. I was amazed now to see him edging toward the door. I was tempted to demand that he be restrained and searched. I felt almost sure that if the pieces of the yellow letter were to be found anywhere it would be in his pocket. Yet second thought advised against such rash action. I had no positive proof that Cook was Crandall. Until I had, surely it would be unwise to accuse him. I remembered that there was no train by which he could leave the town until late in the afternoon, so there was little prospect that he could escape me.

"How did you know it was a yellow letter?" the coroner asked me suspiciously, pausing suddenly in his search.

It was an awkward question. I realized that my impetuosity had placed me in a predicament. I was by no means ready to tell him the whole story and yet the fact that I knew or suspected the color of the letter that she was tearing up certainly indicated that I knew something about the woman.

"I didn't know it."

"Well, what'd you ask the question about it for?" he repeated, his suspicion of me rapidly increasing.

I was thinking quickly what I could say that would divert his thoughts. I noticed with annoyance that the eyes of every one in the room were on me and that they were curiously awaiting an answer. I assumed an air of mystery and drew the coroner to one side.

"I am perfectly willing to tell you everything," I said. "I am out here on another matter that is something of a mystery in which a yellow letter figures. The letter has disappeared. I never saw or heard of this old woman before, but when the witness mentioned that she was tearing up a letter a sudden notion came to me that it might be the one of which I was in search. A detective who is working on the case will be out here this evening and then I can tell you more about it."

I spoke the last sentence in a whisper so low that it reached only the coroner's ear. He pondered over my statement and then abruptly announced that the inquest was adjourned until nine o'clock the next day. I would have escaped him if I could, but I saw that he was determined to worm out everything I knew or suspected. I decided that activity would be the best remedy for his curiosity. Accordingly I invited the coroner and the constable to come up to my rooms where, without waiting for them to question me, I began firing questions hot-shot at them, suggesting things for them to do, simple things that would have been the first thought of the police of New York or any other large city, but which they had not thought of. Had they telephoned a description of the woman to the Bridgeport police with her name to see if she could be identified as any one who was missing from that city? Had they examined her clothing to see if there was any mark on it that might identify her? Had they studied her writing on the register to see if it gave any indication of being assumed or disguised? Had they examined her pocketbook to see if it contained any clue to a motive? Had they considered whom she might have come to this town to see?

"That idea of calling up the Bridgeport police ain't such a bad one," said the coroner. "Suppose you do it now," he said, turning to the constable.

"I'd like to know who's going to pay for it if I do," the constable objected. "There ain't enough fees in this office for me to be spending my money that way."

"You go ahead and do it and I'll see that you get the money back."

"If you're going to pay it out of your own pocket I'll do it, but if you expect me to wait till you put it through as a lawful expense I ain't taking no chances."

Their petty wrangling over such a trifling amount exasperated me not a little.

"Here," said I, pulling a five-dollar bill from my pocket, "take this and pay for it and tell them to telephone you as soon as they can what they have found out. This ought to cover both the message and the answer and if there is anything left get yourself some cigars with it."

The constable needed no second bidding. As soon as he had disappeared I turned to the coroner.

"Did you notice that man Cook at the inquest? Who is he?"

"I don't know who you mean," he replied. "The only Cook I know here in the town is Bob Cook, and he's laid up with a broken leg."

"Didn't you notice a tall, smooth shaven fellow who stood right close beside where you were sitting? He listened closely to the testimony and the minute we began looking for the scraps of the letter, didn't you see him slip out of the room?"

"Come to think of it," said the coroner, "I believe I did notice him, but I can't say as I seen him going out. Maybe 'twas one of the guests of the hotel."

"I think he is, and I'm pretty sure he's registered in the hotel as Mr. Cook, too, but I'd like to know more about him."

"Let's go down and ask Mahlon. If there's anybody in his hotel he don't know about it's something unusual."

We found Mahlon Williams in the little boxed off corner behind the hotel desk that was labeled "Private Office." The curious crowd was still gaping at the door of the room where the suicide had taken place, at least such of them as had not adjourned to the bar to talk it over, so that we were alone in the office.

"Mr. Williams," I said, "what do you know about this man Cook, who is stopping here in the hotel?"

"No more than I know about you," said he, "and not as much, in fact, for he didn't ask no peculiar questions at the inquest. Speaking about that letter—"

"How long has this man Cook been in the house?" I interrupted, determined not to let either him or the coroner annoy me with questions.

The hotel-keeper, plainly provoked at my attitude, stared thoughtfully at me for a minute and finally decided to answer my question as the only hope of getting me to answer his.

"He came just the night before you did—got in on the seven-two train."

His answer settled everything in my mind. Cook was Crandall. The arrival of Cook in the village coincided with the departure of Crandall from New York. The haste in which he had departed was explicable by the arrival of the old woman on that train. Evidently he wanted for some reason to arrive in the village at the same time that she did. What had been his motive was still a mystery to me. It flashed across my mind that perhaps, after all, her death might not have been suicide. A clever criminal might easily arrange things to look as though she had hung herself. I determined to make an investigation to see if there was any evidence to prove this, but I said nothing of my suspicions as yet. I already regretted my precipitancy in asking about the yellow letter. The questions of the landlord and the coroner might be deferred for a while, but sooner or later I would have to make some explanation, and I had none to give.

"What is Cook's business?" I asked the landlord hastily, anticipating a question I saw forming on his lips.

"I don't know. He kind of looked to me like a traveling-man—or a lawyer. What was—"

The return of the constable from telephoning saved my answering the question he was about to ask.

"There ain't no woman missing from Bridgeport that the police know anything about," he said sententiously.

"Did ye tell them her name?" asked the coroner.

"Yep. They say there's only three families of Tellers in the telephone book and only four in the directory, and they are going to look them up and telephone inside of an hour."

"Maybe her name wasn't Teller," suggested the hotel-keeper. "I recollect seeing her kind of hesitate as she went to write in the register."

"That's just what I was thinking," I cried, glad to divert his attention once more. "Let us go and look at the register and then examine her clothing. Maybe there are some marks on it."

"That's a good idea," said the coroner. "Wonder we didn't think of that before."

The hotel register showed us little save the name "Mary Jane Teller" in the tremulous old fashioned hand little used to handling the pen. There was perhaps a little more space between the last two names than after the first—as if she hesitated a moment while deciding what name to use or perhaps with an honest woman's natural aversion to assuming any other name than her own.

"Let's look at the clothing," I suggested, eager for an opportunity to see whether there were any indications that would point to anything other than suicide.

"May I Ask the Witness One or Two Questions?"

The four of us hastened to the room again. To my annoyance I noted that the rope had been removed from the rafters, though the woman's outer [illegible] inexpensive black suit to identify the owner, no mark of any kind except the label of the concern in New York from which it had been purchased.

"Where's the black bag she carried?" asked the coroner.

"There was some money in it," Mr. Williams replied. "I put it in the safe."

As we left the room to return to the hotel office I gave a hasty glance at the corpse. From the condition of the face and throat it was all too plain that death had been by strangulation, still, I reasoned, a powerful man might have strangled the woman first and hanged her afterward to conceal his crime. I determined to put the theory up to Davis as soon as he arrived.

Twirling the knob of the ancient safe that stood in the corner, the hotel-keeper reached in and drew out a well worn hand-bag of black leather and upset the contents on the desk. There were three one-dollar bills, neatly folded, three dimes and eight pennies—a meager amount that suggested the hoarding of pennies for this trip, whatever its purpose. There was a half ticket, the return stub of a ticket from Bridgeport and another one from New York to Ardway, and that was all, save two neatly folded black-bordered handkerchiefs.

In the Corner of the Handkerchief Was a Neatly Embroidered "S."

"Looks like she came from Bridgeport, after all," the constable volunteered.

"Maybe she did," said the landlord, unfolding one of the handkerchiefs and holding it up to our gaze. "Maybe she did come from Bridgeport, but her name wasn't Teller—not Mary Jane Teller by a long shot."

In the corner of each handkerchief was a neatly embroidered "S."

It gave me quite a shock as I looked at that mute evidence of her assumed name, to her effort to mask her identity.

Could her name have been Elser? Was this the way in which she was connected with the two suicides in New York? But even so, suppose she was the sister or relative, or even the unrecognized wife of old Andrew Elser, what possible connection could these two humble people have with Katharine Farrish?

The mystery was growing deeper. How I wished that Inspector Davis would come.

Small Consolation.

In Dunoon (Scotland) the other afternoon one of the municipal employes had a free bath. He is a veteran who drives the cart for watering the roads. While filling the tank of the vehicle the long hosepipe came off the top, with the result that the water rushed high into the air as if it were anxious to do the aeroplane act. There was no way to get the water turned off except to go straight into the middle of it. The waterman had many trials before he managed to throttle the impromptu fountain. And when he had made it tap the mat, and came out soaked to the skin, he was not cheered up by the remark of a witness of the Homeric contest, who said—"Ach, Donal, never mind; it'll no' dae ye ony harm; it's saut water."

Famous Kisses.

The first recorded kiss was the treacherous one given by Jacob to his father Isaac when the former was masquerading as Esau. It is the first in a series of deceitful kisses recorded in history. There is a famous kiss in the "Beggar's Opera." It was given by Macheath to Jenny Diver, and the unpleasant effect which it produced on him may be judged from the sarcastic remark: "One may know by your kiss that your gin is excellent." Petruchio gave his bride a kiss of enormous caliber. We are told that he "kist her lips with such a clamorous smack that at the parting all the church echoed."

Test of Success.

If every day we can feel, if only for a moment, the elation of being alive, the realization of being our best selves, of filling our destined groove and trend, you may be sure that we are succeeding.—Bliss Carman.

Whale Boat Catches Shark

Marine Monster, Weighing Approximately Eight Tons, Harpooned Off Vancouver Coast.

While scouring the ocean for whales one of the little steamers working from the Kyuquot station landed a thirty foot shark.

The "wolf of the sea" is claimed to be one of the largest ever seen in northern waters and weighed approximately eight tons.

The whaling steamer had been searching vainly for whales for several days and the lookout had grown tired of scanning the surface of the ocean. He was suddenly aroused to action by observing the dorsal fin of a monster shark cutting the water about 200 yards on the port bow. As the big sharks yield considerable oil, the ship's officers decided to try for this one in view of the lack of whales. Running to within thirty yards of the shark with the boat, the gunner fired the harpoon from the gun and struck the monster at the first shot. After a terrific fight to hold the struggling sea animal it was hauled aboard and cut up, the steamer resuming her search for the larger mammals.

Officers of the Tees declare that the shark was the largest they had ever seen. It was of the species common to the Pacific coast, but not quite so far north.—Vancouver Sun.

Practical Idea.

As I live in a coke country and have much dirt to contend with, I find that I save much work by putting all dishes not in constant use into paper bags, leaving out one to put on top as a sample, says a correspondent of the Pictorial Review. This plan saves washing when extra dishes are needed.

A Good Defense.

"How could you tell that ugly girl she had a complexion like peaches and cream?" "No lie about that. I meant yellow peaches and sour cream."

Social Forms and Entertainments

Reply to Clementine and Denise.

It will seem to you that your letter has been long unanswered, but each must take their turn as the space for "Questions and Answers" is very limited. Sweet apple cider is good and perfectly proper to serve; did you ever try freezing it and serving like sherbet, with small cakes or wafers? I think it is best to sign your own name besides the one you wish used in the department. I like to see girls of your age friendly with more than one boy. There is safety in numbers and you are both too young to make a choice now. I would keep the kodaks, no reason why you should return them. School has probably started now and I am sure you will have a good year.

The Invitation List.

I intend giving a bridge party for a September bride.

Would you kindly tell me, is it my place or hers to make up the invitation list.—M. E. L.

I fear my answer is too late to help you, but your letter was delayed in reaching me and now September is nearly over. I will just say to you and for the benefit of others that the hostess makes out her list and politely asks the honored guest if she has any special friend whom she would like to include in the invitations.

For a Girl's Club

Would you please suggest some suitable names for a class of girls about fourteen or fifteen years of age, who wish to organize a club, also motto's and colors.

What sort of amusement could you suggest at a meeting?—Bee L.

I wish you had told me more about the club, for what purpose it is to be organized and whether it is a Sunday school class or a day school and whether for amusement only. Write me again.

Reply to "Rosamond."

I am truly grateful for all the nice things you wrote me regarding this column, for it makes me feel as if I was accomplishing a wee bit, if I help even one girl.

Regarding the "old maid" proposition, there are no old maids in the sense that you mean, and no age limit. There is no reason for not marrying a man a year younger, the difference is very slight. You may take a man's arm if necessary. It seldom is, however, unless the night is very dark or over a dangerous crossing.

Questions from Brown Eyes.

How long should a girl of sixteen wear her dress, what color is becoming to brown eyes and dark hair.

Thank you for the help I have gotten from your department, I like it so much.

A girl of your age should wear her dresses about to the shoetop, of course much depends upon the height of the person.

All the red and rose shades, navy blue, yellow and tan are becoming to the brunette type.

Reply to "Nancy."

The room in the hotel in which the wedding ceremony takes place would seem far more attractive if it contained flowers and palms where the couple are to stand. When a bride is married in a traveling suit at a morning church wedding it is perfectly proper for her to carry a bouquet (not the "shower kind") or she may wear a large bunch of violets with a rose or orchid in the center. I think the latter is preferable.

Faith's Answer.

Perfectly proper for you to ride horseback. Why not? You may ride astride or side saddle, just whichever you prefer. You are rather large for your age, but there are many others; it is true though that for some reason large persons when very young are apt to be taken for older than they really are. You should wear your dresses down to the shoe tops.

Reply to I. M. N.

I cannot give remedies in the department or reply to "Beauty" questions. I see no reason why you should not go occasionally with boys if they are the right kind, and much depends upon you girls whether they are the right kind or not. I should not call you homely and not a bit too small.

The Proper Thing to Do.

Will you please tell me what is the most appropriate for a bride wearing white satin and veil to ride to church in, taxicab or hack.—Mother.

Either a taxicab or carriage may be used by the bride in any garb. Much depends upon the distance and time necessary.

MADAME MERRI.

Yellow for Autumn.

Yellow is enjoying a return to favor which has been lost for several seasons, and among the new colors which will be placed on the market are many yellow tones, among them burnt orange, sulphur and amber. In addition there is chartreuse, the lovely, limpid yellow of the cordial; flame yellow, whose intensity makes it becoming only to certain complexions, and canary, another vivid hue.

Check patterns are coming quickly to the fore as blouse materials.

Health & Beauty Hints

By Katherine Morton

When a girl comes to the love of cosmetics, those supreme luxuries of womankind, she may be called grown up. Her delight in delicate powders, fragrant perfumes, creams, toilet waters, fine soaps and scented baths divides her forevermore from the careless habits of childhood. Henceforth the prettiness of her skin and the glossy softness of her hair are sacred trusts, and all she asks is that she may be able to replenish her little store of beauty materials every now and then. This is a normal and perfectly legitimate state of things, and therefore it behooves parents to supply young daughters who have no money of their own, with the simple mediums required for beautifying the complexion and hair.

Good Powders.

In the matter of powder, good taste demands something very simple for the schoolgirl, a pure white powder, such as talcum or rice or wheat starch, very lightly perfumed. The talcums for nursery use, prepared as they are for the tender bodies of babyhood, are the best of these powders, but girls should keep their powder boxes and puffs free of dust, for the soil that gets it will help to encourage blackheads. However simple the powder is, too, it should be taken off at night with a cleansing face bath, for, if left on the face, it is bound to stop up the pores. A French nursery powder of indescribable fineness is often used by women as well as young girls, this being almost impalpable when put on, and possessing the fragrance of lilies-of-the-valley. This elusiveness of scent should be a feature of all beauty materials used by young girls, for strong odors do not seem to go well with the modesty and freshness of girlhood.

Face Bath Needed.

But far more enhancing than the powder is the cleansing face bath which is required to free the skin of old cuticle, stale oil, dust and perspiration. So when you come to take a face bath remember all the wastes you must get rid of, and don't make a pretense of things with little dabs of cold water and an indifferently clean face cloth. Hot water and a bland soap must be used, several rinsings must be done with plain water, and in the event of any eruptive condition wash rags and towels should be kept apart from those used by the rest of the family, and be washed by themselves and sterilized. That apparently innocent thing, the wash rag, by the way, is responsible for many a bad state of things with the skin. It is only safe to use it once, and if examined by a strong microscope when very dirty the reason for this will be discovered. Wash rags should always be hung in the sun after using, as the shady corner of the bathroom is the very place for the developing of the germs that infest them, and sun is death to germs. Never use a sponge for a bath of any kind, as the sponge holds the body soil and so can never be cleansed properly. A sour bit of bathroom linen of any sort is an abomination and very injurious to the beauty of the skin, conveying to it sometimes a little fungus growth caught from the invisible mold on the rag or towel. Ringworm may be propagated in this way, and if the offensive linen is used by other members of the family this really dreadful skin affliction may spread through the whole household.

In many a bathroom not yet educated up to the elegancies of the toilet common laundry soaps are put for toilet purposes, and these the girl of the family often uses on her face and hair, entirely ignorant of the fact that she is doing her looks incredible harm. Such soaps are strong with alkali, and if they do not bite the skin to the point of torment they yellow and roughen it. When washed with them, the hair is robbed of every drop of natural oil, made brittle and colorless, to say nothing of the great difficulty of getting the strong adhesive suds out of the locks and from the scalp, where the hard soap seems to love especially to cling.

Soap for Toilet.

Fine toilet soaps and shampoos are dear, of course, but a liquid soap can be made of a twenty-five cent cake of castile which would be just as delicate for washing the face and hair as the finest soap on the market. Shave the soap to a powder, and then boil this in a pint of soft water; keep the resulting jelly in a wide-mouthed bottle, working the jelly into the skin when using, but only making a thick suds for the hair. If the hair is very oily and soiled, add a tiny pinch of bicarbonate of soda to the suds. As a tonic and feeding substance for scanty hair raw eggs are unrivaled, as I have said many times, these supplying the iron and sulphur the anaemic scalp needs. For dandruff or any scalp or skin eruption use green soap, which is the purest made and highly antiseptic.

Sleeve Pocket.

In many cases it is possible to place a tiny pocket in the sleeve, under a cuff or some bit of trimming. Into this can go one of the small handkerchiefs that women favor.

Anything solid, like money, cannot find a place in the sleeve pocket, unless the pocket should be securely fastened with a snap fastener.

Long tight sleeves with frill of lawn or lace falling over the hand are a noticeable feature of most new Parisian frocks.

FREE ADVICE TO SICK WOMEN

Thousands Have Been Helped By Common Sense Suggestions.

Women suffering from any form of female ills are invited to communicate promptly with the woman's private correspondence department of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence. Milk-crust all over tiny baby's face

Mothers, if your little ones are suffering from tormenting, unsightly skin or scalp eruptions, how can you fail to profit by the experience of this mother, who writes: "I do not know what caused the milk-crust on my baby's face, all over it except the eyeballs. It started as a rash, of an itching nature; though only three weeks old it tried to scratch it. Then in about a week or ten days it had formed into crust that was very sore, whitish, and came off in scabs. For about five weeks I used different washes, but it did no good. From the first application of the Resinol Soap and Ointment, in a few hours, seemingly, we could see the change. I can safely say I cured the baby with Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. Anyone who will try them will sure get results that are lasting." (Signed) Mrs. Luvenia B. Baffin, Cauthornville, Va., May 13, 1912.

NEW CROP OF BALL PLAYERS IS GOOD ONE

Morris Rath, Second Baseman of White Sox.

The new crop of ball players in the major leagues, including those who broke in this year or the latter part of last year, is making a pretty respectable showing in fast company, and there is a goodly crop of those who are likely to be fixtures, if not already that. Scouts and managers deplore the great lack of timber in the bushes, and with some of these newcomers it may be a case of taking them or nothing. Yet the proportion of those who are sticking and making their presence felt is fairly large.

Among this number a prominent one is Dubuc, the Detroit pitcher, although he had been in the big leagues before and is no tender bud in baseball society. Another comeback who drifted back to the minors between sojourns in fast company is George McConnell. Likewise Hess. Among the newer crop of pitchers dug up this year or late last year are Baskette, Steen, Benz, Hamilton, Allison, two or three Browns, O'Brien, Bedient, Houck and Baumgartner in the American league, and Lavender, Tesreau, Cheney, Rixey, Seaton, Benton, Allen, Robinson, Willis and Yingling in the National.

Leading finds in other positions are Foster and Gandil of the Washingtons, both of whom were in big league company once before and returned to that company greatly improved. Other recent additions to the big league family are Morris Rath of Comiskey's White Sox, Cady of the Red Sox, Maggert of the Athletics, Sterrett of the Highlanders, Shanks of Washington, Peckinpaugh of Cleveland, Weaver of the White Sox, Kuhn of the White Sox, Egan of the Athletics, Mensor of the Pirates, Groh of the Giants, Cutshaw of the Brooklyns, Smith of the Brooklyns, Phelan of the Reds, Northen of the Brooklyns, Moran of the Brooklyns and Magee of the Cardinals. Most of them are making good.

CHALMERS A BIG SURPRISE

Philadelphia Pitcher Returns to Winning Form After Long Retirement Account of Injuries.

The surprise of the Giant-Philadelphia series was that the one pitcher of the home team who was counted upon to do the least got away with a victory. This was George Chalmers. The latter came out of a long retirement, due to various injuries, and by a grand exhibition of twirling thrashed the New Yorkers. Moore, Alexander, Rixey and Seaton all fell down on the job and Dooin was forced to use several young twirlers as rescuers. Seaton, however, made good by pitching a shut-out victory.

Pitcher Chalmers of Philadelphia.

Mack Talks of Davis.

"Davis was a victim of plotters within the Cleveland team," says Manager Mack of the Philadelphia American league team, in discussing the recent retirement of Harry Davis from the management of the Cleveland club of the league. "Harry was all but beaten before he started," Mack said. "His only chance was to go right out in front and win all the way. Fellows who neither can nor will play ball always have time to play club politics. Harry had his share of them in the Cleveland team."

Pirates and Senators Play.

A series of contests may be arranged between the Pirates and the Washington Americans. President Barney Dreyfuss of Pittsburg received a challenge from Clark Griffith, manager of the Senators, for a post-season series with the Pirates. He has not yet replied, but has taken the matter up with Manager Fred Clarke, who states that he and his men are willing to play, if it can be shown that the series will be a paying one.

NOTES of the DIAMOND

First Baseman Houser of the Boston Braves has bought a farm near Lewiston, Me.

Members of the Boston Red Sox have started to buy diamonds just like regular champs.

George Stovall is another baseball player who has taken up golf—and gone crazy about it.

Marsans, the Cuban, has developed into a polished player with the Cincinnati Reds this year.

Rumor has it that Sam Crawford of the Detroit Tigers is slated to manage a minor league team next season.

President Jacob Smith of the Appalachian league says there is a hundred years of worry as a league president.

Hess of the Boston Braves has been doing excellent work in the box lately. Johnny Kling says he is the season's best find.

Hughie Jennings is going heavy on the recruits right now. In a recent game he had only three veterans in the line up.

Cincinnati has released Pitcher Deake, one of the three players secured from the Akron team of the Central league.

Rube Peters, who came to the Sox via the Minneapolis route, has been sold to the Sacramento club of the Pacific Coast league.

Eddie Hallinan, recalled by the St. Louis Americans from Memphis, has been offered to the San Francisco club and may be sent there.

Pitcher Woodburn of the Cardinals is said to be a ventriloquist, and they say he had a lot of fun with his mates before they got onto him.

Derrill Pratt, the Browns' young star, is proud of his first year's record in big league. He is the only member of his team hitting over the .300 mark.

It is likely that some big league club will slip in a draft for Harry Welchonce. He is leading the Southern league batters and is a nifty player.

In the second game of September 2, Pitcher McConnell of the Yankees had 13 assists, said to be a record for a pitcher. He assisted in retiring 11 Red Sox and made two errors.

Victor Saier is given a lot of credit for keeping the Cubs up in the race this year. The youngster certainly has been a great improvement over last season.

The New England teams pulled a "baseball straight" recently, the scores being as follows: Lawrence, 1; Worcester, 0; New Bedford, 2; Lynn, 3; Lowell, 5; Haverhill, 4; Fall River, 7; Brockton, 8.

THREE DISTINCT AGRICULTURAL REGIONS IN U. S. SEGREGATED BY SPECIES GROWN

American Native Grape Is Grown Almost Entirely in That Section of Country Lying East of Rocky Mountains — Few Cultural Methods Illustrated.

(By GEORGE C. HUSSMANN, Pomologist, United States Department of Agriculture.)

There are three distinct viticultural regions in the United States which segregate themselves by the grape species grown in them.

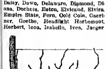
The Vinifera region, in which Vinifera varieties are almost exclusively grown, is located almost entirely west of the Rocky mountains, so much of it being in California that those not conversant with grape varieties erroneously call them California grapes. With few exceptions either the spur, stool or short pruning system is used for the stockier growing varieties, and the long or cane pruning system is usually used for the longer growing varieties, but either system is often modified to suit individual varieties. Thus the spurs are sometimes left longer in the spur system and either spurs and canes left longer or spurs cut on the laterals in the cane system.

Stakes only are used to give the vines the necessary support; this method allows the vineyard to be cultivated crosswise as well as lengthwise. Vines trained on trellises are comparatively rare in California.

The more generally known Vinifera varieties grown in this district are the Alexandria, Alicante Bouschet, Aramon, Burger, Cabernet Sauvignon, Calmette, Carignane, Chasselas de Fontainebleau, Cornichon, Emperor, Flame Tokay, Green Hungarian, Gros Machu, Malaga, Mission, Mondeuse, Mourastel, Pizzutella, Petit Syrah, Purple Damascus, Riesling, Semillon, Sauvignon Vert, Sultanina, Sylvaner, Valdepenas and Zinfandel.

The Muscadine region of the South Atlantic and Gulf states includes the entire southeastern coastal plain extending from the Potomac to Florida, reaching well up into the Blue Ridge mountains and along the Gulf coast to the Rio Grande river, spreading to the north along the Mississippi river into the great central plains to southeast Missouri and the Tennessee river. In this region improved varieties of the Rotundifolia and Munsonia species are grown for various purposes, the better known varieties of these being the Eden, Flowers, James, Mish, Scuppernong and Thomas. The multiple cross wire system or overhead arbor is almost exclusively used. As previously mentioned, these arbors are very similar to the overhead trellis or parral system used in Spain with the Almerian varieties commonly seen in our markets packed in cork dust and called "Malaga" grapes.

The third or American native grape region is the one in which improved varieties of the more northern native grape species and hybrids of them and the Vinifera species are grown. This region comprises all that part of the United States which lies east of the Rocky mountains. Of late years a few plantings have also been made in parts of Oregon and Washington, but the industry is most extensive in the states west of the Hudson river and north of the Ohio river that border on the Great Lakes and in the more centrally located states of the Mississippi valley. In this district the high-renewal, horizontal-arm spur, horizontal block, fan, Hudson horizontal, four-cane Kniffin, umbrella or two-cane Kniffin, Munson, overhead Caywood and Chittenden systems are used, the localities in which they originated or are most common being stated in the description of the various systems. The varieties most extensively grown are the following: Agawam, America, Barry, Beacon, Berckmans, Brighton, Brilliant, Campbell, Carman, Catawba, Champion, Clinton, Concord, Cottage, Cynthiana, Daisy, Dawn, Delaware, Diamond, Diana, Duchess, Eaton, Elvicand, Elvira, Empire State, Fern, Gold Coin, Gaertner, Goethe, Headlight, Herbemont, Herbert, Iona, Isabella, Ives, Jaeger, Janesville, Jefferson, Lady, Laussel, Lenoir, Lindley, Lutie, Martha, Massasoit, Merrimac, Missouri Riesling, Moore, Muench, Nectar, Niagara, Noah, Norton, Olita, Perkins, Perry, Pocklington, Prentiss, Rommel, Salem, Triumph, Ulster, Vergennes, Victor, Washington, Wilder, Winchell, Wetumka, Woodruff, Worden and Wyoming.



A Vine in Its Fourth Year Pruned According to the Block System

There are so many species of grapes, each having peculiarities of its own and therefore responding most readily to certain cultural methods to which it is best adapted, that the pruning, training and growing of vines which otherwise may appear quite simple, become complicated operations in which comparatively few people become expert, and vineyards in which serious mistakes are not made are rare.

In the fan system the vine growth which is trained to an upright trellis is annually renewed to within a short distance from the ground. The vines are cut back usually to four canes and as many spurs each year. The canes are spread out and tied to the trellis, giving the vine the shape of a fan. The illustration A and C shows an unpruned vine in the third and fourth years. B shows the same vine pruned the fourth year for this system.

The advantages claimed by the advocates of this system are (1) that most of the old wood is dispensed with each year, (2) that the vines can be easily laid down and covered in winter when needful in the extreme northern sections and (3) that if after pruning the canes are tied and spread fan shaped on the trellis, as they should be, the young upright-growing shoots fasten themselves by their tendrils and need practically no tying. This system has the disadvantage of bearing the fruit too low and is not now so generally in use as formerly.

A system combining some of the points of several other systems is the horizontal block system. In this the vines are manipulated as with the other systems and pruned for the first four years, after which the unpruned vine is pruned as shown in the illustration. As practiced in some localities this system appears to be a combination of the high-renewal and the horizontal arm spur systems.

ABSORBS SHOCKS FROM HARD ROADS

When a team is pulling a heavy load over a rough road or pavement it is subject to repeated and sudden shocks, which cause much unnecessary fatigue. The illustration shows how to make a doubletree that will absorb all shocks and sudden jerks and prevent sore shoulders.

The spring may be one taken from an old buggy. All teamsters that care for their horses and want them to stand up to heavy work without constantly having sore shoulders should make and use a doubletree like the one which is shown in the accompanying illustration.

The County Fair

The county fair is of greatest practical benefit to the exhibitor. When the farmer or stockman enlists as an exhibitor at the county fair the seed of improvement has been sown and the results will be found each year thereafter on the farm, in improved live stock, improved machinery and a general spirit of advancement in all lines of agriculture. The county fair well managed is the cheapest advertising medium, with the most far-reaching results that the county can secure.

Oldest Fruit Tree.

The largest and oldest fruit tree in the state of Washington is claimed to be the famous Frazer apple tree in the orchard of C. R. Frazer, about 20 miles from Walla Walla, Wash. It has been bearing 40 years and it yields approximately three tons of fruit every year.

Babcock Tester.

A $6 bill will buy a detective in the form of a Babcock tester, which will show up every cow in the herd that does not earn her keep.

Introducing New Blood

When one finds that it becomes necessary to introduce new blood in the flock first consider what are the special faults among your fowls and then, if possible, find the breeder strong in the points that you are weak in and purchase the stock from him.

Peanut as Hog Food

The peanut is coming to its own as a hog feed. It has been given a good fair trial and it has stood the test most satisfactorily.

Apples and Oranges

During the year 1911 the United States exported over 1,500,000 barrels of apples, valued at about $5,500,000, and nearly a million boxes of oranges valued at about $2,500,000. A large proportion of these apples and oranges found British purchasers.

Multiplication of Weeds.

In estimating the multiplication of weeds, it is stated that a single pepper plant will produce 13,000 seeds; dandelions, 12,000; plantain, 47,000, and burdock, 42,000.

ARRESTING FLIGHT OF TIME

German Scientists Advise the Eating of Egg Shells by Those Who Approach Old Age.

Two Germans, deep thinkers—Professors Emmerich and Loewe—state that egg shells eaten increase the power of resistance against "the withering blight of time," add weight to the body, activity to the brain and strength to the heart; that they destroy injurious bacilli, prevent inflammation and disease and lend courage and energy. This reminds me, Philip Hale writes in the Boston Herald, of the preparation advertised in London thirty or more years ago as removing superfluous hair, being an excellent substitute for table butter, none genuine unless stamped on the blade. Eustace Miles, the English court tennis player and vegetarian, says he had an old nurse who used to eat egg shells and crunch them joyfully between the teeth that happened to meet, and she said she ate the shells because they "shaved the hair off inside of the throat." The discovery of the German scientist is peculiarly welcome to dwellers by the ocean, for it is a well known fact that if you do not break egg shells the witches will put out to sea in them to wreck vessels, and if you burn the shells the hens will cease to lay. Furthermore, as eggs are now absurdly high—even case eggs—in the neighborhood it seems a pity to waste any part of them.

BABY IN MISERY WITH RASH

Monroe, Wis.—"When my baby was six weeks old there came a rash on his face which finally spread until it got nearly all over his body. It formed a crust on his head, hair fell out and the itch was terrible. When he would scratch the crust, the water would ooze out in big drops. On face and body it was in a dry form and would scale off. He was in great misery and at nights I would lie awake holding his hands so that he could not scratch and disfigure himself. I tried simple remedies at first, then got medicine, but it did no good.

"Finally a friend suggested Cuticura Remedies so I sent for a sample to see what they would do, when to my surprise after a few applications I could see an improvement, and he would rest better. I bought a box of Cuticura Ointment and a cake of Cuticura Soap and before I had them half used my baby was cured. His head is now covered with a luxuriant growth of hair and his complexion is admired by everybody and has no disfigurements." (Signed) Mrs. Annie Saunders, Sept. 29, 1911.

Thoughtful Wife.

"Think I'll go to the ball game today."

"All right. Is there a telephone at the grounds?"

"There's one there. Why?"

"If the home team loses I want you to telephone me, so that I can take the children and go over to mother's until you get your temper back."

MEAN SWEEP FOR WILSON

Democratic Gains In Vermont and Maine Impressive.

OTHER PARTIES IN PLIGHT.

Third Termers to Poll Their Entire Strength From the Rapidly Thinning Republican Ranks — Indications Are That Taft Will Carry but Two States, Roosevelt None.

That the results of the state elections in Vermont and Maine mean a tremendous Democratic victory in November is freely admitted by all except the bitterest partisans. Political experts have done much analyzing, and some claim to have reached novel conclusions. But these facts stand out:

On Monday, Sept. 9, 1912, the Republican and third term parties combined elected William T. Haines governor of Maine over Frederick W. Plaisted, the present Democratic incumbent, by 3,028 plurality; in 1908, a presidential year, a Republican was elected governor by 7,653 plurality; in 1904 the plurality was 25,800, and in 1900 it was 34,132. In other words, in twelve years the Democrats have cut down the Republican plurality in state elections by 31,109.

In this period the Democratic vote has increased from 39,000 to 68,000, whereas the Republican vote has decreased from 74,000 to 71,000. The Democratic vote of this year exceeds that of September, 1908, by 1,000, but the Republican vote is about 2,000 less than that party cast four years ago.

The split in the Republican ranks, following the election of William T. Haines is pronounced. If the division in Maine in November is as it was in the recent Vermont election six-tenths of the Republican vote will go for Taft, three-tenths for Roosevelt and one-tenth for the Democrats. It is significant that the latter party has to date suffered no losses, as compared with the vote in previous years, from the third term movement. On the contrary, it has gained. The result in Maine may be expected to be something like this: Wilson, 74,000; Taft, 42,000; Roosevelt, 21,300.

The returns from the recent Vermont election show in round figures that the joint Republican and third party vote was 8 per cent short of the Republican vote four years ago, while the Democratic vote in that state shows a gain of 25 per cent over that of 1908. It is of special interest to speculate what will happen next November throughout the nation if the Republican and Democratic vote for the national tickets happens to be affected as the gubernatorial vote this month in Vermont has been affected. The New York Post has done some interesting figuring along this line, and as a net result it is shown that under the contingencies mentioned President Taft would carry only two states in November, Rhode Island and Vermont, all the others going for Governor Wilson. The conclusions reached by the Post follow:

To compute this result we should have to deduct 8 per cent from the vote cast for Taft four years ago and apportion the remaining vote in the ratio of 62 to 38 between Taft and Roosevelt, and we should have to add 25 per cent to Bryan's vote in 1908 and give the "dominion total" to Woodrow Wilson—in other words, give Taft 57 per cent and Roosevelt 35 per cent of Taft's vote four years ago and give Wilson 125 per cent of Bryan's vote four years ago.

The result in round numbers would be as follows, so far as regards Taft and Wilson:

| | Taft. | Wilson. |
|---|---|---|
| Alabama | 14,000 | 93,000 |
| Arkansas | 32,000 | 108,000 |
| California | 122,000 | 130,000 |
| Colorado | 71,000 | 153,000 |
| Connecticut | 65,000 | 85,000 |
| Delaware | 14,000 | 28,000 |
| Florida | 6,000 | 39,000 |
| Georgia | 24,000 | 90,000 |
| Idaho | 30,000 | 45,000 |

| New York | 477,000 | 834,000 |
| North Carolina | 66,000 | 171,000 |
| North Dakota | 33,000 | 41,000 |
| Ohio | 327,000 | 628,000 |
| Oklahoma | 63,000 | 153,000 |
| Oregon | 36,000 | 48,000 |
| Pennsylvania | 436,000 | 561,000 |
| Rhode Island | 35,000 | 31,000 |
| South Carolina | 2,000 | 78,000 |
| South Dakota | 39,000 | 50,000 |
| Tennessee | 69,000 | 170,000 |
| Texas | 37,000 | 271,000 |
| Utah | 35,000 | 53,000 |
| Vermont | 23,000 | 14,000 |
| Virginia | 30,000 | 103,000 |
| Washington | 61,000 | 73,000 |
| West Virginia | 75,000 | 123,000 |
| Wisconsin | 142,000 | 208,000 |
| Wyoming | 12,000 | 18,000 |

A western third termer regrets that Roosevelt will not have time before election day to say half he means. He'll have plenty of time following it.

There is plenty of peace about the Taft candidacy, but nobody claims "it passeth understanding."

WICKLIFFE

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Vial and children who have been visiting relatives here for the past week have gone to their home in Montana.

Mrs. Georgia Greenaway was in Wickliffe last Tuesday and stayed over night with her aunt, Mrs. I. Morris.

The stork left a baby girl with Mr. and Mrs. Drakes last Friday night about 7:30 o'clock. Both mother and child are doing nicely.

Miss Clover Jones has just returned home from a two weeks stay.

Mr. Horatius Graves gathered two bushel and a half of peaches from a tree in his orchard, not knowing they were there until they ripened. It was quite a surprise to Mr. Graves as he thought the peach crop was a failure this year.

The Misses Anna, Katie and Tena Rupp of Cleveland, were visitors at the Wuerthele home Sunday afternoon.

Miss Anna Schneider and Mr. Steve Eddy were visiting friends in South Euclid Sunday.

Mrs. Frank White and daughter, Lelia, were in Cleveland last Saturday.

Mrs. Allen Peck is reported on the sick list a few days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morris and little daughter, Marvel, were visitors at the Morris home Sunday, also Miss Pauline Wilson and Mr. Donald Presly spent Sunday afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Davidson and the Morris family.

Mrs. Barber went to Cleveland last Friday.

Mrs. Hattie Kidwards from Willoughby spent Sunday with Mrs. Geo. Garnell.

Mr. and Mrs. Berk spent Sunday with Mrs. T. E. Rice.

Mr. Joe Dempsy and wife from Akron were over night visitors with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Dempsy, last Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Mert Kellog and daughter, Thelma, went to Bellevue last Saturday night to visit one of Mr. Kellog's brothers of that town. They returned home Monday morning.

Mrs. Minnie Parkin went to Collinwood one day last week to visit her sister, Mrs. Ida Kreighbaum.

Mrs. Minnie Martin went to Cleveland shopping one day last week.

WILLOUGHBY

The Mankle family of Wilson avenue are quarantined for scarlet fever. Two children are ill. One was a pupil in the Third Grade of school. The room was closed a day or two last week and fumigated.

Mayor Sidney S. Wilson had business in Painesville Saturday.

The Geneva football team and the W. H. S. team played Saturday the Geneva team defeated the W. H. S. by a large score to nothing.

Mr. and Mrs. Orsen Richmond of East Cleveland, spent Sunday with Mrs. Richmond's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Baldwin.

Miss Laverne Goodrich spent last week with relatives at Olmstead Falls.

Mrs. Harry Hervey and little son of Wickliffe, spent Wednesday in town.

Mrs. James A. McMahon spent Wednesday in Cleveland.

Mrs. T. S. Hodgeson entertained the Missionary Society Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. Emory Trincor of Ashtabula spent a part of the past week with relatives in this place.

J. O. Manville and daughter Martha Jane, spent a day or two in Warren the last of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy L. Watts of Cleveland spent Sunday with his parents.

Married, last week Miss Gladys Merril and Joseph Swain, both of this place. After a short trip the young couple will be at home on Euclid street.

Judge C. D. Clark spent Saturday in Painesville.

Miss Austin, President of the Epworth League, spoke at the League in Painesville Sunday.

A nephew of F. V. Vial accidentally shot himself Friday but the wound was not serious.

Mr. Leo Hengesbach brought a bride here from Jackson, Michigan, Wednesday. A large number of young friends surrounded the home of his mother, and gave them a hearty welcome, and were treated to cake and cigars.

A Marvelous Escape.

"My little boy had a marvelous escape," writes P. F. Bastiums of Prince Albert, Cape of Good Hope. "It occurred in the middle of the night. He got a very severe attack of croup. As luck would have it, I had a large bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house. After following the directions for an hour and twenty minutes he was through all danger." Sold by all dealers.

SECRET BURIED IN A TOMB

"Jerome," Nova Scotia's Legless Man of Mystery, Silent for Half Century, Is Dead.

Within a few hundred yards of a beach where fifty-one years ago two fishermen found him with his legs amputated, "Jerome," Nova Scotia's man of mystery, died a few days ago, silent to the end about his identity.

Although he undoubtedly possessed the power of speech, "Jerome" had not conversed with anyone in the half century he had been cared for by Didier Comeau and the latter's sons and daughters. During all of this time "Jerome" had remained a mystery to the settlers here, most of whom are known as "returned Acadians," being the descendants of the compatriots of Evangeline who returned to this part of their adopted country after their expulsion by the English in 1755.

Away back in the summer of 1861, according to tradition, a ship different from those usually seen here, put off a small boat which made for the shore and deposited above the tide line an object that several hours later was discovered to be a man. His legs had been freshly amputated and there was a jug of water and a package of ship's biscuits beside the man, who had suffered greatly from exposure.

Wrapped in blankets and taken to the Comeau house, where, ever since he had been a welcome member of the household, the man was finally revived by a physician. In half a dozen languages the man was asked:

"What is your name?" To this question, in Italian, propounded by the elder Comeau, the man made muttered reply: "Geromel" Never after that, however, did "Jerome" utter a word except on one occasion, when asked where he came from. "Trieste" was the reply made, seemingly in an unguarded moment.

Physicians from all parts of the world who have visited this land of Evangeline in the fifty-one summers that have elapsed since "Jerome" was found on the beach, have studied the man's case. Most of them have agreed that he might have spoken had he desired to do so; one or two have vouchsafed the opinion that some terrible experience through which "Jerome" passed frightened him out of his senses and rendered him unable to utter an intelligible word.—New York World.

Abbreviated Costume.

The new governess and her small charge were jogging along one of the popular drives in the pony cart when they met several members of an athletic club, clad in very much abbreviated running togs, out for a cross-country jaunt. "Oh, see dose boys," cried the little girl, "wis dey something on and noting else!"—Judge.

WHY MAN EXCELS AT GOLF

Woman Lacks the Active Physical Training Which Her Brother Gets in Boyhood.

If you were asked why men play better golf than women your answer probably would be, because men are stronger than women. And that would be the truth, but only part of it.

Possibly the difference in the effectiveness of the woman's and the man's game can, as some people claim, be traced directly to the length of the shot, but the more one investigates the more he is led to qualify this conclusion. It becomes, on the whole, less reasonable to credit solely to muscular advantage the eight to nine strokes which, roughly, measure the handicap due from a man to a woman. In other words, if a man and a woman should happen to have an equal supply of strength and endurance, it seems that the man would turn out to be the better golfer. That is the question.

In the first place, men have far greater game experience. They begin to play bat and ball games at an earlier age and thereby develop more thoroughly the "feel" of clubs and the fine eye that is necessary for success in such games. There are all sorts of games that boys amuse themselves with from their earliest youth which give them eye. And when they take a golf club in their hands for the first time the essential act of concentrating their vision on the object to be struck is not a novelty. It is second nature.

With a girl it is different. She has not daily played games that developed her eye, such as marbles, "scrub," hockey, snowballing and target practice, games that are the constant avocations of bipeds who practice the profession of being boys. And yet one of the greatest of women golfers assures me that women have shown in tournaments more concentration of the eye than men and that only last fall this fact was proved. It appears that a computation was made both at the men's championship and the women's which proved that the women missed their drives less often than the men.—Charles Alden Seltzer in the Outing Magazine.

First Rook to Talk.

In New street, Horsham, England, says a writer in the May Strand, there is to be seen the very exceptional and interesting spectacle of a talking rook. The bird is the property of two school children, a little girl and boy, who caught it five years ago, when it was quite a baby, in a local rookery. It is of the gentler sex, and occupies a small pen in a tiny back garden. No attempt has ever been made to teach the rook to talk, and yet she has a vocabulary of close upon 100 simple words. She is often allowed out in the garden, for, although she can fly swiftly and strongly, she can be trusted not to make her escape. It is said that this is the first instance of a rook developing the power to talk.

Just Like the Bible.

Niles, who is 10 years old, has a weakness for attending the circus, and he willingly goes to church with his mother when the circus season approaches and doesn't hesitate to point to his Sabbath rectitude as one of the reasons why he should be permitted to go to the circus.

When the circus came this week he filed his regular petition for permission to attend.

"You have seen the circus three times, Niles," said his mother, "and I don't believe you need to see it again."

"Well, mother," he answered, "I think a circus is a lot like the Bible; you can't get too much of it."

The afternoon performance found Niles and his mother looking on.

A Doubtful Compliment.

Edward J. Watkins, is in a quandary over a statement made to him at the Pandanala club. He does not know whether to be flattered or offended.

At the club, a negro boy as black as a shoe, is in charge of the check room, and while taking Watkins' hat and coat, he cast an admiring glance at Mr. Watkins's new gray suit, and said: "Mr. Watkins, that's the best looking suit I see this year. I'd like to buy some of your clo'se, sir, sometimes if you got any you'd dispose of. You dress more to a nigger's taste than any other gentleman at the club; yessir."

Rather Absurd.

Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, a few days after his regrettable resignation, was talking to a Washington correspondent about an adulterated food.

"But the manufacturer says he can prove the adulteration does not harm," the correspondent ventured.

"Well," answered Dr. Wiley, with a smile, "if he tries to prove that, he'll involve himself as absurdly as the man who declared in triumph:

"'Nobody can have two birthdays but a twin!'"

Hardly Fair.

"Which is your favorite among the plays of Shakespeare, Mr. Henpeck?"

"'The Taming of the Shrew.'"

"But do you think you ought to permit your personal feeling to get the better of your judgment in such a matter?"

The Likeness.

Mrs. Newed—I suppose now we have disagreed, you are comparing this to your old home.

Mr. Newed—Exactly. This is just like the rows mother used to make.

Learn to Be Happy.

All men can learn to be happy; and the teaching of it is easy. If you live among those who daily call blessing on life, it shall not be long ere you will call blessing on yours.—Maeterlinck.

Belated Appreciation.

A workman called at the home of President Taft's brother Charlie in Cincinnati, to perform some odd job, and he managed to see some of the priceless paintings in Brother Charlie's private gallery. He was attracted to a small original Van Dyke and moved up closer to get a better look.

"Ah!" he exclaimed. "I've got that same thing down home. Yes, it's exactly like that. My wife got it someplace here in town. Are they worth much?"

"That one is worth $65,000," he was told.

"Hum!" he murmured. "I guess I'll have ours framed."

A Well-Meaning Bride.

"Darling," said the young bride, "I don't mind you going to baseball games."

"Thank you, dearie," he said.

"But there is one thing I wish you'd do."

"And what is that?" he inquired.

"When the team is going to play an extra-inning game I want you to call me up beforehand so that I will know when to have supper ready."

Nothing of the Kind.

"Do you think that student has nostalgia?"

"Oh, nothing so serious as that. He's just homesick."

Blackguard.

The board of green cloth is responsible for inventing "blackguard," a word that has strangely altered in meaning. In early time its was by no means a term of reproach, but referred to the lowly but honorable calling of carrying coal in the king's household. Is there any other bad word in the English language that can boast of such a royal origin?—London Chronicle.

Chronic Dyspepsia.

The following unsolicited testimonial should certainly be sufficient to give hope and courage to persons afflicted with chronic dyspepsia: "I have been a chronic dyspeptic for years, and of all the medicine I have taken, Chamberlain's Tablets have done me more good than anything else," says W. G. Mattison, No. 7 Sherman St., Hornellsville, N. Y. Sold by all dealers.

Candidate For President Wilson Will Speak at Central Armory.

Hundreds of Lake county democrats will attend the big Wilson meeting at the Central Armory in Cleveland Friday night of this week.

Cleveland democrats are making special arrangements for a big rally of democratic voters and central armory will be crowded Friday night as this will be the only opportunity for democrats of this section to see and hear their candidate for president during the campaign.

JURY DUTY

Representative Citizens Chosen To Serve on Grand and Petit Juries

Following is a list of gentlemen who have been drawn to perform jury duty.

Grand Jury—W. J. Brydle, W. L. Price, Frank Loomis, J. E. Cleary, C. J. Worner, Geo. Searl, Chas. H. King, Painesville; D. J. Babcock, Fairport; J. H. Wood, Madison; A. L. Brown, Concord; James McMahon, L. Ryan, Willoughby; B. F. Uphan, N. P. Crawford, Kirtland; B. Herrick, Perry.

Petit Jurors—John Cramblett, Perry; Warner W. Trowbridge, F. H. Murrey, Concord; C. A. Losey, Mentor; B. F. Crofoot, Leroy; R. A. M. Crowthers, Ed. Paige, W. Etzooperger, Chas. Waterman, Willoughby; C. H. Leavenwood, J. B. Trall, Jas. Creedon, Geo. E. Allen, Painesville; O. O. Smead, C. E. Hancock, O. E. Porbs, Madison; M. A. Squires, Kirtland; L. W. Hungerford, Fairport; Geo. J. Bell, Mentor; M. E. Orow, Grand River.

The grand jury will report on Oct. 14, and the petit jury Oct. 2d.

THOMAS KILCAWLEY

An Old and Respected Citizen Died Tuesday Morning.

Thomas Kilcawley, an old and respected resident of Prospect street, this city, passed away at 10:30 o'clock Tuesday morning, after a lingering illness. The funeral services will be held at 8:30 o'clock Thursday morning from St. Mary's church.

Mr. Kilcawley is survived by a wife and seven children, two sons, Thomas Kilcawley of this city, and W. H. Kilcawley of Toledo, and five daughters, the Misses Margaret, Mary Joanna, Helen and Alice, all of this city.

Harvest Day For The Hospital

Saturday, Oct. 12, has been appointed Harvest Day at the Painesville Hospital. If this date is inconvenient for some they may bring donations at any time.

Owing to the generosity of those who brought exhibits from the county fair there is a supply of all vegetables except potatoes. These, together with fresh fruit, canned fruit, pickles, jelly, and any household supplies will be very acceptable.

Avoid Sedative Cough Medicines

If you want to contribute directly to the occurrence of capillary bronchitis and pneumonia, use cough medicines that contain codine, morphine, heroin and other sedatives when you have a cough or cold. An expectorant like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is what is needed. That cleans out the culture beds or breeding places for the germs of pneumonia and other germ diseases. That is why pneumonia never results from a cold when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used. It has a world wide reputation for its cures. It contains no morphine or other sedative. For sale by all dealers.

—o—

Rev. and Mrs. T. F. Phillips left Painesville Saturday for their new home at Sheffield, Pa., where Mr. Phillips has been called.

—o—

Dr. A. J. Fisher won her suit against [illegible] Frost for board bill. The judgment called for $138.80. The case was tried before Justice Adams of Geneva.

—o—

What would Painesville do without Joseph Schiappacasse to fix things up? He is making great improvements on Main street near the corner of State.

—o—

Republican candidates on the county ticket are not particular whether they run on the Taft ticket or the Bull Moose ticket. But they do want to be elected awfully.

—o—

Geneva has been making many improvements of late, and now a new elegant business block near the center of the village, will add much to the attractiveness of the place.

—o—

Thousands of bushels of apples are going to waste in Ashtabula county because the price at present is so low that it does not pay to make the long haul necessary to get the apples to market.

—o—

Rev. M. J. Slutz, who has hundreds of warm personal friends in Painesville and Chardon, has been transferred from Kent to Jefferson. He preached his first sermon at Jefferson last Sunday.

—o—

An auto party from Geneva, consisting of Mr. and Mrs. Munger and Mrs. O. B. Allos of Forest street, and Miss Halderman, were Painesville visitors and callers at the Herald office Friday p. m.

—o—

S. A. Haskell has returned to his home in this city after successfully completing his sewer contract at Andover. Since June 1st, Mr. Haskell has supervised the laying of about six miles of sewer in Andover.

—o—

Jack Riley, Fairport, employe of the Diamond Alkali Co., was found dead in the Fairport jail at 11:30 Sunday night. Coroner Barnett, who was notified immediately, stated that death was due to alcoholism.

—o—

Chardon village should be, and undoubtedly is, very proud over the new Highland Hotel. The Highland, under the management of Mr. and Mrs. Pierce, would be a credit to any place twice the size of Chardon.

Things are moving right along at the Painesville Green House & Gardening Co's plant on W. Jackson street. The green houses and other buildings are about completed. The lettuce plants are nearly ready for the second transplanting.

—o—

A Painesville man broke into the Wick Hathaway class with ever bearing beans, planted between early rows of potatoes. They made tremendous growth, producing ripe, shell and string beans all summer, the vines being still green and loaded with growing beans.

—o—

Homer Harper is the only voter in this section who appears to be enthusiastic enough to break into print. But when a man is a candidate for office and continually over-flowing with newspaper contributions you can't always know whether he is inspired by enthusiasm or by nervousness.

—o—

The villages of Fairport and Richmond have granted a 25 year franchise to the C. P. & E. Ry. Co. to furnish electric light and power to the inhabitants and also for street lighting. The terms of the contract may be found in another column of this paper, under the head of Ordinances.

The residents of that section of Cleveland, O., known as Cleveland Heights, are carrying on a crusade which has the pleasant object of filling the section with martins. Several residents have set up martin houses and elsewhere efforts are to be made to coax the cheerful bird into selecting Cleveland Heights as its home.

—o—

On Tuesday morning Mayor W. S. Smith appointed a committee of six to investigate the electric light plant and to talk with the C. P. & E. Railroad company in regard to furnishing this city with electric lights. The committee consists of Mayor Smith, Councilmen George K. McLeod, Z. P. Rider, F. W. Leland, E. D. Mayhew and Director of Service E. L. House.

—o—

Gordon, accompanied by Mayor Baker of Cleveland, will spend the entire day in Lake county, speaking at Willoughby at 11 a. m., Perry and Madison in the afternoon, and at night in Painesville. The meetings will be advertised later with further particulars.

JAMES GARRETT

PUBLIC SPIRITED CITIZEN OF PAINESVILLE MAKES PLEA FOR REST ROOM

Council Meeting of Special Interest Because of Electric Light and Tiber Creek Agitations

At the council meeting Monday night the electric light problem came up for consideration. The matter is to be investigated by a committee. Councilman Z. P. Rider was the only member of council to oppose the investigation and contemplated conference with the C. P. & E. railroad officials.

Two ordinances to establish grades on local streets were passed. The grades will be established on Grant street between Mentor avenue and Jackson street and on Walnut street from Mentor avenue south and east.

The mayor was authorized to petition the township trustees to locate and construct a township ditch following substantially the course of the so-called Tiber creek, were passed by a unanimous vote. In this same connection the council instructed the city engineer to make plans and specifications for taking care of the water of the Tiber creek within the city limits.

James Garrett addressed the council on the question of a rest room on the park. While no action was taken on this question, the members of the council recognized that Mr. Garrett had voiced the sentiments of a majority of the people of Painesville by favoring a public rest room.

The council also passed resolutions of respect to the memory of the late William N. Collister, former superintendent of the water and light departments of this city. A copy of these resolutions will be found in this issue.

Marriage License

BULLETINS GIVE DETAILS OF FIGHT IN WHICH THREE AMERICANS ARE KILLED.

THREE OTHERS ARE WOUNDED

Fifty Nicaraguans Slain When United States Marines and Bluejackets Encounter Organized Band of Drunken Rebels.

Washington, D. C.—Bulletins to the state department tell of the fight at Leon in which three Americans were killed, three wounded and 50 Nicaraguans were killed, the number of the Nicaraguans wounded not being given.

The Americans killed were as follows, the names of their relatives in the United States being also given:

John Bartels, private, enlisted at Chicago, Ill., December 27, 1911. His sister, Annie Puttcomer, lives at Melrose Park, Cook county, Ill.

Roy G. Morgan, May 18, 1889, enlisted at San Francisco. His mother, Mrs. S. M. Olsen, lives at Los Angeles, Cal.

George O. Burgess, enlisted at Oak Park, Stillwater, Minn., December 7, 1908. His father, Ora Burgess, Oak Park, Stillwater, Minn.

The wounded are Frank Kittsmiller, private, enlisted at Spokane, Wash., May 13, 1912. His mother, Marguerite Kittsmiller, lives at Lewiston, Idaho.

Two others were wounded, Lamper, seaman from the Colorado, and Dalder, a marine trumpeter of Company D. The department's account of the surrender of Leon says:

"Lieut. Col. Long was authorized to grant amnesty to all the soldiers who would lay down their arms and go to their homes. The rebel leaders then agreed to turn over the city and Lieut. Col. Long entered Leon on the afternoon of October 6, with his marines and bluejackets. The resistance that they encountered came from an organized band of drunken rebels. All the Americans were struck while in action serving under the flag. Lieut. Col. Long's forces assumed control of the city of Leon and he will see that its nearly 40,000 inhabitants are protected. Quiet now reigns there.

"Great credit is given Lieut. Col. Long for this successful termination of an almost critical situation. The railroad is now safe all the way from Corinto to Granada, and Admiral Southerland believes that in less than a week peace will be general throughout the republic."

The correct names of the Americans wounded on October 4 at Chichigalpa have been received. They are as follows:

Sergeant J. Smith, slightly wounded in left wrist.

Private F. L. Harris, slightly wounded in thumb.

Private H. Hudson, slightly wounded in scalp.

D. H. Talmadge, electrician, second class, slightly wounded in left foot.

Attorney for Defense in Dynamite Trial Outlines Case of Forty-five Defendants.

Indianapolis, Ind.—What the defense will be in the trial of the 45 men accused by the government of complicity in the "dynamite conspiracy" was outlined before the jury by William N. Harding, attorney for the defendants.

Harding said at the outset it would be shown that the executive board of the International Association Bridge and Structural Iron Workers never appropriated a dollar to be used for dynamiting. He asked the jury to suspend judgment until after the witnesses had testified. If anyone connected with the union diverted the funds for any illegal purpose, he said it would be shown that the guilty persons were not among the present defendants.

DEFIES DEATH TO MARRY

Buckeye Widow Slashed by Husband Who Killed Himself Takes Unto Herself Another Mate.

Sandusky, O.—Still nursing wounds inflicted by her first husband, Frank J. Nath, who committed suicide August 24 after slashing her with a razor until he thought she was dead, Mrs. Ada J. Nath became the bride of Roy Berman, friend of Nath until Mrs. Nath left him.

Nath attacked his wife and killed himself within an hour after he had been served with summons in a divorce suit instituted by Mrs. Nath.

Seek Slayer of Two Men.

Indianapolis, Ind.—With the police and detectives working on the case, no satisfactory solution to the double murder near the state fair grounds has been found. Frank Foxall, 30, and Philip Lepper, 35, bartenders, were shot to death after a picnic in a grove with two young women. One of the women, Daisey Baker, left the party before the shooting, and the other, Myrtle Williamson, told the police the men were killed by a negro who had attacked her. Lepper was not dead when the police arrived.

Lawyers to Defend Slayer.

New York City.—Out of the background of mysteries that shadows the murder of "Big Jack" Zelig, as it shadows the killing of Herman Rosenthal, appeared suddenly two attorneys to defend "Red Phil" Davidson, Zelig's slayer. They came after Davidson had pleaded his poverty and friendliness and had asked that the court give him counsel. They were not appointed by the court. The lawyers are Alexander Karlin and M. A. Busch. They are men little known.

NINE MEET DEATH AS AUTOS COLLIDE

PHILADELPHIA RESIDENTS ARE VICTIMS OF BAD ACCIDENT IN LARGE PARK

THREE MACHINES IN CRASH

One Car, Reported to be Running at High Rate of Speed, Strikes Another, Which Is Hurled Against the Third.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Nine persons are dead as a result of the terrific collision between three automobiles on the edge of Fairmount park. One of the cars which is reported to have been running at high speed, struck another car, which was hurled against a third. The "wild" car, containing six men, crashed through a railing on a bridge and fell 40 feet, killing all its occupants. Three other men in the second car also met death by the force of the collision. The dead:

Robert A. Boyd.
Edward Shaw, Jr.
Daniel Wilkes.
W. H. Lawrence.
Gordon H. Miller.
Leon Nevin.
Jesse Holmes.
Robert Gielel.
Ernest Schofield.

The accident occurred at 33d and Thompson streets, just outside of Fairmount park. The park, which is one of the largest in the country, is noted for its beautiful drives, and all day and night strings of motor cars are passing along some of the roadways.

Charles J. Spade, who escaped uninjured from the crash, except for slight cuts and bruises, declared that his car had just come out of the park and was crossing Thompson street at 33d, when another car, seemingly running wild, came flying up out of the darkness and crashed into his car before he could avoid it.

Then the wild car, which it was later learned belonged to Edward Shaw of 1310 Morris street, swung around by the force of the impact, plunged across the sidewalk through a guard rail on the edge of the street to the Pennsylvania railroad tracks, 40 feet below. This car was a total wreck and every man in it was killed. Two men in the Spade car were killed instantly and another was so badly injured that he died in a short time.

When the Shaw car struck Spade's machine, the latter was hurled backward into a third automobile, which was passing in Thompson street. This car seems to have escaped without any serious damage, for it made off in the darkness.

TELLS WHY HE SLEW ZELIG

Produce Dealer Says Poor People of New York's East Side Had Been Robbed by Murdered Man.

New York City.—Proclaiming he had committed a murder which was of a great benefit to society, Philip Davidson, the man who killed Zelig J. Alberts, "Big Jack Zelig," went to the Tombs to await the coroner's inquest. The statement was made by the inoffensive produce dealer without the slightest attempt to appear as a bravado.

"I realize that I will have to forfeit my life in the electric chair, but the poor people of the East Side will no longer have to suffer through that fellow's depredations."

Auto Hits Car, Six Are Dead

Fort Worth, Tex.—Six persons were instantly killed near Arlington, 14 miles east of here, when an automobile driven by Rufus C. Cornelius, 38, crashed into a rapidly moving Dallas-Fort Worth interurban car. Cornelius, his wife, three young children and a young woman, as yet unidentified, are the victims. The bodies are mutilated so badly identification is most difficult.

Cornelius was driving so rapidly that he lost control of the car, which was going 30 miles an hour.

Dies From Being Hugged.

Macon, Ga.—Doctor Samuel Johnson, a negro preacher who lived near Pavo and who has been holding meetings in Thomas county, is dead as a result of being hugged, according to a long distance telephone message from Thomasville.

The preacher created so much enthusiasm over religion that members of his flock rushed to the pulpit while the service was going on and began to embrace him. Women and men did the hugging. They shouted and sang as they squeezed.

SHELL EXPLODES, 8 HURT

ARTILLERYMEN ARE INJURED DURING TARGET PRACTICE.

Breechlock Is Hurled Backward With Terrific Force and Gun Ripped Open From End to End.

Washington, D. C.—By the explosion of a three-inch shell in a field piece during target practice at Tobyhanna, Pa., the following artillery men of the Third artillery were injured:

Private William Erbeck.
Corporal John Hersch.
Private Andrew Miller.
Private Peter Marion.
Private Nelson D. Blosse.
Private Charles A. Haschell.
Private Fred F. McNames.
Private Fred L. Linehan.

Two of the men were additionally injured by the fall of an obstruction tower which was struck by a bit of flying metal. The tower is a part of the equipment of each battery. The war department's brief report says the shell had been placed in the gun and the breechlock hurled backward with terrific force and the gun was ripped open from breech to muzzle.

GETS LINCOLN'S DICTIONARY

State Historical Society of Missouri Receives Book Which Has Bullet Hole in Cover.

Columbia, Mo.—A dictionary which belonged to Abraham Lincoln was given to the State Historical society of Missouri by W. W. Glass, a retired farmer of Marysville, Mo. The title of the book is "An Universal Etymological English Dictionary and Interpreter of Hard Words." A bullet hole plainly can be seen in the cover.

On the flyleaf are names of members of the Lincoln family who owned it at different times, including "A. Lincoln" and "Thomas Lincoln," the latter Abraham Lincoln's father.

The book was found in the attic of an old log house on a farm in Hancock county. Three bachelor cousins of Lincoln used to live on adjoining farms and were known to have exchanged books frequently with the owner of the log house.

EX-POPULIST SENATOR DIES

William A. Peffer Cut Grotesque Figure in Upper Congress During His Service There.

Topeka, Kan.—William A. Peffer, the first and only Populist United States senator and founder of the Populist party, died at the home of his daughter at Gronola, Kan. He was elected to the senate from this state in the early years of the Populist movement. The former senator was born in Pennsylvania in 1831.

Peffer cut a grotesque figure in the senate during his period of service there from March, 1891, to March, 1897. Tall, cadaverous, lynx-eyed, soft of speech and of tread, humble in manner to the point of objection at times, he introduced bills covering every one of the Populist contentions before he retired.

Have You Got Coryza.

St. Louis, Mo.—"Everybody's getting coryza, or soon will be," declared Dr. Martin C. Woodruff, head of the department of contagious diseases of the city health bureau. When the tip of your nose starts to blush like the cheek of a frost kissed apple, when your lips and the roof of your mouth begin to feel dry and hard and your eyes fill up with tears for no apparent reason, you've got coryza, or coryza has got you.

Kills Two Women and Self.

Calgary, Alberta.—Three are dead as the result of John C. Davis' insane jealousy. Davis entered the apartments of his wife's friend, where she had sought protection, and after shooting his wife dead, shot her friend, Miss Mildred Dixon, three times. He then turned the revolver on himself, dying later. Miss Dixon died later. For three weeks Davis, a wealthy real estate broker, formerly of Spokane, Wash., has been begging his wife to return to him, but she refused.

At 12, He's Pyromaniac.

Lima, O.—After burning his mother's home, firing his uncle's store, destroying three other residences by fire, breaking from the Allen county jail, stealing $25 from the sheriff's house, being recaptured in Indiana after a two weeks' hunt, trying to burn the Lancaster Boys' Industrial school, escaping from that institution and retaken, Basil Cochran, 12, was arraigned in probate court here on a lunacy charge. The boy is a pyromaniac and kleptomaniac, the judge was told.

VETERANS IN REUNION

OLD SOLDIERS, MEMBERS OF 18th REGIMENT, HOLD ANNUAL MEETING AT LIMA.

They Transact Business and Tell Stories of the Great Civil Conflict.

Lima, O.—Members of the 18th regiment, Ohio Volunteer infantry, met at Memorial hall in reunion and spent the day transacting business and recounting the old days. Forty-six comrades were present. Many of the surviving members of the regiment were unable to come on account of distance or business engagements.

The afternoon session opened with an address by T. P. Johnson, Van Wert, commander of the reunion. He dwelt upon historic matters from Washington to Lincoln and remarked the great progress of the country since the civil war. He ended with an eulogy of the flag and the country.

Comrade McGinniss, who is past 84 years of age, sang "Marching Through Georgia." The veterans were carried back to the war time days of the origin of the old song.

Following the song, Lieut. T. C. Hirst, Yellow Springs, gave a brief talk, giving the history of the regiment. The 18th O. V. I. was mustered in at Camp Lima in 1862 and immediately went to Camp Chase, near Columbus, where they were sent to the south. The most important battle in which the regiment fought was at Wise's Forks, North Carolina. Lieut. Hirst was the only commissioned officer present. He enlisted in 1862 and came to Lima to muster in the regiment.

Wm. Zerby, Tiffin, O., was elected president for the coming year and Tiffin was chosen as the next place of reunion. B. F. Morris, St. Johns, O., was chosen as vice president and T. P. Johnson, a former president, was re-elected as financial and corresponding secretary. The chaplains elected were Comrades McGinniss and Joe Harris. Comrade S. G. Lyle of Forest, O., was made recording secretary.

FORMER MAYOR IS KILLED

L. T. Sheets, of Tippecanoe City, Meets Death in Auto Accident.

Tippecanoe City, O.—Mr. L. T. Sheets and Miss Ethel Hartman were returning from Dayton after the opera in an automobile. East of Vandalia, on the National pike, the auto struck a rut and turned turtle, pinning both occupants under the car, killing Mr. Sheets instantly. Miss Hartman extricated herself from under the wreck, went to a farm house and telephoned to this place for help. Mr. Sheets was twice elected mayor of Tippecanoe City, and was a Knight Templar and Shriner. Miss Hartman is severely bruised.

NEW GARBAGE ARRANGEMENT.

Springfield, O.—Seven members of council have put their stamp of approval upon the proposition made to the city by R. E. Roberts, of Newark, to relieve the city of the expense of removing garbage and substitute the plan which several years was originated in Mansfield, O. The plan in substance is that of granting to Mr. Roberts' firm the right to collect garbage in the city, under regulations and restrictions imposed by council, or the board of health, and charge the persons from whom the garbage is collected.

LEASE BIG PLANT.

Springfield, O.—The Strunk-Meyer Lime Co., which has for several years operated a plant near Cold Springs, in Mad River township, have leased their property to the Cold Springs Lime & Stone Co. The lease is valid for ten years, beginning October 1, and is given in consideration of $2,400 per annum. One of the stipulations of the lease is that the property may be purchased by the new firm at any time during the life of the lease for $40,000.

CRACKSMEN BLOW SAFE.

Springfield, O.—Using nitroglycerin, burglars blew the safe of the Ohio Electric Railway Co.'s ticket office at South Vienna, 10 miles east of here, and secured $175 worth of tickets and several hundred dollars in money orders. The burglars carefully set aside flowers before entering the window. A few weeks ago the postoffice was robbed at this place.

JOHN O. McCORMICK IS DEAD.

Xenia, O.—John O. McCormick, aged 64, for 30 years city editor of the Xenia Gazette, died of pneumonia. He retired from active newspaper work three months ago. He was a native of Lawrence, Ind.

LANDS BIG CONTRACT.

Lima, O.—It has been learned from authoritative sources that President Underwood, of the Erie railroad, has promised that the Lima locomotive corporation is to be given a large share, probably nearly half, of the repair work of the railroad passing through here. The information has significance, in view of the fact that the work will mean practically $250,000 yearly to the local institutions, of which 40 per cent will be expended in labor.

GREEKS GO TO FIGHT.

Lima, O.—Following a meeting here, 24 Greeks decided to return to their native country and enlist in the Grecian army. They left Monday, under the leadership of George Leon, wealthy merchant. Others likely will follow in case trouble becomes serious.

Dayton, O.—Mrs. Thomas Malley, 77, of Middletown, while waiting on a train at the union station, slipped and fell, breaking both wrists. She is now in the St. Elizabeth hospital.

MEET AT SPRINGFIELD

Rebekahs of the Fifty-First District Gather and Choose Officers.

Springfield, O.—The Fifty-first district, Rebekahs of Ohio, held their tenth special annual session and school of instruction in the I. O. O. F. hall in this city. Two sessions were held, one in the afternoon and one in the evening.

Features of the day's program were the conferring of the past noble grand degree to 70 or more members, the installation of new officers, and the program given by the children of the Odd Fellows' home, in charge of Matron Mrs. E. B. Turner.

The following are the officers elected to serve the ensuing year: President, Edna Koontz, Frances Willard lodge, New Carlisle; vice president, Belle Nolan, Ivor lodge, Springfield; secretary, Clara A. Alexander, Ivor lodge, Springfield; treasurer, Mary L. Wilson, Purity lodge, South Vienna; Warden, Martha Reiberts, Ivor lodge, Springfield; conductor, Mrs. Syman, Ivor lodge, Springfield; chaplain, Mrs. Norris, Ivor lodge, Springfield; outside guardian, Celia Bryan, Lily lodge, Fairfield; inside guardian, Jessie Miller, Purity lodge, South Vienna.

The next session of the lodge will be held in Fairfield.

HOLD STATE CONVENTION

W. C. T. U. of Ohio Meet at Lima and Choose Officers.

Lima, O.—Dayton was selected for the next meeting by the Woman's Christian Temperance union before adjourning its state convention. Resolutions were adopted favoring the teaching of sex hygiene in the public schools and the holding of another election for equal suffrage under the initiative and referendum.

The officers elected were: President, Mrs. Florence D. Richards, Leipsic; vice president, Mrs. Frances Ensign Fuller, Madison; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Viola D. Romans, Cambridge; recording secretary, Mrs. Sarah K. Meredith, Canton; treasurer, Mrs. Florence Jaite, Boston; loyal temperance secretary, Miss Mary Ervin, Cedarville; secretary young people's branch, Mrs. Mary Stewart Powers, Norwalk; trustees, Mrs. Frances E. Fuller, Madison, Mrs. Effie L. Herthoff, Cleveland, Mrs. Carrie L. Flatter, Yellow Springs.

BENEFACTOR IS DEAD

Joseph Boyle, of Lebanon, Made a Present of His Business to Men Who Worked For Him.

Lebanon, O.—Five former employes of Joseph Boyle, prominent resident of Lebanon and Cincinnati, are mourning the loss of an employer who became rich in the mail-order business and then gave to them a $500,000 company. Mr. Boyle died at his home here.

It was just about a year ago that Mr. Boyle, who is a large property owner in Warren and Hamilton counties, called these five men into his office and gave them a $500,000 mail-order business in which he had become wealthy. He asked nothing in return, but thanked them for their services while in his employ.

Mr. Boyle owned a home in Lebanon and another in Cincinnati, as well as other valuable properties in both village and city. While he had still kept up his home in the Verona Flats on Walnut Hills he had spent the last few months mostly in Lebanon. He was a member of the Order of Odd Fellows and of the Grand Army.

TO DRILL SEVERAL WELLS.

Hamden, O.—The contract for sinking a number of test wells on the old Bloom furnace lands, south of here, were let by the new owner, Fred Worthington, to Fred Ottoey, of Sciotoville. The tract comprises 8,000 acres. A well drilled near the furnace furnishes sufficient gas to run the engine and illuminate the grounds, and it is now proposed to sink and secure a chain of producing wells and then pipe the product to South Webster and other near-by villages.

EPIDEMIC CLOSES SCHOOLS.

Marysville, O.—The public schools at North Lewisburg have been ordered closed on account of an epidemic of spinal meningitis. Joseph Shea, son of John Shea, died and was buried beside his mother and little sister, both of whom died within the last year.

MAN CRUSHED BY ELEVATOR.

Zanesville, O.—Washington Adams, 55, father of Stanley Adams, of Star Pretzel Co., of Cincinnati, was fatally injured when caught by an elevator he was operating at the Young Hardware Co. His head was badly crushed, two ribs broken, penetrating his lungs.

DOCTORS MEET AT LIMA.

Lima, O.—Dr. Esos O. Burton, of this city, was honored with election to the presidency of the Northwestern Ohio District Medical association in its 38th annual meeting. The other officers elected are Dr. William A. Belt, Kenton, vice president; Dr. Sidney Dix Foster, Toledo, secretary; Dr. E. H. Porter, Tiffin, assistant secretary and treasurer. Councillors of the district Drs. Dana O. Weeks, Marion, and Charles N. Smith, Toledo. Findlay was chosen for next meeting.

COUNTY SPENT MONEY.

Dayton, O.—Montgomery county spent $472 for ice water for the various officials during the year ending August 30, 1912, according to the annual report of the County commissioners. Newspapers got $10.86 in subscriptions, while $112.90 worth of antitoxin fortified the county against contagious diseases. Office supplies cost $12,621, laundry $33, sheriff's automobile hire $326. The maintenance of Memorial hall cost the county $4,466.36.

ARE STILL WORKING FOR BETTER ROADS

GOOD ROADS FEDERATION WILL GO BEFORE NEXT LEGISLATURE WITH PROPOSITION.

THE STATE PURCHASES FOUR MONKEYS

Ohio Farmers Are Great Auto "Fans," as Registrar of State Shows Many Cars Owned in the Rural Districts

Columbus.—Boosters in the good roads movement in Ohio are not daunted by the defeat of the proposed constitutional amendment providing for the levying of $50,000,000 for the construction of a new system of county highways, and the Ohio Good Roads federation will go before the next session of the general assembly with the proposition to make a direct tax levy for road improvement in the Buckeye state. Many believe that a taxation measure will stand a better chance in the legislature than the $50,000,000 bond issue, and accordingly they feel that the fight for good roads has not been stopped in the least.

Had the bond issue amendment been ratified it was proposed to issue $5,000,000 yearly until the $50,000,000 was used up, and provision would have to be made to take care of the interest, but under the other plan nothing like that would need to be done.

The analysis of the election returns on the good roads amendment shows that the entire western tier of Ohio counties from Butler on the south to Williams on the north, inclusive, voted solidly against the amendments, while the northern counties voted solidly for it. The east and central counties divided.

Ohio Buys Four Monkeys

The mystery surrounding a locked door to a room occupied by the state board of health in an office building has been solved.

The room contains four real live Rhesus monkeys, imported from Africa, and Secretary Eugene F. McCampbell of the board is experimenting on them in an attempt to find the cause and cure for infantile paralysis.

According to Dr. McCampbell, there are between 300 and 500 cases of infantile paralysis in Ohio. There is no known method for the cure or checking of the disease and scientists so far have been unable to find the cause. Rhesus monkeys were selected for the experiment because they are more like a human being than any other animal.

Farmers Great Auto "Fans."

According to the statistics furnished by State Registrar of Automobiles J. A. Shearer, the rural sections of Ohio are buying automobiles as never before. The wheat and oats crop is being rapidly converted into motor cars, as is shown in the number of applications for registrations coming from the rural counties.

Of the licenses issued now about 80 per cent come from the strictly agricultural communities. In the counties of Madison, Miami, Pickaway, Ross, Fayette, Licking, Montgomery, Fairfield and other rich agricultural counties the elevators are fairly bulging out with grain and automobiles find a ready sale.

For the first half of September the number of new automobiles registered was over 50 per day. The rule in farming sections now is early selling of grain, and this sale aids the automobile trade.

Plans New Method.

The Ohio state highway commissioner has taken a new plan in the award of the state-aid highways of the state. Instead of awarding the contracts in the various counties where the work is to be done, all future contracts will be awarded through the office of the highway commissioner in Columbus.

One of the new departures of the Ohio state highway commissioner is the improvement of the roads in concrete construction in preference to water-bound macadam. The former costs only 2 per cent more than the latter and is believed to be much more serviceable.

Preparations are under way for a large exhibit of every orthodox type of roadway to be given under the auspices of the Ohio state highway commissioner. There will be a large display of road building machinery.

Tour Ohio to Aid Farmers.

Columbus.—A five-day tour of the state, commencing October 21, will be made by a lecture train under the auspices of the extension work department of Ohio State university. Lectures on hog raising, poultry raising and soil improvement will be given.

Water Works Valuation.

The total valuation of water works companies in Ohio for 1912 is $4,990,580, according to figures made public by the state tax commission. Last year the valuation was $4,551,915, a net increase of $438,685. The total decrease was $51,810. The largest increase made by the commission was on the property of the Mahoning Valley Water Co., which was raised from $300,000 to $560,000. The Akron water works valuation was decreased from $300,000 to $252,250, the largest on that side of the ledger.

Ohio Counties Earn $710,570.

Columbus.—During the last half of 1911 and the first half of 1912 the counties of the state earned $710,570.99 as interest on county funds deposited in banks under rates fixed in competitive bidding. This sum represents only the interest on funds belonging to the counties, the moneys deposited by cities not being included.

Cuyahoga earned the largest sum of any county, $150,542.24. The city of Cleveland earned more than that, having large sums on deposit in the banks for the entire time.

Gather Under Old Elm.

Columbus.—Descendants of the white and the red man who battled more than a century ago for possession of the rich lands of Ohio gathered about the famous Logan elm and with impressive ceremonies, dedicated five acres surrounding the tree as a permanent historical park to the memory of the brave men, white and red, who fought out their differences.

Beneath the spreading elm stood the famous Indian Logan, 138 years ago, and in a speech that has survived the years, told the story of his wrongs, spurned the honorable peace that was offered and elected with his braves to fight out the battle for supremacy, win or lose.

On October 2 his ancestors were at the elm once more. With them under the spreading branches of the historic tree were descendants of the early pioneers against whom Logan made accusations. At the former meeting each bore arms, although the meeting was under a flag of truce. With sunshine all about them, peace prevailing and permanent ties of personal friendship uniting them, the descendants of the red and white warriors of the former age met each to [illegible] forebears, the two to unite in the undertakings of peace.

Six miles south of Circleville, in the center of the historic Pickaway plains, the Logan elm stands on a modest eminence surrounded by one of the most prosperous farming sections of the state. The elm, stately and prominent when the warriors of 1774 gathered there, is now a giant among its fellows. Towering and spreading it covers a large plat of ground, its trunk of enormous size, its age proved by the historic meeting of so many years ago.

Two thousand people were at the dedicatory services, but only 15 were descendants of the red man who was disputing with the white for possession of the land at the former meeting. Charles H. Degent, a Peoria Indian, who traces his lineage to Logan, was there and made an eloquent address, asking for a fair deal in the country for his red brothers. A. Parker, a full blooded Iroquois, talked of what the red man had done for himself and of what he would do for his further and ultimate good if given only a fair opportunity.

Following them came Frank Talmadge, a direct descendant of Michael Cresap, one of the whites against whom Logan made charges, who told the story of the transaction, showing that his ancestor had been unjustly accused, not being in that part of the country when the women of Logan's family were slaughtered. It was that slaughter that sent Logan on the war path and bathed the Pickaway plains in the blood of scores of the hardy pioneers.

Another Indian delegate was Jim Thorpe, the athlete whose sensational and phenomenal winning at the recent Olympic games at Stockholm amazed the gathering. Thorpe is one of the popular red men and brought with him many of the trophies he won at that gathering.

The deed of five acres surrounding the great Logan elm, under which Logan refused peace terms of Lord Dunmore in 1774, was given by the Pickaway County Historical society through its president, Mrs. Howard Jones of Circleville, to the Ohio Archæological and Historical society. It was accepted by the society's president, Prof. G. Frederick Wright of Oberlin. E. O. Randall of this city presided and presented Charles E. Degent, a Peoria Indian, now in the services of the federal government, who made the principal address, praising warmly the character of Logan, known as a friend of pioneers in Ohio. He spoke of Indian problems.

Frost Hurts the Corn.

Columbus.—"Heavy frosts during the last few nights have materially damaged the corn crop in the northern and western sections of the state," said J. Warren Smith of the United States weather bureau. According to reports from various weather stations over the state, the temperature during the last few nights has dropped as low as 30 degrees. In this vicinity 38 degrees was the lowest mark reached. "I do not believe that the light frosts in this vicinity have damaged the crops to any extent," said Professor Smith.

Corn cutting in this section has started, and approximately one-third of the crop in central Ohio is now in the shock. In the northern and western sections of the state the corn is not yet fully matured, and the heavy frosts will blight its development. Late garden truck was slightly injured and the sugar beet crop was nipped by the frost. The fruit crop was not hurt, reported the fruit growers.

Will Raze Morgan Cell.

Columbus.—After standing empty for nearly half a century the old stone cell in the Ohio penitentiary, from which John Morgan, the Confederate raider, made his escape near the close of the war, is to be torn down. The entire block of cells, of which the Morgan cell is a part, is to be demolished.

Trial Postponed.

Because of the illness of Roscoe R. Walcutt, a court stenographer who is a principal witness, the trial of Senator George K. Cetone of Dayton, indicted for bribery in the last legislature, which was set for October 14, was indefinitely postponed at a conference between Attorney General Hogan and Prosecutor Turner. Representative George D. Nye of Waverly, Pike county, the first legislator to face trial on bribery charges, will again fare trial on the date which had been set for the Cetone case.

Rules on Alimony Case.

Columbus.—Supreme court held that a husband must pay alimony to his divorced wife, even if she has remarried, if the alimony order was made before she entered into her second matrimonial venture. The case decided was that of T. C. James, Greene county, who was convicted of contempt of court for failure to pay $400 alimony to his divorced wife, Florence James.

"THEY ARE GOOD ENOUGH FOR ME"

BAY STATE ROUSED

GOOD REASONS TO EXPECT A WILSON VICTORY THIS YEAR IN MASSACHUSETTS.

REPUBLICANS IN THE DUMPS

Third Party Is Split Wide Open By Third Term Movement and Democrats Are Keenly Alive to Their Opportunity to Win.

In his trip through New England Governor Wilson was everywhere received with vast throngs and every evidence of good will. The impression he made justifies the hope that New [illegible] northeastern corner of the country.

There is, however, more substantial reason than crowds and clamor for expecting the addition of some of the New England states to the Democratic column. Governor Foss of Massachusetts has been elected twice in succession and is well enough satisfied with the prospects to make the race a third time. The primaries held in that state showed keen interest among Democrats and discouragement and decline among the Republicans. At the primaries for governor 99,422 Democrats and 97,526 Republicans voted. Here is a state has has been supposed to be rock-ribbed in its Republicanism where more Democrats than Republicans took part in the primaries.

The significance of this fact is greatly increased by comparisons with last spring and last year. The presidential preference vote in April was taken before Governor Wilson had been selected, and before the break in the Republican ranks had occurred. It seemed to be hardly worth while for Democrats to take the trouble to express their preference. Only 28,000 did so, while 171,000 Republicans expressed their preferences for the president or Roosevelt. But Wilson's nomination has aroused the hope of every Democrat in the country, while the third party movement has paralyzed the Republicans. At the state primary the Democrats cast nearly four times as many votes as at the presidential preference primary, and the Republicans cast less than three-fifths.

Not less interesting is the comparison between last week's state primary and the primary of last year. The total vote this year is about 16,000 greater than the primary vote a year ago. This increase is made up of a Republican loss of 15,017 and a Democratic gain of 31,378. Applying those percentages of gain and loss to the presidential vote of 1908, the Democrats would easily carry Massachusetts over the united Republican party, and the party is split from top to bottom by the third term movement.

Colonel's Trust Program.

Col. Roosevelt denies that his trust program was formulated by men interested in trusts, but the country has a distinct remembrance of the time when George W. Perkins announced his retirement from the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co. and outlined a plan for the regulation of trusts in all essentials like the Roosevelt plan. It was while the colonel's administration was framing up the notorious Standard Oil "dissolution."

WILSON PLEASES THE PEOPLE

Governor Is Making the Kind of Campaign That Is Sure to Win.

Gov. Wilson is making the sort of campaign which proves not only that the party has a good candidate, but that the country will have a good president.

Gov. Wilson has shown a dignity, a fairness, a sincerity which has gained the confidence of the people wherever his words have reached.

Gov. Wilson is the reverse of a spectacular [illegible]. Yet on his western trip he has had by odds the largest audiences that have gathered during the campaign.

They have come, not to see a show, but to judge a man, not to pay homage to a self-made Cæsar, but to hear and pass upon a program of national work.

They have heard, they have judged, they have approved.

They have found Gov. Wilson a man whose prime desire is not to exalt himself, but to serve the people.

They have found Gov. Wilson a man who refuses to be drawn from the issues of the campaign into an exchange of barren personalities.

They have found Gov. Wilson a man who never hesitates to say anything good of an opponent that may with honesty be said.

They have found Gov. Wilson a man who respects the office of the presidency too much to seek it by a campaign of billingsgate.

In a word, the people have found Gov. Wilson the sort of man they want in the White House. They will put him there.

Tariff and Bloated Fortunes.

Enough instances have been given by the Journal to show that the tariff is the creator of bloated fortunes.

The way it works is so simple that it can be put in the form of a recipe.

"Get a tariff, form a trust, then pluck the public in the stock market and rob the consumer with high prices."

The tariff shuts out foreign competition, and thus offers an opportunity to rob the American consumer.

The trusts are formed to take advantage of this opportunity.

They are capitalized at their so-called "earning power," which means their robbing power under the tariff. This capitalization is from two to ten times the actual investment.

The watered stock thus issued—costing nothing but the printing of it—is sold to the public at high prices.

The promoters keep control of the trust in their own hands, that they may vote themselves fat salaries and rich perquisites.

The prices of the trust made articles are kept up to the highest notch to take advantage of the tariff and pay dividends on watered stock.

Then a portion of the profits thus made is set aside for political corruption to keep the tariff graft from being disturbed.

It is very simple—when the trick is exposed. It is very profitable—to the promoters.

It is incredibly wasteful, cruel and debauching for every one else.

The only way to stop the accumulation of bloated fortunes is to cut off the tariff graft that breeds bloated fortunes.

The way to cut off the tariff graft is to elect Governor Wilson and a Democratic congress.—Chicago Journal.

That Invisible Empire.

"The transaction itself and the whole alliance between Mr. Penrose and Mr. Archbold and Mr. Penrose's actions in connection therewith are a startling example of the workings of that invisible empire to whose reign we intend to put an end."

That invisible empire in which Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Harriman worked! That invisible empire which included Mr. Roosevelt and George W. Perkins of the harvester trust and "the Morgan interests that have been no friendly to us." That invisible empire in which Mr. Roosevelt and William Nelson Cromwell and the Panama crowd worked! We know all about that invisible empire.

A Bull Moose Killing.

A party formed to further one man's ambitions cannot survive that man's defeat.—Baltimore American.

Well put, and which is to say that some undertaker will have the job of putting away the remains of a bull moose after November 5.

Roosevelt's Freakish Memory.

Mr. Roosevelt was, of course, perfectly right in seeing everybody. When a member of congress called to ask him to receive a visitor to Washington the president would naturally say he would be glad to see him. But when informed that Mr. Archbold desired an interview, would it not have been more natural to have inquired what the Standard Oil magnate wanted to see him about? Is it not a curious freak of memory that the colonel should have so distinct a recollection of the visit of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., about the "white slave" traffic and yet be unable to recall either a visit or the topic if the ingratiating Mr. Archbold dropped in at the White House? And Mr. Archbold does not seem to have been a man that could be easily forgotten, judging by the fervor of his correspondence.

The process of eliminating Progressives from the Republican party continues. They are joining Governor Wilson.

NO DODGING OF ISSUES

ROOSEVELT SHOULD DROP THE OLD CATCH-VOTE PHRASE.

Thinking Men Never Evade the Vital Questions and Colonel Is Only a Trailer.

"We are a great industrial people. We cannot longer escape facing the questions that necessarily arise with the growth of modern industries," said Colonel Roosevelt at Springfield, Ill.

The same old catch-vote phrases. Is there a thinking man who has any desire to evade the vital questions of the hour? Does the ex-president know of anybody who is dodging the issues which are before us every hour of every day? We could not escape them if we would.

For a score of years the solution of the problem created by capital and labor has engaged the highest thought and best endeavor of some of the brightest and most disinterested minds in the country. When Roosevelt was denouncing Socialists as enemies of the government they were earnestly striving for a better understanding between those who employ and those who toil. Ten years ago William Randolph Hearst was advocating the very same "principles" for which the chief Bull Moose says he himself now stands, and was denounced "as the last word in yellow."

When consistent Progressives were first aroused to the urgent and exacting needs of our complex civilization, those needs were sneered at. How it must gall those brave pioneers to have all the fruits of their patriotic labors stolen and to hear the larceny applauded by the throng! Mr. Roosevelt is not a leader—a pathfinder. He is a trailer, but he makes so much noise that many otherwise reliable people regard him as the leader of the band.

What Could He Do?

If Theodore Roosevelt could be elected president, what reforms could he proceed to put through?

This is what the Roosevelt supporters, breathless from much cheering, have wholly neglected to inform the rest of us.

Mr. Roosevelt could not bring about the election of senators by direct vote, that can only come through a constitutional amendment.

He could not make universal the presidential preference primary, that rests with the several states.

He could not recast the trust or transportation laws, that is the province of congress.

He could not bestow upon a waiting nation the power to recall judicial decisions, that would require the amendment of one federal and forty-eight state constitutions.

He could not fight the trusts. Mr. Perkins, Mr. McCormick and Mr. Hanna were not born yesterday. Nor has Mr. Roosevelt forgotten the time when the Harriman correspondence "came home to roost."

He could not touch the tariff, even if he knew anything about it or had any convictions about it. That also rests with congress, and Mr. Roosevelt's tendency to quarrel with congress has already been impressively demonstrated.

He could not—conscientiously—do anything to help on the movement to limit the service of a president to one term of six years. That might cause the ruin of the country at a future time when, having left the chair just long enough to demonstrate to an ungrateful people how sure things were to go to smash in any other hands, the great cause which he typified and represented could only be furthered by once more supporting him.

Nor could he perform the regular duties of the executive office to the profit of the American people. He spent seven years and a half in the president's chair. He permitted the Steel trust to enlarge and consolidate its monopoly. He created commissions and boards without warrant of law. He set congress by the ears and ended his second term in a welter of ill feeling. But he did not place to his credit in more than seven long years, one conspicuous achievement through the legal and constitutional exercise of his official powers.

Might Auction Its Favors.

The honester method would be for the Republican party to offer its favors at auction. It could raise an unlimited campaign fund by selling in Pittsburg the right to fix the steel duties and in Fall River the right to fix the duties on cotton goods and in Lawrence the right to name the duties on woolens. The present method is the same in substance, but it is not businesslike. Immunity from prosecution under the Sherman law would be worth a good deal of money to the big combinations, but they ought to have some assurance that if they give $125,000 they will not be prosecuted because they refused to be "touched" for an additional $150,000.

Growing Brighter Daily.

Even in the east Democratic prospects appear to be growing brighter daily and there is reasonable probability of the electoral vote of several of these states being cast for the Democratic nominees. The feeling seems to pervade nearly all sections of the country that it will be either Taft or Wilson, and with that assurance the Democrats can make victory certain by putting enough of intelligent energy into the campaign.—Houston Post.

The Recall Needed.

The United States does not need the recall of presidents.

The United States needs above all things in political life the recall of humbug, hypocrisy and hysteria, and the inauguration of common sense.

The election of Governor Wilson will serve both purposes.

Democrats can't begin their Christmas shopping early this year, because they do not know how much it is going to cost them to celebrate the first presidential victory in twenty years.

GEM OF ARCHITECTURAL ART

St. Stephen's Cathedral in Vienna One of the Finest Specimens of Gothic Building in the World.

St. Stephen's Cathedral in Vienna, where the Eucharistic Congress, an international meeting of the Catholic church, was held, was started in 1144 by Duke Henry Jasomirgott of Badenberg. At that time Vienna was surrounded by a wall to protect the city from the invasion of the Tartars, Turks and other savage tribes. The Giant's Gate and the Heathen Towers were finished in 1147. It was damaged by fire and other accidents caused it to fall into ruin. Under Duke Rudolph IV of Hapsburg it was rebuilt between 1329 and 1364.

The south tower, the chief glory of the cathedral, was not finished until several years after the duke's death, although the designs made by the duke were carried out. The tower, with its turrets and spiracles, tapers up in a floriated spire to the gilt cross nearly four hundred and fifty feet from the ground. The cathedral is one of the most remarkable examples of Gothic architecture and ranks among the most beautiful church edifices in the world.

WANTS BEEF STEWS PROBED

Man Sends Complaint With Exhibit to Health Department of New York

New York.—Finding a suspicious looking bone in a beef stew, a man sent a communication to the department of health, requesting that an investigation be made into beef stews, Irish stews, and stews of almost every nationality purveyed in this city. The letter from the suspicious individual stated that he had ordered a beef stew in a Bowery restaurant.

"When I bit down on a piece of meat," was the writer's plaint, "I nearly tore a tooth loose on a bone. Inclosed you will find the same. If that bone ever came out of a cow, I'm no judge of animals. I believe it must either be a part of a cat or a dog. You would greatly oblige me by investigating this case."

The bone was about an inch and a half long.

LANDLORDS A PERIL HERE?

Former M. P. From England Says the System Is Gaining Ground in United States.

St. Joseph, Mo.—That America is fast coming to the landlord and tenantry stage of England, with its attendant woes, was the statement made by Francis Neilson, former member of the British parliament, in speaking at the courthouse on the relation of the taxation of land values in England to the single tax movement in America. Neilson said 180 members of the house of commons signed the manifesto for the taxation of land values, a movement that is being fought to the bitter end by the peers, who own two-thirds of the 77,000,000 acres of land in the United Kingdom.

Starving on 25 Cents a Week.

Middletown, Conn.—George Ward, an old-time athlete who four months ago began a series of experiments in living on a minimum quantity of foods of various character, is a patient in a local hospital suffering from lack of nutriment. Although his condition is serious, the physicians say that careful treatment will restore his health, as he has a strong constitution.

Ward is seventy-four years old. He was formerly a well-known long-distance walker. A few weeks ago he announced that he had cut down his diet to a basis where the cost was only 25 cents a week. His menu consisted principally of oatmeal, crackers and pancakes.

To Have Big Air Fleet.

London.—England is to have a mighty air fleet. Plans already under way will put this new arm of the service on a par with that of the other great powers. A great fleet of fighting war planes will be organized immediately. This fleet will consist of two types of machines, one armed with quick-firing guns for engaging and destroying the enemy's aeroplanes and the other designed for scouting.

The learned professor was giving his public lecture on phrenology, and for purposes of demonstration he invited a boy to the platform, says the New York American. After a critical examination of the lad's cranium, he turned to the audience:

"Ladies and gentlemen," he said, "the protuberance on this little boy's head is remarkably well developed. It is the bump of philoprogenitiveness. In the present case it proves that the boy has an extraordinary love for his parents. (Addressing the boy:) Isn't that true, Johnny?"

Johnny hesitated a moment, then said:

"Well, I get along pretty well with the old lady, but the old man ain't such a much."

"Why, how is that, my boy?" asked the professor.

The Rev. Edmund Heslop of Wigton, Pa., suffered from Dropsy for a year. His limbs and feet were swollen and puffed. He had heart fluttering, was dizzy and exhausted at the least exertion. Hands and feet were cold and he had such a dragging sensation across the loins that it was difficult to move. After using 5 boxes of Dodds Kidney Pills the swelling disappeared and he felt himself again. He says he has been benefited and blessed by the use of Dodds Kidney Pills. Several months later he wrote: I have not changed my faith in your remedy since the above statement was authorized. Correspond with Rev. E. Heslop about this wonderful remedy.

BREAKING OUT ON LEG

Hilltop, Kan.—"About two years ago I began to notice a breaking out on my leg. At first it was very small but soon it began to spread until it formed large blotches. The itching was terrible and almost constant. Many nights I could not sleep at all. After scratching it to relieve the itching it would burn so dreadfully that I thought I could not stand it. For nearly a year I tried all kinds of salves and ointment, but found no relief. Some salves seemed to make it worse, until there were ugly sores, which would break open and run.

"One day I saw an advertisement of Cuticura Remedies. I got a sample of the Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment and began by washing the sores with the Cuticura Soap, then applying the Cuticura Ointment twice a day. I noticed a change and got more Cuticura Soap and Ointment and in a few weeks I was cured. It has healed so nicely that no scar remains." (Signed) Mrs. Anne A. Lew, Dec. 17, 1911.

Democratic Candidate For State Senator

Editor W. A. Weygandt of the Portage County Democrat is a candidate on the Democratic ticket for State Senator.

In a recent statement in his paper concerning his candidacy, he says

"Now that the Constitution has been amended in conformity with the progressive sentiment of the state, and Ohio is enabled at last to come out of the time bound shell of conservatism, there are many reforms to be worked out that will fortunately enable the people to take a more direct hand in the state government than ever before. We hope, if elected, to be able to help along in this direction [illegible] in order that improved conditions [illegible] laws that should be enacted in line with the careful progressive spirit of the day that should be adopted at the earliest possible moment. If elected to the state senate we will endeavor to always support progressive measures so far as they seem to be honestly proposed and will have the effect of really benefitting a large number in the right way."

Concerning Mr. Weygandt's candidacy, Congressman Bathrick in the Akron Times is quoted as saying:

"I have known Mr. Weygandt for several years. He has been a student of good government for many years, and he is a very able man. [illegible] from our knowledge of Mr. Weygandt we believe he is a thorough progressive of merit and a thoughtful student of public questions. He pledges, if elected, to work for the moral, civic and industrial welfare of the state."

The Herald has had several requests from readers to publish the names of the Democratic nominees for judicial offices upon the State, District and County tickets and they are given in the table below. While the following candidates were nominated by regular Democratic primaries or conventions, their names will appear upon the Non-partisan Judicial ticket, alongside the tickets carrying the nominees for National, State and County offices. For the information of voters the names of the Democratic Judicial nominees will be published from week to week in The Herald until the November election.

RESOLUTION NO. 6

Resolutions of Respect and Condolence

At a regular meeting of the Council of the City of Painesville, held in the Council Chamber, Monday evening, October seventh, Nineteen Hundred and Twelve, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Whereas, the tragic accident of Thursday, August the twenty-second, 1912, has removed from our midst our respected friend and associate, WILLIAM NELSON, [illegible], Superintendent of Water Works and Light Department, of the City of Painesville, and

Whereas, it is fitting that proper recognition of his abilities and his virtues be made at this time, therefore, be it resolved by the Council of the City of Painesville, State of Ohio:

Sec. 1. That while we submit to the will of the inevitable, yet we are grieved that our faithful co-laborer and fellow servant should have been so suddenly taken from us.

Sec. 2. That it is but a just tribute to the memory of the deceased to say that we lament the loss of one who was a capable and painstaking public official, a modest and unassuming private citizen, a faithful and devoted husband and father.

Sec. 3. That this Council of the City of Painesville make public recognition of the fact that he always used his utmost endeavors for the welfare and the prosperity of the community, meeting an untimely death in the line of duty, such a noble and upright life is a standard of emulation to his fellowmen.

Sec. 4. That the deep and heartfelt sympathy of this Honorable Body, the Council of the City of Painesville, State of Ohio, be and the same is hereby extended to the bereaved family.

Sec. 5. That these resolutions of respect and esteem be spread upon the records and that a copy thereof be transmitted to the family of the deceased, and to each of the newspapers of the City of Painesville.

HUBERT H. BLAKELY,
Attest: Pres. of the Council.
F. L. KELLY, Clerk.
WANNING SMITH,
Mayor of the City.

A POTENTIAL FACTOR

Was Nichols Toward Securing Progressive Laws

"For lieutenant governor the Democrats have renominated Hugh L. Nichols, of Clermont county. Mr. Nichols some years ago served as a state senator, making a creditable record as a competent representative. When Atlee Pomerene was elected United States senator, Nichols was appointed lieutenant governor, and so came to serve as presiding officer of the senate during the last session of the general assembly. Nichols was a forceful factor in securing clean, progressive legislation during that session and rendered an unquestioned public service by his [illegible] steadfastness [illegible] the public interest [illegible] his fighting qualities were used for the interest of the people at all times. [illegible] his nomination [illegible] after he had expressed a desire to retire from public life."—Cleveland Plain Dealer, September 20.

ENFORCES LAW SAVES MILLIONS

COMMISSIONER STRODE STOPS CHEATING BY UNSCRUPULOUS DEALERS

Although 70 years ago the general assembly created weights and measures standards and provisions were made from time to time for stopping cheating by weighing devices, State Dairy and Food Commissioner Strode is the first state officer to conduct a systematic state-wide campaign to stop the frauds perpetrated by unscrupulous dealers. [illegible] an Ohio senate investigating committee that the consumers in this state were robbed of $10,000,000 annually [illegible] which is responsible to a certain extent for the high cost of living. Commissioner Strode had life injected into the dead weights and measures law.

When Strode took office Ohio seemed to be the dumping ground for incorrect weighing and measuring devices.

For many years the secretary of state was custodian of the standards furnished the state by the federal government. Later the professor of physics of Ohio State University was designated by statute as state sealer of weights and measures.

With the support of the press the public was aroused to the importance of this work, and in 1910 the general assembly designated the state dairy and food commissioner as state sealer but overlooked the appropriation necessary to make this change effective.

The law made it the duty of the state dairy and food commissioner, [illegible] to require each county auditor and city or village sealer in this state to procure all standards of weights and measures in their possession to him for comparison, and generally he was charged with the enforcement of all weights and measures laws.

There was a defect in that neither the state sealer nor his deputies, the county sealer nor his deputy, nor the city sealer were authorized or required to compare and [illegible] any weights or measures except such as were brought to them for that purpose. It was apparent that, if the purchasing public and dealers in merchandise were to receive the benefits evidently intended by the framers of the weights and measures laws, it was necessary that state and local sealers should be empowered to [illegible] inspect [illegible] weights and measures wherever they were used or maintained for use; to abolish the fee system and place the deputy sealer on a straight salary, to bring computing scales under the jurisdiction of the sealers, to require that certain commodities must be sold by [illegible] weight or numerical count, and, finally, that at least a modest appropriation should be made to the end that the weights and measures laws might become effective.

The changes in the law as above outlined were made by the general assembly and State Sealer Strode at once put new life into the work and [illegible] department by issuing a circular of instructions to the county and city sealers.

As early as the middle of June, 1911, when this work was inaugurated, but the response to the circular was immediate and effective and the state department [illegible] of most of the county and city sealers.

In little more than one year since the law became effective all of the 88 counties have secured new standards, and the sealers are diligently and enthusiastically at work. In this short time the department has demonstrated that the work of correcting conditions [illegible] weighing and measuring devices [illegible] the [illegible] of the state. [illegible] public [illegible] make the task of the state sealer much easier. The state sealer is [illegible] keeping up this campaign of education and is entitled to the [illegible] and support of the entire people of the state.

A Self-Discipline.

What we do on some great occasion will probably depend on what we already are, and what we are will be the result of previous years of self-discipline.—Canon Liddon.

"Mr. Crosser is the author of the municipal referendum law passed by the last general assembly. As a member of that body he advocated generally advanced ideas in legislation and government. As a delegate to the constitutional convention Crosser brought forward the big initiative and referendum amendment. He was active and vigorous in support of all the matters [illegible] progressive measures."—Plain Dealer.

Delegates to the state Republican convention in 1908 were given circulars containing an attack upon the [illegible] up of Republicans in general; and [illegible]

This circular aroused a storm of criticism, which ended with the election of two Democratic judges in 1910. A decision was given by that tribunal early in 1911 in favor of the Republican boss of Cincinnati, [illegible] Henry T. Hunt of Hamilton county [illegible] Cincinnati bringing him to trial on a perjury charge, before a judge who did not owe his nomination to boss rule, indicated that there is need for further cleansing. Judge Charles [illegible], Republican member of the [illegible] bench, one of the bosses' nominees. Prosecutor Hunt claimed [illegible] the functions of presiding judge and so [illegible] Judge Samuel L. Dickson, another boss-made judge, to try the perjury charge against the politician. Defeated in his efforts to compel the boss to plead to the indictment in the other court, Prosecutor Hunt applied to the supreme court for leave to file a petition in quo warranto to ascertain by what authority Judge Hunt was acting as presiding officer of the court. But in a decision concurred in by the Republican judges of the supreme court and to which the two Democratic members dissented, the application was denied, and a few weeks later Judge Dickson nolled the indictment against the boss and set him free without a trial on the merit of the accusation.

The Democratic candidates for the supreme court are Hon. Oscar W. Newman and Hon. William E. Scofield (long term) who are to be elected, Hon. J. F. Wilkin (short term), one to be elected. Their names will not appear on the regular party ticket, but will be placed on a separate nonpartisan one.

Almost a Miracle.

One of the most startling changes ever seen in any man, according to W. B. Holsclaw, Clarendon, Tex., was effected years ago in his brother. "He had such a dreadful cough," he writes, "that all our family thought he was going into consumption, but he began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, and was completely cured by ten bottles. Now he is sound and well and weighs 218 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for Coughs and Colds with excellent results." It's quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. ## MENTOR

Mrs. Will Hayward and her sister Mrs. James Ford, both of them Mentor girls, the daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Loomis, and both now living in Cleveland, were down for the day on Friday with Mrs. Ed Sawyer.

While Mrs. Will Hart has decided to close her ice cream parlor for the winter, that at the Center which has been carried on by Miss Harriette Wright and her mother of Cleveland (they having moved down some time since into the Elizabeth Pratt cottage), will be run all winter especially for lunches for the school children, when sandwiches and hot cocoa, coffee and chocolate will be served, and ice cream may be kept as long as there is any call for it. We notice that automobile parties are accustomed to stop there for a "bite" and to buy good cigars.

Mr. and Mrs. William Taylor have gone to Meadville, Pa., for the rest of the year. They go with a sister of Mr. Taylor, and probably will remain there all winter if the climate seems to agree with them, as Mr. T. is rather out of health.

Mr. Charles Johnson is about to leave for Los Angeles, where he spent last winter, and is expecting to open a garage out there. His wife and family will remain here for the present at least.

Mr. and Mrs. John Laird of Ashtabula and two little sons came here by automobile on Saturday. They are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Frost and Mrs. Laird is to remain several days after her husband returns home.

Dr. W. A. Hillis of Chicago, who is connected with the Moody Bible Institute, gave a most helpful talk in the Disciple church last evening, at a union meeting held there between the Methodists and Disciples, same having been going on all summer. Mr. Hillis gave a strong talk to all those present, to find out what they could do for the betterment of the community, and then advised them to "get busy" and do it.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Dunwell start on Wednesday for Eustis, Florida, with their three little sons, and are expecting to remain away all winter.

Mrs. Frank Case has been enjoying a visit from her mother, Mrs. Cole, who lives in Warren.

The Cleveland gentleman who has recently bought the Case farm, is doing a great deal of grading and getting ready to build quite extensively we understand, another summer. Mr. and Mrs. Case are soon to give possession, and will spend the winter in the East, and probably will go on a prospecting tour through the Carolinas, and even farther South.

Mrs. Minnie Worcester Smith, of Massillon, has been spending the past week with her sister Mrs. Will Kerr and her family.

Mr. John Frost returned a few days ago from having spent a number of weeks in North Evans, and vicinity of New York state, where he visited relatives and old neighbors around his old home.

The church supper was largely attended on Wednesday evening, when the Board of Stewards made their annual report at the end of the conference year, said report being received with every evidence of satisfaction. This is the first time in the history of the Methodist church here, as far as we have ever heard, when everything was paid up and the slate clear for another year. The church is in the very best condition possible, and seems to stand in favor with the people of the community. What is more the friendly feeling existing between the two young preachers, the Disciple and Methodist, promises well for the coming year, and their usefulness in the village.

The last Miscellany Club was held with Miss Mabel Dutlan, when Mrs. Will Hagenbergen was voted into membership. Papers were read by Mrs. [illegible], Mrs. Barber and Miss Sarah Lyle, all of them being unusually good. [illegible] It was generally expected that Mrs. Justus [illegible] would have the [illegible] was given by Mrs. Ed Sawyer and was just as good as it could be. The Mentor women are quite proud of their ability to study and their willingness to do whatever is assigned to them.

The old friends and neighbors of Mr. James Cudney were shocked to hear of his death [illegible] reaching here until sometime on Thursday [illegible] brought [illegible] for [illegible] Mentor cemetery. Mr. Cudney lived in Mentor all through his boyhood and early manhood [illegible] Miss Maggie [illegible] children were born here [illegible] Kirk [illegible] the Methodist church [illegible] is buried here. Some years ago the family moved to Northfield [illegible] beautiful home with everything to make life interesting. Mr. Cudney was found dead in his corn field at the close of the day, having finished [illegible] work well done. [illegible] been a secret [illegible] and they [illegible] The funeral [illegible]

Several persons from here attended the funeral of Mr. William Haskell who was buried from his home in Concord on Tuesday. Mr. Haskell spent his boyhood days in Mentor, and had old time friends here who were made sorry by his death. His sister, Miss Emily Haskell, lives in the old home, and is the only survivor of the family.

[illegible] Sutherland [illegible] over Sunday.

Mrs. Ada Smith of Willoughby, together with her daughter Miss Lottie spent a short time here last week with her brother Mr. Burton Smith and his family.

Mrs. Aura Grier celebrated a birthday one day last week, and was presented with a fine Victrola and a number of records by her son Mr. Fred Grier of Cleveland, which her friends are now enjoying with her.

Miss Kate Garrett is here on business but expects soon to return to her new home with her brother in Oregon.

Mrs. Sarah Green, accompanied by Miss Cora Reynolds, left here one day last week for southern California where she [illegible] the winter months.

Mrs. Leslie Roshof of Cardner, Colo., who has been the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Calvin Carroll, left on Thursday evening for Wahpeton, Dakota, where she will spend a couple of weeks with her [illegible] Mrs. Eunice Daniels Barber and her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Barber.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Lyle entertained Mr. and Mrs. William Hannah of Lakewood, this state, over Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Q. Fenner leave in a few days now for their winter home in Eustis, Florida.

The next Miscellany Club is to be at the home of Mrs. Charles Church in West Mentor, when there will be another very full program.

The Missionary meeting this week Thursday is to be held with Mrs. H. [illegible], who is to be in charge of her daughter Mrs. Perkins.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kerk of Cleveland have been the guests of the King sisters while in our village over Sunday, and called on a few of the many friends here.

Rev. and Mrs. [illegible] have packed up all their household goods, which have been stored in one room of the parsonage [illegible] be with their daughter for the present.

Mr. William Chandler of Cleveland who has charge of the East Side Y. M. C. A. was here as the guest of Mr. Schaffner over Sunday, and occupied the Methodist pulpit in the morning telling about the work of the Association.

Since this part of the state has been re-districted, and Mentor is now in the Akron District, we have another Presiding Elder and his name is Dr. Baxter. On Saturday next he will be here and hold his first quarterly conference, and will speak in the church Sunday morning.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Fischer and family moved to the city the last of the week, and so again the old Wheeler Place is vacant and on the market.

Word arrived a few days ago of the death of Mrs. Julius Cleveland, nee Miss Lillie Fitzpatrick, which occurred at the home of her daughter Mrs. [illegible] in Cleveland recently. She has lived quite a number of years in Mentor, was connected with the Hopkins family, and had a large circle of acquaintances in the county.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniels [illegible] have been having a visit from their friend, Mrs. Peter Johnson of Munson, recently.

Mrs. Will Root of Fairport has been recently visiting her husband's parents [illegible] and Mrs. [illegible]

Mrs. Philip Hagenbergen [illegible] by her daughter, Miss [illegible] have been in the city visiting friends [illegible] for several days [illegible] California, and was anticipating a very delightful [illegible]

SYNOPSIS.

Harding Kent calls on Louise Farrish to propose marriage and finds the house in great excitement over the attempted suicide of her sister Katharine. Kent starts an investigation and finds that Hugh Crandall, suitor for Katharine, who had been forbidden the house by General Farrish, had talked with Katharine over the telephone just before she shot herself. A torn piece of yellow paper is found at sight of which General Farrish is stricken with paralysis. Kent discovers that Crandall has left town hurriedly. Andrew Elser, an aged banker, commits suicide about the same time as Katharine attempted her life. A yellow envelope is found in Elser's room. Post Office Inspector Davis, Kent's friend, takes up the case. Kent is convinced that Crandall is at the bottom of the mystery. Katharine's strange outcry puzzles the detectives. Kent and Davis search Crandall's room and find an address, Lock Box 17, Ardway, N. J. Kent goes to Ardway to investigate and becomes suspicious of a "Henry Cook." A woman commits suicide at the Ardway Hotel. A yellow letter also figures in this case.

CHAPTER VII

Two Disappearances.

I looked at my watch and saw that it was nearly noon. I remembered that I had not yet called up Louise as I had intended to do the very first thing that morning. What a laggard lover she must think me! How heartless it must seem to her for me to leave her alone so long in the mansion where here father and sister lay dying, perhaps dead, with the black shadowy mystery still hanging over her and them! What must she think of me? Filled with self-reproach I sprang up without a word of apology or explanation to the others and hastened to the telephone booth I had observed in the hall.

"Give me 0141 Madison," I demanded of central.

"What's the matter?" she repeated, with surprise in her tone, which struck me peculiarly until I considered that long distance calls from Ardway must be such a rarity as to surprise even the operator.

"I want long distance—New York," I explained, enunciating distinctly, "0141 Madison."

"Again," central replied, flippantly, it appeared to me.

I repeated the number, more than annoyed by her response. "Oh, I've got your number all right by this time."

It was a good thing for her that she tried no more jocularity with me, or the rules of the company against profanity would have been shattered. There was a wait of several minutes, filled with the usual false alarms of long-distance telephoning, during which I stood and fumed. At last I heard my dear Louise's voice and hastened eagerly to ask after her welfare. Her voice seemed strong and cheerful though she admitted that she had slept little the night before. I apologized for not having called up before. She told me that while her father's condition was unchanged, the doctor thought he was in no immediate danger, and that Katharine was much improved. The doctor believed now that she could live. She was conscious but very weak, and Louise had been forbidden to speak to her and was allowed in the room only for a minute at a time. I hastily sketched for her the events of the morning.

"Oh, Mr. Kent," said Louise's voice—how I wished she would call me by my first name—"who do you suppose called up?"

"Who?"

"Hugh Crandall."

"What's that?" I exclaimed, hardly believing my ears.

"Hugh Crandall," she repeated a little louder and more distinctly. "He asked for Katharine, and the maid called me to the telephone. I told him my sister was ill and could not come to the telephone. He seemed greatly agitated and insisted on knowing what the matter was. He was so agitated and persistent I finally told him she had met with an accident. He was silent for so long I thought he had left the telephone, but all of a sudden he asked 'Did she shoot herself?' and before I thought I answered 'Yes.' Then he cried out, 'Oh, my God!' or something like that and asked if she was fatally injured. I told him that she was alive but unconscious and then, Harding, he asked if I had seen anything of a yellow letter. I thought I had better tell him nothing about that, so I answered 'No,' and then he rang off."

"That was right," I said. "Where did he call up from?"

"I have no idea."

"When was it? How long ago?"

"Not very long, within the hour."

Hastily I explained to Louise that a man that I believed was Crandall was here in the hotel with me and that I would find him at once and make him explain the mystery. Before I left the booth I got the Ardway central again and from her learned what I had begun to suspect—that 0141 Madison had been called from the very booth in which I stood, not over an hour before. There was no longer any doubt about it in my mind—Cook was Crandall. He evidently had gone straight to the telephone booth after slipping out of the room as I had asked the question about the yellow letter. From the questions he put to Louise, he must have been suspecting that Katharine would try suicide. Why else had he asked if she had shot herself? He must have known her motive. He surely could explain the dark mystery that burdened her father and herself.

I resolved to seek him at once and, even if I had to have him arrested on some pretext, or if I had to use physical force, to make him disgorge all he knew. I felt in my pocket to make sure that the revolver Davis had given me was there, and hurried back to the office.

"Have you seen anything of Cook?" I asked, trying to mask the eagerness with which I sought him.

"Not since this morning," the landlord volunteered. "I guess you saw him after I did. The coroner told me you saw him leaving the room during the inquest."

"I seen him," volunteered the clerk.

"Where? When?" I asked excitedly.

"About an hour ago, driving past here lickety-split with the black mare from Jones' livery stable."

"Which direction did he go?" I cried, all excitement at the thought that Crandall was escaping just at the very moment when I, for the first time, had made sure of his identity.

"He must be followed and found at once," I said, turning to the landlord. "Don't his actions look to you like those of a guilty man? The minute he hears me ask about a yellow letter he disappears from the hotel. There is no train by which he can escape. So desperate is he that he hires a horse and tries to get away cross country."

I had hoped by my eagerness to stir in the landlord something of my own feeling in regard to Crandall's guilt, but these country yokels are hard to move.

"What do you suspect him of?" he inquired calmly. "Why should he want to escape from you? Have you got a warrant for him?"

I was not yet ready to divulge my reason for wanting Crandall captured. Even if we had him, what definite crime was there of which I could accuse him? I was morally certain that the yellow letter or letters emanated from him, yet how could I prove it? A new thought came to me.

"Where is his baggage?" I asked.

"He only had a hand satchel with him," said Mr. Williams, "and I guess that is up in his room."

"Suppose we go look for it," I suggested.

"You don't do no such thing as that in my hotel," said the landlord decisively, "not unless you've got a warrant. He's paid for his room for a week in advance and there ain't no law to prevent his going and coming as he pleases, so long as there ain't no warrant out for him. If he wants to get out of town behind the fastest horses in Jones' stable I ain't a going to try to stop him, and what's more, if he has left his grip in his room it is going to stay there. Maybe or maybe not there are things in it, but there ain't no prying stranger going to know what's there unless he can show me due warrant of law."

"You may be defeating the ends of justice," I warned him sternly, indignantly resenting his remark, yet seeing no way in which I could successfully dodge his appellation of "prying stranger" without revealing my whole hand, and this I was determined not to do until Davis arrived and I had had an opportunity to consult with him.

"I may be blocking your plans," said the landlord gruffly, "but you'll get no more help out of me unless I know what it is you are after. The right kind of a mystery doesn't hurt the hotel business, but there's things that do, and if you want any help from me, young man, I've got to know what's going on."

"I wish I knew myself," I said mentally, adding aloud: "When I am ready to speak you will hear many things that will astound you. Meanwhile, I tell you that I have every reason to believe that that man who fled from here is a great criminal and that if you do not aid in his apprehension you will be doing a serious wrong to the community. I'll tell you this much. I am convinced that he was responsible for this woman's death and for other deaths."

"Maybe he is and maybe he ain't," said the landlord. "I saw the lady myself, and nobody can persuade me it was anything but a suicide. Why, I cut her down!"

"I am not denying that she committed suicide," I replied with some asperity, "but I am morally certain that if she killed herself she was driven to it by the man who has just fled. I insist on being allowed to examine his baggage."

"Look here, young man," said Mr. Williams, "I have told you once and for all that the baggage of no guest in this house is going to be examined without due process of law. And I want to say right here that it's evident that you yourself know a lot more about this case than you are telling. If you are an officer and can show me a warrant I am ready to give you all the aid and assistance I can, but until you do, I'd advise you to keep your nose out of things that ain't your business and to stay out of places you ain't got a right to be in."

The suspicion crossed my mind that it might be he who had discovered me in the post office the night before. I decided quickly that it could not have been, for he was in the hotel when I arrived. I felt sure it must have been either Crandall or the postmaster. Plainly, though, there was nothing further to be gained by argument with the obtuse Mr. Williams. After all, there ought not to be much difficulty in tracing Crandall by the vehicle in which he had driven away. That could wait until Davis arrived. Meanwhile I pondered on what I could do to throw light on the case. I had it. I would visit the post office again and see what I could learn about the holder of the lock box from which Davis believed the yellow letters came.

Abruptly leaving the landlord, I strolled out into the street, determined to go boldly to the post office and make inquiries. As I approached the building I saw a little group of villagers gathered in front of it, the faces of some of whom I had noted at the inquest. They seemed to be excitedly discussing some happening. I was not without some trepidation that I came closer. If my visit to the post office had been discovered and there was anyone in the crowd who could identify me, an awkward situation might develop. I put on a bold front, however, and approached closer.

"What's the matter?" I asked, trying to make my inquiry seem casual.

"The postmaster's disappeared," some one explained.

"Where?"

"Don't know," said my informant. "He didn't come to the office at all today. When the people come for their mail after the New York train got in he wasn't here. Hank Rollins always brings it up on the stage, and as he's passing, throws it off on the board walk and the postmaster comes out and gets it. Nobody ever goes for their mail for a few minutes after that, to give him a chance to get it sorted. The first persons who got here today found the mail-sack lying just where the driver had flung it."

"Yes, sir," broke in an old man whom I heard them call "Dad" Hutchinson. "Yes, sir, I was the first to notice it. I was going to the office to see if maybe there was a letter for me from my daughter Mary, who lives up Boston way, and I noticed the sack lying right over there. I went into the office to tell the postmaster about it and kind of have a little fun with him, and bless my soul if there was hide or hair of him to be seen anywhere. Looking through the boxes, I could see that the back door was standing open, and I went around there and looked, and I couldn't see anything of him, either. It didn't seem right for the mail to be lying out there on the sidewalk, 'twas like taking undue liberty with government property, so I dragged the sack around and flung it in the door and went looking for the constable. Then I heard about the suicide and the inquest down to the hotel, so I went down there to fetch him, and all the crowd that had been down to the inquest come trailing along."

"I noticed when I come along here last night that the post office was dark," volunteered another of the crowd. "I don't know just what time it was, but it was just before it began to rain. I remember now, thinking it kind of funny the office was shut up so early, but I didn't stop to investigate. I'll bet he wasn't here last night, either."

"It's burglars, that's what it is," said an excited youngster. "I saw them at work. I come along here last night and there was a flash like from a dark lantern. Right in there behind the boxes it was. They must a been at work then. I'll bet they killed him and hid his body and made away with all the money and stamps."

"How many of them were there?"

"Did you see them?"

"What time was it?"

Questions poured thick and fast on the youngster, who evidently had told [illegible] advantage of [illegible] created to slip around to the rear of the building, where I found a self-appointed committee of citizens and the constable guarding the door.

"Has anything been stolen?" I asked.

"Not as far as we can discover," said the constable. "There ain't no disorder about the place and the safe hasn't been busted, as far as I can see. I ain't made any regular investigation, being as this is government property."

"Has no one any idea where the postmaster is?" I asked.

"That's just what we've been trying to find out. Jim, here, as soon as we found Rouser wasn't here, went up to the Widow Smith's, where he boards. Thought maybe he'd just overslept or something like that, or maybe was sick. But Mrs. Smith went up and looked in his room and come down and said he hadn't been home all night."

"Yes," interrupted Jim, "and what's more, she said it was nothing unusual for him not to come home. There was lots and lots of nights recently when he didn't show up. She had no idea where he spent his nights. She's a woman that minds her own business and don't interfere none with her boarders' goings and comings as long as they pay their money regular."

"What are you going to do about keeping the office open?" I asked, much puzzled over this new mystery. How I wished for Davis! Mystery seemed to be piling on mystery with every step I took. Beyond the one conviction I had that Hugh Crandall was in some way to blame for it all, I saw nothing that would help me in my undertaking.

"We've arranged about that. We've sent for Jennie Cox to come over and take charge. She always takes hold when Charlie Rouser wants to take a day or a half day off. She knows the combination of the safe and the money-drawer and has been sworn in as special assistant. She'll know what to do and who to notify."

"It may interest you to know that Post Office Inspector Davis will be out here tonight," I told them. "I left him in New York last night and he promised to join me here."

Suspicion flashed into the faces of all my auditors.

The Walking Cure.

Doctors are of one mind in advocating walking as one of the best means of keeping the human machine in good working order, and one of New York's foremost medical authorities went as far as to say in a lecture to young men studying for the profession, that if every adult could be persuaded to make a conscientious habit of walking five miles every day there would be such a prompt and general improvement in health that doctors would soon have to be looking for other ways of making a living.

Fifty Years in Prisons

Old Englishman Who Has Spent Three-Fourths of His Life Behind the Bars

An extraordinary spectacle was presented in the dock at the London sessions the other day—a gray haired, bearded man, 66 years of age, who had spent three parts of his life—half a century—in prison for thefts which today would call forth a comparatively trifling sentence. He was a laborer, named George Lawrence, and was found "guilty" of being an habitual criminal. He also pleaded guilty to having stolen a coat and other articles from an office in Chelsea. The judge, commenting on some of the man's sentences—five years for stealing coats and three terms of ten years for stealing forks, a box, and an overcoat respectively—said that for any one of those offenses he would nowadays probably only receive three months imprisonment. It was an echo of the brutal system of years ago. "In all I have served nearly 50 years in prison," said the old convict, "and I don't suppose the things I stole were worth £30 altogether. I have never had a chance in my life." The judge at first passed sentence of three years' penal servitude for the theft and five years' preventive detention, saying it was the minimum the law allowed in such a case, but later he decided that the offense was one in which he could, having regard to the past treatment of the prisoner, pass a sentence of 12 months' hard labor, thus avoiding the sentence of preventive detention. When he heard the altered sentence, the old man, bringing his hand up to a military salute, exclaimed, in tones of gratitude: "I will endeavor to make it my very last, sir."

OLD-FASHIONED IDEAS WILL NOT DO IN PACKING FRUIT FOR HIGHEST PRICE

By Careful Attention, Absolute Honesty and Judicious Advertising Farmer Can Create Demand for His Particular Variety of Garden Produce.

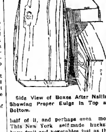
(By C. M. SCHULTZ.)

A New York business man who was forced to a New Jersey suburb on account of broken health, is making a splendid living by repacking fruit and vegetables which he buys from farmers and truckers, repacking them and selling direct to the consumer. He drives on an average 20 miles, and the outdoor life has completely restored his health.

Three years ago this man commenced business with a one-horse wagon. He repacked his fruit and vegetables with the aid of a small son, drove his own wagon, and conducted the entire business practically alone.

He now owns two double-team wagons, two single-horse wagons and a light auto truck, covering four routes each from 12 to 15 miles long.

This man is simply doing what the farmers and fruit-growers from whom he buys his supplies ought to do themselves if they would make all the profit there is to be made in the business. Growing the crop is not all of the game. Marketing is a good half of it, and perhaps even more. This New York self-made huckster buys fruit and vegetables just as they come from the farmers' wagons. They are delivered at his place often covered with dirt, the fruit bruised and scratched, vegetables untrimmed and all generally unsorted.



Side View of Boxes After Nailing, Showing Proper Bulge in Top and Bottom.

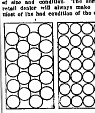
The fruit, particularly the larger varieties, such as apples, peaches and pears, are carefully sorted and graded by the huckster, the apples washed, and the fruit is packed in small boxes or baskets, clean, uniform and highly attractive in appearance. Small fruits such as cherries and berries are often dumped out of their original packages as they come from the farmers, sorted and repacked in clean boxes. Cherries are packed in boxes that hold from one-half peck to one peck and over the top is tacked gauze to protect them from insects.

All root vegetables are carefully washed, topped and bound in bunches. Tomatoes are graded and repacked in clean baskets, and no damaged vegetables are offered for sale.

This man can prove by his books that he makes a net profit of from 25 to 100 per cent. by his method of handling and marketing.

There is no reason why the men who grow fruit and vegetables should not make equally as big profit, provided they possess the faculty for organization and the patience and pride necessary to put up their products in a style that will most readily attract the eyes of their customers.

While it is not always practicable for the farmer or gardener to sell direct to the consumer he can, by careful sorting and packing his product, get a much better price when selling to the retail dealer than he can if he follows the old-fashioned methods of dumping everything into boxes, baskets and barrels, regardless of size and condition. The shrewd retail dealer will always make the most of the bad condition of the stuff offered him, beating down the grower to the lowest possible point, and then add to his profits by the work of a few boys in the basement, who are instructed in the art of cleaning and repacking.



Two Styles of Packing Fruit.

Any farmer or gardener or fruit-grower who is located within reasonable distance of a good retail market will make more money by selling to the retail dealers than by shipping his stuff to the commission men in the large cities. By careful attention, absolute honesty and judicious advertising he can, in a very short time, establish a reputation for his produce which will become known to the consumer who will always demand this particular brand.

A recent visit to the great produce market on South Water street, Chicago, disclosed the fact that hundreds of shippers send their apples—much of it fine fruit of good color and free from rot—to the commission men, dumped into barrels regardless of size or condition, mixed with dirt, leaves and twigs, all tending to lower the value of the fruit, a condition which the commission men are quick to take advantage of.

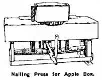
All over the great market district in the basements are men and boys constantly engaged in dumping these apples on huge tables, where they are sorted according to size and color, and repacked in boxes or barrels. In the former the layers are ranged in rows with the stem side up. When packed in barrels the top layer is made up of selected fruit all of the same size and color; and the rows are uniform, so that when the cover is removed the appearance of the barrel is pleasing.

A commission man on South Water street, Chicago, in a burst of confidence said: "Does it pay to repack fruit and vegetables? Well, I should say it did. I pay expert fruit-packers three dollars per day and their work nets me to profit at least three times their wages, and often four and five times. The way shippers send their stuff to market is a fright, and we people who see it coming in here every day by the hundreds of carloads can understand why fruit growers do not make more money than they do. Too many of them lack common business 'gump.' That's about all there is to it."

In packing apples in barrels the first process is to place the barrel with top down with the bottom removed. The grower's label and a paper pad is first placed on the top and then the apples are laid in layers with the stems down and so arranged as to fit in snugly, leaving as little space between the apples as possible.

The next layer is also placed in the same way, great care being taken to get fruit of the same color for both layers so that the second layer will show through the first when the barrel is opened. The barrel is then filled with fruit and gently shaken until nearly filled, when the last few layers must be so laid that the bottom will bear evenly upon it all. The last layer should be about level with the top of the staves or just a little higher.

The bottom cushion should then be placed on the fruit and the head laid on and forced down with a press for the purpose, the head and hoops then being nailed in place.



Nailing Press for Apple Box.

A barrel, so packed, can be shipped long distances, and stored a considerable length of time without injury to the fruit. The more closely the fruit is packed the tighter the heads are pressed down—provided the pressure is not great enough to cause bruising—the better will the fruit stand shipping and handling.

POTTED PLANTS IN THE WINTER SEASON

Plant Should Be Made as Nearly Natural as Possible—Air and Sunshine Needed.

It must be borne in mind that a plant in a pot is trying to develop itself under unnatural conditions and it must be assisted in every possible way, and the conditions under which it labors should be made as nearly natural as possible. It must be supplied with fresh air in liberal quantities as frequently as the weather will admit. It must be given the benefit of all sunshine furnished by the short winter days, if it is a sunshine-loving plant, as most flowering plants are.

If it is not particularly fond of sunshine it will require good light in liberal amount. And in order to make development as thorough as possible, and lay the foundation for future good work in the production of flowers, it must be supplied with all the nutriment it can make use of, for no plant can do itself justice unless it is well fed. And water must also be given in proportion to the needs of the plant at this season.

Alfalfa.

Alfalfa is one of the best of all forage plants, both for the land and for stock food. It requires a certain species of bacteria on the roots to cause the plants to grow and this is not present to all soils, but must be applied in soil that comes from a field where alfalfa or sweet clover (melilotus) is growing well. The same bacteria live on the roots of these two plants. It is good for orchards if cut down and the hay allowed to rot on the ground. Alfalfa or any of the clovers should be plowed under after standing two or three years.

Is Apple Planting Overdone?

The census figures recently made public show 151,000,000 apple trees in bearing, which produced 148,000,000 bushels of apples, worth $83,000,000; or about 55 cents per tree. Apple enthusiasts and boomers will find in these figures some food for sober reflection. They fall far short of the glittering possibilities so often mentioned.

To offset the decrease of 50,000,000 bearing trees there were nearly 66,000,000 trees not in bearing when the census was taken. Of course many of these will never reach bearing age, nor produce any apples. The old trees are dying fast, for the mortality in ten years seems to have been 26 per cent.

Inexperienced.

In a boarding house for bachelors Amanda, typical "Mammy," looked after the guests' comfort in true southern style so well that one of the men thought he would take her away with him in the summer in the capacity of housekeeper. Toward spring he waylaid her in the hall one day and said:

"Mandy, do you like the country?"

Mandy reckoned she did.

"Would you like to go away with me this summer and keep house for me?"

Mandy was sure she would.

"Suppose I get just a bungalow. Do you think you could take care of it nicely by yourself?"

Mandy gasped and rolled her eyes. "'Deed, no, massa! Reckon you all better get somebody else; I don't know nothin' about taking care of any animals!"—Harper's Magazine.

New Stage in Inebriety.

"Drunk," was the reply. "Man, the last time I was wi' him Jock was that drunk I couldna see him."—London Mail.

REQUISITE FOR BEAUTY

FINE COMPLEXION A THING THAT IS INDISPENSABLE.

Too Much Care Cannot Be Given to This Important Matter—Especially in Cold Weather Is the Need Great.

The complexion should have the best of care at all times, but especially is this necessary during the days of the late fall and when the winds of winter begin to blow.

The change from the warm summer days when the pores are open and the skin relaxed to the raw weather that shrivels up the skin and causes a drawn feeling over the entire surface of the body, is very trying, and is often followed by a condition that requires prompt treatment.

Feeding the skin is the first step, and this must be faithfully carried out. The action of the wind, particularly when it is driven against the face by the rapid motion of an automobile, tends to dry out the natural oil and leave the skin dry and harsh. Then, too, the muscles of the face become stiff and tense and these must be made to relax and grow pliable and elastic.

To accomplish these two requirements nothing is necessary but a good cleansing cream as first aid followed by a facial bath in very warm water and ending with the use of a nourishing cream which must be carefully massaged into the pores. The cleansing cream must be used always upon coming indoors before any water is allowed to touch the face. The nourishing cream may be applied generously and it should be used as a foundation for the protecting powder before exposing the face to the wind and weather.

Among the many directions that can be given for the prevention of harm to the complexion, none is more important than the careful drying of the skin after using water, and the still more careful rinsing after soap has been used. These two rules admit of no deviation.

Never under any circumstances expose your face or hands to the cold after bathing them without thoroughly drying the skin. This does not necessitate the use of rough towels or any unnecessary friction. Gently patting the skin with a soft absorbent towel is much better than severe rubbing and, to make sure the skin is free from moisture a tiny bit of cream rubbed into the pores, immediately after the drying process, is excellent and is a good preventive of a chapped surface. The careless habit of biting the lips must be avoided if they are to be kept smooth and nice.

All that has been said about the care of the face applies equally well to the hands. In fact greater care must be given them, as the hands are in water so frequently. Plenty of cleansing cream rubbed into the hands before washing them, the use of a soothing lotion immediately after drying them, and the very liberal application of a massage cream will prevent the chapping which often occurs when the cold begins to grow penetrating. Little time is required for this daily care and much trouble can be avoided by observing these small details.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

Miss Elise J. K.: Even though you are not handsome and magnetic, you can still be a very attractive girl. Keep yourself always well groomed, cleanly and dressed in good taste. Be cheerful and agreeable. Dress your hair becomingly without attempting any of the extreme styles which usually make the prettiest face unattractive. Keep your complexion clear, your eyes bright and your mind free from morbid notions, and you will find that you are quite as much sought after as your friends who you think have such an advantage over you, as far as "good looks" are concerned.

Friend: If you use powder every day—either dry or liquid powder—you will find it absolutely necessary to give your face a thorough cleansing at night, else the pores will become clogged and the skin will grow muddy looking. Use cleansing cream first, followed by a facial bath in warm water and mild soap. Rinse in clear warm water and finish with a dash of cold water. If the skin is inclined to be dry, a little of the cream should be rubbed on afterwards. If there is a tendency to the formation of wrinkles, a nourishing cream is necessary, and if there are deep lines, wrinkle plasters are very helpful in smoothing them out.

Inquirer: You would have better success with your curling fluid if you left out the glycerin entirely. Otherwise the formula is all right, and it should make a very good mixture for your purpose. There is nothing in it which could cause the least harm to the hair and you can use it every day without fearing any ill results.

Mrs. William N.: From what you tell me in your letter, you need feel no alarm about the condition of your hair. It does not fall out any more than is normal, and since it does not seem to be growing any thinner, it is probable just the dead hair which is dropping out and new hair is growing in all the time.

Madame Helle will reply to questions through the columns of this paper. Letters requiring personal answers must contain addressed and stamped envelope.

Fall Veils.

There is still a prominence given to Shetland veils for fall wear. These are shown in fancy effects, the scroll and floral being emphasized.

Outlining in heavy silk is given to some of the expensive veilings.

Black and flesh-colored Shetland veils will be the features, though the white is holding its own.

Dotted veiling in small clusters, just enough to accentuate the whiteness of the skin beneath, are to be used in Paris as a departure from the shadow effects so long in vogue.

Social Forms and Entertainments

Regarding a Shower.

So often I read your pleasing articles in the paper that I take it upon myself to write you for a little help.

I am going to give a miscellaneous shower for a bride and wish you to suggest some thing for decorations also for prizes, and how many are necessary.

Please tell me how to arrange the shower for a bride and wish you to suggest bride? What refreshments should I serve. She is to have a home wedding, and has asked me to be matron of honor, what could you suggest for me to wear.—A Young Bride.

A "shower" is given by the hostess asking the guests to come to her house on the day and date decided and each to bring some thing for a "Miscellaneous Downpour." The articles to be wrapped and bear the name of donor, with an appropriate sentiment or good wish for the honored guest. There are no special decorations besides flowers, as you may happen to have them. Light refreshments are served, consisting of whatever beverage you like with a frozen something or a salad and sandwiches. I never heard of prizes unless cards are to be the amusement, and your contribution may be whatever you wish. So much depends upon whether the bride is to keep house or board.

Regarding your dress as matron of honor. You do not say whether the ceremony is to be in the day or evening, in church or at home or what color you or the bride prefers. You can make no mistake by selecting white.

Engagement Announcement.

Will you please give a novel way to announce my engagement at an October dinner party? Please suggest decorations and kind of favors and place cards. If it isn't asking too much of you, will you suggest the menu.—Forget-Me-Not.

To help tell the news the center piece may be of bride roses, the place cards heart-shaped and the favors slippers which will hold heart bon bons. Serve canapes first, then soup, fish and an entree followed by chicken, peas and sweet potato croquettes. Hot rolls or the bread in napkin with soup course will be sufficient. A fruit or tomato salad and individual ices decorated with Cupids, hearts and bell shaped cakes with coffee "en demi tasse" will complete an acceptable menu. If you like, the monogram of the happy pair may be done on the ices, which may be heart shaped. This will tell the story.

Questions from a Near Bride.

Who pays for the bride's bouquet? I have been to my fiance's mother's and sister's house to entertainment once only—would it be proper to ask them to come to see my trousseau? As our families have never visited, whose place is it to call first—my mother or his mother?—Unsophisticated.

It is the bridegroom's privilege and pleasure to pay for the flowers carried by the bride and her maids (if she have any). By all means ask the family of the bridegroom to see your trousseau; serve a cup of tea or a glass of something cool if it happens to be warm.

It is the place of the bridegroom's mother and sisters to pay the first call upon you and your family.

Concerning a Wedding.

If I have a very quiet church wedding with only relatives and possibly a few friends would it be correct to have the wedding march played? Will be married in traveling suit—will it be necessary to have flowers? Do I pay the organist? What carriages do my family engage and pay for?—R. L. M.

By all means have the wedding music. You will find it much easier to walk down and up the aisle with it than to dead silence. It is not necessary to have flowers but I think I would carry a bouquet or wear one. Your family engage and pay for all the carriages except the one for the bride-groom and his best man, who of course accompanies him.

Which Is Correct?

Won't you please settle an argument by stating which is proper to say, eat a plate of soup or drink a plate of soup?—Subscriber.

Strange to say, soup is always referred to as being eaten. If you will stop to think, we say, "Aren't you going to eat your soup?"

Reply to "L. E. N."

I see no harm in one of your boy friends walking home from church with you. Girls of fifteen wear their dresses just about to the shoe tops and their hair caught up on top with a big bow or the bow placed at the neck, just whichever way is most becoming.

MME. MERRI.

When Winding Wool.

When winding wool for crocheting or knitting, begin the ball by winding the thread over the tag that comes with the skein. This will save trouble in starting the ball and also trouble when more wool is needed, as the tag has the number and size of the thread on it, and will be there when the end of the ball is reached, and will serve as a guide for the person who uses the last of that ball. Always save the tags of silk embroidery, thread and cotton and linen threads for crocheting for this same purpose.

SOCIAL SERVICE

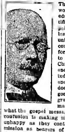
By REV. J. H. RALSTON,
Secretary of Correspondence Department,
Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT: I Cor. 15:3, 4—"Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures, and he was buried, and rose again the third day according to the Scriptures."



Never were men more confused than today respecting almost every matter of concern. The unrest in the world of business, education, scientific investigation, politics, and no less in religion, is universal. The confidence of the former days as to dependence on Christian experience, the certitude with reference to Christian doctrine, have gone, and there is great confusion in many minds as to what the gospel message is, and this confusion is making many Christians unhappy as they contemplate their mission as bearers of the gospel to the world. The most cordially accepted interpretation of the gospel is that it is social service. Save others physically and ethically and you save yourself. Belief in ethical culture or the work of moral and spiritual evolution working the gradual elimination of evil as now going on successfully, is with many the gospel.

But who should be the most trusted spokesman of such a subject? Would it not be one who is very near to the great teacher, Jesus? It would seem so, and we believe the Apostle Paul was just such a person, and that in the text he answered the question, "What is the Gospel?" He said he was declaring the gospel which he had preached, and immediately follows this statement with the text.

There are just two things here—the death of Christ, and the resurrection of Christ. The second of these is presented without elaboration or comment, "Christ rose again from the dead," but to the first, we have the death of Christ with the occasion of that death, the expiation of our sins, and the confirmation of the death by burial.

Died for Our Sins.

1. Christ died for our sins. The fact of the death of Christ on Calvary is generally received, but with most persons that death was simply that of an unfortunate young man who had lived a wonderful life, had manifested unselfishness to a degree never equaled by man, but who made a mistake by letting himself fall into the hands of his enemies and being put to death.

The first cause for the death of Christ was our sins. With some persons the death of Jesus Christ has no possible connection with man's relationship to God. It is merely inspirational and of moral influence towards a better life, beautiful to behold if you could shut your eyes to the physical agony and the gruesome blood shedding. But such is not the mission of the death of Christ in the purpose of God, nor have Paul or the other apostles so thought. The death had immediate connection with man's relationship to God—every man who is joined to Christ vitally, there died to the world and world died to him—there was the shedding of blood without which the Scriptures plainly teach there is no "remission of sins."

The brief clause, "He was buried," has far more significance than most think. It is a confirmation of the death which must be perfectly authenticated. The story of the death is quite complete, even before Joseph of Arimathea appears on the scene, and the taking of the body, its burial with all the details given in the gospels, is quite full. The sepulchre was sealed, a guard of soldiers was placed over it, thus doubly confirming the burial of a dead body.

Risen With Christ.

2. The burial paves the way for the second main proposition—the rising again of Jesus from the dead. Paul preached to the Corinthians that Jesus rose again from the dead. We must read here between the lines, and we do not question but that Paul presented the fullness of this doctrine—using it first to enforce the necessity of the new life—for "you have been risen with Christ." This refers, of course, to the spiritual resurrection very forcefully represented in the resurrection of Jesus Christ.

But Paul also was preaching a gospel to secure a man spiritually resurrected against all future contingencies. Men must die physically and even to the Christian the passing into the unknown hereafter is something disturbing to contemplate, but Paul gives him the glorious hope that he shall rise again from the dead even as Christ, who was the first fruits of them that sleep, rose from the dead.

The chapter from which the text is taken is known as the great resurrection chapter, and Paul reaches the climax at verses 51 and 52. "We shall not all sleep but we shall be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye at the last trump, for the trumpet shall sound and the dead shall be raised incorruptible and we shall be changed." On account of this, he says at the close of the chapter, "Beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmovable . . . your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

The Gospel of the death of Christ and of the resurrection of Christ is not narrow, in fact, offers the only platform broad enough on which can be built the doctrine that man needs to deliver him from the curse of sin which is now upon him, a curse hereafter infinitely greater; and, to enable him to have the positive blessing of resurrection.

WOMEN AS NATURAL ENEMIES

Writer Advances Some Good Reasons Why This Unfortunate Condition Must Exist.

"The average woman now begins that study of society which will merge ultimately with the marriage campaign. She makes many discoveries which she admits frankly to herself. She comes to many conclusions," says Inez Haynes Gillmore in Harper's Bazar, "which sink unnoticed into her subconscious mind. If marriage, for instance, is her natural career, then men are her natural prey.

"But unfortunately there are never enough men in her world to go round; and of those from whom she may hope to choose some are much more desirable than others. Naturally she prefers the desirable ones—i. e., the 'eligibles.' But—and here she runs against her first obstacle—every other single woman in her circle has come to the same conclusion. From the [illegible] she must declare war on every other member of her sex.

"Men must often wonder at that minute and merciless examination to which, on a first meeting, every woman submits every other woman. Men must often marvel at the power of quick observation which women always develop in these circumstances. This is only the swift interrogation with which a warrior surveys the arms of his opponent. Women are forever discovering new and complex weapons in the possession of rivals. And perhaps the most terrifying element in the situation is psychological—her sense of bafflement, in that she cannot judge of women for men any more than they can judge of men for her. Every other woman becomes her enemy. To succeed in her world she must play a lone hand and a cut-throat game."

When the uncle of a couple of Brooklyn youngsters last called at the household whereof they form a part he brought with him some pieces of candy, which were given to the little girl to divide with her brother.

Later the uncle summoned this child to the living room and asked:

"Marie, when you divided those five pieces of candy with your brother, did you give him two and a half pieces?"

"No, sir," said Marie. "I saw they weren't going to come out even, so I ate one before I began to divide."—Lippincott's Magazine.

IT'S THE FOOD.
The True Way to Correct Nervous Troubles.

Nervous troubles are more often caused by improper food and indigestion than most people imagine. Even doctors sometimes overlook this fact. A man says:

"Until two years ago waffles and butter with meat and gravy were the main features of my breakfast. Finally dyspepsia came on and I found myself in a bad condition, worse in the morning than any other time. I would have a full sick feeling in my stomach with pains in my heart, sides and head.

"At times I would have no appetite for days, then I would feel ravenous, never satisfied when I did eat and so nervous I felt like shrieking at the top of my voice. I lost flesh badly and hardly knew which way to turn until one day I bought a box of Grape-Nuts food to see if I could eat that. I tried it without telling the doctor, and liked it fine, made me feel as if I had something to eat that was satisfying and still I didn't have that heaviness that I had felt after eating any other food.

"I hadn't drank any coffee then in five weeks. I kept on with the Grape-Nuts and in a month and a half I had gained 15 pounds, could eat almost anything I wanted, didn't feel badly after eating and my nervousness was all gone. It's a pleasure to be well again."

Women
From Forty-Five to Fifty Are Much Benefited by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

The "change of life" is a most critical period in a woman's existence, and the anxiety felt by women as it draws near is not without reason.

When her system is in a deranged condition, she may be predisposed to apoplexy, or congestion of some organ. At this time, also, cancers and tumors are more liable to form and begin their destructive work.

Such warning symptoms as sense of suffocation, hot flashes, headaches, backaches, dread of impending evil, timidity, sounds in the ears, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude, and dizziness, are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period in life when woman's great change may be expected.

These symptoms are calls from nature for help. The nerves are crying out for assistance and the cry should be heeded in time.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is prepared to meet the needs of women's system at this trying period of her life. It invigorates and strengthens the female organism and builds up the weakened nervous system. It has carried many women safely through this crisis.

Mrs. Estella Gillispie

ONE CASE OUT OF MANY TO PROVE OUR CLAIMS.

St. Anne, Ill.—"I was passing through the change of life and I was a perfect wreck from female troubles. I had a displacement and bearing down pains, weak fainting spells, dizziness, then numb and cold feelings. Sometimes my feet and limbs were swollen. I was irregular and had so much backache and headache, was nervous, irritable and was despondent. Sometimes my appetite was good but more often it was not. My kidneys troubled me at times and I could walk only a short distance.

"I saw your advertisement in a paper and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I was helped from the first. At the end of two months the swelling had gone down, I was relieved of pain, and could walk with ease. I continued with the medicine and now I do almost all my housework. I know your medicine has saved me from the grave and I am willing for you to publish anything I write to you, for the good of others."—Mrs. Estella Gillispie, R.F.D. No. 4, Box 34, St. Anne, Illinois.

We Lead You To Fortune and Happy Life in California

Messrs. J. S. & W. S. Kuhn, the Pittsburgh bankers, are doing in the Sacramento Valley what the U. S. Government is doing elsewhere for the people.

There is ten times more net profit per acre in California irrigated land than in the East and with less labor.

Let us take you where there is comfort and happiness besides profit, climate equal to that of Southern Italy, no frosts nor snow, no thunderstorms nor sunstrokes.

Let us take you where big money is now being made, markets are near, demand for products great and income is sure.

Let us take you where railroad and river transportation is near, where there are denominational churches and graded schools.

Now is the time to buy this land—get in with the winners, the great Panama Canal will soon be ready and you can share in its triumphs, farms are selling rapidly, and we strongly urge you to purchase as soon as possible.

You can buy this land on very easy terms—$15.00 an acre now and the balance in ten yearly payments.

Give us an opportunity to take up all details with you—write us now.

Let us send you our fine illustrated printed matter telling all about it. Write for it at once—it gives you absolute proofs.

"VIC" DONAHY'S RECORD

Always Made Good in Public Office.

"Much criticism has been leveled at the office (state auditor) in recent years, because its occupant has acted as accountant of the state, rather than as auditor of accounts, with the investigation of expenditures contemplated in an exhaustive audit. It is generally agreed the office needs a complete reorganization.

"A. V. Donahey of Tuscarawas county is the Democratic nominee. He served two terms as auditor of his home county with a record that enabled him to win with ease an election as delegate to the constitutional convention. In the convention he was a prominent worker in that element known as the middle-of-the-road men, which had an important part in formulating several of the important amendments. He is running on a platform that calls for a reorganization of the office on an auditing basis with a complete separation of the bureau of public accounting and its organization as an independent bureau. He is advocating an investigation of all state expenditures to determine if the state is securing the full market advantages that are given to other purchasers who pay cash. He advocates having the auditor himself audited to determine the quality and efficiency of the work done for the state."—Cleveland Plain Dealer, September 24.

THE PLAIN DEALER

Says Secretary Graves Has Been an Efficient Officer.

"Charles H. Graves, in the two years he has been in office, has established a reputation for efficient services, orderly procedure and close attention to the business of his office. By a strict enforcement of the law he has largely increased the earnings of his office, and at the same time introduced modern methods in his work. As chief election officer, he has handled the affairs of that department so as to inspire general confidence. He was given a unanimous renomination "as an expression of appreciation." The Lake County Weekly Herald

Volume XIV. No. 32 PAINESVILLE, OHIO, OCTOBER 17, 1912 One Dollar Per Year

Dr. Winans—Reactionary

Lake County voters in their choice of a representative to the next state legislature, are fortunate in having two candidates to choose from, both of whom have legislative records at Columbus. Lake county is overwhelmingly progressive, as the vote upon constitutional amendments gave a heavy majority for every one submitted to a vote of the people. This is remarkable for the reason that there is but one or two other counties in the state returning a majority vote for all the amendments.

Fletcher D. Malin was a member of the Constitutional Convention and as a progressive has the record to show that he voted in the constitutional convention for every amendment adopted by the people of the state at the recent election. Mr. Malin is a candidate for election to the state assembly, which body will frame laws in accordance with the amendments to the constitution, and in our opinion is well qualified for the position.

Dr. J. V. Winans of Madison is the other candidate for member of the state legislature, and served in the 1911 session of that body. His record in that session was reactionary and very partisan, and the only bill he introduced was a law to increase the fees of county sheriffs, allowing them livery hire. The Cleveland Press, a newspaper of wide circulation, and a recognized authority, published a review of the work done by the legislature of which Dr. Winans was a member and in its review separated the progressives and reactionaries. The press included Dr. Winans with the reactionaries. We publish the extract from the Cleveland Press, of June 1st, as follows:

> "J. V. WINANS (R) Lake County, a partisan republican, who thought he was making his mark by voting against progressive measures."

OFFICIAL REPORT

Of the Department of Agriculture on Condition of Crops October, 1912.

With the actual results of harvest now definitely known Ohio's present wheat production is one of the poorest recorded by this Department. The harvest figures here presented are based on the area returned by township assessors less the estimated area plowed up as reported by our official correspondents. No doubt the total production will show some increase over the estimate now reported.

The harvest is now estimated at 10,454,425 bushels, an average production of but ten bushels per acre. While this is somewhat better than earlier reports indicated, it practically means failure. The wheat generally is of poor quality. The States average is estimated at 76 per cent. One year ago quality was reported at 94 per cent, with a total estimated production of 31,092,382 bushels. Of the crop of 1911, it is estimated that 10 per cent still remains in producers hands. Correspondents report that in some sections of State rains have retarded seeding. Many note the fact that the 1913 area will not be as great as the one just harvested.

Oats show a bumper production. The harvest being estimated at 83,171,314 bushels. This is an increase of approximately 37,000,000 bushels over the estimated crop of 1911. The average production per acre is reported at 44 bushels, as against 31 bushels one year ago. The quality of the grain is excellent.

Rye and barley productions also show healthy increases over last year.

Corn prospects are most flattering. The present prospect is estimated at 96 per cent based upon 35 bushels per acre representing 100 per cent. On the corresponding date one year ago the prospect was estimated at 91 per cent. As the area planted is much greater than in 1911 the harvest should be most bountiful. The crop is late in maturing, due to cool wet weather in July and late planting.

Reports indicate that the yield of potatoes will be much greater than that of last year. Correspondents estimate the present yield at 124 per cent in comparison with 1911. In the northeast section of State damage is reported by rot and grub worm.

The crop of apples will fall far short of the excellent harvest of last year. In comparison with that crop the present estimate is 63 per cent.

DIES SUDDENLY

Wife of F. A. Hungerford, Fairport, Passes Away Without Warning

Mrs. Maria T. Hungerford, wife of F. A. Hungerford, passed away very suddenly last Friday afternoon at her home in Fairport. Mrs. Hungerford, who was born in Painesville 72 years ago, was in seemingly good health during the morning and after preparing dinner for the family said she was not feeling well and thought she would lie down a few minutes.

Within ten minutes from this time death occurred from heart failure.

Mrs. Hungerford will be greatly missed in Fairport where she has lived for many years and where her kindly ways won the love and friendship of all who knew her.

Mrs Hungerford is survived by her husband, F. A. Hungerford, well and favorably known in Painesville, and two children, Mrs. S. J. Merrill of this city, and L. W. Hungerford of Fairport. The funeral services were held on Sunday afternoon at 2 30 o'clock.

Almost a Miracle

One of the most startling changes ever seen in any man, according to W. B. Holsclaw, Clarendon, Tex., was effected years ago in his brother. "He had such a dreadful cough," he writes, "that all our family thought he was going into consumption, but he began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, and was completely cured by ten bottles. Now he is sound and well and weighs 218 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for Coughs and Colds with excellent results." It's quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free at Dowling's Pharmacy.

BRYAN AND WILSON

Their Exchange of Compliments Feature of the Campaign

(From the Springfield Republican)

Gov. Wilson and Mr. Bryan had not met since the Baltimore convention, and the meeting between them at Lincoln, Neb., Saturday was in the nature of an exchange of compliments such as this campaign has not seen before. The crowds both at Omaha and Lincoln were very large and enthusiastic. At one of the Lincoln meetings in the evening Bryan in introducing Wilson said:

I want to express my deep gratitude to Gov. Wilson for the masterly manner in which he has led our forces in this campaign. We had reason to expect much of him, he has done better than we could have expected. He has shown wisdom and discretion in the choosing of the men who are to be around him and upon whom he is to rely for counsel and advice, and he has shown a courage that not one man in a million has shown. Let me ask you to do twice as much for Wilson as you ever did for Bryan.

And Wilson, when his turn came, had this to say to Bryan's home folks:

I am proud to come to Lincoln and render my tribute of respect to the great champion of liberty who set the Democratic party free at Baltimore. Mr Bryan was not the champion of any candidate. Mr Bryan, with the tact which ought to characterize a great leader, did not attempt to dictate what the choice of the convention should be, but he did attempt, and he splendidly succeeded, in preventing the control of that convention by those interests which are inimical to the people. If I, as a result of the freedom of that convention, was the choice of the convention, my responsibility is all the greater to live up to the standard to which Mr. Bryan brought that body to stand shoulder to shoulder with him.

The great enthusiasm showed it was a well-staged performance, and it means votes doubtless for Wilson in the West. Bryan is evidently keeping his followers in line east and west of the Rockies.

PAINESVILLE GIRL

Miss Eleanor Moodey Will Name New Steamship

Miss Eleanor Moodey is a Painesville girl, the daughter of Robert C. Moodey, whose home is in Painesville, but whose business interests are largely in Cleveland. He is one of the board of directors of the Cleveland & Buffalo Transit Co., and to Miss Moodey has been given the honor of christening the magnificent new $1,900,000 passenger steamer, now being built for the Cleveland & Buffalo service in 1913.

The boat will be launched at Detroit late this month or early in November.

Recently the officers of the C. & B. line asked suggestions for a name for this new steamer, which is to be the largest passenger boat in the world outside of those engaged in ocean traffic. Over 27,000 answers were sent in.

The name decided upon by the board of directors will not be disclosed until announced by Miss Moodey, at the time of the launching.

FARMERS CONGRESS

New Orleans, November 7, 1912

The Farmers National Congress will convene November 7th, New Orleans, and continue four days. Ohio delegates appointed by Governor Harmon in 1910 or 1911 are eligible to sit and vote in this Congress. The Governor will appoint and commission those persons who desire to attend if they are interested in agricultural problems. Mr. Austin Herrick, State Vice President, advises that a rate of $21.25 can be had from Cincinnati. On account of the death of the President, Mr Whitaker, Hon. Chas. A. Sanford, of Ohio, First Vice President, has succeeded to the Presidency of the National body. An interesting program is being prepared. Ohio farmers will be pleased to see the Southland at this season of the year. Persons interested should address Mr. Herrick or write to

A. P. SANDLES, Columbus.

Cider 10 cents per gallon, 8 cents by the barrel. The Abbott Mill, N. Main street bridge, Painesville.

ABOUT PEOPLE AND PLACES

The four weeks old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Hyde, of Cleveland, died on Monday last, and was brought to Mentor on Tuesday, for burial.

—o—

Mr. C. R. Hulbert, well known here in Painesville, has decided to spend the winter in Thompson. He may return to Painesville next spring.

—o—

Mr. M. D. Topping and Mr. Keller of Marion Ave., employed at Mr. A. E. Vrooman's Onion Topping Machine plant, this city, have gone to Alliance, in Mr. Vrooman's interest.

—o—

Homer Harper has discouraged many good jobs for the printer by railing at the candidate who posts his picture on the telephone poles, but writing all that political gush in a serial story shows that a candidate may invent more than one way to keep in the lime light.

—o—

It will make little difference whether the salaries at the county court house are drawn by republicans or democrats, but it is important to you to select good men for congress and the state legislature, and all the good men for these offices happen to be on the democratic ticket.

—o—

I. S. Stafford, of Richmond Road, left a curiosity at the Herald office this week. It is a stalk of corn for one foot from roots and then branches off into twin stalks, each bearing an ear of corn. Mr Stafford had shown it to old corn growers and all pronounce it a "freak of nature."

—o—

Fred Crosby has a corner in corn, that is he has a corner of a corn field that grew distinctly larger corn where the street lamp shone directly on it. He wasn't going to say anything about it because he is more inclined to cultivate corn between meals, than he is to take the girls to band play Friday nights.

—o—

Everyone who attended the Wilson meeting in Cleveland last Friday night seem to have been most favorably impressed with the New Jersey governor. One man had this to say: That man Wilson is certainly homely enough to make a good president. His looks and talk seem to imply honesty.

—o—

We don't want to say anything very mean about the candidates on the republican county ticket, but really the willing manner in which they allow their names to be flopped from one ticket to another, inclines us to the belief that some of them would run on the Socialist ticket if chances for election were good.

—o—

Mr W. J. Graves, the Painesville nurseryman, has become greatly interested in an English apple known as the Prince Albert. The apple is a bright red and of a most delicious flavor. It comes into bearing early and Mr. Graves has faith in its all around good qualities. He will have only a limited number of the trees for sale this coming season, but will undoubtedly grow them in large number as the apple becomes better known and as the demand increases.

Avoid Sedative Cough Medicines.

If you want to contribute directly to the occurrence of capillary bronchitis and pneumonia, use cough medicines that contain codine, morphine, heroin and other sedatives when you have a cough or cold. An expectorant like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is what is needed. That cleans out the culture beds or breeding places for the germs of pneumonia and other germ diseases. That is why pneumonia never results from a cold when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used. It has a world wide reputation for its cures. It contains no morphine or other sedative. For sale by all dealers.

By a Chicago Tuberculosis Nurse

Do you know that out of 20,000,000 school children in our country 1,100,000 suffer from organic heart trouble, 1,000,000 have had or have now some lung trouble, 1,000,000 have curvature of the spine or some deformity, more than 1,000,000 have defective hearing, 5,000,000 defective vision, 5,000,000 suffer from malnutrition, 6,000,000 from enlarged tonsils, adenoids or cervical glands, 10,000,000 from bad teeth and in some schools 98% of the children have bad teeth? This is what an expert in Columbia University has found out. And so much is now being said about the debt we owe the children, to keep them from these handicaps and to help them to overcome them, that the health alphabet quoted above is a good one to cut out and pin up somewhere in the home where everybody will read it. School authorities are beginning to have a conscience about these things even if some parents have not, and in several cities dentists give their time to come to the school house and treat the children's teeth, the dental apparatus being provided by a benevolent person or society. In other schools there are fresh air rooms for those who have a tendency to tuberculosis. In the close city districts there are school gardens where the children can dig in the dirt and raise vegetables and flowers, and in all schools breathing exercises and Calisthenics have been introduced. The common drinking cup is now being discarded and bubbling fountains or individual drinking cups put in their place, paper towels are substituted for the common towel which every boy and girl could use. This seems no more than decent when we think how diseases spread and from what homes some of the children come.

We can congratulate ourselves in Lake County that the good work has started. Mr. Adams, the superintendent of Madison township schools has taken pains to introduce individual drinking cups and paper towels as well as porcelain lined tanks for the water. And Mr Williams, the superintendent for Painesville township and Mentor Special district, is following suit in trying to make the sanitary conditions and the school houses what they should be. This is a much more difficult matter in the country districts than in towns where water pressure can be secured. But it can be done even there with a progressive superintendent and a right-minded school board to back him. It is at least possible to begin with individual drinking cups and paper towels. The necessity for such precaution is borne in upon us from time to time when some contagious disease breaks out, like the diptheria in Burton this fall, where the schools must be closed altogether for weeks. But even when there is no such obvious and wholesale object lesson, there are likely to be individual children who are infected by disease and permanently injured if unsanitary conditions are allowed.

All of this agitation concerning the health of our children has stirred up the school boards in the larger centers to provide medical examination, so that the school physician and the school nurse are accepted items in the yearly budget of expense. In some places in order to get the work started a benevolent person has given money enough to employ a school nurse for a year. This happened in Hoboken, New Jersey, a few years ago. A lady who wished to give a memorial for her husband, was about to endow a childrens' ward in a hospital where it was suggested to her that if she gave the money to the schools it would reach 100% of the boys and girls rather than the 3% who would be taken to the hospital. In schools where there is a physician employed to examine the children, the nurse follows up those who need attention, visits the homes, gives treatments and advises the parents as to what they ought to do for the health of their children.

The Director of School Hygiene in Boston says "It does not seem possible to conceive a more satisfactory arrangement or a more effective piece of school machinery than the school nurse under school supervision." If anyone in Lake County wants to know just how this works a good place to visit is the Murray Hill School in Cleveland. This is in the Italian neighborhood; there are 1300 Italians in this school and Miss Murphy, the principal, will explain how the nurse looks after those who are not well and follows up the examination the physicians make at the beginning of the year. She will also explain that if a child comes to school too dirty to live with, his mother is sent for and the bath tub put at her disposal, for here there is a little room used as a dispensary, containing a porcelain tub. This is not necessary in all schools but serves its purpose well in this particular neighborhood.

The Painesville city schools took a step in advance last year when the school board employed a physician to examine the children and a nurse was sent down for a few weeks from Cleveland to follow up his reports. Those reports showed the need of such examinations every year. The percentages were in some instances larger and in some smaller than the Columbia professor has estimated as the average for the country as a whole. In several cases the parents were surprised to find that anything ailed their child and set to work at once to remedy it. It was a good thing in Painesville, the most intelligent and right-minded parents are commending it. It will be a better thing if it is continued another year and a nurse employed either by the schools or as a district nurse in the city.

But attention to these matters of health should not be confined to the larger centers. Smaller places can do something. Some very simple practical things could be inaugurated in our township schools as well.

Dr. Brown Coming

Dr. John Brown, Jr., International Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association, and a specialist in health and recreation whose work in promoting campaigns for health and play-life have been nation-wide in extent, will spend Wednesday, Oct. 23rd, in Lake County. In the afternoon Dr. Brown will conduct Play Demonstration on the grounds of the High School in Mentor and also at the Perry High School. Dr. Brown has been singularly successful in introducing wholesome recreation into village and country communities. At one school which he visited it was said that none of the school children would play because they did not know any games, yet inside of fifteen minutes over 200 boys and girls were divided into Play Groups and were entering into the games with great zeal and enthusiasm. In many of the Public Schools games that can be played during recess are almost unheard of, and it is Dr Brown's purpose to introduce games that can be easily learned and that will be enjoyed by all who take part. The Demonstrations held here will be for all ages of school pupils, including the High School boys and girls as well as the children in the primary grades. It is expected that many teachers from the neighboring school districts will visit the demonstrations at Perry and Mentor.

On next Wednesday evening there will be a meeting of all men and women who are interested in the subject of "The Community Health." At this meeting Dr Brown will discuss with the people who are present a program for improvement of health conditions in our local communities. A luncheon will be served in connection with this meeting, which is to be held at the Y. M. C. A. building in Painesville.

Parents, teachers, school superintendents and public officials are especially urged to be present. It is a rare privilege to have a man of the broad experience of Dr. Brown to study our important local problems, and his stay in Lake County merits the warmest interest of the people.

Mrs A. A. Reed had a very narrow escape from losing his house by fire Saturday morning. Some kindlings in the oven had begun to burn, and after throwing some water over them he threw them outside on the porch, supposing that the fire was extinguished. Then he went to his work and thought no more about it. About an hour later Mrs Reed, smelling smoke and looking for the cause, found that the wood was on fire. She put out the fire without difficulty, but not before quite a large hole had been burned in the building. If she had been half an hour later the house would have been past saving, and the way the wind was blowing it would have been almost impossible to keep the whole corner of the town from being destroyed also.

George Woodward spent Sunday in Cleveland

Mrs A. A. Falls went to Pittsburg on Tuesday to visit her brother and family

Mr and Mrs Winchester Fitch were in town on Monday.

Mrs Fred Nicholas who has been ill at her home at Broadfields, all summer, was taken to her home in Cleveland on Monday

THEODORE ROOSEVELT

COLONEL'S WOULD BE ASSASSIN BELIEVED TO BE MANIAC WHO HAS BEEN FOLLOWING HIM

EX-PRESIDENT WON'T GIVE IN

Addresses Audience in Auditorium After Man Who Gave His Name as John Schrank of New York Had Fired Bullet

Milwaukee, Wis.—An attempt to assassinate Col. Roosevelt was made as he started on his way from the Hotel Gilpatrick here to the Auditorium.

As he stepped into an automobile a shot was fired by a scraggly attired man, who edged his way through the crowd to the motor car. The stranger, who it was later learned is John S. Schrank of New York, took deliberate aim and sent the bullet crashing into the ex-president's right side, just below the nipple. The shooter was nabbed by Elbert H. Martin, the ex-president's stenographer, and Capt. Alfred O. Gerard of Milwaukee, a rough rider under Roosevelt.

As he was about to fire another shot, the revolver, a 32 caliber affair, was knocked from his hand by Col. Cecil Lyon of Texas, who is accompanying Roosevelt on his midwestern campaign trip. Lyon jumped out of the automobile and started to choke the would-be assassin.

Roosevelt, who had staggered back into the automobile when the shot was fired, raised himself up and stood looking up at Lyon, who was sitting on the shooter. The ex-president cried, with a gesture: "Don't hurt him. I'm all right."

A rapid of police rushed in as Lyon released his grip on the fellow and, with Lyon's help, dragged the man into the hotel kitchen.

Col. Roosevelt sat back in the motor car as the immense crowd that had witnessed the shooting yelled to him. With rare presence of mind the colonel, waving his hat, cried out: "My good friends, I'm not hurt. I'm going on to the hall to speak. Good luck."

The whole incident had occurred so quickly that the astonished crowd did nothing but stand stock still.

Roosevelt Is Plucky.

Roosevelt then turned to the chauffeur and in calm voice remarked: "Now just run the car up to the Auditorium. I'm not hurt."

The car started up and in a moment Roosevelt was on his way to the hall with a bullet in his side.

The ex-president did not actually realize that he had been shot until he got to the Auditorium, five blocks distant. He knew that the bullet had grazed him because he felt it against his side, but he believed that it had simply gone through his overcoat.

As he reached the Auditorium the ex-president felt a sharp sting in his side and instinctively placed his hand upon it. Dr. Terrill, his private physician, who rode in the automobile with him, noticed the gesture.

"Colonel, I believe you are hurt," he suggested with alarm.

"Not at all," returned Roosevelt with a smile. "I feel fine."

"Col. Roosevelt has a superficial flesh wound below the right breast with no evidence of injury to the lung. The bullet is probably lodged somewhere in the chest wall, because there is but one wound and no sign of injury to the lung. The bleeding was insignificant and the wound was immediately cleansed externally and dressed with sterile gauze by Dr. R. G. Sayle of Milwaukee, consulting surgeon of the Emergency hospital.

"As the bullet passed through Col. Roosevelt's overcoat, other clothes, doubled manuscript and metal spectacle case, its force was much diminished. The appearance of the wound also presented evidence of a much spent bullet. The colonel is not suffering from shock and is in no pain. His condition is good and the surgeons did not object to his continuing his journey in his private car to Chicago, where he was placed under surgical care."

* * *

"I want to see if the bullet hit you," insisted Terrill.

"Don't bother yourself," protested Roosevelt, unperturbed. "If it hurt any I would tell you."

Dr. Terrill persisted that he ought to examine the colonel.

"Now if we wait to do that," fretted Roosevelt, "you'll delay the meeting and here are people waiting in the Auditorium to see me."

All this colloquy took place in an out room just outside the Auditorium. Fifteen thousand people in the hall had heard the ex-president's automobile whirring up to the door and they were yelling for him. Dr. Terrill was obdurate.

"You can't go in there until I've seen if that bullet took effect," demanded Terrill. "You owe it to yourself, colonel, to let me satisfy myself about it."

"Oh, well, if it disturbs you, go ahead," laughed the colonel.

In the meantime members of the ex-president's party in great alarm had gone to the platform of the Auditorium to prepare the huge audience for the shocking news of the attempted assassination.

Harry Cochems of Wisconsin, former La Follette leader who is now working hard for the colonel, stepped up to the chairman of the assemblage and interrupted him to whisper the news.

"My God!" exclaimed the startled man, and he sank back into a chair. The audience looked on in blank amazement. Cochems stepped to the fore of the stage and in quivering voice announced:

Tells of Sad News.

"Ladies and gentlemen, I have sad news for you. Col. Roosevelt has been shot."

A murmur ran through the audience. "Some crank shot at him as he was on his way here," Cochems went on. "The colonel is outside here and will soon address you because he insists on it. I ask you to be as quiet as you can, as he is in great pain."

Cochems' voice failed as he uttered this and he staggered back against a table. He was completely unnerved. As Cochems was helped away from the platform the crowd broke into a murmur of excited [illegible] regained his composure as he was being led from the platform and, going to the footlights, called out:

"If there are any physicians in the audience I wish they would hurry back of the scenes. They are needed."

Instantly Dr. R. C. Sayle and Dr. Frederick A. Stratton of Milwaukee hurried back. They found Dr. Terrill sitting on a chair before Col. Roosevelt, trying to induce the ex-president to give up the speech and go to a hospital.

"My dear doctor, that is impossible," declared Roosevelt, firmly. "I'm going to make that speech if its the last one."

Doctors Stratton and Sayle nodded to the ex-president and asked him if he felt any pain. Roosevelt, who was sitting up straight in a chair, the most placid man in the group, replied with a wave of his hand:

"Now I am not hurt a bit; I don't think the bullet hit me. If you will wait until I've finished my speech I'll let you see for yourselves."

As he spoke Roosevelt got up from the chair and insisted on being shown the way to the stage. Dr. Terrill implored him not to go. Col. Lyon tried to stop him, but Roosevelt gently pushed the Texan aside, saying: "Now, Cecil, you're disturbing the congregation."

Seeing it was useless to interfere, the colonel's bodyguard escorted him to the platform. As Roosevelt walked firmly to the stage as though nothing in the world was the matter, the giant crowd burst into three of the wildest cheers he has heard on his campaign trip. Roosevelt, who had clung to his hat through all the excitement, passed it over to his cousin, Philip Roosevelt, and faced the yelling throng. He waved his hand at the crowd, paced a few steps along the platform, waved at the galleries and acted exactly as he did at the Coliseum at Chicago last Saturday when he was the storm center of a wild multitude.

Roosevelt finally raised his hand to stop the cheering and as the crowd ceased, a voice cried:

"Colonel, we sympathize with you."

Roosevelt gritted his teeth and shouted back: "Now don't you worry, it's nothing at all."

Colonel Delivers His Speech.

The ex-president had in his pocket a carefully prepared speech which he had dictated on the train on his way to Milwaukee. Without any formality excepting to greet the crowd as "fellow citizens of Wisconsin," the colonel pulled the manuscript of his speech from his pocket. As he drew it out he found, for the first time, that the bullet had penetrated.

The bullet had torn a round hole in the thick manuscript. It had gone on into the fleshy part of the chest and had lodged there.

Those on the platform saw a tinge of red about the bullet mark on the manuscript. Dr. Terrill started from his chair bound on having the ex-president stop and go at once to the hospital. Roosevelt saw him raise from the chair. Turning around the ex-president exclaimed impatiently:

"You just stay where you are. I am going to make this speech and you might as well compose yourself."

Terrill had a suspicion all the time that the bullet had found its mark but he had been balked by the colonel so that he could not make certain. He sat in his chair, his face blanched, as Roosevelt launched into the speech.

The audience, alarmed over the colonel's plight, sat with bated breath as Roosevelt spoke. When he pulled the manuscript out and saw the bullet mark, he quickly placed his hand over the tinged spot so the audience could not see it.

Not until the speech was over did the crowd learn that the bullet had pierced the manuscript. Roosevelt talked for 15 minutes before he gave the slightest indication that he felt the effect of the bullet. Then a sudden tinge of pain made him clench his right side. The audience was quick to observe it and a protest ran through the hall for the colonel to stop. Roosevelt frowned.

"Now this is all a trivial affair," he cried. "Anyone who knows me must realize that I would not stop for a thing like this. I may have a right to feel sore with a bullet in me, but if you saw me in battle leading my regiment, you would not want me to stop. You would expect me to go ahead, no matter what happened."

Says He's Only Slightly Hurt.

After Roosevelt had talked for half an hour, lambasting Senator La Follette for opposing the Progressives in Wisconsin and attacking Gov. Wilson for his stand on the trusts and labor, he ceased for a minute, to take a glass of water. This was taken by the crowd to indicate that he was growing faint. In intense perturbation a woman in the audience arose and cried:

"Col. Roosevelt, won't you please let the doctors look for that bullet. We can wait till they're through. We're afraid you are seriously hurt."

Roosevelt gently laid down the glass of water. Leaning over the platform he exclaimed, in soft, even tones:

"Madam, you mustn't be alarmed. I am only slightly hurt and can easily go on."

The ex-president went on with his speech for half an hour longer. He curtailed his speech only a trifle. When he reached its conclusion, Roosevelt smiled amiably and with a comprehensive gesture, said, feelingly:

"Now, my friends, I want to thank you for your forbearance. You have listened patiently to me. Thank you and good luck."

A deafening round of cheers went up as the ex-president was escorted from the stage.

The doctors advised him that they were already prepared with means to make an immediate examination of the wound at the Emergency hospital.

"Oh, do it here," urged the colonel as he started to sit in a chair. The doctors insisted that he ought to go to the hospital.

"If you think it's that bad, I'll go," said Roosevelt, cheerfully.

The ex-president felt his coat and found that the bullet had scorched it on its way through. Underneath his vest was crimsoned.

"Do you feel much pain?" asked Dr. Terrill, as he helped the colonel into the waiting automobile.

"Nothing to speak of," replied Roosevelt, with a show of nonchalance.

"The bullet undoubtedly is resting comfortably in the flesh somewhere. I know it didn't pierce the lung, as I haven't felt any trouble in speaking. It didn't get very deep."

Work of a Crank.

The wound was not dangerous. The attempted assassination of the ex-president was the work of a crank. The fellow mingled with the crowd in the street when Roosevelt drove up in an automobile to the Gilpatrick hotel at dusk. He brushed into the hotel while Roosevelt was at dinner with leaders of his Progressive party.

The stranger, illy dressed, about 35 years old, of wiry build and long hair, asked the clerk at the desk where he could find the ex-president.

"He's at dinner and you can't see him," returned the clerk curtly, as he critically surveyed the caller.

"Well, I've got to see him," mumbled the stranger. "I've got to see him." The clerk bluntly ordered the unwelcome visitor from the hotel and he shuffled out. He evidently waited around the street in a throng that hung around to see the colonel as he left the Auditorium.

It was shortly before 8 p. m. when the ex-president, to the cheers of the waiting throngs, walked out of the hotel and stepped into a seven passenger touring car. He had just gotten into the tonneau and turned around to sit down when from the opposite of the car facing the street came a flash and a loud report. Leaning over the car was the ill visaged stranger, who had shuffled an hour before the hotel looking for the colonel. In his hand was a smoking revolver. After firing the first shot the would-be assassin leveled the weapon again at Roosevelt and was about to fire again when Martin, the ex-president's stenographer, a strapping fellow, leaped at him.

The colonel will remain in Chicago until it is found how serious his injury becomes. He expressed a wish that his tour be continued and that he be allowed to keep his speaking engagements.

ALLEGE BENSE LAW VIOLATED

Ohio State Board of Health Plans to Prosecute Villages Who Fail to Purify Water Supplies

Columbus, O.—It has just developed that the officials of the state board of health are planning to prosecute and fine, under the provisions of the Bense act, the municipal authorities of about 50 cities and villages of the state who have so far failed to carry out various orders of the state board dealing with the purification of their water supplies.

The state board of health will meet in Columbus Oct. 23, and it is reported that wholesale prosecutions will be ordered. Secretary Eugene F. McCampbell stated Monday that the authorities in about 50 cities and villages have laid themselves liable to this prosecution, and that unless they take immediate steps to carry out the ordered changes, the prosecutions will very likely be ordered.

New York City.—Led by the battleship Connecticut, the flagship of Rear Admiral Hugo Osterhaus, the Atlantic fleet left New York Oct. 15, being reviewed by President Taft on board the Mayflower, as the great vessels passed out to sea.

More than 1,000,000 persons saw the warships steam from their anchorage down the Hudson and down the bay to the Atlantic.

Riverside drive and other streets offering a view of the Hudson and the upper bay were crowded; Battery park was a solid mass of people, while the roofs of buildings overlooking the outward bound route of the fleet were jammed with spectators.

More than 200 official and unofficial guests were taken on board the naval yacht Dolphin.

Bridgey Webber and Harry Vallon Testify at Trial of Police Lieutenant Becker in New York

New York City.—At the close of Monday's session of the Becker trial Bridgey Webber and Harry Vallon had concluded testimony which furnished corroboration for all material points in the astounding story told by Jack Rose as to how Police Lieut. Charles Becker, now on trial for his life, instigated the murder of gambler Herman Rosenthal. In his recital of the conversation that took place with Becker immediately after the murder on the morning of July 16, Webber quoted Becker as follows:

"I was riding past the Metropole myself last night and I told my chauffeur, Otto Avery, to drive slowly and said to him, 'If I had seen that squeal ing Rosenthal, I would have got out and backed him up against a wall and shot him.'"

MRS. RAYMOND PUT ON TRIAL

Maine Woman Accused of Mysterious Murder Which Was Committed Seven Years Ago.

Readfield, Me.—Mrs. Elsie Hobbs Raymond was placed on trial for her life here on Oct. 15. She is charged with having tied a weaver's knot around the throat of Mattie Hackett, which strangled her to death on the night of August 17, 1905. Although suspicion has rested on Mrs. Raymond almost ever since the murder, it was not until April of the present year that the grand jury was able to find sufficient evidence to indict her.

Mattie Hackett was the 18-year-old daughter of Levi Hackett, a farmer living at Kent's Hill near this town. On the night of August 17, 1905, while talking with a tramp who had asked him for a night's lodging, the farmer heard his daughter scream, "You wretch," which was followed by a scream.

WOULD-BE ASSASSIN TELLS WHY HE SHOT

The would-be assassin of Col. Roosevelt revealed himself to the police as John S. Schrank and gave his address as No. 370 E. 10th street, New York. In an incoherent manner he told Chief Janssen at police headquarters of having wanted to kill Roosevelt because he did not believe any president ought to have more than two terms.

The prisoner gave every appearance of being crazy. He mumbled to himself and looked wild eyed. In his pockets the police found a letter addressed "To the People," in which Schrank wrote of what he called a dream that came to him in which he saw Roosevelt as the assassin of President McKinley. He asserted in the letter that no president ought to serve three terms. Schrank informed the police that he had followed Col. Roosevelt around the country for the last week to kill him.

"I went to the Coliseum in Chicago last Saturday night to kill Roosevelt," said the prisoner without a quiver. "I waited around the entrance. I thought he would come out but he fooled me. He came out by another door. It made me mad that I missed. I was bound I'd get him here."

Schrank in his confession to the police told of a careful laid plot often frustrated but finally successful. The man talked profusely after his first refusal to give his name. He said:

"I formerly ran a saloon at 10 E. 10th street, between Avenues B and C, New York City. I was born in Erding, Bavaria, two hours out of Munich, the capital. I am 36 years old and came to this country when nine years old with my parents. I have been engaged in the saloon business as proprietor and as an employe nearly all of my life until I decided that it was my duty to kill Col. Roosevelt. I have been personally acquainted with Roosevelt since the former president was police commissioner of New York in 1895. I was first attracted to him as a political personage during the convention in Chicago. Then I began to think seriously of him as a menace to his country when he cried 'thief' at that convention.

"I looked upon his plan to start a third party as a danger to the country. My knowledge of history, gained through much reading, convinced me that Roosevelt was engaged in a dangerous undertaking. I was convinced that if he was defeated at the fall election he would again cry 'thief' and that his action would plunge the country in a bloody civil war.

"I deemed it my duty, after much consideration of the situation, to put him out of the way. I was living at my home address at the time but soon after I had a dream in which former President McKinley appeared to me. I was told by McKinley in this dream that it was not Czolgosz who murdered him, but Roosevelt. McKinley in this dream told me that his blood was on Roosevelt's hands and that Roosevelt had killed him so that he might become president.

"I was more deeply impressed by what I read in the newspapers than others, and after having this dream was more convinced than ever that I should free the country from the menace of Roosevelt's ambition.

"I am sorry I have caused all this trouble for the good people of Milwaukee and Wisconsin, but I am not sorry that I carried out my plan."

SCHRANK IS ARRAIGNED

ATTEMPTED ASSASSIN OF TEDDY PLEADS GUILTY TO CHARGE.

Tells Judge to Set Case at Any Time as He Is in No Hurry for Trial to Begin.

Milwaukee, Wis.—John Schrank, would-be assassin of ex-president Roosevelt, is resting in a cell in the county jail, having been transferred there from the Central police station after being arraigned before Judge Neelan in the district court on the charge of assault with intent to kill. He is resting as quietly as he could if he were a normal man in an ordinary hotel.

"I am guilty as charged," he said in answer to the formal question, "and I am willing to waive preliminary hearings. Set the case for trial any time you like, for I am not in a hurry. I am quite indifferent."

As this most remarkable man was led away to his cell he stretched his arms, yawned and remarked: "I'm all tired out now. I hope they will let me get a good sleep tonight."

District Attorney Zabel announced that Schrank's trial will probably be postponed until after the November election, for the district attorney is deeply engaged in a political campaign.

The most careful secrecy was used in taking Schrank from the Central police station to Judge Neelan's court. The move was not announced to anybody in advance excepting the police, the district attorney's staff and attaches of the court. In spite of that, however, nearly 200 people who had seen Schrank's picture in the papers recognized him as he walked between two detectives to the courtroom and so there was a crowd present at his arraignment. Schrank chatted with the detectives as he walked. He seemed anxious to create a favorable impression of himself. He brushed his hair carefully, demanded a clean collar, brushed his clothing and with his handkerchief flicked the dust from his shoes.

"You see I am a national character now," he said, "and I want to look the part."

"Do you want an early trial?" asked Assistant District Attorney Hellman. "You are entitled to have one if you want it."

"There's no hurry," said Schrank.

"In that case," said Judge Neelan, "you are bound over to the next term of the municipal court and your bail will be fixed at $7,500."

Sign Protocol of Peace Treaty in Switzerland After Months of Diplomatic Strife Over Terms

London, England.—After months of diplomatic strife for better terms, Turkey surrendered and the Ottoman and Italian plenipotentiaries at Ouchy, Switzerland, signed the protocol of a peace treaty, which ends the war between Italy and Turkey. Freed of this crushing handicap, the Ottoman empire from now on will concentrate its entire attention to the war with the Balkan states.

The precise terms of the Turkish-Italian pact will not be available until a definite treaty is signed at the end of the week, probably at Lausanne. The treaty will provide for absolute sovereignty of Italy in Lybia, without formal recognition there of Italy by Turkey; free exercise of religious authority by the khalif; Turkey to withdraw her regular troops from Lybia, Italy to pay an indemnity equivalent to Lybia's contributions to the Ottoman treasury; restitution of the captured islands to Turkey, with guarantees for the Christian peoples; no indemnity payable by either side toward the cost of the war and re-establishment of former diplomatic and commercial relations.

Hamilton county also lost its famous suits to recover from former county treasurers sums paid them as interest on public funds loaned by the treasurer to banks during the eight years ended with 1892. # MORAL FOR THE MONEY-MAD

Hope of Becoming Millionaires About on a Par With the Washer woman's Delusion

Prof. Warren M. Heidler of Bethel, Pa., in a recent address made the striking assertion that the American people, money mad, taught their children how to earn a living, but not how to live.

"There is no viler, and there is no valner ambition," said Professor Heidler to a reporter, "than that of the American boy to become a millionaire. What percentage of our boys do become millionaires? It would take a good many decimals to work that out, believe me!

"The boy who sets his heart on a million fares like the washerwoman who set her heart on a cross-eyed aeronaut.

"'I hear you married that cross-eyed aeronaut last week?' said a friend.

"'Yes, I did,' replied the washerwoman, as she rocked back and forth over her tub. 'Yes, I married him and I gave him $500 out of my buildin' association to start an airship factory.'

"'That so?' said the friend. 'Where is he now?'

"'I don't know,' said the washerwoman. 'I'm waitin' for him to come back from his honeymoon.'"

Absorbed.

A college professor, noted for his concentration of thought, returned home from a scientific meeting one night, still pondering deeply upon the subject that had been discussed. As he entered his room he heard a noise that seemed to come from under the bed.

"Is there someone there?" he asked absently.

"No, professor," answered the intruder, who knew his peculiarities.

"That's strange," muttered the professor. "I was almost sure I heard someone under the bed."

A Confirmed Coffee Drinker Takes to Postum.

A housewife was recently surprised when cook served Postum instead of coffee. She says:

"For the last five or six years I have been troubled with nervousness, indigestion and heart trouble. I couldn't get any benefit from the doctor's medicine so finally he ordered me to stop drinking coffee, which I did.

"I drank hot water while taking the doctor's medicine, with some improvement, then went back to coffee with the same old trouble as before.

"A new servant girl told me about Postum—said her folks used it and liked it in place of coffee. We got a package but I told her I did not believe my husband would like it, as he was a great coffee drinker.

"To my surprise he called for a third cup, said it was 'good stuff' and wanted to know what it was. We have used Postum ever since and both feel better than we have in years.

"My husband used to have bad spells with his stomach and would be sick three or four days, during which time he could not eat or drink anything. But since he gave up coffee and took to Postum, he has had no more trouble, and we now fully believe it was all caused by coffee.

"I have not had any return of my former troubles since drinking Postum, and feel better and can do more work than in the last ten years. We tell everyone about it—some say they tried it and did not like it. I tell them it makes all the difference as to how it's made. It should be made according to directions—then it is delicious."

CONFESSION ALARMS

THOSE IMPLICATED IN CORRUPTION CHARGES IN OHIO INVESTIGATION.

It Is Said That Strenuous Efforts Are Being Made To Prevent Further Disclosures By Guilty Ones.

Columbus, O.—Since the sensational confession of Representative Nye, of Pike county, it is said that an organization has been formed among the alleged bribe givers and takers to work strenuously to prevent any further weakening among those under fire.

The confession of the accused solon is so complete in all its details that great alarm exists among all involved. The Pike county representative pleaded guilty to one charge of bribery. If he repeats his evidence before the grand jury and at trials of men indicted, he probably will not be sent to the penitentiary.

GEORGE B. NYE.

Here is a summary of the sordid revelations he made to Attorney General Hogan and Prosecuting Attorney Turner in the presence of a court stenographer:

What Nye Disclosed.

"Lobbyists and interests who for years have been corrupting legislatures, named. These include men well known in business and politics, one a state official.

One lobbyist, who had a specific following of both senators and representatives, with Dr. Nye at their head, named.

Dr. Nye's own income from graft in the legislature totaled $10,000 a year.

Statements of Burns detectives fully corroborated.

Names of persons who raised big defense fund for indicted solons, told, also those maintaining Diegel family while senate sergeant-at-arms is in prison.

Names of several assemblymen not under indictment who participated in graft, made known.

A grand jury investigation is to be made forthwith. The expose of 1911, it is said, will be no more sensational than that expected when the grand jury reports.

Exposure Complete.

Dr. Nye's story, which was dictated to the attorney general and Prosecutor Turner and taken down by an official court stenographer, is said to be a complete expose of bribery in both houses of the assembly and, not only implicates the solons already under indictment or who have been convicted, but also those who have been practically controlling legislation for years. He not only furnished the names of such persons, but the interests they represented, and promised to stand by state's attorneys in securing their conviction.

TOOL COMPANY SELLS OUT.

Springfield, O.—After suspending operations for a week, the machinery in the plant of the Owens Machine Tool company was sold at public auction by the Michael Tauber company of Chicago. It is estimated that the sale brought between $16,000 and $17,000. It is understood that the company's inability to hire skilled mechanics to compete with larger concerns in the same line of business was the primary cause of the embarrassment.

BOY'S FALL SERIOUS.

Hamden, O.—While engaged in gathering nuts with some companions near Ollicapleville, west of here, 18-year-old Robert Meyers fell a distance of 20 feet from a hickory tree, fracturing his left leg so severely that amputation was necessary. The lad's home is in Chillicothe.

WILL PUBLISH A REPORT.

Portsmouth, O.—Ensign Ennis, at the head of the local Salvation Army, has announced that he proposes to publish a monthly statement in the daily press, giving an account of every penny received and expended. He states that inasmuch as the public contributed to the welfare of the army, they had a right to know what use was being made of the same. Ensign Ennis is known as the Billy Sunday of the Salvation Army. He never fails to hold a crowd.

VERDICT AWARDED.

Portsmouth, O.—Judge Blair's jury in the case of Louisa Rockwell against the Norfolk & Western Railway company, after deliberating one hour and a half, awarded a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $100 damages and $300 for the maintenance of a ditch. The plaintiff sued for $1,000 damages for the alleged stopping of the natural drainage of her farm near Lucasville, by the defendant through the making of a fill, when the line was double tracked.

STRODE GIVES VIEWS

Grocers and Butchers Elect Directors and Officers at Dayton.

Dayton, O.—State Dairy and Food Commissioner S. E. Strode declared before the annual convention of the Ohio Retail Grocers and Butchers' Association that the grocers are not responsible for the high cost of living, but that it is due to the manipulation of gigantic combinations and to the fact that production is not keeping pace with increased consumption.

Directors for the coming year were elected and they in turn elected the officers. The following were chosen directors: D. E. Miller, Cincinnati; C. W. Messersmith, [illegible]; J. F. Kreigenhafer, Hamilton; J. F. Schurider, Cleveland; W. H. Cook, Springfield; H. F. Dursing, Youngstown; L. M. Barth, Alliance; J. A. Ulmer, Toledo; W. D. Foster, Dayton; E. O. Snyder, Columbus; A. L. Munch, Fremont. Officers were elected as follows: President, J. A. Ulmer; first vice president, C. W. Messersmith; second vice president, E. O. Snyder; secretary, W. H. Cook; treasurer, D. E. Miller.

FAMILY HAVE NARROW ESCAPE.

Are Cut Off From Doors of Burning Home and are Saved by Night Pumper.

Portsmouth, O.—C. & O. Freight Agent Allen Pack and family, of South Portsmouth, were compelled to climb through a window of their home to escape being burned to death. They had no time to secure clothing, and had it not been for the alarm given them by J. Smith, a night pumper at the C. & O. water tank near by, Mr. Pack and family's escape might have been impossible.

Mr. Smith saw the smoke and quickly gave the alarm and aroused Mr. Pack and family, who were shut off from the doors by burning rooms. Mr. Smith assisted them in getting out of a rear window.

The fire is thought to have been caused by the explosion of a lamp, which was in the front room of the cottage. The interior of the home was gutted by the flames, and nothing was saved.

WANTS INTO CINCY

Hamilton, O.—Three suits were filed here by means of which the Hamilton Home Telephone Co. seeks to gain admission to Cincinnati. The suits are brought against the public service commission of Ohio, the American District Telegraph and Telephone Co., and the Cincinnati and Suburban Telephone Co. The latter serves Bell patrons in Hamilton. The Home Co. asked the court to set aside a former finding of the public service commission and to decree that the defendants must maintain for the plaintiff company a continuous service into Cincinnati.

MILLIONAIRE AIDS HOSPITAL.

Newark, O.—Edward H. Everett, millionaire glass bottle manufacturer, delivered to the trustees of the Newark City hospital his deed for the old Everett homestead in this city. The sum of $50,000 was raised last spring, which, with an additional gift of $10,000 by Mrs. Everett, will be used for the construction of a new hospital. Plans have been drawn for the new buildings.

FALLS DEAD IN JAIL.

Springfield, O.—Placed in the county jail so that he could not recklessly spend his wealth, Otto Harper, 35 years old, of South Charleston, fell dead of apoplexy. Harper was placed behind the bars on complaint of Thomas Harper, a brother, who said that Otto was not himself and was getting ready to "blow in" his coin. The money, $15,000, was left him by his parent.

FOR COLLEGE HILL CHURCH.

Dayton, O.—The Miami branch of Christian Endeavor unions, which closed their annual convention at the Riverside U. B. church, donated $1,000 for the establishment of a new United Brethren church at College Hill, Hamilton county, O.

TWO NEWSPAPERS MERGE.

Marysville, O.—The Plain City Dealer, an independent paper, owned and conducted for 25 years by Charles Horn, has been absorbed by the proprietors of the Plain City Advocate. Horn will engage in newspaper work at Barberton, O.

CANDIDATE KILLED BY TRAIN.

Greenville, Ohio.—Thomas Wallace, 45 years old, Republican candidate for Sheriff of Drake county, was killed by a passenger train on the Dayton and Union railroad. Wallace was crossing a trestle when killed. He was thrown into a river 30 feet below.

WOMAN BURNED TO DEATH.

Osborn, O.—As a result of attempting to carry a lighted oil stove from her home near Osborn, Mrs. Solomon Beyl was fatally burned, her death occurring shortly after the accident. Mrs. Elizabeth Kilhafer was ironing in the Beyl home when the tank to the gasoline stove exploded. The two women attempted to carry the stove out of the house and had almost reached a gate when Mrs. Beyl's clothing caught fire. She was frightfully burned.

FIRST TIME IN THIS COUNTRY.

Springfield, O.—Thirteen electric cars, driven by ladies from Dayton, Columbus and Cleveland, and containing in all thirty-six occupants, participated in the sociability run from Dayton to Springfield and return, the event being held under the auspices of the News League of Ohio, and being the first event of its specific nature ever attempted in the United States. But two hours' time was consumed in the trip to Springfield over the country roads.

WILSON PLAN WISE

DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE THE APOSTLE OF REFORM, NOT OF REVOLUTION.

HE SEES MONSTROUS ABUSES

Would Correct Them by Cutting Off the Vicious Tariff Favors Which Have Built Up Monopolies and Trusts

Gov. Wilson is the apostle of reform, not of revolution.

Gov. Wilson believes that the constitution of the United States has been misconstrued and perverted, not outgrown.

Gov. Wilson is the only candidate before the people today who at once realizes that reforms are necessary, and who proposes rational and constitutional means for effecting these reforms.

There are great, there are monstrous abuses, even in this free land.

The government of the United States has done many things that it ought not to have done, and has left undone many things which it should have strained every nerve to do.

The government of the United States has built up bloated fortunes, and granted to favored manufacturers the power to tax the people, and at the same time, the government has failed—as every government always fails—to keep in proper subjection the monopolies it has created.

What shall be done to get rid of these abuses?

President Taft says in substance that nothing much need be done, and that whatever is done need not be done in a hurry. Next century will do quite as well as now.

Mr. Roosevelt says in substance that everything must be done, and that the only way to do it is to throw the constitution in the scrap-heap; and make him practical dictator of the land, with the trusts and monopolies as his associates and counselors.

Gov. Wilson makes neither of these blunders.

Gov. Wilson says that the first thing to be done in correcting abuses is to cut off the favors which nourish those abuses—the vicious tariff favors which have built up monopolies and trusts.

There is nothing revolutionary about that. But from the way every trust in the land is rallying to the support of either Taft or Roosevelt, you can see that the trust magnates think Gov. Wilson's plan is likely to be effective.

Gov. Wilson says that competition is a better regulator of prices than a dozen government bureaus. He proposes to restore competition by smashing the illegal combinations which have killed competition.

Again, here is nothing revolutionary—but listen to the way the sugar trust, and the steel trust, and the woolen trust, and all the other trusts are screaming against Wilson!

Gov. Wilson knows that the general form of our government needs no changing. The agencies of government need to be changed in spirit. They need to be taken out of the hands of the interests and put in the hands of the people.

Gov. Wilson offers himself as the people's agent.

Gov. Wilson has proven in New Jersey that an earnest, clear-headed man at the head of a government can get reforms without upsetting business or destroying constitutions.

Gov. Wilson is the bearer of reforms which make revolution needless and impossible. Elect Gov. Wilson.

TARIFF AND LIVING COST

Consumers Are Forced to Pay Fully Two Thousand Million Dollars Yearly to Trusts.

Byron W. Holt, a recognized authority on economics, estimates that the tariff trust tax on the people of this country amounts to $108 per family per year.

These figures have never been successfully challenged. If they are correct they mean that the consumers of the United States are forced by the tariff to pay fully two thousand million dollars per year to trusts.

In the debates in congress a somewhat smaller figure is given. There the total cost of the tariff is fixed at about two billions of dollars per year, of which the government gets a little over $300,000,000.

This leaves the tariff trust tax on the people at the modest figure of $1,700,000,000 per year.

They extort from the people of the United States every year a sum nearly twice as great as that which was levied on France by Germany at the close of a bitter and successful war.

Every dollar added to the coffers of the trusts is paid by an increase in the cost of living.

The only way to abolish the trust tax is to give Governor Wilson and the Democratic party a commission to revise the tariff.

WILSON'S RECORD.

Governor Wilson has worked to secure the "social and industrial justice" which Theodore Roosevelt merely talks about.

During Governor Wilson's administration in New Jersey, the following laws have been placed on the statute books of that state:

A law providing for fire escapes and amending the factory laws of New Jersey to further protect the workers.

A law providing for sanitation in bake shops, and licensing the same.

A law to protect the safety and health of foundry workers.

A law increasing the number of factory inspectors for the better enforcement of other factory laws.

A law prohibiting the employment of children in mercantile establishments during school hours, and prohibiting night work for children.

A law prohibiting the employment of young boys as telephone and telegraph messengers at night in large cities. The minimum age for night messengers in cities of the first class is fixed at twenty-one years, in cities of the second class at eighteen years.

An employer's liability and compensation law.

A law regulating and licensing employment agencies.

A law providing for an eight-hour day on state, county and municipal work.

This is only a partial record of the achievements of the Woodrow Wilson administration in New Jersey in the line of sociological progress alone.

In less than two years as governor Woodrow Wilson accomplished ten times more actual reform than Theodore Roosevelt put into effect during more than seven years as president.—Chicago Journal.

Progressive Robbery.

There is some cool air left in Kansas yet. Mr. Harlan said in Topeka:

"The crook who steals your watch while he sings 'Onward Christian Soldier,' does not represent the Kansas idea of progress. Roosevelt battles for the Lord at Armageddon, and for the devil in Kansas and California. He preaches honesty and sincerity, and practices the methods of Fagin, Uriah Heep and Bill Sykes. He would rob the Republicans of Kansas of a chance to express their choice at the polls. He calls it progress. I call it stealing. What do you call it?"

"Stealing!" shouted 5,000 Kansans according to the press reports.

Posing as Providence.

The full page advertisements in the magazines by the Republican national committee attribute the present prosperity "to the careful nursing of President Taft." And yet some ignorant people here in the west had been attributing it to the favorable weather and the huge crops.

His Clear Economic Vision.

At every turn of the argument against his plan of legalizing trust monopoly for bureaucratic regulation Mr. Roosevelt cries out upon it as equally destructive of the policy of railroad regulation.

To him a railroad is no more monopolistic by position or nature or limitation of supply than a steel mill, a telephone system no more than a cotton factory, a city water or gas plant no more than a harvester plant.

And to him, therefore, must be accorded the proud distinction of being the only man in the world possessing so clear a vision.

Democratic Assurance.

The progressive irritability of Roosevelt and the increasing confidence and complacency of Taft are both good portents. They will undoubtedly divide the Republican strength and insure Democratic triumph. What better hap could come to the people of the United States?—Philadelphia Record.

BRAINS FIRST WITH M'GRAW

Giants' Leader Wants No Player Who Doesn't Think Rapidly—Illustrative Excerpt Recited.

The importance of brains in a baseball player is made much of by Manager John J. McGraw of the New York Giants, in the first of a series of stories he has written for the New Story Magazine. An illustrative excerpt follows:

"The men who plays ball under me must have brains. I don't mean to say that the green player, a diamond in the rough, has no chance with me. Few green players know the finer points of the game, 'inside ball.' If they have brains, though, they learn. If they have [illegible] they are willing to unlearn a lot of stuff that went well in the company they just left, but couldn't pass in big company. Brains stick out all over a player. I believe I can spot them quicker than the legs and 'whip.' One sure thing, I look harder for them.

"I can't describe what it is. You know that at the crack of the bat the infielder tosses up his hand. The ball sticks in it. Consciously he has not even seen the ball leave the bat, much less coming toward him. But the ball sticks in his glove. The base runner stealing second does not see the catcher whipping the ball down to second base. He slides. He knows which way to slide so as to be farthest from the baseman as he stoops to tag him. Last year a ball player went from first to home on a short single that was handled perfectly. What is it? Instinct some call it, luck others. It's brains. Some day that wonderful mental apparatus will be laid bare, exposed. Then we can follow the train of thought that makes such things possible. Call it instinct, for want of a better name, but never luck. I'll stick to my definition—brains.

"Never yet have I called a man down because of a playing error. Never yet have I failed to call a man down for a thinking error. That same error, through a freak combination of circumstances, may win the game once. But let the player go unrebuked because of its winning the game and, repeated, it will lose nine out of ten other games. The percentage isn't there."

GRAIN OF SALT WILL HELP

Stories of Importance of Signals Exaggerated by Writers—Some Yarns Are Made Readable.

A story has been going the rounds of the papers lately to the effect that the several clubs of the big league have been trying to emulate the early example of the Athletics in studying out the signals of the other clubs. It used to be the opinion that Connie Mack had his men trained so that they were constantly watching for the slightest indication of a signal on the part of the other players, and that the inside facts thus discovered were of inestimable value to the Athletics. It is now contended that many of the other teams are doing the same thing, and that it is as much a part of the education of a baseball player to be alert and keen to discover the other fellows' signals as it is to play the physical part of the game.

There is a good deal of bunk about all this signal stuff and wonderful stories of inside play and all that sort of thing, says the Milwaukee Sentinel. Unquestionably a good deal of the routine of baseball is done after some signal, but there is not nearly so much of it as some writers try to make the public believe. Neither is there very much opportunity to grab off the signals of another team.

It does very well to write press agent stories about this sort of thing, and it must be admitted that they are reasonably readable, but most of them want to be taken with a large size grain of salt.

AIDED THE NEW YORK GIANTS

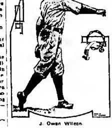
Pittsburg Outfielder Secures Thirty-Four Triples During Season, Seven From Chicago.

J. Owen Wilson, whose services were acquired by the Pirates through the medium of the draft five years ago, is said to be the chap who helped the Giants to the flag this season. He has ripped off thirty-four triples this season, seven of them off the Cub pitchers.



J. Owen Wilson.

Cubs Get Another Southpaw.

Another lefthander has joined the Cubs. The newcomer, Ensign Cottrell, hails from the Scranton club of the New York State league, the same organization that previously boasted the services of George Pierce. Cottrell's record for the season reads 18 victories and 11 defeats. He is a product of Syracuse university and was a member of the Pittsburgh club for awhile in the 1911 race.

Highlanders Get Crack Pitcher.

The New York Highlanders have picked up a great performer in Heine Schultz, who pitched for the Savannah team during the last season.

Another Trial for McKechnie.

Bill McKechnie, the former Pirate, is to get another trial in the big show, having been drafted from St. Paul by the Boston Nationals.

NATIONALS CAME NEAR POSSESSING [illegible]

Walter Johnson, the "Terrible Swede."

Where would the Washington team be today with Walter Johnson and Joe Wood, the two greatest pitchers in the game, both working on Griffith's pitching staff?

It was fate, or rather fate in the disguise of poor business ability, that prevented these two twirling stars from being team-mates on the Washington club.

In the spring of 1908, the Nationals played an exhibition game in Kansas City and Joe Cantillon watched a young pitcher strike out seven of the nine batsmen that faced him in the last three innings. The name of this young player was Joe Wood. Cantillon made arrangements to secure Wood right then and there. The Washington manager was given to understand that when the time came to dispose of Wood, the National club would be given first chance.

Cantillon allowed the prospective deal to go at that and during the summer Boston purchased Wood without Cantillon ever being consulted or given a chance to bid for Wood.

With Wood and Johnson on the pitching staff the Washington club, with its present field and batting strength, probably would have won the American League pennant.

And how sweet that world's series would have looked to Griffith with that dependable pair in harness.

Joe Wood of Boston.

NOTES of the DIAMOND

Welchonce led the Southern league in batting this year with an average of .331.

Frank Chance talks right out from the shoulder when he has anything to say at all times.

One hundred and fifty-seven runs were made in the New York State league during the last season.

The Cincinnati bugs all pull for Bob Bescher to get to first so that they can see him run around the bases.

The Detroit club has purchased Catcher Hoodasu, drafted by the Washington American league club, for $4,000.

The Athletics will take a Cuban trip this fall, leaving for Havana on October 26, to be gone about three weeks.

Bill Donovan is the latest candidate for Bill Dahlen's berth in Brooklyn. "Wild Bill" is now steering the Providence team.

President McAleer of the Boston Red Sox was a member of the Cleveland team when it won the Temple cup series in 1895.

Jim O'Rourke, in catching the final game in the Connecticut league, marked up his thirty-fifth consecutive season as a ball player.

Horace Fogel is in favor of a contract to pay his young pitcher by piece work. Horace must think a ball team is just like a sweatshop.

It now develops that the Giants won the pennant because they won the most most games. They're making new discoveries every day.

Taylor, Indianapolis pitcher in the American association, had a lovely season. He worked in nine games and didn't get a hit or a win.

Although the fans like to encourage a youngster in learning they do not care much about having to sit through three or four hours of game to see him do it.

Tris Speaker, the all-round sensation of the year, unlike Cobb, does not play to the grandstand in going after the ball, but leaves out all the frills and fancy work.

Umpire Dineen states as his official opinion that the Highlanders will go some next year. He believes that the team as it stands today is not greatly inferior to the Red Sox.

Winning the National league pennant this year with the Giants, McGraw will equal the late Frank G. Selee's enviable record of managing five National league champions.

ST. PAUL WAS BASEBALL FAN

Players From Four Major League Teams Hear Divine Liken Game to Biblical Incidents.

The Rev. Dr. Christian F. Reisner, pastor of Grace Methodist church, said in a baseball sermon on "You're Out," the other Sunday evening in New York, that the "Bible is the book of rules for the game of life," and he was sure that St. Paul would have been a fan had the game been played in his day.

Dr. Reisner went among baseball men to get material for his discourse and talked with 40 players. He also found time to read Matty's famous "Pitching in a Pinch." It was estimated that more than 1,000 persons were in the church, including several Giants, Dodgers, Pirates and Cardinals. Dr. Reisner said:

"Every baseball player must be careful of his morals. No gritty player wants to be put out. That is why he wants to fight the umpire. Many get put out of the playing permanently when it might be avoided. That is equally true in life's game.

"St. Paul was interested in all athletic sports of his day, and used them as illustrations to carry his truth. He feared that after preaching to others he might be a castaway, that is am 'out' in the end. He played to win. That is what we must do."

"Being put out," the clergyman said, "is due to overanxiety."

Cleveland Gets Liebold.

The Cleveland club announces that the national commission has awarded it Outfielder Liebold of the Milwaukee American association team. Prior to the annual drawing Cleveland put in drafts for Liebold and Chappelle of Milwaukee. The Chicago Nationals drew Shortstop Russell Blackburne of Milwaukee in the draft. They canceled the draft and he was awarded to the Chicago Americans, who also canceled. Cleveland, next in line, took Liebold.

Clark Succeeds Duffy.

Harry Clark, third baseman and one of the oldest members of the Milwaukee American Association baseball club, was appointed manager of the team to succeed Hugh Duffy, resigned, by Mrs. Agnes Havenor, president and owner of the club.

Stallings to Boston.

With the International league season over it is unofficially announced that George Stallings has signed a five-year contract to manage the Boston Nationals.

Collins Makes Record.

Eddie Collins established a new record for the American league, pilfering six bases in one day. This was off Catcher Kocher of Detroit.

THE LATEST GUESS ON THE GREAT CONTEST

The Cincinnati Enquirer and other associated great newspapers from Boston to San Francisco are making an effort such as was never made before to forecast the result of the November election says the Youngstown Vindicator.

The results published are of unusual interest. The general summary shows Wilson with 369 electoral votes though only 266 are necessary to elect. Taft is given but 22 votes, Roosevelt 56 and 84 are classed as doubtful.

Taft is given the votes of only New Hampshire, Nevada, Oregon, Utah, Vermont and Wyoming. This is an amazing showing and will probably prove wide of the mark. Roosevelt gets his votes from Illinois, Michigan, North Dakota and Washington or but four states in all. The states classed as doubtful are Delaware, Idaho, Iowa, Montana, New Mexico, Pennsylvania, South Dakota and Wisconsin.

When we turn to the special reports published from each state plenty of room is found for differing with the result in some states given above. For instance the report from Iowa indicates the regular Republicans declaring for Wilson in large numbers in their determination to defeat Roosevelt which condition the report concludes "is almost certain to bring about the election of a Democratic Governor and Legislature as well as to carry Wilson through." Wisconsin seems to be quite clearly leaning to Taft, the Democrats being thrown into confusion by an unfortunate nomination for Governor, and New

Democratic Judicial Nominees.

The Herald has had several requests from readers to publish the names of the Democratic nominees for judicial offices upon the State, District and County tickets and they are given in the table below. While the following candidates were nominated by regular Democratic primaries or conventions, their names will appear upon the Non-partisan Judicial ticket, alongside the tickets carrying the nominees for National, State and County offices. For the information of voters the names of the Democratic Judicial nominees will be published from week to week in The Herald until the November election:

For Supreme Judges
J. FOSTER WILKIN
W. E. SCOFIELD
OSCAR NEWMAN

For Common Pleas Judge
A. J. TRUNKEY,
Of Geneva.

For Circuit Judge
BRITTON JOHNSON,
Of Kent.

For Probate Judge
M. A. TUTTLE,
Of Painesville.

Mexico seems safe for Wilson. Among the surprises recorded is the general agreement that Kansas, Massachusetts, California and New York will give their votes to Wilson.

In Indiana Wilson is showing much greater strength than Ralston, the Democratic candidate for Governor and Beveridge is showing such gains from both Democrats and Republicans that he is likely to win unless the regular Republicans desert their candidate Durbin as now seems likely. The greatest bitterness prevails between the two factions and all kinds of charges of personal unfitness are being indulged in.

In Ohio the reports show Wilson with more votes than Taft and Roosevelt combined and that the two latter are running neck and neck, with Taft so far very slightly in the lead.

The net change of Republicans to Wilson in Ohio in a poll of almost 11,000 is 965. If this ratio were to continue through the twelve hundred thousand votes likely to be cast in the state Wilson would have a net gain over the normal Democratic vote of 105,000, or amply sufficient to carry the state if the Republican vote were united since every such change counts for two votes. The vote polled on Governor is not so large as on President but it shows Cox with a lean lead of a thousand over the combined votes of Brown and Garford in a total of 8,700, which if continued through the total vote would give him a plurality of over 125,000 over either of the Republican candidates. This Ohio vote is largely taken in Southern Ohio where Garford is little known and he is a bad second to Taft, a condition which will doubtless be changed by the vote in the northern part of the state where Garford is strong. However there is no reason to think that the condition with respect to Cox will change. Such is the best "dope" obtainable on the situation just one month before the decisive day.

BUYING ELECTIONS

Mr. Bliss, a son of former Republican Treasurer Bliss, says that the republican campaign fund amounted to three and a half millions in 1896 and three millions in 1900. Now, when the public finds out where the money came from and why it was given it will be easier to understand why the predatory interests had free rein during those days.

If Greece and Servia go to war there may be no one left in this country to operate the shoe-shining parlors.

The Socialist candidate for vice president is in favor of confiscating farm land. Of course he will get a big vote in the rural districts.

More straw votes are being taken this year probably than in any previous presidential campaign and the reason for this is obvious. Because of the third term candidacy of a remarkable personality the element of doubt is larger and no accurate estimate is possible of the effect the new party will have upon the vote of the two great political parties. Hence the practice of polling groups of men whether on railroad trains in shops and offices or by the mailing of postal cards to the readers of newspapers is undertaken in order to get a line on the voting intentions of the people, and to discover how far former political affiliations are to be disregarded. Out of all these statements of preferences among voters as between Taft, Wilson and Roosevelt, one thing is strikingly manifest—the strength of the democratic candidate for president.

Why Deep Streams Run Still.

Deep streams run still—and why? Not because there are no obstacles, but because they altogether overflow these stones or rocks round which the shallow stream has to make its noisy way.—William Smith.

ALL KNOW WHERE JIM COX STANDS

THE DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE MAKES CONFIDANTS OF THE PEOPLE.

A PROGRESSIVE PROGRAM

A New Era of Great Progress in Store When Congressman Cox Is Inaugurated Governor—Legislative Program Embraces Most Important of Modern Governmental Policies

Congressman James M. Cox of Dayton has adopted a new plan to conduct his campaign for governor—one that conforms to the most modern thought as to how a candidate for public office shall conduct himself.

Instead of trying to slip into office by false pretenses or by carrying water on both shoulders, as the old time boss-controlled candidate did, Congressman Cox is making confidants of the people. He discusses all pending public questions, declares plainly what his position is on each, what he thinks ought to be done and what he proposes to see is done when he is chosen governor. In his travels the Democratic gubernatorial candidate tells the county organizations he will call upon them to help him redeem party platform pledges should that become necessary and he is going to conduct a "round table" where experts in different lines will meet him and exchange views concerning important legislation.

The new administration will put through 20 big reform measures, the largest and most progressive platform ever put forth by a party in this state. Here are some of the most important:

A short ballot law, which shall abolish state offices created by the legislature and the submission to the people of a constitutional amendment to abolish all the so-called "constitutional" state offices except the supreme court, and make them appointive by the governor.

A state-wide primary for all state, county and municipal officers, United States senators and delegates to national political conventions.

An amendment that will compel employers to contribute to the workmen's compensation fund.

A law for the removal from office of public officials, including state officers, judges and members of the legislature found guilty of misconduct.

An immediate revaluation of public utility properties so that rates shall be based upon actual value and not upon "watered stock."

Laws providing a tax on inheritances, incomes and franchises. Legislation abolishing the present state tax levy, giving municipalities home rule in taxation affairs, reducing the hours of work for employed women, restricting still further the employment of children, providing separate ballots for the election of state and national officers, making a state levy for good roads, creating a liquor license system that will call for rigid enforcement, making state experimental farms more beneficial and granting municipalities every facility conveyed to them by the home rule amendment recently adopted.

Then there is to be judicial reform legislation and a new penitentiary, with about 1,510 acres of fertile land surrounding it, prisoners to be employed on the farm and at other pursuits where the biggest item is labor cost, prisoners to be paid and the difference between the cost of their subsistence and their earnings to be turned over to their families or other dependents.

An era of great progress is in store for the commonwealth when Jimmie Cox is inaugurated governor and a Democratic legislature is seated to work in harmony with him.

Keeping Air Fresh.

A good way to keep the air of a room fresh and slightly perfumed is to place a jar in some inconspicuous place in the room and put in the jar a small block of ammonia, over which pour some ordinary cologne water. This makes a faint, pleasant odor of which one is hardly conscious.

Turn to Motor Vehicles.

The advent of motor vehicles in Madras is of comparatively recent date, but within a very brief interval they have to a great extent supplanted carriages drawn by horses, which formerly constituted the chief means of transportation among the European contingent.

POLLS SHOW THAT WILSON WILL WIN

Two of the largest and most influential Republican papers in the United States, while supporting President Taft in his campaign, practically concede the election of Governor Wilson. The two papers are the New York Herald and the Chicago Record-Herald. The publications have been conducting a nation-wide poll and, judging from the results obtained, Governor Wilson will sweep the country.

The Herald has been carrying on straw votes for more than a score of years, and its canvass in past years have always been verified in November.

The New York Sun, which is also supporting Taft, prints the following review of the Herald's efforts.

"The Herald publishes its first installment of its country-wide review of the presidential situation, and its indications are that Wilson is easily leading both Taft and Roosevelt, with Taft running third, according to the straw ballots. More than 24,000 test ballots were taken in various parts of the country.

"Of the total straw ballots taken in all regions, the result was as follows:

"Wilson, 11,164; Roosevelt, 7,147; Taft, 4,784; Debs, 1,800."

Making Reproof Effective.

Being to advise, or reprehend anyone, consider whether it ought to be in public or in private, presently or at some other time, and in what terms to do it; and in reproving show no signs of choler, but do it with sweetness and mildness.—George Washington.

Comforting Religion.

People like their religion to be what they call comforting. I want my religion to give me self-respect and courage. This sort of faith really overcomes the power of death.—Bernard Shaw.

Ordinance No. 224

An ordinance granting to The Cleveland, Painesville and Eastern Railroad Company the right to maintain poles and wires thereon and electrical appliances thereto attached now in the streets of the Village of Fairport, owned by it under purchase from The United Light & Power Company and to erect and maintain new poles, string wires thereon and attach electrical appliances thereto on and along the streets, alleys and public grounds of the Village for the purpose of transmitting electric current for power, heating and lighting thereover.

That whereas by ordinance of the Village of Fairport passed August 22, 1899, the right, franchise, privilege and authority was given and granted to the Commercial Electric Company of Painesville, Lake County, Ohio, its successors and assigns to erect poles, string wires thereon and attach electrical appliances thereto on and along the streets and alleys of the Village of Fairport for the purpose of transmitting electric current thereover for power, heating and lighting and furnishing the same to the Village and the inhabitants thereof upon certain conditions therein mentioned and

Whereas, The Cleveland, Painesville & Eastern Railroad Company by assignment, has succeeded to all of the rights, franchises, privileges and authority granted to said, The Commercial Electric Company under ordinance and is now the owner and in possession of the line of poles, wires and appliances erected and maintained under said aforesaid ordinance, and

Whereas, said The Cleveland, Painesville & Eastern Railroad Company is willing and proposes to reconstruct and extend its said poles, wires, appliances and equipment in said Village used for the purpose of transmitting electric current for power, heating and lighting, and to that end supply the Village and its inhabitants with better service in power, heating and lighting, and

Whereas, it is the desire of the Village of Fairport and its inhabitants to procure the extentions and reconstruction by said The Cleveland, Painesville and Eastern Railroad Company of its said lighting, heating and power system in the Village.

Now, therefore be it ordained by the Village of Fairport (first party) that the right, franchise, privilege and authority be and they are hereby given, granted and conferred upon and invested in The Cleveland Painesville & Eastern Railroad Company, (second party), its successors and assigns as follows to-wit

Section 1. The party of the first part hereby grants to the party of the second part its successors and assigns the right, franchise, privilege and authority to maintain the line of poles and wires and electrical appliances therewith connected now located in the streets, alleys and public places of the Village of Fairport under the authority granted by ordinance No 48, passed August 22, 1899 and the further right, franchise, privilege and authority to repair, reconstruct and extend such line of poles, wires and electrical appliances thereto and therewith connected and to erect such further and other poles and structures and to string thereon and thereover such further and other wires, electrical equipment and appliances as may be necessary for the use and purposes herein recited and defined upon, along and over the streets, alleys and public grounds of the Village of Fairport for the purpose of transmitting electric current throughout the Village to be used by the Village and its inhabitants for power, lighting and heating upon the following terms and conditions to-wit

Section 2. New pole lines, wiring equipment and appliances shall be constructed in a first class manner in regard to material and workmanship, the poles to be cedar, to be straight, sound timber and of proper length and to be set in the ground not less than four and one-half feet and the location of poles shall be subject to the approval of the Village Council or any committee or person appointed by them.

All wires shall be of the best material and have weather proof insulation and all joints and connections shall be insulated, kept and maintained at all times in good repair. No service wires shall be connected to the lighting and power wires in any building until the wiring in said building shall have introduced in the main circuit feeder circuit some approved automatic device that will interrupt any excess of current passing into said building over said service wires.

Section 3. During the first ten years from the passage of this ordinance said grantee shall be permitted to charge not to exceed eleven (11) cents per Kilowatt hour for current furnished any consumer in the Village of Fairport for lighting and shall have the right to charge each consumer one dollar ($1.00) per month when the consumer's bill for any single month is less than one dollar ($1.00) as shown by the meter register and provided further that said grantee throughout the term of this grant shall give to each consumer a rebate of two (2) cents per Kilowatt hour from his monthly lighting bill when the same is paid on or before ten (10) days after rendition of bill. Said Village shall through its proper officers have the right at all times to test the current furnished to ascertain whether the same is up to the proper voltage. At the expiration of ten (10) years from the passage of this ordinance the council of the Village of Fairport shall have the right to regulate by resolution the rates to be charged by said grantee for electric current furnished consumers for the ensuing ten years and shall have the same right at the expiration of each ten years thereafter provided that the rate so fixed shall not be less than is charged for electric current in other villages similarly situated.

Section 4. Said grantee shall be permitted to charge not to exceed five (5) cents per Kilowatt hour for current furnished any consumer in the Village of Fairport for motor power, and shall have the right to charge each consumer one dollar ($1.00) per month for every horse power in motor capacity connected for service to said grantee's lines when the consumer's power bill for any single month as shown by the meter register is less than the minimum monthly charge as figured on the basis of one dollar ($1.00) per horse power per month, but in no instance must this minimum be less than three dollars ($3.00) per month. In no case however, shall the price for current exceed that which is charged by other plants for the same service in adjacent Villages similarly situated, and shall light the Council room free of charge, the Village to properly wire the same; said grantee shall furnish free of costs to said Village the necessary electric current for lighting eight 16 Candle Power incandescent lamps in the band-stand in the public park when the same is used for band concerts or public meeting and current without cost for one 16 Candle Power lamp or its equivalent, to be burned all night every night in said bandstand and one 16 Candle Power lamp in fire engine room at all hours when needed.

Section 5. Should any person or persons desire to move a building and it would become necessary to go under any of the wires of the grantee, then the grantee shall, upon proper notice given, raise its wires for the free passage of the structure, and the person or persons moving said structure shall pay to the grantee the actual cost of raising or removing and replacing said wires. Time of notice to the grantee shall be twenty-four (24) hours.

Section 6. Said grantee shall give twenty-four (24) hour service on all its lighting and power lines excepting such lines as may be used for lighting streets, avenues, alleys, lanes, squares and public places of the Village of Fairport.

Section 7. Said grantee shall furnish all meters necessary for measuring the current consumption of each consumer and shall provide all service wires necessary for carrying the current from its lines to the consumer's residence or place of business, where the distance between the said points is not to exceed one hundred and fifty (150) feet. The consumer shall pay to the grantee the actual cost of all labor and material needed for extending a service connection a greater distance than one hundred and fifty (150) feet.

Section 8. Said grantee, its successors and assigns shall hold said Village of Fairport free and harmless from any and all claims for damages of whatsoever nature that may arise by reason of the construction and operation of the grant herein given.

Section 9. This ordinance shall be accepted in writing by said, The Cleveland Painesville & Eastern Railroad Company within ten (10) days from and after its passage.

Section 10. The life of this grant and privilege, shall be for a term of twenty-five (25) years, and shall take effect and be in force, from and after its passage, legal publication and acceptance in writing by the Railroad Company.

Passed Sept. 24, 1912.

Ordinance No. 49

Be it ordained by the Council of the Village of Richmond, State of Ohio,

Section 1. That the Mayor and Clerk be and they are hereby authorized and directed to enter into the following contract on behalf of said Village:

Contract made and entered into this ............ day of October 1912, by and between the Village of Richmond, a municipal corporation of Lake County, State of Ohio, party of the first part, and The Cleveland, Painesville & Eastern Railroad Company, its successors and assigns party of the second part.

WITNESSETH:

Whereas, The Cleveland, Painesville & Eastern Railroad Company has heretofore been duly granted the right and authority to place and construct poles, posts, wires and other fixtures in the streets, avenues, alleys, lanes, squares and public places of the Village of Richmond, in so far as the same may be essential for the purpose of furnishing electricity for light, power and heating purposes, and

Whereas, The Village of Richmond desires to provide for the lighting of its streets, avenues, alleys, lanes, squares and public places,

Now, therefore, in consideration of the mutual covenants herein contained, the parties hereto agree as follows:—

Section 2. The said, Cleveland, Painesville & Eastern Railroad Company agrees to furnish to the said Village of Richmond for the period of ten (10) years from and after the first day of December A. D. 1912, not less than twenty Tungsten lights of the latest and most improved pattern of not less than 80 Candle Power maintained and kept in first class condition, at such places and points as may be designated by the proper authorities for said Village.

Section 3. That said Cleveland, Painesville & Eastern Railroad Company agrees to furnish and install such additional Tungsten Lights of not less than 80 Candle Power at such points in the streets, avenues, alleys, lanes, squares and public places of the Village of Richmond, as may be ordered by the Council of said Village, provided however, that such additional lighting is a continuation at regular intervals of not less than four hundred (400) feet of the system of lighting provided for in Article 1 of this contract. If during the term of this contract the number of lights supplied to said Village under this contract is increased to twenty-five (25) or more then thereafter the price of all lights supplied under this contract shall be twenty-four (24) dollars per light per year.

Section 4. Commencing on the said first day of December 1912 and continuing from said period such lights as provided for in this contract shall be kept burning each day on what is known as the all night moonlight schedule which is all hours of the night every night except when there is a moonlight, intending thereby to operate said lights at all hours of every night during the dark of the moon, and on such nights during the light of the moon as the sky is sufficiently overcast or cloudy to render the light of the moon inefficient to properly light the streets. It is agreed by and between the parties hereto, that said Village at its option by giving thirty days notice may substitute for the aforesaid all night schedule any standard schedule of street lighting of an equivalent number of hours of service.

Section 5. Said Village through its proper officers shall have the right at all time to make tests of the lights furnished to ascertain whether same is in accordance with this contract.

Section 6. The Village of Richmond through its proper officers, shall have the right and authority to order the change of location of any of said Tungsten lights during the term of this contract providing however the change in location is made in accordance with the provisions of Articles 3 of this contract, and the said Cleveland Painesville & Eastern Railroad Company shall cause said lights to be moved in accordance with the instruction of the Council as soon after they are received as possible. Said charges for moving such Tungsten lights to be charged against the Village at actual cost of same.

Section 7. In case of failure of the lighting of streets of said Village by Tungsten lamps caused by breakage of lines, machinery or otherwise, provided such interruptions shall continue for more than two hours (2) at any time said Village may deduct from the bill rendered for such lighting service the amount of bill which would accrue during such period of interruption. Said Village shall forward a copy of such reports of failure in lighting to said The Cleveland Painesville & Eastern Railroad Company on the day following such interruptions.

Section 8. In consideration of the furnishing of said lights said Village agrees to pay to The Cleveland, Painesville & Eastern Railroad Company the sum of Twenty-five Dollars ($25.00) per Tungsten lamp per year payable in monthly installments at the end of each month and in case said Village shall desire any greater number of Tungsten lights within said period, they shall be furnished by said The Cleveland Painesville & Eastern Railroad Company on the terms and conditions heretofore provided but only in accordance with provisions of Article 3 of this contract.

In witness whereof the said Village of Richmond has caused this contract to be written in duplicate duly executed and sealed by the proper officers of the Village of Richmond and said The Cleveland Painesville & Eastern Railroad Company and its officers have hereunto set their hands this .......... day of October A. D. 1912.

Section 2. This Ordinance shall be in force and take effect from and after the earliest period allowed by law.

It is therefore agreed by and between the parties hereto, that said Village at its option by giving thirty days notice, may substitute for the aforesaid all night schedule, any standard schedule of street lighting of an equivalent number of hours of service.

Section 5. Said Village, through its proper officers shall have the right at all times to make test of the lights furnished to ascertain whether same is in accordance with this contract.

Section 6. The Village of Fairport through its proper officers, shall have the right and authority to order the change of location of any of said Tungsten lights during the term of this contract, providing however, the change in location is made in accordance with the provisions of Article 2 of this contract and the said Cleveland, Painesville & Eastern Railroad Company shall cause said lights to be moved in accordance with instructions of the Council, as soon after they are received as possible. Said changes for moving such Tungsten lights to be charged against the Village at actual cost of same.

Section 7. In case of failure of the lighting of streets of said Village by Tungsten lamps, caused by the breakage of lines, machinery, or otherwise, provided such interruptions shall continue for more than two (2) hours at any time, said Village may deduct from the bill rendered for such lighting service, the amount of bill which would accrue during such period of interruption. Said Village shall forward a copy of such reports of failures in lighting to said The Cleveland, Painesville & Eastern Railroad Company on the day following such interruption.

Section 8. In consideration of the furnishing of said lights, said Village agrees to pay to The Cleveland, Painesville & Eastern Railroad Company, the sum of Twenty-four (24.00) dollars per Tungsten lamp per year payable in monthly installments at the end of each month, and in case said Village shall desire any greater number of said Tungsten lights within said period, they shall be furnished by said Cleveland, Painesville & Eastern Railroad Company, on the same terms and conditions, but only in accordance with provisions of Article 5 of this contract.

In witness whereof, the said Village of Fairport has caused this contract to be written in duplicate, duly executed and sealed by the proper officers of the Village of Fairport and said, The Cleveland, Painesville & Eastern Railroad Company, and its officers have hereunto set their hands this............ day of September A. ## Ordinance No. 48

An ordinance granting to The Cleveland, Painesville & Eastern Railroad Company the right to erect and maintain poles, string wires thereon and attach electrical appliances thereto, on, along and over the streets, alleys and public grounds of the Village of Richmond, Ohio, for the purpose of transmitting electric current for power, heating and lighting thereover.

Section 1. That the right, franchise, privilege and authority be and they hereby are given, granted and conferred upon and vested in The Cleveland Painesville & Eastern Railroad Company its successors and assigns, to erect and maintain poles, string wires thereon and attach electrical appliances thereto in, upon and over the streets, alleys and public places of said Village for the purpose of transmitting electric current to be used by the Village and its inhabitants for lighting, heating and power purposes, subject always to the conditions and stipulations hereinafter recited and set forth.

Section 2. Pole lines, wiring equipment and appliances shall be constructed in a first class manner in regard to material and workmanship, the poles to be cedar, to be straight, sound timber and of proper length and to be set in the ground not less than four and one-half feet and the location of poles shall be subject to the approval of the Village Council or any committee or person appointed by them.

All wires shall be of the best material and have weather proof insulation and all joints and connections shall be insulated, kept and maintained at all times in good repair. No service wires shall be connected to the lighting and power wires in any building until the wiring in said building shall have introduced in the main feeder circuit some approved automatic device that will interrupt any excess of current passing into said building over said service wires.

Section 3. During the first ten years from the passage of this ordinance said grantee shall be permitted to charge not to exceed eleven (11) cents per Kilowatt hour for current furnished any consumer in the Village of Richmond for lighting and shall have the right to charge each consumer one dollar ($1.00) per month when the consumer's bill for any single month is less than one dollar ($1.00) as shown by the meter register and provided further that said grantee throughout the term of this grant shall give to each consumer a rebate of two (2) cents per Kilowatt hour from his monthly lighting bill when the same is paid on or before ten (10) days after rendition of bill, said Village shall through its proper officers have the right at all times to test the current furnished to ascertain whether the same is up to the proper voltage. At the expiration of ten (10) years from the passage of this ordinance the council of the Village of Richmond shall have the right to regulate by resolution the rates to be charged by said grantee for electric current furnished consumers for the ensuing ten years and shall have the same right at the expiration of each ten years thereafter during the life of this grant, provided that the rate so fixed shall not be less than is charged for electric current in other villages similarly situated.

Section 4. Said grantee shall be permitted to charge not to exceed five (5) cents per Kilowatt hour for current furnished any consumer in the Village of Richmond for motor power and shall have the right to charge each consumer one dollar ($1.00) per month for every horse power in motor capacity connected for service to said grantee's lines when the consumer's power bill for any single month as shown by the meter register is less than the minimum monthly charge as figured on the basis of one dollar ($1.00) per horse power per month but in no instance must this minimum be less than three dollars ($3.00) per month. In no case however, shall the price for current exceed that which is charged by other plants for the same service in adjacent Villages similarly situated and shall light the Council Room free of charge.

Section 5. Should any person or persons desire to move a building and it would become necessary to go under any of the wires of the grantee, then the grantee shall, upon proper notice given, raise its wires for the free passage of the structure and the person or persons moving said structure shall pay to the grantee the actual cost of raising or removing and replacing said wires. Time of notice to the grantee shall be twenty-four (24) hours.

Section 6. Said grantee shall give twenty-four (24) hour service on all its lighting and power lines, excepting such lines as may be used for lighting streets, avenues, alleys, lanes, squares and public places of the Village of Richmond.

Section 7. Said grantee shall furnish all meters necessary for measuring the current consumption of each consumer, and shall provide all service wires necessary for carrying the current from its lines to the consumer's residence or place of business, where the distance between the said points is not to exceed one hundred and fifty (150) feet. The consumer shall pay to the grantee the actual cost of all labor and material needed for extending a service connection a greater distance than one hundred and fifty (150) feet.

Section 8. Said grantee, its successors and assigns shall hold said Village of Richmond free from loss and harmless from any and all claims for damages of whatsoever nature that may arise by reason of the construction and operation of the grant herein given.

Section 9. This ordinance shall be accepted in writing by said The Cleveland, Painesville & Eastern Railroad Company within ten (10) days from and after its passage.

Section 10. The life of this grant and privilege shall be for a term of twenty-five (25) years and shall take effect and be in force, from and after its passage and the earliest period allowed by law and acceptance in writing by the Railroad Company.

Passed Oct. 2, 1912.

MENTOR

Most of the weather the past week has been very fine indeed, some of it as "warm as dish water." Today (Monday) there is a sharp taste of frost in the air, and everybody is hurrying up fall work, and wondering what the winter is really going to be. Many people are having hard colds, and many others are going bare-headed just as usual.

The funeral of Mrs. Theron Johnson was held from the Disciple church one day last week, she having died in Cleveland a few days before. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson lived here a number of years, and moved from here to Michigan, returning to Cleveland some time ago, where she had been a terrible sufferer from cancer for some months.

Mrs. Eliza Clapp Glasier of Cleveland and her daughter, Miss Jessie, who is one of the Plain Dealer staff, spent Sunday with their cousins the King girls.

Mr. Samuel Whiting is off on a western trip just now, before leaving for his permanent winter home in Mt. Dora, Florida. Before returning, he will doubtless visit his daughter Mrs. George Damon and her family in Omaha, Neb.

A bad thunder storm struck our village on Wednesday afternoon, and a bolt of lightning entered the barn of Mr. Billy Andrews, and instantly killed a good span of horses, which Mr. Andrews could hardly spare. That it did not set fire to the barn seems one of the mysteries that no one can solve. The same storm struck the house owned by Mrs. Samuel Remington, and smashed a window but did no further damage.

Mrs. Bertha Ritter Parkhurst has just returned from spending quite a number of days with friends in Erie and Ashtabula.

The October missionary meeting of the ladies of the Disciple church was held at the pleasant cottage of Mrs. Aurie Grier on Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. Dr. Clark, the new president, in the chair. The November meeting is to be held the first Tuesday in the month at the residence of Mrs. George Morsh.

Mr. Forest Chamberlain has recently moved over to Concord, where he is to live on the farm of Roy Harrison, we understand.

News from Miss Virginia Root has reached some of her friends, coming to them from New Orleans, where she was seeing the sights of that old and very interesting city "all by her lonesome" as she put it. From there she was to go directly on to California, by the way of the Southern Pacific, which is getting to be a favorite route for persons wishing to avoid all high altitudes.

The new house of T. P. Cadle is nearly finished and is in the hands of the decorators, Mr. Mark Roberts having the job already well in hand.

The Miscellany Club is to meet this week with Mrs. Charles Church, and there will be an unusually full program again (some original stories etc.). Mrs. Harry King is president this year, and Mrs. T. D. Morley, Sec.

The last meeting of the Women's Home and Foreign Societies of the M. E. Church, was held at "Maple Street Cottage" with Mrs. Elizabeth Munson as hostess. There was a fair attendance, considering the heavy rain of the afternoon, some of the ladies walking a mile or two without any complaining about the weather, and sat there all afternoon in their wet clothing. The program was in the hands of Miss Nettie Munson and Mrs. Perkins, the latter having Porto Rico as her subject, while Miss Munson handled the subject of "Tithing." The November meeting is to be a "Thank Offering Meeting" at the church, and will be in charge of Miss Nellie King and Miss Frances Cleveland.

The new presiding Elder, Mr. Buxton, was here Saturday evening, but not many people ever attend "quarterly conference" here, especially that service that comes on Saturday night, for some reason—probably they are too tired!

Mrs. Schaffner returned from Union City, Pa., her old home, early in the week, and is busy getting the parsonage settled.

Evers Parsons has returned to his studies in Case school, and the McCrae boys have gone back to their basket-weaving and other occupations down at the blind school in Columbus.

Mrs. Frank Luther entertained the ladies of the "Melville Street Club" of which she has still been a member since leaving the city, and they all had a most delightful time at her country home down here on Tuesday.

Miss Wilma Damon of Omaha has been a recent guest of her aunt, Mrs. T. D. Morley before the opening of the Women's College in Cleveland, where she has now entered the course.

Mrs. Lelia Sheldon Hicks of the City, was down here several days last week with her friends the King girls who are family connections but not relatives.

Mr. Ross Marsh now in business in Akron, was at home for a short time a few days ago.

Miss Mamie Permelee has just returned from making a visit upon her friend, Miss Dolly Smith of Walla Walla.

Miss Abby Mayhew of Willoughby has been a recent guest of the Dexford sisters, and of her cousins, the Curtiss families here.

Mrs. Thompson has moved into her new house. Mrs. McCrea has moved into the quarters just vacated by Mrs. Thompson, and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Curtiss are now cosily settled in the main part of the McCrea house.

The new house for rent, that is being built by T. D. Morley, and which is in the hands of Mr. Grant Cowles, has reached the stage when the foundations are all laid, and work is at a stand-still waiting for lumber. Said house is on Center street, south from the school house, and in the new allotment owned by Mr. Morley.

Mr. Mike Lynch has been very sick but is able to be up and around now, though not well by any means, yet.

John Kohlar, a workman on the Goodhold Farm, was instantly killed a few days ago, by an engine on the Nickel Plate Road, as he tried to cross the track. No one can account for his trying to do such a very foolish thing, except that others ahead of him had crossed safely, and that he was busily thinking, and so, didn't notice how near the engine was to him. He left a wife and several little children, we hear.

Mrs. T. O. Hart entertained at luncheon recently her sister, Mrs. Frost, and her family, also Mrs. John Laird and two little sons of Ashtabula.

Mrs. Amelia Hudson has been in Cleveland for a few days with relatives and friends of her husband. Mrs. Hudson now makes her home with her daughter, Mrs. Col. Porker.

The market at the Center is no longer open on Sunday, and Mr. Chas. Fearis, the chief man there, declares he is sick and tired of working nine days a week and never having a moment to himself." While there are some who want everything open on Sunday, most of our people are glad to have a business man take a position against it, and will see to it that their purchases are attended to before closing time on Saturday evening.

A number of the Mentor ladies attended the Missionary Tea given by the Plains ladies on Wednesday afternoon, to which they had been invited and others moped at home, because they couldn't go!

Mr. Walter Lamb of Unionville has been here for some days with his brother, Harry Lamb and his family.

Burridge Ave. has been wired so that we may expect that a number of our people living on that pleasant street will soon be having electric lighting put into their houses, and possibly some arrangement can be made by which the main street of our village lying between the house of Dr. Lowe and the Homestead Hotel may be made a little less dark than a pocket.

Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Jackson, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Hopkins and Mr. and Mrs. A. Q. Fenner are all to leave for Florida this coming week, and expecting to remain away until late in the spring.

Mrs. H. H. Brakeman of Naugatuck Conn., is visiting her niece, Mrs. J. W. Lowe, and her brother, Mr. W. S. Ackley.

Glenn McFarland has been sailing on a lake vessel this past season and has just started for California, intending to go aboard some ship out from San Francisco, as he has a passion for seeing the world.

Mrs. John Oliver has just been having a visit from her friend, Mrs. Carpenter, whose home is in Independence, this state.

Miss Kate Garrett is offering her neat little home for sale, same being near the Disciple church, and is expecting to make her home with her brother in the future, out in Sheridan, Wyoming. The friends of Miss Garrett will be sorry to have her go away for good and all.

Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Rosenthal have just been having their house wired for electricity. Pardee Sawyer is doing the work.

We understand that Mr. and Mrs. M. P. Berry and family are soon going to some point in the South for the winter months, and that Col. and Mrs. Spaulding are thinking of wintering in California.

Dr. and Mrs. Gammill of Forest, this state, and also Miss Della Miloy, of Mansfield, have been recent guests of their cousins, Mrs. Cordelia Radcliffe and Mrs. Orler.

Mrs. Harry King spent the day on Tuesday over in South Mentor with her friend, Mrs. Frank Luther, they having bought the Clare Camp farm some months ago.

Last Sunday was Rally Day in the Methodist Sunday School, and it was certainly named right, for the school was a very full one, most of the old scholars coming back after vacation and several new ones being enrolled. It looks as though there might be a prosperous winter and much good work done along all lines.

The Township Trustees have cut in two their last year's allowance for the Mentor Village Library, and it looks very much as though it would be necessary to return to the old two days a week way of keeping the library open. No reason has ever been given the Library Association for the retrenchment, but it is thought that the Township officers decided that they could not afford to be so generous. The school children suffer most by this retrenchment, as they sought the Library every day for reference books and now they all have to get along as best they can.

SYNOPSIS.

Harding Kent calls on Louise Farrish to propose marriage and finds the house in great excitement over the attempted suicide of her sister Katharine. Kent starts an investigation and finds that Hugh Crandall, suitor for Katharine, who had been forbidden the house by General Farrish, had talked with Katharine over the telephone just before she shot herself. A torn piece of yellow paper is found at sight of which General Farrish is stricken with paralysis. Kent discovers that Crandall has left town hurriedly. Andrew Elser, an aged banker, commits suicide about the same time as Katharine attempted her life. A yellow envelope is found in Elser's room. Post Office Inspector Davis, Kent's friend, takes up the case. Kent is convinced that Crandall is at the bottom of the mystery. Katharine's strange outcry puzzles the detectives. Kent and Davis search Crandall's room and find an address, Lock Box 17, Ardway, N. J. Kent goes to Ardway to investigate and becomes suspicious of a "Henry Cook." A woman commits suicide at the Ardway Hotel. A yellow letter also figures in this case. Kent calls Louise on the long distance telephone and finds that she had just been called by Crandall from the same booth. "Cook" disappears. The Ardway postmaster is missing.

CHAPTER VII.—(Continued.)

"Maybe that's why Rouser has disappeared," suggested the constable. "He's been spending a lot of money lately, Rouser has. Maybe he knew the inspector was coming and was short in his accounts."

"He couldn't have known it," I protested. "The inspector himself didn't know he was coming here until late yesterday afternoon, and there isn't any way possible that the postmaster could have been advised of his coming."

The arrival of the substitute official diverted the conversation. Miss Cox, an unimaginative, unattractive woman of thirty, in a most matter-of-fact way entered the building and took charge.

"The first thing," she said as she calmly hung up her hat and coat, "is for all you men to get out of here so that I can sort the mail."

Even the constable moved toward the door, impelled by the authority in her tone and his own respect for government property. I determined not to be routed so easily. It seemed to me that the occasion afforded me an excellent opportunity not to solve the mystery of the missing postmaster but to work out one of my own puzzles—who it was that had rented Lock Box 17.

"Miss Cox," I said, "as a personal friend of Post Office Inspector Davis, who is to join me here in a few hours in connection with an important matter, and for your own sake as well, I would suggest that you should keep at least two of us here as witnesses. This is government property. The postmaster has disappeared and some of the government's property may be missing. If your inspection is made in the presence of two witnesses there can be no question about your statement of the condition in which you found things. I really think it is a necessary precaution. I would suggest that two of us, say the constable and myself, be permitted to remain as witnesses."

"By ginger, he's right," said the constable, whose attitude toward me at once became one of decided friendliness.

"Maybe I had," said Miss Cox. "You two may stay, but the rest get out."

With a narrow sense of duty she insisted on sorting the morning's mail before she made any investigation. Meanwhile the constable and I discussed the case. From him I learned that Rouser, the postmaster, was a likable young fellow of twenty-five or six, who had held the office for two or three years.

"The way he come to be postmaster was this. His father had represented this district in Congress for twenty years or so before he died. The old man was an able citizen, but never had accumulated much money, though he gave the boy a good education. Charlie, however, wasn't much good. He was bright and smart enough, but he seemed to lack the git-up and git-to-do for himself. After his father died he lived on the little money left him till it was all gone and then just drifted around, getting a meal where he could and his clothes growing shabbier and shabbier. The women folks all liked him and was always trying to find something for him to do. He'd work if he had it, but he wasn't the kind of a fellow to be teaming or gardening or trucking and it was the hardest sort of a job to find something that would suit him. The old postmaster died and the politicians was about equally divided as to who was entitled to the place. They didn't seem able to agree on no one. Then somebody suggested Charlie Rouser, some of the women folks I guess it was, and first thing you know he had it.

"It don't pay much, only six hundred a year, but Charlie don't drink and don't gamble, so he's been able to get along on that well enough, and he ain't made a bad postmaster. He's a weak youngster and easily led, and if he'd ever got into bad company I can see his finish. Lately I've noticed he seemed to be spending a lot of money, though where it come from, if the books is all straight, is more than I can imagine."

"What's he been spending it for?"

"Well, I noticed him the other day wearing a big diamond in his necktie and he bought himself a gold repeater watch and he's always hiring horses at the livery stable and going off for drives in the evening. One night I seen him buy a round of drinks that cost a dollar and ten cents. That's what I call spending."

"Maybe he met with an accident on his drive."

"Maybe he did, but I don't believe it likely. A fellow that can get along with women can get along with horses, and while Charlie wasn't athletic or anything like that, I never seen the horses yet he couldn't drive."

By this time Miss Cox had her mail sorted and turned to us with: "If you two gentlemen want to see what's in the safe, now is your chance. I'm going to open it."

Everything inside the safe was in the neatest order. She removed the ledgers and put them on the desk, inspected the cash drawer of the safe and made a tab of the amount. She also carefully counted the reserve supply of stamps, postal cards and stamped envelopes, and added them to her tally.

"Now for the daily cash drawer," suggested the constable. "Let's see if he's taken any of the cash."

"That's just like a man," snapped Miss Cox. "How are you going to tell till I go over these books and see how much there ought to be? We'll open the cash-drawer after I'm through looking."

There was nothing to do but wait, and it was perhaps half an hour before she completed her calculations, being often interrupted by callers for mail.

"If the cash drawer hasn't been robbed," she said, "we'll find exactly sixteen dollars and forty-eight cents in it."

In the presence of both of us she opened the drawer and carefully counted out its contents. One five-dollar bill, two two's, four ones and three dollars and forty-eight cents in silver and pennies were in the drawer.

"Right to a 't,'" she exclaimed triumphantly. "I believe you two are disappointed at not finding a shortage. Charlie Rouser may have his faults, but he's honest."

"What's that there at the back of the drawer?" asked the constable, paying no attention to her remark.

The drawer, one of those heavy wooden affairs with a circular pocket for silver, had been pulled out almost to its utmost length. Where the money compartments fitted into the back of the drawer a little space was left, barely visible under the overhang of the desk. It was at this particular space that the constable was pointing.

Following the line of his finger, I caught a glint of yellow just as the energetic Miss Cox gave the drawer a hard jerk that brought it out to its full length. She reached into the sill and brought out a neat package of one-hundred-dollar bills—fifty of them.

The three of us gazed at each other in blank amazement.

What was a poor country postmaster on six hundred dollars a year doing with five thousand dollars carelessly concealed thus?

Where did he get it?

Where was he?

CHAPTER VIII.

A New Clue.

"So, Davis," I concluded, "you see that every new clue points to Hugh Crandall."

The post office inspector sniffed.

"What have they done with the dead woman's clothes?" he asked. "I want to see them at once."

I had been anxiously awaiting Davis' arrival, not without some little feeling of triumph, to tell to him the startling developments in the mystery since I had left him hardly more than twenty-four hours before at the ferry. I was at the station awaiting him, and led him at once to the little hotel. The noise of his coming had been bruited about by the village gossips, and as his fame had penetrated even to the obscure Jersey village, there was a curious crowd gathered at the station. Some of them even followed us as far as the hotel lobby, pressing so close that private conversation was impossible. To avoid interruption, I took him at once to my room and ordered our supper served there.

While we waited for it I summarized as briefly as I could the new features of the case, beginning with my finding the post office deserted, the name missing from Lock Box 17, the suicide of the woman, the calling up of the Bridgeport police, the testimony of the maid that the woman had been crying over a yellow letter, the discovery of the five thousand dollars in new hundred-dollar bills in the cash drawer, the coincidence in the initials of Cook and Crandall that had first attracted my attention to the missing guest in the hotel, his peculiar conduct the minute I mentioned the yellow letter and his flight from the town behind the fastest horse obtainable.

While I was only an amateur in criminal investigation, I prided myself that I had followed everything as far as Davis himself could have done. I doubted if even he, with all his shrewdness, could learn the identity of the dead woman or could explain what the postmaster was doing with such an unusually large sum, left so carelessly hid in the cash-drawer. My private opinion was that the money was probably counterfeit and that when we had solved the mystery we would find that Hugh Crandall was at the head of a band of skillful rogues who were defrauding the government. More than likely they had headquarters somewhere in the vicinity. Probably with the connivance of the postmaster they conducted some sort of green-goods or other swindling game through Lock Box 17. It seemed to me more than possible that Crandall, taking advantage of Katharine Farrish's love for him, had snared her father into some nefarious scheme. Such a theory would explain her sudden break with him and might even account for her father's terror at the sight of the yellow letter that had revealed to her his error. The knowledge of her father's plight, too, might have driven her to try suicide. Old Elser possibly was one of the gang's dupes or agents who saw exposure coming, through Katharine's activity, and feared to face it. The one flaw in my theory, it seemed to me, was that it in no way accounted for the second woman's suicide, and in spite of Davis' prophecy that there would be more suicides, I was inclined to believe that perhaps, after all, it was only a coincidence. Learning her identity, I did not regard as half so important as to locate Crandall. I almost wished that I had gone in pursuit of him alone. I would have felt an unholy joy in rounding him up single-handed, while Davis followed other minor clues. I felt considerably annoyed that Davis apparently was more interested in learning who the dead woman was than in discovering Crandall's whereabouts.

"I have no idea what they have done with the clothes," I said almost crossly. "I suppose they are still in the room. The inquest was adjourned until tomorrow morning. Maybe they have been taken to the undertaker's. He came this afternoon and took the body away. I forgot to tell you that Crandall called up the Farrish house this morning and asked for Katharine—right from this very hotel."

"What did he say?" he asked apathetically.

I repeated the conversation with Louise word for word as she had told it to me.

"That," said I, "is definite evidence that Crandall, the man whom we suspect, was here in the place where you sent me—here under an assumed name. What greater proof of guilt can you have, unless it is actual confession?"

"The man you suspect," he corrected with some asperity, turning abruptly to the waiter, who had entered with our supper.

"Tell the proprietor to come up here at once," he said, "and tell him to bring with him the garments worn by the woman who killed herself."

If I had sent Mahlon Williams such an order I am positive he would have paid no attention to it, but Davis' was obeyed. So quickly that it almost seemed as if Williams had been listening outside the door the landlord appeared carrying the black coat and skirt the woman had worn. Perhaps it was something in Davis' authoritative manner.

"There's no use in your looking these over," I said. "They were carefully examined today, and there is not a mark on them. The only clue is the letter 'S' on two black-bordered handkerchiefs and a return ticket to Bridgeport. She signed her name as Mary Jane Teller, but there is none of the Bridgeport Tellers who answers her description, nor are any of them missing. I found out all that long ago."

Davis was paying little attention to my conversation. I doubted if he was [illegible] [illegible] he spoke. [illegible] with [illegible] [illegible] measure was taking the various dimensions of the coat and skirt. He turned up the hem of the latter and inspected it as carefully as if he expected to find a name written there. He did the same thing, first with one sleeve and then with the other.

"You say that she registered as Teller and that her handkerchiefs were marked with an 'S'?" he suddenly asked me, showing that he had heard all I said.

Both the landlord and I answered him affirmatively.

"Where is the telephone?" he asked. "I want to call long distance."

There was a note of excitement in his voice that indicated to me that he believed himself on the verge of some discovery, though what it was I could not imagine.

He dashed away to the telephone, the landlord following. I ate my supper alone and waited. Just as I was finishing he came back into the room, and, seating himself, began to eat, apparently indifferent to the fact that everything had grown cold in the half hour he was absent.

"Well," I said inquiringly, "did you learn anything?"

He nodded and calmly finished drinking his cold coffee.

Expectantly I sat there, waiting for him to go on. He seemed not to notice my impatience, though it must have been apparent, and waited until he had pushed back his chair and lighted a cigarette. He always rolled his own, and never before had I realized what an irritating operation rolling a cigarette can be made. It seemed to me that he was taking entirely unnecessary pains to have the ends twisted just so. Finally I could brook no further delay, and burst out with: "Well, what have you discovered, Mr. Inspector?"

I supposed that he might have obtained a clue to where the woman's garments had been manufactured, some tiny thread by which he hoped to run her identity to earth. Little was I prepared for the startling discoveries he volleyed at me, so tersely, so concretely put that I could not doubt the accuracy of his information.

"The woman was Sarah Sackett, spinster. She lived on a little farm just outside Bridgeport with her brother Robert, who is somewhat older than she. They inherited the farm from their parents and have lived there all their lives. The brother is employed as cashier in a little country bank about ten miles away. Every morning he drives into Bridgeport and takes the train. When his sister left, two days ago, he came with her to the station. He evidently is not aware of her death, though he seems greatly worried over her absence. He presumably expected her to return last night, for he waited over several trains. This morning he was asking the station agent if he had seen her."

Shantymen of East Canada

Strenuous, Genial and Virile Type That Has Not Changed in Seventy Years

Of all classes of laborers the eastern Canada shantyman—particularly the French-Canadian woodsman of Quebec province—is the most strenuous, while at the same time the most genial of workers.

Skillful in all that pertains to log making and the use of the ax, which he has learned to handle from early childhood, he is ever at home in the forest and wilds. Like the Indian, were he unable to find his campground before nightfall, he would assure you that it is not he, but the camp, that is lost, for he is at home anywhere in the forest, while cold and hardship have no terrors for him, since he can usually make himself comfortable in spite of the worst conditions imaginable.

Tracing the history of the shantyman through the romantic legends of the chantiers de coupe, the impression is gained that those of the early lumbering days were of the roughest and most formidable character—physical giants, with whom the shantymen of the present day would be but miserably contrasted. From truer, though less romantic, sources, it is found, however, that those old bushwhackers could not chop more logs in a given time than the present day lumberman. In fact, the whole system of log making in eastern Canada is, with few exceptions, the same today as it was some 50 years ago.—British Columbia Magazine.

SEEK SUNKEN CITIES

English Expedition to Search for Lost Continent.

Coast of Yucatan the Scene of the Operations, and Result May Be the Discovery of the Much-Discussed Atlantis.

London.—Yet another party of treasure hunters has sailed from England. This time the search is for no paltry hoard hidden by an old time pirate, nor for a mere million or two of golden doubloons sunk in some Spanish galleon. This latest expedition is to go diving for a lost continent, Atlantis perhaps, and salvage the countless millions worth of gold and gems and art treasures of the sunken cities of a region as large as all Europe.

At the head of the expedition is Bernard Meekham, an English explorer. His plans include the employment of a huge floating dry dock, at least a dozen submarines for work on the sea bottom and a hundred or more expert divers.

For nearly a hundred years, says Meekham, Yucatan fishermen have been bringing up from the waters along the coast beautifully carved stones, vases and small objects of gold and silver. These fishermen are Maya Indians, who believe themselves to be the descendants of a once mighty race. They hold these treasures of the deep as sacred and when asked where they get them reply that they have been given them by their forefathers.

The reports of these finds led Meekham to explore the ruined cities of ancient civilization scattered all along the coast of Yucatan. He thus became convinced of the existence of a once populous and rich country, swallowed by the sea long ages ago, but still accessible.

First of all, engineers and investigators were sent to Yucatan. Their reports showed that the country marked for exploitation had apparently sunk over an immense irregular land surface stretching along the twentieth parallel and breaking away from what is now the northern coast of South America and the eastern coast of Central America. Further observations showed that the temples, palaces and houses which formed the cities of this lost country were in far better condition than the land-buried cities of Yucatan and Guatemala. Several valuable objects of gold and silver encrusted with jewels and recovered by the crude methods necessarily employed by the searchers made it practically certain that the inhabitants of the doomed land had not had time to escape with their wealth before the final catastrophe.

These discoveries, together with the traces found in the buried cities of Yucatan of a once powerful and enlightened race, indicate a wonderful civilization that was in existence long before the days of Egypt or Babylon. Even when the Spanish conquistadores invaded Yucatan these mysterious cities had been in ruins for centuries.

Submarines and divers will be employed to explore and loot the sunken cities. These submarines of the curious Piao type, fitted with steel arms ending in immense claws controlled from within the boat, will crawl about the sunken cities and carry the treasures which the divers bring them to the under water platform of the huge dry dock above. From the surface of the sea steel tubes will also drop into the depths of the Caribbean, and from their ends will pour streams of light, illuminating streets where only the scaly denizens of the deep have wandered for untold ages.

SAW NO CAUSE FOR WORRY

Small Boy Pretty Well Satisfied That the Future Was Not Likely to Be a Hard One.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer says: A Lakewood woman was recently reading to her little boy the story of a young lad whose father was taken ill and died, after which he set himself diligently to work to support himself and mother. When she had finished the story, she said:

"Dear Billy, if your papa were to die would you work to support your dear mamma?"

"Naw!" said Billy, unexpectedly.

"But why not?"

"Ain't we got a good house to live in?"

"Yes, dearie—but we can't eat the house, you know."

"Ain't there a lot o' stuff in the pantry?"

"Yes, but that won't last forever."

"It'll last till you git another husband, won't it? You're a pretty good looker, ma!"

Mamma gave up right there.

BOY'S FACE A MASS OF SCABBY SORES

Awful to Look At, Resinol Cured in Less Than Two Weeks.

St. Louis, Mo.—"At about 11 years of age my face was covered with a mass of scabby sores, awful to look at, and my sleep was broken up by the intense itching, and then after scratching, the sores would pain me just something awful. My mother got salves and soaps to use, but all to no purpose. A friend of mine who was Physical Director at the Y. M. C. A. at that time, told me it was a bad case, and would spread all over the body if something were not done. He gave me some Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment, and in less than two weeks I was cured, without leaving any marks or scars whatever." (Signed) Ernest Le Pique, Jr., 3021 Dickson.

"Why do you ask?" queried the other, sleepily.

"I want to borrow a sovereign."

"Yes," said the other, turning over and closing his eyes. "I'm asleep."

BACKACHE NOT A DISEASE

But a Symptom, a Danger Signal Which Every Woman Should Heed.

Backache is a symptom of organic weakness or derangement. If you have backache don't neglect it. To get permanent relief you must reach the root of the trouble. Read about Mrs. Woodall's experience.

Morton's Gap, Kentucky.—"I suffered two years with female disorders, my health was very bad and I had a continual backache which was simply awful. I could not stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal's victuals without my back nearly killing me, and I would have such dragging sensations I could hardly bear it. I had soreness in each side, could not stand tight clothing, and was irregular. I was completely run down. On advice I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and am enjoying good health. It is now more than two years and I have not had an ache or pain since. I do all my own work, washing and everything, and never have backache any more. I think your medicine is grand and I praise it to all my neighbors. If you think my testimony will help others you may publish it."—Mrs. OLLIE WOODALL, Morton's Gap, Kentucky.

WHAT GOOD PREPARATION, FERTILIZATION AND CULTIVATION WILL DO ON POOR SOILS

Infertile Spots in Field Selected for Corn Crop Were Enriched With Cleanings From Cow Stables and Poultry Houses—Seed Carefully Selected.

(By H. H. SHEPARD.)

Believing that early preparation counts for much in final results, I began to prepare for this season's corn crop last winter. Having selected the fields for the crop, infertile spots in these fields were enriched with cleaning from the cow stables and poultry houses.

Long before the season opened, seed corn, white, was purchased from the man who took first premium on white corn at the state fair. This seed corn had been carefully selected by the grower and was the most beautiful lot of white corn that one could hope to see.

I selected four of the most perfect ears for planting about one-fifth of an acre of a chosen spot of very fertile soil for special experiment and for probable future seed.

Two of the three fields which were planted were rented land and hence I had no previous hand in making the soil. All I did was to fertilize the poor places in each field with the small amount of valuable material on the place, which consisted of a part of two old straw stacks and eight or ten loads of refuse from an old barn and stables.

The third field, my own land, was fertilized heavily with a variety of rich fertilizers of home making. No commercial fertilizers were used on any of the fields.

About twenty acres were selected. A part of the land was in wheat last year, and this wheat stubble land worked up best.

Thus, before the last was planted the first was up and ready for the first cultivation, which was given in the form of harrowing.

All of the planting was done with a two-horse corn planter, making rows of standard width apart, and set to drop single grains eighteen inches apart in the row, which I found resulted in too thick a stand since the vitality of the seed was good and a high percentage sprouted and grew.

No difference in the germination and early growth of the white and yellow corn could be seen. Both were good and none had to be replanted, although some of the farmers of the region replanted two and three times, probably more on account of troublesome insects in the soil than from poor quality of seed, still the latter had something to do with it.

One of my corn fields was an oval hill of gentle slope, but steep enough so that in past years much of the top soil had been worn and washed away, leaving large patches of only yellow clay which will not grow corn or any other crop unless heavily manured.

These thin, clayey places were given a dressing of straw stack and stable manure on top of the plowed ground, and the manure was harrowed and disked into the surface. At each cultivation of the corn this surface manure was further spread and worked into the soil.

The growing season turned out dry, and it was found in cultivation that these poor clayey spots that had received the surface manuring worked well, retained more moisture than the adjacent soil not so treated, that the corn plants grew more vigorously and with a greener color.

It is my belief through experience both from this season's work with corn and from other seasons with corn and other summer cultivated crops that manure applied to the surface of plowed ground and worked into the loose surface soil as the plants grow does more good than to apply it to the soil to be turned under before the crop is planted.

On the surface of the plowed ground the frequent harrowings and other cultivations spread it and break it up better than can possibly be accomplished by any other means.

If the season be dry this surface manure acts as a mulch, retaining much needed moisture, and if the season be wet the richness is developed and immediately taken up by the roots of the growing corn.

On another level field similar results were obtained by applying old wheat straw to the surface and harrowing and cultivating it into the soil.

During the driest period the soil treated with this old straw was always moist and the corn was never checked in its growth.

In all cases of surface manuring the physical nature of the soil was improved, and the cultivator did more effective work than in any other places.

All of my corn ground soil was worked down well before planting except about an acre of wheat stubble sod which I intentionally planted after only one light harrowing.

This soil was very loose and fine but not at all compact and even. There were no large clods and the planter placed the seed in the soil reasonably well but rather deep and uneven.

Although the season was dry and the soil in long loose nods, yet there was sufficient moisture to sprout the seed and it came up as well as in other soil better worked down.

There were so many unfavorable comments by good neighbor corn growers on this experiment that I feared that it would turn out badly.

It looked at first when the corn was young like a piece of very poor farming, but I had an idea in mind and wanted to test it to my satisfaction.

The idea was as to whether a better corn crop can be grown by fully mixing the soil before planting or whether a part of it can just as well be done after planting, while the corn is growing. One year's experience on one kind of soil, of course, will not give conclusive proof.

The first thing I did to this poorly planted acre of corn was to give it four single harrowings at intervals of a few days apart while the corn was young. This was done to level and compact the loose and very uneven soil.

The corn came on and grew, but did not make as much early gains as did the corn in adjacent and better prepared soil.

By the last of July the other corn was about a foot taller than it, and evidently thriving better in other ways.

When the other corn was cultivated for the last time I gave this place two thorough extra cultivations, and, the later rains helping, this corn is now earing nicely and is apparently as good as the rest that was planted on well prepared soil.

The final result will be known at gathering time. I believe that with corn a cultivated crop planting may be made under certain conditions on plowed ground with only one harrowing and good results follow if extra cultivation can be given during the growing season.

Profitable Frog Farm.

At Stagg, Cal., a woman runs a frog farm and sells, every year, from 30,000 to 35,000 frogs legs. She works hard and manages to make about $2,000 a year. Another frog farm in New Jersey is run by a woman.

Lice on Poultry.

To rid the poultry of lice, take two and one-half pounds of plaster of paris and put in a pan. Then mix together three-fourths pint gasoline and one-fourth pint cresol. Stir the plaster of paris while adding the fluid. When thoroughly mixed the mixture should be rather crumbly. Then it should be dried and sifted; then it is ready for use.

Crimson clover is what might be termed a cold weather plant.

Cows in Kansas.

Kansas reports 8,000 dairy cows, but experts report that their product is scarcely worth their feed. One of the causes for this discrepancy is that too many beef cattle are being milked and farmers are urged to use the dairy breeds.

Shelter for Wagons.

Never allow a wagon to stand out of doors and take the bad weather. Keep the tires tight and the fellows painted.

HAIR NEEDS ATTENTION

CAN NOT BE NEGLECTED AND MAKE GOOD APPEARANCE.

Must Be Cleansed Frequently and With Care—Sunning Almost a Necessity in Drying—Best to Avoid Use of Oil.

Common sense methods are always advisable in caring for one's appearance, but this is especially true in caring for the hair. It is quite impossible to neglect the proper shampooing, sunning and brushing and expect the hair to just take care of itself and keep glossy and thick. Neither is it possible to use strong preparations when washing the hair and not destroy the texture of the hair and make it look faded and dead.

A little daily care brings good results when applied to the complexion and the hands, and is quite as necessary if one would preserve the color and quality of the hair. A few rules can be given, and these must always be modified to suit individual cases. The hair should be cleansed frequently enough to keep it sweet and clean. No arbitrary rule can be laid down for this, because conditions and locations differ so greatly that no one rule will apply to all cases. It is much better to use a mild shampoo preparation and suds the hair thoroughly two or three times, rinsing carefully each time, than to use a strong preparation for the sake of hurrying the work and making one sudsing answer. The latter method leaves the hair dry and brittle, causes it to split at the ends and become dull and dead looking. The former method brings the hair out glossy, fresh and greatly improved from its cleansing.

In drying the hair a good sunning is almost necessary, and the hair should be shaken out and separated with the fingers so the sun and air will reach every part of the hair and scalp. Gentle rubbing of the scalp will help make it active and when the hair is about dry, brisk brushing with a good bristle brush, passing the brush through the entire length of one lock at a time, will keep the electricity in the hair and make it fluffy. The bristles should not be too near together in the brush, else they are likely to drag the hair and loosen it from the roots. Neither should the brushing be too vigorous, as one should be very careful to avoid irritating the scalp in any way.

Oil should not be applied to the scalp unless for the specific purpose of removing encrusted dandruff or for some similar object. Then the oil can be used, rubbing as much into the scalp as can be absorbed, and leaving it on at least twelve hours, when it should be shampooed out very thoroughly. The best tonic is one that does not contain either oil or glycerin, since neither of these is suitable for continued use on the scalp. Oil clogs the pores and prevents the very results a tonic is supposed to accomplish; glycerin weakens the tissues if used too constantly.

The hair should not be coiled on the head nor tightly braided at night. It is an excellent plan to loosen the hair for a few minutes two or three times a week allowing the sun to penetrate through every part of it. These directions will answer for all ordinary cases. The frequency of the shampoo must be decided by the individual needs. In some cases once a week is none to often—in others once a month may answer. If a dry shampoo seems desirable, be sure and avoid a mixture containing orris root, as it is an active irritant to the scalp and a frequent cause for dandruff.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

Greenie: Nothing in the way of a coloring preparation will accomplish your desires. You could only succeed in making your hair a golden shade by bleaching it, and it is quite likely that the shade would not approach a natural golden color at all, but would be a sort of metallic yellow which would be both unbecoming and artificial looking. My advice would be to take the best possible care of your hair, using a good tonic and reliable shampoo mixture and not attempt to change the color. You will probably regret it if you do make such an attempt and you cannot then undo the mistake.

M. E.: The best method for filling up the hollows and restoring the rounded contour of the cheeks is to use a good nourishing cream and gentle massage, and especially to be regular about this simple treatment. The cream should be one that is easily absorbed and not too light in quality, a nourishing cream is rather a heavy one. Use cold water freely and avoid too much hot water and soap scrubbing.

Country Reader: You can make oatmeal soap as follows: Shave up enough pure white soap to make a cupful, put this in a granite dish and pour over it one cupful of boiling water, let it stand till the soap is melted, then add one ounce lemon juice and enough finely ground oatmeal to make a smooth paste, roll into small balls to harden, or put into any small receptacles that will make a smooth cake and set away till hard.

Mrs. R. N. H.: Claret shampoo is composed of the whites or yolks of three eggs to one pint of claret. The mixture should be slightly beaten to break up the eggs and then be used as you would any ordinary shampoo mixture. This is said to keep black hair lustrous, but I cannot vouch for it from personal knowledge.

Too Expensive.

Two little sisters who were taken to see "Othello," were much impressed by the death scene. "I wonder if they kill a lady every night?" said Lucy.

"Why, of course not, Lucy," said her sister; "they just pretend to. It would be altogether too expensive to really kill a lady every night."—Wasp.

Social Forms and Entertainments

Reply to "Naughty."

I have read your columns with interest and have found them very useful. I wish to entertain with a "tacky party" real soon and would like you to suggest some games, prizes and also refreshments. I wish to have it as "tacky" as possible. Do you think I should mail each one an invitation or just call them by phone?

Do you think I am too young to go with a young man? He is twenty-three and I am eighteen. How should a girl of my age wear her hair? Thank you very much for your advice—"Naughty."

In this case I should say give your invitations over the phone, so you can explain in detail what you are planning to have. Or you can write the invitations on brown wrapping paper, seal with red wax and deliver by messenger or by mail. You may have card games or guessing contests with joke prizes picked up at the "five and ten" store. I would serve potato salad, pickles, grilled sausage, coffee or cider, peanuts, molasses candy, all set out in broken china and tinware. Use candles and lamps and all dress in tacky costumes. You are not too young to go with a man of the age mentioned. Wear your hair in coronet braids with or without bow.

Concerning a Wedding.

I am to be an October bride and am in doubt as to the sending of the invitations. I wish to know if I should send invitations for the church to the members of the congregation of the church to which I belong, and other friends, as I wish to have a reception at my home for only my relatives and nearest friends. Kindly suggest a suitable menu for a luncheon of about 25 or 30 guests. An early publication will be appreciated by—An October Bride.

I think I should ask every one to the church and reserve the invitations to the reception for just those you really want. This may easily be done by enclosing a reception card or asking verbally those whom you wish to come afterward. You do not state the hour at which you wish to serve, but I know I am perfectly safe in suggesting chicken salad sandwiches or hot buttered rolls, olives, salted nuts, coffee, ice cream, cake and bonbons. Have a bowl of punch or frappe conveniently placed where all may help themselves or have some one in charge of it.

Reply to "Little Orphan Blonde."

I am in receipt of two letters with the above signature. As the purport of the two is much the same, this reply will cover both. A child of twelve is by all means too young to "have a beau" and she should not kiss boys when they ask her to do so. I do wish I could make this fact plain. If mothers and grandparents left in charge of young girls could only realize their responsibility in these things how many heartbreaks would be saved! You ask, if forced to kiss boys, if you should tell those who are supposed to be in authority over you? Most emphatically "yes," and I can't see what "they" are thinking of to let you go to picture shows at night alone with a boy and not get in till midnight. You are too young to go to dances and should be in bed every night by nine at the very latest. I am sorry your brothers and sisters, aunts and uncles, to say nothing of grandparents, cannot look after you and advise you, so come to me and I will tell you all I can in the limited space allowed for "Questions and Answers."

Note.

Madame Merri has received a letter from one of our readers, in which she states that she sent a self-addressed stamped envelope in care of the paper for a personal reply to her request and complains that she has received no reply; also requests that the contents of her letter be not published. We want to say here very clearly that all letters received by Madame Merri are answered as soon as possible privately, when so desired, if accompanied by postage and such communications are not put in this department. Letters are occasionally lost and such must have been the case in this instance.

Answer to "Miss Unfortunate."

You are certainly up against trying to entertain so many with so little space. As your friends surely understand the situation why not divide the company and have a few at a time? Another plan would be to entertain jointly with a friend who has a larger house.

Reply to "Jeff."

Long coats and those three-quarter length are both worn. If you consult late fashion books you will be sure of up-to-date styles. I do not think I have any new outdoor games. Perhaps if some of our readers know any they will tell me about them so I can publish them for your benefit.

Reply to "Red Rose."

Glad you enjoy the department. White buckskin shoes are in good style, also plush coats and blazers. You write very well for your age.

Reply to Mrs. G. S.

Questions concerning needle work do not belong in my department. Sorry I cannot give you minute directions as you requested.

MADAME MERRI.

SHE COULD ANSWER FOR HIM

Little Comfort for Candidate in Reason Assigned by Wife for Her Being Confident.

Mr. Williams, one of five candidates for the office of sheriff in one of the northern counties of Wisconsin, was making a house-to-house canvass of a rural district, soliciting votes. Coming to the house of Farmer Thompson, he was met at the door by the good housewife, and the following dialogue ensued:

"Is Mr. Thompson at home?"

"No, he has gone to town."

"I am very sorry, as I would have liked to talk to him."

"Is there anything I can tell him for you?"

"My name is Williams, candidate for sheriff, and I wanted to exact a promise from him to vote for me at the coming election."

"Oh, that will be all right. I know he will promise, for he has already promised four other candidates the same thing."—Norman E. Mack's National Monthly.

PIMPLES COVERED FACE

1613 Dayton St., Chicago, Ill.—"My face was very red and irritated and was covered with pimples. The pimples festered and came to a head. They itched and burned and when I scratched them became sore. I tried soaps and they would not stop the itching and burning of the skin. This lasted for a month or more. At last I tried Cuticura Ointment and Soap. They took out the burning and itching of the skin, soothing it very much and giving the relief that the others failed to give me. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment about three weeks and was completely cured." (Signed) Miss Clara Mueller, Mar. 16, 1912.

Daddy's Whack-Whack.

On the occasion of her last visit in a certain Baltimore household a young matron of that city found a little friend in tears.

"What the matter with little Mario?" she asked, endeavoring to console the weeping child.

"Daddy has just given me whack-whack," the youngster replied between sobs.

"Thoughtless daddy!" exclaimed the young woman, repressing a smile. "And where did he whack-whack little Mario?"

"On the back of my tummy," was the answer.

A While for a Time.

A Cleveland school teacher writes that she asked her class what was the difference between the expressions, "a while," and "a time," says the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Nobody seemed to have any ideas on the subject. Finally the light of intelligence was seen to shine in the eyes of one little boy, and the teacher called upon him to save the intellectual honor of the class.

"I know, teacher!" he cried eagerly. "When papa says he's going out for a while, mamma says she knows he's going out for a time!"

That's one way of looking at it.

Protected Both Ways.

Two conservative ladies of old fashioned notions were traveling in the west and, becoming interested in a young girl on the train, finally asked why she was making so long a journey alone. They were greatly shocked at her blithe explanation.

"Well, you see, my mother and stepfather live at one end of the journey and my father and stepmother live at the other. They send me to each other twice a year, so there isn't a bit of danger with four parents all on the lookout!"

God has placed the genius of woman in their hearts because the works of this genius are always works of love.—Alphonse De Lamartine.

HIS CAREER MAPPED OUT.

"I'm goin' to be a farmer like pop when I grows up. Wot you goin' to be?"

"Me? I'm goin' to be a bunco man an' take yer farm away from you."

Unsophisticated.

"Darling," said the fond youth, producing a ring, "which is the right finger?"

"For goodness sake, Algy," responded the maiden, "don't you know? Nineteen years old and never been engaged to a girl before!"

Sound Values—Good Service—Courteous Treatment

THESE are the advantages you gain by trading with the I H C local dealer. He is a good judge of values in farm machines. He sells machines of guaranteed quality, and stands behind them to see that they make good. When he sells you an

I H C Manure Spreader
Kemp 20th Century, Corn King, or Cloverleaf

he sets up the machine, tests it, and makes sure that everything is right before he delivers it. He shows you how to use the machine, to make it last longest. In case of accident he can furnish repair parts promptly—repairs that fit. He gives you service worth far more than it costs you.

I H C manure spreaders are made in both return and endless apron styles, but all aprons run alike on large rollers. Non-friction roller bearings are used wherever practical, making the machine easy on the horses. The feed is variable and positive. The machines pulverize the manure and distribute it evenly in a light or heavy coat, as may be needed. Because they distribute manure properly, I H C spreaders use less than half as much manure as fork spreading to cover the same amount of ground. They make one ton of manure go as far as two, and do better fertilizing with far less labor than the old-fashioned method.

The I H C local dealer has the style and size best suited to your needs. See him for catalogues and full information, or write

A Letter From Washington

Spokane, Wash., Oct. 3, 1912

Editor Lake County Herald:

Directly north of Alice avenue, at north side of city, are some high hills and mountains which belong to the Rockies. Mount Baldy, not far distant, has snow on its summit nearly the year around. Sugar Loaf mountain is a pretty spot of nature.

Apples grown in this section are fine. The annual apple show in November is very attractive drawing crowds of people during the show and one would wonder where all the apples came from. They are arranged very artistically; different colored apples spelling the names of states and companies, etc.

A new thing this summer has been the awful dust storms, when the air was full of dust for many hours till one really wonders how they are going to breathe.

On the mountains the Indians do a thriving business gathering huckleberries, then come to the City selling them. Everything here is sold by the pound, no quarts, pecks, half bushels or bushels; everything is sold by the pound.

Recently a lady called on me who in the early days of Spokane, was district school superintendent, and would ride miles and miles without seeing a house.

One sure thing there are no dreadful electrical storms here as in Ohio, very little thunder and lightning.

Fruit in Stephens Co., northern Washington, especially cherries, was in September literally spoiling on the trees. Trees were heavily loaded. Peaches are raised in this section, but they have not the delicious flavor as those raised in Ohio due largely to irrigation. Prunes of many varieties, also apricots are a fruit much raised about us and are very fine. I will enclose a statement concerning a new fruit pest, always something new coming in every line.

"That fire blight is causing the destruction of trees in orchards in Spokane and vicinity, as well as in other parts of the state and in Oregon and California this year is the statement of J. C. Goodner, state horticultural inspector, here Saturday inspecting trees in orchards. He told at one place of having found fire blight, mainly in apple and pear trees in the Moran prairie section as in orchards in the southeast section of the city along the Riverview car line.

At each place where this trouble was found he left instructions that within 10 days the affected branches be cut off at least 12 inches below the affected parts and the cut swabbed or washed with a solution of corrosive sublimate, composed of one part of the poison to 1000 parts of water, which amounts to about an ounce of the poison dissolved in eight gallons of water.

He told of the blight affecting the trees in one section of California this season to the extent of reducing the out put of pears from 50 carloads last year to five carloads of perfect fruit this year."

There are many Indians in Spokane and one of the city street car lines always let them ride free. One very old Indian with many bullets in his body, who is extremely lame, may be seen going (on the car) up town to various places where a dime is given him daily by the proprietors. One restaurant always has a box of food for him which he carries home to his squaw.

"The Interstate Fair" for Oregon, Washington and Idaho, is this week in session with larger crowds than any year previous. A couple were going to be married in the baloon, but that exploded so the ceremony took place in front of the grandstand. All the merchants and grocers presented the couple with presents.

Respectfully,
ALICE YOUNG

TAFT ON TEDDY;
TEDDY ON TAFT;
LA FOLLETTE ON BOTH.

President Taft: "I think it would be dangerous to put a man with Mr. Roosevelt's present constitutional views and with the intoxication he would necessarily feel by reason of having gotten something that all the great presidents never got—it would not be safe to put him in the White House again."—From Steubenville speech, May 13, 1912.

Theodore Roosevelt: "Mr. Taft need never again explain what he means by government of the people by a 'representative part' of the people. He has shown in actual practice that he means government of the people by the politicians, who shall misrepresent them in the selfish interest of someone else." — From Chicago speech, June 17, 1912.

Senator La Follette: "Neither Mr. Taft nor Mr. Roosevelt, as shown by their records, stand for those principles which the really progressive demand. Call the roll of the great principles for which the progressive movement stands and note the most perfect agreement between the records of Taft and Roosevelt." — La Follette's Magazine, June 1 and 8, 1912.

IS IT NOT PLAIN THAT BOTH TAFT AND TEDDY SHOULD BE BEATEN?

TEDDY GIVEN DOSE OF OWN MEDICINE

LA FOLLETTE BUILDS A FIRE UNDER THIRD TERM PARTY.

United States Senator Robert M. La Follette, the pioneer progressive of Wisconsin, has blistered the Third Term party movement with sizzling charges made against the leader of that organization.

In the last issue of his weekly magazine, Senator La Follette declared that Roosevelt is engaged with Geo. W. Perkins, Steel trust magnate, and others in a form of campaign conspiracy which is founded on fraud and trickery for vote catching, which makes the "stolen nomination" fade into insignificance.

Here are some of the indictments brought by Senator La Follette against the candidate seeking a third term:

Roosevelt's confession of faith is a confession of guilt.

Roosevelt is in a conspiracy with Perkins and others to catch votes by fraud.

Third termer offered to let La Follette write every word of the platform if he (La Follette) would get out of the race.

La Follette refused, because he believed Roosevelt to be a fake progressive.

During seven years in the White House, Roosevelt did nothing to reduce tariff duties.

"How do you stand on me?" is Roosevelt's sole test of qualification for a Progressive.

When Roosevelt became president there were 149 trusts in the United States. When he turned the office over to Taft there were 10,020 corporations in combinations.

Roosevelt remains silent on the overcapitalization of railroads and industrial organizations, because he otherwise would lose the financial support of Perkins, McCormick and other trust magnates.

One of the most important parts of the article is devoted to attempts which Roosevelt made to get La Follette to withdraw in his favor from the race for the Republican nomination. The negotiations were carried on through a group of senators and others friendly to La Follette, to whom Roosevelt intrusted the message that if he were nominated La Follette could write the platform, and that not a single comma of the original draft would be changed.

La Follette's reason for his refusal to go into the deal promises to match in current interest Henry Clay's "I'd rather be right than be president." Briefly, they were that Roosevelt was a fake progressive, and that he would violate pledges made in a platform as easily as he violated his pledge against a third term.

"GOOD WORK FOR 'TIM.'"

Big Newspaper Places O. K. on Democratic Attorney General.

"'Tim' Hogan, as he is known all over the state, has been in office two years. He is one of the hardest workers at the state house, has given personal attention to the important matters at issue, and has handled his office without political bias. He has made an excellent record and was eulogized at the state convention by his party for the good work he had done. He gave his personal services to the graft trials of indicted senators, and contributed largely to the successful prosecution of the cases. He will perform the same services in the cases yet to be tried."—Cleveland Plain Dealer, Sept. 27, 1912.

HOWLAND ABUSES ROOSEVELT

IN HIS SPEECH AT MEDINA OPENING HIS CAMPAIGN FOR A FOURTH TERM IN CONGRESS

Frank J. Wood, His Opponent on the Roosevelt Ticket, Also Comes in for a Long, Vituperous Personal Attack.

A few excerpts from editorials in the Medina Gazette, for over 50 years the leading Republican newspaper in Medina County.

Mr. Howland in his opening campaign speech at Medina, in part said:

"After the Chicago Convention General Order No. 1 was issued from Oyster Bay, that every man who did not deny that he was a Republican and swear allegiance to THEODORE, THE FIRST would have to be destroyed politically and General Order No. 1 was promulgated in Ohio by the provincial Viceroy, Mr. Jim Garfield." * * "I take no orders from Mr. Roosevelt or from Mr. Garfield or THE LITTLE BUNCH OF DISCREDITED POLITICIANS that are seeking today to assassinate and destroy the Republican party. Is that plain?"

"He (Mr. Howland) proceeded to an attack on Theodore Roosevelt of the stereotyped abusive kind; dealt defensively with the Reciprocity question; made an appeal for Mr. Taft, whom he declares he supports loyally, but at the same time brought along with him to speak for him (Howland) a Mr. Heald, representing himself to be a progressive of finest rare serene, who repudiated Taft in his speech of the same evening—but supported Howland. This great friend of Taft, who in his speech dramatically, even histrionically declared that he was for Taft always in fair weather and foul, brought along with him from Cleveland a campaigner who spoke for him, but repudiated Taft. Oh, unselfish, generous friend of Mr. Taft!"

HOWLAND OFFERED DEAL WITH WOODS

"I would have made a DEAL with Frank (Woods) if Frank would have come to me and said 'Now, Paul, I will run you for Congress in the twentieth if you will support me for Congressman at Large.' I would have made a DEAL with Frank, if Frank would have made a DEAL with me, he would have been nominated for Congressman at Large."—(From Howland's Speech at Medina)

Great Howland! He does not seem to think the rank and file of the Republican party would have anything to say about who was to be Congressman at Large. He, Howland, could name him if Frank would make a DEAL to re-elect Howland. This Great Statesman (?) brazenly announces in a public speech his willingness to make DEALS for his own advancement. That this is nothing new for Mr. Howland is indicated by the following from the Medina Gazette, the leading Republican paper of Medina County regarding the appointment of Mr. Orr as Postmaster at Medina.

"As to Mr. Orr's appointment: He (Orr) said and said repeatedly and said to many who can witness it, that he had Mr. Howland's flat promise of the Medina postoffice long before Mr. Howland's first nomination in return for political services to be rendered by Mr. Orr as congressional committeeman in securing Mr. Howland's first nomination. Mr. Orr repeated this fact of the political promise of the Medina postoffice during several years before he got it—sometimes very vigorously. We don't believe Dr. Orr was prevaricating about it. He isn't that kind of man."

This propensity for making DEALS may be the reason for Mr. Howland's persistent and untiring record in voting for the Woolen Trust, the Farm Machinery Trust, the Steel Trust and the Sugar Trust, and against the interests of his constituents.

This record is shown up by the Medina Gazette, for over 50 years the Leading Republican paper of Medina County in an editorial in its issue of Oct. 11, as follows:

HOWLAND'S TREACHERY TO THE PROGRESSIVES

"Mr. Howland in his speech (and repeatedly) insinuates personal treachery to himself on the part of friends in Medina, bad faith and disloyalty. We here will quote his remarks of last Saturday night (especially directed to the Gazette) along this line. He said:

'For some reason or other—I am unable to tell exactly why—I have been informed, and I got pretty good notice of it in the primaries, last May, that Howland was not as popular in Medina County as he used to be. Why, when I used to come down here to Medina County, I was received, you know, most cordially, by certain people, and they could not say enough nice things about me in the paper, and everything was 'What a nice fellow Howland is!' And now it is all changed, all changed you know, but I want to say to you good people right here in Medina, I am just the same fellow I was a few years ago, only I know a little more. I know a little more."

Yes, Mr. Howland, you may be the same fellow you were a few years ago, but we know a little more, too. How we came to know was by your votes in Congress—by what you did in Washington rather than by what you said back here in Ohio. And it did all change. We regret from the bottom of our heart that it did, for hadn't the Gazette been your first newspaper support in your first campaign for Congress? And hadn't we (and honestly as we then believed) said you would be a man who would vote in Congress as you spoke at home? Who more than we could have wished your success? Then came the progressive movement, when congressmen were put to the test. And didn't we see and hear you declare most vociferously in a public speech at a progressive meeting in Cleveland how utterly opposed you were to Cannon and Cannonism, fairly shaking the table and glasses as you pounded and thundered opposition to Cannon—500 miles away? And then, within a few days didn't you line up again with the Cannon crowd at Washington and vote, in a decisive and critical congressional struggle, to give to Cannon the appointment of the House members of the special committee that was to investigate the Ballinger-Pinchot differences?

Oh Mr. Howland, things did change and changed then. You were not squaring your word with your vote. And you didn't do so as you continued to line up in Congress week after week with the Payne-Cannon crowd on other issues, and notably against the progressive Republicans in tariff law-making. The Progressive Republicans in the House could not rely upon you—did not rely upon you and you were not one of them. You and you alone have called yourself a progressive. No one else recognized in you a progressive—exthings about you in the paper," exactly as you say. We could speak in your praise no longer. But the reason was not personal, it was not treachery—it was because of your own double-dealing with the progressive cause."

cept for home consumption. Your progressiveness, what there was of it, waited on political expediency ever and always.

HOWLAND'S RECORD

61st Congress

Voted for Cannon for Speaker.

Voted for Payne-Aldrich Tariff Bill.

Voted against giving State Courts jurisdiction over Foreign Corporations doing business in a State.

Voted against taking appointment of members of the Ballinger-Pinchot committee out of the hands of Cannon and placing it with the House.

Voted to sustain Cannon and his infamous rules on practically every motion.

62nd Congress

Voted for FREE TRADE with Canada on Farm Products under Reciprocity Bill.

Voted AGAINST FARMERS' Free List BILL, framed to relieve the farmer from the extortions of the Farm Machinery Trust.

On bill to tax white phosphorus matches, a bill framed to protect the employees of match factories from the terrible disease called "Phossy mouth," Howland did not vote. He did not wish to offend the Wadsworth Match Trust.

On adopting Conference report to the Sherwood Pension Bill Did not vote.

Mr. Howland claimed to be a friend to the old soldiers but he did not take interest enough to vote on this important measure.

Voted against providing jury trials in cases of indirect contempt.

Voted against reducing cotton duties.

Voted against reducing the Infamous Woolen Schedule.

Voted against reducing duties on Steel.

Voted against Free Lumber.

Voted to sustain Taft's vetoes on every bill passed by the Progressives of both parties in the interest of the Common people and for the reduction of the high cost of living.

Mr. Howland's record shows him merely a tool of Cannon, Payne, Aldrich and Taft.

He has voted for every measure designed to help the trusts and against every measure to relieve his constituents from the extortions of the Trusts. HIS DEALS HAVE ALL BEEN MADE FOR HIMSELF AND HIS TRUST FRIENDS.

ABOUT PEOPLE AND PLACES

By November 5th Col. Roosevelt ought to be strong enough to bear the burden of defeat.

—o—

J. A. White of Columbus, attorney for the Ohio Anti-Saloon league, spoke in Painesville churches Sunday.

—o—

The petit jurors scheduled to report on Monday next will not appear in common pleas court until after election, Thursday, November 7th.

—o—

Schools will be dismissed on Friday of this week to allow the teachers to attend the annual meeting of the Northeast Ohio Teachers' association.

—o—

For the first time in over three years a quorum failed to show up at the council meeting on Monday evening and after a wait of one hour the meeting was declared adjourned.

—o—

Motorman O. B. Allen, of Geneva, is substituting as night dispatcher at the C. P. & E. office in Willoughby while the regular dispatcher is on his vacation. Mrs. Allen was at A. Perry's part of last week.

—o—

Dr. John Wesley Hill, America's PREMIER orator and Homer Harper Lake county's PREMIER orator both on the same platform at the same time ought to satisfy the heart of every standpatter who loves a wind jamming campaign.

—o—

The "Bryan heresies" which Campaign Manager Perkins wanted to defeat with a half million dollars of widows' and orphans' insurance money are the same "heresies" which Col. Roosevelt has stolen and is now trying to parade as his own.

—o—

Editor C. A. Corbin of the Ashtabula Standard was in Painesville Tuesday. Mr. Corbin is predicting the election of part of the democratic county ticket in Ashtabula county, and says Taft will be third in the race for President in that county.

DEMOCRATIC RALLY!

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 26th

The Political Issues of the Campaign will be discussed by

HON. NEWTON D. BAKER
Mayor of Cleveland

HON. WM. GORDON
Candidate for Congress

And other speakers, Including C. W. Stage of Cleveland, and Lake county candidates.

SCHEDULE OF MEETINGS

| | |
|---|---|
| Wickliffe Shops | 11:30 a. m. |
| Willoughby Park | 1:30 p. m. |
| Madison Park | 4:00 p. m. |
| Painesville Park | 7:30 p. m |

If inclement weather forbids outdoor meetings, public halls will be provided.

All citizens, including the ladies, are cordially invited to attend these meetings.

The stand-pat faction of the republican party held a rally on the public park in Painesville last Monday night. The band was called out and a large crowd was attracted to the meeting. While the oratory was the very best, the audience did not enthuse with the old time vigor of a republican rally, and it looks like a bad year for Taft.

Mayor Baker of Cleveland has taken steps to secure for Cleveland under the home rule amendment to the State Constitution adopted September 3, 1912, a charter of its own making. He recommends that the Council pass an ordinance for submission to voters of the question "Shall a commission be chosen to frame a charter?" immediately upon the amendment becoming effective Nov. 15th.

—o—

Hon. N. V. Brower, of North Madison, was in Painesville Wednesday. Mr. Brower has long since retired from politics and business, and lives the quiet life of a country gentleman, but he takes a lively interest in the political issues of the day, and predicts an overwhelming victory for the democrats this year. Senator Brower served twelve years in the Iowa state senate and went through some stirring campaigns in that state and knows the inner workings of politics.

—o—

The trouble the politicians are experiencing in making the whirlwind finish to this campaign which they would like to command is not far to seek. Ever since early spring our people have been beset and pestered by the political aspirants and orators until they are tired and resentful. No matter what the new methods that are being employed may be called or intended to achieve, they are mighty expensive, burdensome and irritating. Politicians of various kinds will in due time be made to realize that it is impossible to keep the voters at white heat all the time. Human nature cannot stand the strain or will not. The ready volunteers for the salvation of the country are not being taken as really meaning all they profess to stand for. Truth in politics is lying in a deeper well than ever before, and patient seekers after it are not so manifest as they sometimes have been. Still they are many. The prodigious din that has been kept up practically over six months has gotten on the nerves of even those among the long-suffering who are truly patriotic. Throughout this state, at any rate a spirit of reserve seems to be spreading among the voters. Most of them are not talking politics, or declaring what they propose to do when they enter the booths and stand alone with their God and a pencil. Hence in a period when party lines are being crossed as seldom before in our national history, it is not an easy matter to determine with any assurance what is going to happen to us in a situation so unprecedented it is not to be wondered at that folks are preparing to vote as they please, and that at the same time the interest with which the returns will be watched for on election night is to be of the liveliest sort.

"Shall We Shoot The Old Preacher?"

A speaker before the Rock River (Ill.) Methodist conference threw the gathering into a turmoil when during an address he shouted:

Shall we shoot the old preacher?

"We might as well shoot them," he explained, "as let them starve on the pitiably small income which some of them have. Shooting them would be more humane. They have served long and useful lives. Why should their last days be spent in want and suffering?"

But not only the old preachers are illy paid. The average pay for clergymen of all denominations is $773 a year. Think of it! Just $47.75 per month, less than $12 a week.

No wonder the laborers are few while the vineyard is calling for help. No wonder young men are going into other professions than the ministry. It takes a man of courage these days to become a minister of the gospel for the work is plenty and the reward on earth is small. The trouble apparently with the majority of the churches today is that members believe their clergymen should be satisfied here on earth with thoughts of the reward he is to get in heaven.

The only available statistics on the incomes of ministers as a whole are those which resulted from the religious census taken by the government in 1906, and published two years ago. The average derived from data contributed by 164,000 ministers of 100 denominations showed the Unitarians at the top of the list with an average salary of $1,652. Then in order come the Universalists with $1,228, the general convention of the New Jerusalem with $1,233, the Jewish with $1,222, the Presbyterian with $1,177, the Reformed with $1,170, the United Presbyterian with $1,096 and the Congregationalist with $1,042. But the average in all denominations for places below the rank of fourth-class cities and for the rural districts was $575.

JUDGE BURROWS BOLTED THE REPUBLICAN PARTY IN 1872

In 1872 when Grant, the Great Civil War Hero, was a candidate for his second term, Judge Burrows not only bolted the Republican Ticket, but ran as a Presidential Elector on the Democratic Ticket.

It is also well known that in the congressional campaigns of '74 and '76, Judge Burrows not only bolted the republican ticket but bitterly denounced James A. Garfield.

In his speech at the Taft-Harper campaign opening on Monday evening, Judge Burrows heaped vituperous abuse on Ex-President Roosevelt and his supporters for daring to be independent. Judge Burrows referred to the third party movement in Grant's time, but he left his hearers in blissful ignorance of the fact that he was an ardent supporter of that movement.

He referred to the glorious history of the Republican Party and invoked the names of those illustrious leaders, Grant, Blaine and Garfield, but he neglected to inform his audience that he denounced and abused these men when they were living just as vehemently as he now abuses and denounces Roosevelt and his followers.

Oh, Consistency, thou art a Jewel!

THE BRYAN MEETING

THE COMMONER AT CLEVELAND MONDAY NIGHT ENTHUSES THOUSANDS

Many Lake County People Attend the Meeting and Pronounced Mr. Bryan's Effort the Greatest of His Life

From ten to twelve thousand people waited three hours in Central Armory, Cleveland, Monday night, to hear Mr. Bryan discuss the political questions of the campaign. Every one present was well rewarded for the long wait.

Mr. Bryan was at his best. He had not spoken ten minutes before he had the great audience with him to a man. Shouts of laughter were the responses to his wit and sarcasm. Time and again the great crowd rose to its feet and cheered the telling and earnest arguments of the speaker, and as quickly as they gave shouts of approval men and women settled into their seats and leaned forward eager not to lose one word that this most remarkable orator might have to say.

Tears came to the eyes of thousands of Cleveland men as Mr. Bryan, in plain, simple and kindly words paid his tribute to the memory of the late Mayor Johnson. His earnestness and eloquence in speaking of the causes back of panics was the climax of his speech, and to this part of his speech ten thousand voices shouted their approval. The great crowd went fairly wild in its enthusiasm. In the closing words when Mr. Bryan, with the earnestness of a crusader, and in a tone of voice heavy, but with the musical sound of a great bell, pointed out "the way" and named the "man of the hour" he had the crowd with him in a degree of earnestness the like of which was never seen before.

GIRL IS MURDERED BY THE ROADSIDE

YOUNG WOMAN TAKEN BY FIVE MEN IN AUTO TO LONELY POINT AND SLAIN.

VICTIM IS SHOT TO DEATH

Five Bullets Are Fired Into Female's Body Which Was Clad in Costly Attire and Valuable Jewels Had Not Been Taken.

Bridgeport, Conn.—Taken by five men in an automobile to a lonely point on the main road between Bridgeport and Stratford, Conn., a young and handsome woman was deliberately shot to death by the roadside.

The victim, when found with five bullet wounds in her body, was clad in costly attire and her valuable jewels had not been taken. The motive for the killing is a blank mystery, although on learning that she had come recently from Chicago the police formed a theory that she might have been a dangerous witness in some criminal case there.

Three Men Captured.

After shooting the girl, the five men, who had sent the chauffeur on ahead in the car, abandoned the machine and fled into the woods. Three of them were captured within two hours.

Two of these were traced by a Stratford posse of constables and citizens to Bilberry swamp, two miles from the scene of the tragedy. They were hiding in the thick undergrowth and were completely exhausted from running through the forest.

The men said they were Francisco Pizzicheni, a restaurant keeper at 39 Union Square, Bridgeport, and James Mattio of No. 110 Southav, Bridgeport.

The third man was captured on the main road, a mile from the scene of the girl's death, by Herbert M. Booth of Stratford. He carried a 38 calibre revolver, which had several empty chambers. He was in such a condition that he could not give his name.

All were taken to the Bridgeport jail. The police learned that the five men drove up to the restaurant at 39 Union Square early in the evening and had the hired car wait for them. When they left the restaurant the girl was with them.

They ordered the chauffeur, William B. Hall, to drive to the Stratford Inn at Stratford, but when they got there they told him to drive on toward Paradise Green. They had taken champagne along in the car and were laughing and talking in loud voices.

Posse Is Organized.

Arriving at Paradise Green, Hall was told to "just keep on going," and they did not stop until they reached a dark and lonely strip of the road in the Putney district seven miles from Bridgeport.

There all the men and the girl left the machine. One of the men said to Hall:

"Now you just drive up the road a piece and then come back."

Hall had gone about 400 yards when he was startled by the reports of five pistol shots in rapid succession. He heard no other sound, not a cry, not a spoken word. He whirled the car about and sped back. There was no sign of the men or the girl. He put on full speed and gave the alarm to Stratford.

The posse was organized within half an hour. On the road they met a peddler who had found the body of the girl. He directed them to it and from there they followed a trail of broken bushes through the woods to Bilberry swamp where they came upon the two fugitives. Returning, they learned of the capture of the third man.

Pizzicheni and Mattio told a story of having been invited by another man to take a taxicab ride and having been put out of the cab on the road. They said they hadn't seen any young woman.

SHOW SIGN OF PROSPERITY

Receipts of Internal Revenue $5,000,000 Greater So Far This Year Than for Same Period in 1911

Washington, D. C.—"The receipts of internal revenue are $5,000,000 greater so far this fiscal year than they were for the same period in the last fiscal year," said Commissioner Cabell of that bureau. "The figures show that the consumption of beer, spirits and tobacco is increasing immensely, a sign that prosperity is at the flood.

"The increase is general in all lines of our work. If business throughout the country is as active and prosperous as the industries we collect revenue from, then everything is booming."

Vaudeville Actress Is Dead.

New York City.—Mabel Hite, well known as a vaudeville actress and as the wife of Mike Donlin, baseball player for the Giants and Pittsburg, died in her home in this city.

Miss Hite had been in poor health for more than a year. Last June she was operated on for an intestinal cancer. After the operation she did not rally and resorted to Christian Science treatment which seemed to improve her health for a time. Septicaemia developed a few days ago and was the immediate cause of death.

Two Dancers Delay Train.

St. Paul, Minn.—Transcontinental traffic was delayed for five minutes in the Union depot because Miss Alice Nielsen and Mlle. Jeska Swartz, stars of the Boston Grand Opera Co., chose to dance the turkey trot, the grizzly bear and the baby glide on the platform.

Conductors, with right hand raised to give the "highball" sign, stood rigid, firemen let their steam go down, porters dropped arm loads of suitcases and all stared and smiled while the two song birds danced.

VICTIM'S REVENGE

TELLS WHY HER COUNTRY FIGHTS

QUEEN OF GREECE IS INTERVIEWED BY A SPECIAL NEWSPAPER CORRESPONDENT

NOT AFTER MORE TERRITORY

Aims to Succor Women, Children and Men Suffering the Barbarities of Turkish Misrule—Wars for Humanity.

By Gordon Rose.

Special correspondent of the I. N. S., with the Greek army, via Athens.—I had the good fortune to travel on the American Lloyd steamer Prega from Brindisi to Corfu with her majesty, the queen of Greece, from whom I obtained an exclusive statement for the I. N. S. Her majesty traveled with her usual lack of ostentation and was accompanied only by one lady in waiting and a courier.

It was many years since I had seen her and I thought I could recognize in her strong, thoughtful face new lines, perhaps from the worries and cares of the past few weeks. Queen Olga, who is an aunt of the czar, carries herself as one would from a queen. Although dressed sombrely in black, the only touch of lightness was her gray hair and the natural briskness of her face, which was illuminated by her smile of recognition.

Queen Olga spoke freely and declared that as a devout Christian she had a message for the women of Christendom through the world. She said:

Tells of Turkish Barbarities.

Greece does not fear to throw herself into the scale. She does not fear for what she may lose, nor has she any hope of territorial aggrandizement. Greece, like the other Balkan states, has a solemn duty, that of succoring Christian women and children and men suffering the barbarities of Turkish misrule. It is a strange phase of history that has made Greece the champion of Christendom whilst the great powerful Christian nations stand aside, but this is not a question of politics—it is a question of humanity. War can hold no horrors as bad as those of peace under Turkish flag.

"There will be many families in destitution because those breadwinners who have not carried the colors have come forward as volunteers. There will be many widows, many women weeping for sons who will not come back. Privation and perhaps starvation will be added to the empty chair of him who comes home no more.

To Aid People in Distress.

"Greece will do all she can to aid her people in distress, but Greece is so small and the distance is so vast that her women will sell their jewels and finery to provide for the stricken, just as they did in the last war. If the women of the great Christian nations who are not asked to sacrifice their men in this latter day crusade would but sacrifice the smallest fraction of their comforts and luxuries for a few weeks, then the men would fight with lighter hearts, knowing that their dear ones are not starving at home. Greeks throughout the world are filled with enthusiasm. From all over Europe and Egypt and even America every incoming ship brings a load of patriots. Their enthusiasm is solid. They do not cheer or shout on this grim business. They take it earnestly. If the enthusiasm and grit of the poor man who risks his all means anything, then there is food for reflection in the question of how much civilization has borrowed from Greece."

Men Attack Married Woman.

Annapolis, Md.—Five men are under arrest at the Ironton county jail and armed men are scouring the country in search of eight others who attacked Mrs. Lillie Mullane of Richmond, Va., who with her husband was walking cross country in search of health.

Mrs. Mullane, who is only 19 years old, was with her husband, T. H. Mullane. They were stopped at the point of a revolver and while four of the men seized the woman, the others attacked Mullane.

Young Girl Shoots and Kills.

New York City.—"He dared me to shoot him. Then he double dared me and I pulled the trigger. Honest, I didn't know the gun was loaded, for if I did I wouldn't have even touched it, let alone shoot him."

Jennie Winters, eight-year-old daughter of David Winters of Mahwah, N. J., thus simply told County Physician Armstrong how she had caused the death of Lem Hammond, 22, employed in the railroad car brake foundry at that place. The shooting took place in a boarding house.

ROOSEVELT MUST REST

WOUND IS STILL WIDE OPEN AND OOZING SERUM

Colonel, Although Fretting Over Quiet, Is Compelled to Obey Doctor's Instructions.

Oyster Bay, N. Y.—Col. Roosevelt is resting easily at Sagamore Hill, although fretting over the quiet he must endure in the thick of a bristling campaign. The ex-president's physicians gave out this bulletin, impressing their insistence that Roosevelt devote himself to solid rest:

"Col. Roosevelt has stood the journey well, but of course is tired. The wound is still wide open and oozing serum. Rest and quiet are essential to him, to avoid possibilities of wound infection. While Col. Roosevelt is extremely anxious to take up the work of the campaign we are not willing to say at this time when that will be possible."

This bulletin seemed to indicate that the ex-president, after his long trip, had lost ground, but the physicians explained that the only change in the wounded colonel's condition was utter fatigue. That, they said, was a natural consequence of the shaky ride on the train. Dr. Lambert, pinned down to a question as to whether the ex-president might be obliged to forego the contemplated speech at Madison Square Garden, Oct. 30, said: "That is something to be decided later. We don't know yet that he can make that speech, but we hope so. It depends on how fast he recuperates."

"Does the danger from infection gravely menace him?" was asked.

"No, I should say the danger is about gone," replied the surgeon. "But he needs watching."

Appreciates Nurses.

Chicago, Ill.—Miss Margaret Fitzgerald and Miss Blanche Welter, the two nurses who took care of Col. Theodore Roosevelt while he was confined in Mercy Hospital, are wearing solid gold "Bull Moose" pins. Before leaving Chicago Col. Roosevelt requested that Medill McCormick express the appreciation of his friends to the two young women for their kindly care of their distinguished patient. Mr. McCormick not only sent each of the young women a letter, but also inclosed solid gold "Bull Moose" pins.

MME. SARAH BERNHARDT 68

Famous Actress Is Presented With Congratulatory Address by Her Admirers in Great Britain.

London, Eng.—Great Britain tendered Mme. Sarah Bernhardt a national tribute here October 23 in honor of her birthday, and the eminent actress took advantage of the occasion to correct a widespread error as to her age.

"Under ordinary circumstances," she said, "and had I been 20 years younger, the question of my age would not have troubled me in the slightest degree. As it is, however, Father Time and I have been old friends for so long that I feel I can afford to deny him the gratuitous gift of one year of my life, and therefore I take leave to state that today is my 68th birthday—not my 69th. To the young the question of one year cannot appear of any moment at all, but when one approaches three-score years and ten, however generous one may wish to be in other matters, one cannot give away a whole year, so I hope my dear English friends will revise their reckoning of my age and give me credit for two full remaining years of life in the sixties."

1,000 Lose Lives in Typhoon.

Manila, P. I.—More than 1,000 lives were lost and property damage totalling more than $10,000,000 was caused by a typhoon which swept several islands in the Philippine group on Oct. 16, according to messages just received here by the military authorities. On the island of Cebu alone a hundred persons were killed, including three Americans, and 2,000 were made homeless. Six steamers were sunk and a hotel was wrecked. The property damage on the island is estimated at $3,000,000.

Freed of Murder, Would Wed.

Newark, N. J.—A little matter of law prevented Florence Bromley, author of the "Bunny" letters and the woman in the case, from becoming the wife of Allison MacFarland within an hour after his acquittal of the murder of his wife. The marriage license clerk had proceeded half way in his preparation of the license permitting them to wed when discovery was made that Miss Bromley had not brought along the decree of divorce from her former husband. The law demands the production of this document.

EXPERTS SAY COUNTY TREASURY WAS LOOTED OF $291,000.

Examiners Tell Story of Padded Bills and Astounding Corrupt Situation in Their Report.

Columbus, O.—An appalling story of how a coterie of alleged crooked officials and contractors are said to have robbed the taxpayers of Darke county is set forth in the report of a special examination on that county, made by Examiners L. B. Harvey and John A. Bliss of the state accounting bureau, just given out.

It is claimed that the public treasury was looted right and left by padding of bills, stealing of public property, paying for work never done, paying for contracts twice over and paying for labor and material at exorbitant and extravagant prices.

No report ever before filed with the bureau has shown up such an astoundingly corrupt situation.

From August 1, 1907, to Sept. 1, 1912, the total amount of money belonging to the county paid out illegally amounted, it is claimed, to $291,148.54. The grand total of findings for recovery amounts to $44,332.05, and of this sum, $3,123 has been paid, leaving a balance of $41,209.05 for which action will be taken for recovery by the county.

Those involved the deepest in the alleged looting of the public treasury are Ex-County Commissioners M. D. Sippel, William M. Townsend, T. L. Brewer and Contractors Edward Fry and H. J. Fry and Commissioners' Clerk E. K. Lott. There are many others implicated. Sippel is now in the penitentiary, having been sent there for a term of one year.

Recently Townsend was convicted and unless the higher courts reverse their decision, he will soon be in that institution. Others are under indictment and will be tried later.

Of the three commissioners and their clerk, the report says:

"Testimony shows that ex-Commissioners Brewer, Sippel and Townsend and Commissioners' Clerk Lott were not only corrupt, but they conspired with certain contractors to loot the treasury through fraudulent and excessive bills, and the records disclose the fact that Auditor Snyder was guilty of gross misconduct in office by the manner in which he handled said fraudulent and excessive bills and issued his warrants for the payment of the same."

MINISTER DEFENDS SUICIDE

Upholds Death to Dishonor and Offering One's Body as Sacrifice to Principle and Duty.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Suicide, condemned in churches since Christianity began, has been defended in a Los Angeles pulpit by the Rev. C. Ellwood Nash, in a sermon at the Universalist church here.

"Self-destruction could be justified and applauded under certain conditions," the minister declared. "At first there seems to a healthy person no problem at all. We condemn the act even while confessing its fine consistency. But are we not basing this judgment on a narrow definition? That suicide may be ignoble is manifest. May there not be conditions which show it in a better light? Obviously, yes. To prefer death to dishonor, to offer one's body as a sacrifice to principle, to conviction, to duty, deliberately to refuse food that the scant supply may nourish a loved one, to elect the stake rather than betray one's Lord, to obey orders, as a soldier, priest or servant—all these are forms of suicide which we are ready to justify and applaud, and on a broad view they force open the question we thought closed."

TWO FIGHT TO DEATH IN CAFE

Man Plunges Knife in Woman's Body and She Then Gets Possession of Blade, Stabbing Her Assailant.

St. Louis, Mo.—In the crowded Falstaff cafe in the heart of the downtown district, a man and a woman fought to the death at midnight. Neither has yet been identified by the police.

The woman was seated in the cafe with two men and a woman when the unidentified man entered. He went quietly to the woman and she, with a slight apparent concern, left the party and seated herself at another table with the newcomer. While these two talked the three persons with whom the young woman had entered left the cafe. A moment later the throng heard a cry. The man stood above the woman and plunged a knife into her body. She screamed and they struggled into the center of the room where she wrested the knife from the man and stabbed him in the throat. He fell dead and sank down on her body.

Punishes Thief With Hatpin.

Beloit, Wis.—Clad only in her pajamas and armed with a hatpin, Miss Agnes Thornton of Bedford, Mass., a student at Beloit college, routed a burglar whom she found in her room. The young co-ed pursued the burglar through the park and inflicted a dozen thrusts of the hatpin which elicited yells of pain from the fleeing thief and caused him to drop her violin, which he had taken. When Miss Thornton returned to her quarters in the dormitory, all the other co-eds had organized a posse.

Gov. Buys Costly Bed Linen.

Albany, N. Y.—"Yes, I've fitted out the executive mansion nicely for my successor," said Gov. Dix when asked about criticisms made because of the cost of the stock of linen sheets and napery purchased for the mansion.

Within the last few months $2,500 worth of table and bed linen has been bought, some of the sheets costing $47.25 each. Then, too, it cost $9 to mark each of them. The governor denied that the price was extravagant. He said the linen would last for years.

Buckeye Notes

Cincinnati.—The waters of the Ohio river gave up the bodies of two men here within a few hours. Coroner Cox expressed the belief that both had committed suicide. Neither body was identified.

Akron.—George P. Power, prominent real estate man, and Harry Houghton, jr., sales department manager for the Goodrich Rubber Co., were injured in a head-on automobile collision here. Bower's injuries are so serious that he may die.

St. Clairsville.—The Barnesville district conference of the Methodist Episcopal church will be held at Quaker City November 6 and 7. The Steubenville district conference of the same church will be held at East Liverpool November 11 and 12.

Youngstown.—J. J. Mahony of Youngstown was almost instantly killed, H. E. Winslow of Cleveland was seriously bruised and Charles Gregg of Youngstown was fatally injured, when an automobile in which they were riding dashed over a curb and against a house in this city.

Norwalk.—F. W. Watson, for three years proprietor of the Avalon hotel, transferred lease and fixtures to E. C. Eppler, proprietor of the Lima house at Lima.

Wapakoneta.—Deputy Game Warden Robert Martin of this city arrested six violators of the game laws at Fort Loramie and confiscated a large amount of fish and nets and trot lines. The men pleaded guilty and were fined $35 and costs.

Newark.—Prompt action by physicians saved the life of Nettie Rice, aged 3, daughter of John Rice of Utica, when the little one swallowed strychnine pills prescribed for the mother.

Fostoria.—While Mrs. James Decker was driving to this city from her home, west of the city, the buggy was struck by a L. E. & W. passenger train. Mrs. Decker received injuries which may prove fatal.

Berea.—Mrs. Milton Hinds, 35, is suffering from the shock received when two masked men held her up on the street, bound and robbed her. The holdup occurred almost in the heart of the city in the early evening when many persons were on the streets.

Canton.—Katy Manz, 18, who was sent to the Massillon State hospital after her acquittal on grounds of insanity of the charge of murdering her sister, has left the Massillon institution and is in a hospital studying to be a nurse.

Delaware.—While on her way to the annual pumpkin show Jennie Walteman fell from a moving street car and was killed.

Cleveland.—Groping his way stealthily into the pitch dark bedroom where the family of Julius Mayzek lay asleep, Gabriel Nagy, 23, a rejected lover, the police say, opened fire with a revolver into the body of Mathilde Mayzek, 14, whom the young man had been forbidden to woo, killing her instantly.

Columbus.—As he entered the dooryard of his sweetheart's father's home and was met by her brother with an order to leave the premises, Grover C. Shaver drew a knife and thrust it through the heart of Louis Powell before the eyes of his sister, Gladys Powell. Shaver was formerly in Louis Powell's employ and left that employment following a dispute. Miss Powell stands firmly by her lover, and insists that he was justified in killing her brother, for the latter had thrust his hand into his hip pocket as if about to shoot.

Columbus.—There are more automobiles registered at state headquarters from Cuyahoga county than from any other county in the state. That county supplies almost one-sixth of the autos in the state. It has 10,397, while Vinton county has the lowest, showing only 18. Hamilton county has 4,027, Franklin 3,489, Montgomery 2,246, Mahoning 1,673. There are over 65,000 registered in the state.

Fremont.—Soon after a visit to the grave of his son, the late Congressman C. C. Anderson, John J. Anderson, 61, died of heart failure.

Massillon.—The Akron level of the Ohio canal was used for the first time in six years, when 1000 sacks of flour were taken from Canal Dover to Navarre on the canalboat Storm.

Upper Sandusky.—The body of an unknown man, found in the debris of a Big Four railroad wreck, which occurred in July, near Wharton, was identified as Jackson Teamer of Salamanca, N. Y. Identification was made by his brother and the chief of police of Salamanca.

Kenton.—John Kerwin, foreman of an Erie railway construction gang, was probably fatally crushed by an overturned car.

Galion.—A tract of land 150 x 2950 feet was donated to the city by the Erie railroad on condition that it be used for industrial purposes.

Zoar.—Robbers got $15 in Canadian money and a quart of whiskey from the Zoar hotel.

Cincinnati.—Old Soldier Robert Mentzel, 75, of Dayton, has Rip Van Winkle beaten several blocks in the way of being lost and forgotten by the world and then coming back. Mentzel was a soldier in the 178th New York infantry and was honorably discharged in 1864. After living some years with his wife at Fond Du Lac, Wis., he disappeared in 1877 and was not heard from until a few weeks ago when he applied for a service pension.

Dennison.—William Veeck turned over his pay to his wife and then killed himself by drinking acid.

Cleveland.—Two months ago Joseph Prochaska, 66, drew out of bank $600, the savings of a lifetime, and lent the money to a friend. Soon he heard that the friend had left town. Prochaska sat silently day after day, brooding over his lost savings. Finally shutting the doors and windows in the kitchen of his home, he turned on all the gas jets. Then to make sure that death would come, he sat in a chair and fired into his chest a bullet from a rifle.

HIS MIND UP IN THE CLOUDS

Professor Imagined Appeal Was From Fido, and the Situation Became Embarrassing.

A great lover of animals, Professor Dryasdust was much given to having his pet dog sitting beside him at meal times eating tidbits from his own fit the plate.

The other evening he was at a dinner party, and his partner was a very great lady, who was proud of her title.

But the professor paid absolutely no attention to her. His mind had switched off on to some abstruse point and he was lost to the world over the problem.

The duchess did not approve of this, and presently, to attract his attention, she pulled him gently by the sleeve.

Then the professor woke up. Grabbing a half-picked chicken bone from his plate, he thrust it under her startled nose.

"Don't bother just now, Fido!" he said curtly. "Here, take this and go and eat it on the mat, like a good doggie!"

HANDS ITCHED AND BURNED

Abbotsford, Wis.—"My son had eczema on his hands for about one year. The eczema started with a rash. His hands were sore so he could not close them and when he wet his hands they hurt him so he could hardly wash. His hands itched and burned just terrible and if he would scratch them, they would break out into sores. He could not get any rest or sleep, and his hands looked quite bad.

"We had medicine and salve and it kept getting worse all the time. I got some Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and after washing his hands with the Cuticura Soap and putting some of the Cuticura Ointment on two times a day and tying cloths on them for about six months they got well and have not broken out since. Cuticura Soap and Ointment cured him entirely." (Signed) Mrs. Lawrence Kiehl, Feb. 13, 1912.

USUALLY THE CASE.

Wickson—I have been working night and day for the last month.

Dickson—Because why?

Wickson—In order to get enough money ahead to pay for a week's rest in the country this summer.

Height of Assurance.

A man was charged with stealing a horse, and after a long trial the jury acquitted him. Later in the day the man came back and asked the judge for a warrant against the lawyer who had successfully defended him.

"What's the charge?" inquired the judge.

"Why, your honor," replied the man, "you see, I didn't have the money to pay him his fee, so he took the horse I stole."—Lippincott's Magazine.

Knew a Poet's Troubles.

"Had a queer experience recently," said the Billville poet. "Robber held me up on the highway. Didn't have a cent in my pocket—only a poem which I was takin' to the editor."

"Didn't take the poem, did he?"

"No. Read three lines of it, handed it back to me and said 'Friend, here's $2. You need it worse than I do.'"—Atlanta Constitution.

A DOCTOR'S TRIALS.

He Sometimes Gets Sick Like Other People.

Even doing good to people is hard work if you have too much of it to do.

An overworked Ohio doctor tells his experience:

"About three years ago as the result of doing two men's work, attending a large practice and looking after the details of another business, my health broke down completely, and I was little better than a physical wreck.

"I suffered from indigestion and constipation, loss of weight and appetite, bloating and pain after meals, loss of memory and lack of nerve force for continued mental application.

"I became irritable, easily angered and despondent without cause. The heart's action became irregular and weak, with frequent attacks of palpitation during the first hour or two after retiring.

"Some Grape-Nuts and cut bananas came for my lunch one day and pleased me particularly with the result. I got more satisfaction from it than from anything I had eaten for months, and on further investigation and use, adopted Grape-Nuts for my morning and evening meals, served usually with cream and a sprinkle of salt or sugar.

"My improvement was rapid and permanent in weight as well as in physical and mental endurance. In a word, I am filled with the joy of living again, and continue the daily use of Grape-Nuts for breakfast and often for the evening meal.

"The little pamphlet, 'The Road to Wellville,' found in pkgs., is invariably saved and handed to some needy patient along with the indicated remedy."

"There's a reason."

CATHOLICS TURN OUT

BETWEEN 20,000 AND 30,000 IN GRAND PARADE AND RALLY.

Carloads of Members Came From All Parts of the State and Kentucky and Indiana.

Cincinnati, O.—Between 20,000 and 30,000 men marched in the grand parade and rally that was held by the Holy Name society last Sunday. Carloads of members from other parts of the state and Kentucky and Indiana came to Cincinnati to take part in the demonstration.

After the parade through the principal streets of the city services were held on the steps of St. Peter's cathedral, where addresses were made by Joseph W. Conroy, president of the Archdiocesan Union of Holy Name societies; Rev. John F. Hickey, pastor of the Church of the Holy Name, and Archbishop Moeller.

The Holy Name society is centuries old, and has as its chief aim the preservation of the purity of speech and the elimination of taking the name of the Deity in vain under any circumstances.

The Grand Marshal.

Edward Sweeney was grand marshal of the parade. Other officers of the society are: Supreme spiritual director, Very Rev. Joseph A. Shea, president Mt. St. Mary's seminary; president, Joseph W. Conroy, Cathedral parish; vice president, Gen. Michael Ryan, Assumption parish; corresponding secretary, Joseph A. Clark, St. Patrick's parish; recording secretary, E. J. Daly, Sts. Peter and Paul; treasurer, Patrick Corrigan, Holy Name parish; grand marshal, Ed Sweeney, Holy Cross parish; Rev. John F. Hickey, Rev. Joseph Pohlschneider, Rev. P. J. Hynes, Joseph Manz, John Dacey, Frank Armstrong, J. F. McGuire, Joseph Verkamp, August Kuelin, Wm. Colling, M. L. Toomey, Phil H. Herget and Wm. Vogelpohl.

Order of Procession.

The order of the procession was as follows:

Mounted police, Grand Marshal Edward Sweeney and Assistant Grand Marshals Joseph McDermott, J. J. Gilligan, Paul Sullivan and Gen. Theo Schneider; His Grace, the Most Rev. Archbishop, accompanied as a guard of honor by the Very Rev. Joseph A. Shea, D. D., Rev. Joseph Pohlschneider, D. D., Rev. John F. Hickey, Gen. Michael A. Ryan, Messrs. Joseph B. Verkamp and Joseph W. Conroy, executive committee of the Archdiocesan Union of Holy Name societies. First division, Edward Hosty, division marshal, band, St. Edward Holy Name society, St. Ann H. N. ### CHICK SWALLOWS A GEM.

Dayton, Ohio.—A three-quarter carat diamond which disappeared several months ago from a ring belonging to Mrs. Hugo Goetz, of this city, was recovered by Mrs. Goetz while cleaning a young chicken for dinner.

The diamond was stowed away in the folds of the chicken's craw. It is supposed that the chicken, when in its babyhood, found the diamond in the yard, and in ignorance of its worth or digestable properties, swallowed it.

YOUNG HUNTER KILLED.

Millersburg, O.—Herbert Sprang, aged 25, while hunting near Nashville, Holmes county, accidentally shot and killed himself. He was to have been married soon.

TO GAIN TEN MINUTES

Columbus, O.—To gain 10 minutes' time on fast Big Four trains between Cleveland and Columbus change may be made in the route of the railroad so that Delaware, O., may be thrown off the main line. Surveys are now being made to determine whether a new route (really an old one) can be utilized to advantage. Thirty-five years ago when the division was built the town of Delaware refused to make the terms the railroad demanded and as a result the line missed the town.

TO CONDEMN PROPERTY.

Hamilton, Ohio.—City Solicitor Nailan will be asked to bring condemnation proceedings against certain property owners on North Front street. The building committee finds property owners of the proposed site unwilling to sell at the appraised value, and this action is necessary if this site is to be purchased. The appraised value of the property is less than $40,000, but the price set by owners would bring the cost of the site up to $40,000 or more.

VETERANS IN REUNION

Survivors of Fourth Ohio Volunteer Cavalry Meet at Cumminsville.

Cincinnati, O.—A band of 64 survivors of the Fourth Ohio Volunteer cavalry, which originally comprised 2,200 men, gathered at the quarters of the Israel Ludlow Post in Cumminsville for their annual reunion. Though thinned in ranks by the relentless hand of time, the veterans manifested the same spirit that carried them through the fire of many of the bloodiest battles of the civil war, and their enthusiasm ran high as they renewed friendships and recounted the days of the terrific struggle.

John A. Pitts was elected president, and other officers chosen as follows: L. C. Bramkamp, vice president; Lucien Wulsin, jr., secretary; James I. Quinton, treasurer; J. H. Baldwin, chaplain, and Ed D. Lovell and Wm. H. Hendy, standard bearers.

PERRY PASSES AWAY.

Was Fifty Four Years of Age and Had Been at the Head of School Twelve Years.

Marietta, O.—Alfred Tyler Perry, B. A., M. A., and D. D., a former clergyman and professor in the Hartford Theological seminary, who for the past 12 years, has occupied the position of president of Marietta college, and had been a prominent figure in the life of this city, died very suddenly at his residence, 210 Fifth street, death being due to a functional failure of the heart caused by acute indigestion. Funeral services were held in the First Congregational church, and the remains were removed to Hartford, Ct., for burial.

Dr. Perry was born on the 19th day of August, 1858, at Genesee, Ill., and was therefore slightly more than 54 years of age at the time of his death.

It was in 1900 that Dr. Perry was inaugurated president of Marietta college and professor in sociology and Christian evidences. Since that time, with the exception of several months which he devoted to a tour of Europe and the Holy Lands, President Perry has been the constant servant of the college, and continually alive to what he deemed to be the best interest of the school.

FAMOUS FARM BOUGHT

Four Thousand Acre Tract Acquired By United Brethren

Lebanon, Ohio.—The famous Shaker farm of 4,000 acres near here was sold to the United Brethren church to be used as a home for superannuated ministers and missionaries and their wives, and as an orphanage.

The purchase price was $450,000, of which $75,000 will be paid March 1, 1913, when the church assumes possession; $100,000 on January 1, 1918, and $175,000 January 1, 1923.

John H. King, D. D., for the past 18 years superintendent of United Brethren Missions in Africa, will be superintendent of the farm.

The contract was signed on behalf of the church by Rev. W. M. R. Funk and Joseph M. Phillips, on behalf of the Shakers by Joseph Holden, head of the Shaker ministry, Arthur Bruce, Irving Greenwood and James Fennessey.

THREE AND HALF THOUSAND.

Columbus, Ohio.—Franklin county's prosperity September 1 was represented by an automobile enrollment of 3,469. Of these, 321 were dainty, quietly-moving electrics, while the others were roadsters, touring cars, limousines, taxicabs and trucks. The figures were announced by Registrar J. A. Shearer of the state automobile department who has completed his license report for the first nine months of 1912. In point of number the list is led by Cuyahoga county, where licenses for 10,397 machines have been issued.

WELL KNOWN BANKER DEAD.

Columbus, O.—Frederick W. Prentiss, aged 67, president of the Hayden-Clinton National bank, and also of the Columbus clearing house, died at his residence, 706 East Broad street. He was stricken with pneumonia a week before, and, almost from the first, his condition was deemed critical. A man who had risen by the force of his own ability and personality, Mr. Prentiss was one of the best known residents of Columbus and Central Ohio.

BIG POTTERY IS BURNED.

Zanesville, O.—The S. A. Weller Pottery No. 2, Sharon avenue, caught fire and was almost wholly destroyed. Low water pressure aided the flames. Fire Chief Hal Tanner was struck by falling bricks and sustained a broken rib. Loss $65,000, covered by insurance.

DEAL IN WALNUT LUMBER

Xenia, O.—The finest tract of walnut timber in the country, consisting of 128 large trees on the farm of Volcha Weaver near New Burlington, this county, was sold to the Francke Lumber Co. of Cincinnati for $27,000. Firms from all over the United States and Europe have tried for years to buy the trees from Mr. Weaver and their former owners. Men on the ground are removing the trees for the Francke Co., many of them being dug out by the roots.

SEIZE INSANE FIREBUG.

Zanesville, Ohio.—Just as Charles Anderson, aged 24, an insane firebug, was setting fire to a chicken house on his father's farm at Cannelville after he had ignited two residences and a stable, Sheriff John J. Frith and Robert Blarigg, a miner, stole upon him and captured him before Anderson had a chance to draw his revolver.

Anderson had terrorized the neighborhood and 100 persons watched his incendiary work without making an attempt to capture him.

WHO IS PROTECTED?

BENEFITS THAT LABOR GETS FROM THE TARIFF ARE VERY SLIGHT INDEED.

SOME COTTON MILL FIGURES

Fallacy of Republican Arguments Concerning the Textile Trade Is Pitilessly Exposed by Official State Statistics Gathered in Massachusetts.

We have seen in this campaign few things more delicious than the Republican campaign document in which Theodore Justice speaks of the textile trade "where the protective benefits of the tariff nearly all go to labor." Well, if they do they are very slight. The Massachusetts bureau of statistics has shown that while only 52 per cent. of the 654,000 men, women and children in all the industries get less than $10 a week, 75 per cent. of the cotton workers get less than that amount. More than half the wage earners covered by this report receive less than $10 a week. And they are practically all protected. In the Massachusetts cotton mills about half the employes receive less than $8 a week. It was not long ago shown that in one of the highly protected industries 40 per cent. of the employes did not make a living wage.

Figures might be piled high, but those we have given will serve. It may be laid down as a general principle that wages in protected industries are almost without exception lower than those in unprotected industries. Wages of from $7 to $10 a week can hardly be called generous. As a matter of fact they are not enough to enable those who get them to maintain "the American standard of living." There are certain men who talk a great deal about child labor, and who seem to feel that employers kidnap the children and make them work in the mills. The truth, of course, is that in our protected industries wages are often so low that it is necessary for wives and children to go to work in order to help support the family.

It is surprising that Mr. Justice and others like him should think that the American people can longer be fooled by the old "arguments." The figures that disprove the theory are within the reach of all. It is simply absurd to say that in the textile industries "the protective benefits of the tariff nearly all go to labor." The fact is otherwise. In Mr. Lauck's Atlantic article, entitled "A Real Myth," is this:

"A yard of man's worsted suiting was found by the tariff board to cost an American mill $1.71 to place on the market. The rate of payment to the weaver on this cloth was ascertained to be only 5 cents a yard, but the present tariff duty is $1.02."

If we credit to protection the whole 5 cents which the laborer receives—which is absurd, since he would get something, tariff or no tariff—we still have 97 cents of the tariff duty to account for. Manifestly it does not go to the workman, for he gets only 5 cents. We fear that it finds its way into the pockets of the employer. Here is a protective duty of $1.02 designed to cover the difference between labor costs here and abroad and yet the total labor cost is 5 cents. Mr. Justice can hardly expect the American workingmen to accept this statement. If this is the best that protection can do it is in a bad way.—Indianapolis News.

If Taft stands for the "interests," Roosevelt represents the principal and Perkins gets the commission on the deal.

NO DANGER OF A DEADLOCK

Woodrow Wilson Will Easily Have a Majority of Votes in the Electoral College

Those "worried" gentlemen who are wondering what will happen if no presidential candidate gets a majority of the electoral votes this fall may calm their troubled minds if they possess such.

The contingency that is troubling them will not arise.

A gentleman named Woodrow Wilson will have a majority of the votes in the electoral college with a considerable number to spare.

He will have them because he is the only candidate before the country who is basing his campaign on the needs and rights of the whole American people.

He is the only candidate before the country to whom the people can look for a reduction of the high cost of living.

He is the only candidate before the country who is under no obligation to about the tariff, and his mind on this point is the mind of the nation.

He is the only candidate before the country who is under no obligation to special interests, and free to give his entire service to the people.

Mr. Taft wants to be "vindicated."

Mr. Roosevelt wants to wear the jeweled crown of a king.

Governor Wilson wants nothing but an opportunity for public service. He will get it.

Ten Wilson Reasons.

It is conceded by all that the election of Governor Wilson means an immediate downward revision of the tariff. This is the cause of the wild outcry in certain quarters against the election of Governor Wilson.

The wool trust is crying out against the election of Governor Wilson and the downward revision of the tariff.

The cotton mill trust is crying out against the election of Governor Wilson and the downward revision of the tariff.

The harvester trust is crying out against the election of Governor Wilson and the downward revision of the tariff.

The sugar trust is crying out against the election of Governor Wilson and the downward revision of the tariff.

The steel trust is crying out against the election of Governor Wilson and the downward revision of the tariff.

The Aldrich rubber trust is crying out against the election of Governor Wilson and the downward revision of the tariff.

The Guggenheim smelter trust is crying out against the election of Governor Wilson and the downward revision of the tariff.

George W. Perkins, political agent of the Morgan interests and the associated trusts, is crying out against the election of Governor Wilson and the downward revision of the tariff.

Frank A. Munsey, press agent of the steel trust, is crying out against the election of Governor Wilson and the downward revision of the tariff.

Theodore Roosevelt, all things to all trusts, the side show by which the "interests" hope to divert public attention from the real issues of the campaign, is crying out against the election of Governor Wilson and the downward revision of the tariff.

These are ten unanswerable reasons why Governor Wilson should be elected and the downward revision of the tariff should begin.

Tariff Creates Trusts.

The tariff shuts out foreign competition. It creates trusts. It offers a prize for the exploitation of the home consumer and brings forth agencies which do the exploiting.

His Titles to Fame.

Mr. Roosevelt has a number of titles to distinction which his friends with characteristic modesty are refraining from putting forward.

Mr. Roosevelt is the president who completed the monopoly of the steel trust by enabling that trust, in defiance of law, to absorb the Tennessee Coal and Iron company. That is quite a feat in itself.

Mr. Roosevelt is the president who employed the secret service of the United States [illegible] who directed [illegible] to take orders from the White House. This was a work utterly lacking in fame.

Mr. Roosevelt is the president who created the panic which made every bank in the United States suspend payment at the same time. That is a performance which stands alone in the history of the nation.

Mr. Roosevelt's friends ought to mention these things when appealing for votes. There is no profit in being too modest.

One Taft "Dissolution."

After being dissolved in court with great dignity and impressiveness, the Standard Oil company retires to its den at No. 26 Broadway and elects a lot of its employes to be directors and presidents of the various corporations which the court requires it to divest itself of. Some of these made-to-order directors and presidents held a share of stock in the companies to which they were elected, and some did not have even that. One of the Standard's men had been president of a subsidiary company on the basis of a single share of stock for eight years, during all of which he had drawn his salary and done nothing, and never complained of his job. That was before dissolution. The directors and presidents elected since dissolution are equally satisfied with their places.

PIRATE PITCHER IS WELL THOUGHT OF Marty O'Toole, Pittsburg's Star Twirler.

Joe Tinker, captain of the Chicago Cubs, is quoted as saying of Marty O'Toole, the high-priced pitcher of the Pittsburg Pirates: "O'Toole is the best pitcher I have seen in years. He will certainly make good. I believe that free swingers, like Schulte, Mitchell and others of that class, will have unlimited trouble in making base hits off his delivery. The only man who looks to me to have a chance to hit him safely is the one who chokes his bat and chops at the ball. Marty's shoots have such a sharp break that the man who starts a free swing is likely to find his bat going inches under or over the ball as it crosses the plate. O'Toole throws his spitball with the same motion he uses for his straight pitch, and there is no way of telling what he is handing you. He makes the bluff of spitting on the ball every time, and this also fools the batter."

LAVENDER PROVES BIG STAR

Pitcher Is Shunted From One Club to Another Without Trial Finally Shows His Worth.

It is doubtful that any player now operating in the big leagues regards the national commission with more affection than Jimmy Lavender, pitcher extraordinary of the Chicago Cubs. Charley Murphy, owner of the Cubs, picked up Lavender in his draft drag net last fall, but the recruit's name conflicted with one of Charley's vests, so he tried to shunt Jimmy to Montreal without giving him a trial. President Navin of the Detroit Tigers, who owns the Providence Grays, for which team Lavender performed last year, thought Charley was putting something over on him and appealed to the national commission. That body decided Murphy either would have to return Lavender to Providence or keep the pitcher for a year. Murphy could not see Navin get the best of him, so he kept Lavender. And now, behold! Lavender is one of the greatest twirlers in the National league. Jimmy hails from Montezuma county, Georgia, which county threatens to make Royston and Alpharetta of the Cracker state hustle for their honors. Royston gave Ty Cobb to Detroit, and Alpharetta gave Nap Rucker to Brooklyn. Jimmy fooled around the minor leagues for a few years, when he was picked up by one of Connie Mack's scouts. The astute Cornelius took Jimmy on a training trip and then passed him over to Hartford of the Connecticut league. Jimmy tarried in Nutmeg league circles for a year, when he was graduated to the Providence tailenders of the International league. He was with the Grays for two years, when the Cubs procured him. Lavender is the guy who put the "mar" in Marquard's record and made it lively for the Giants all season.

FAMOUS ATHLETE TO RETIRE

Ralph Craig, Wonderful Runner, Who Captured Sprints at Stockholm, Quits the Game.

Athletics is to lose one of its brightest stars. Ralph Craig, the fleet footed American boy who carried the stars and stripes to victory in the Olympic games at Stockholm, Sweden, will not be seen on the cinder path any more. Craig's folks are opposed to the young man following an athletic career and did not want him to contest at Stockholm, but patriotic pride impelled the great runner to go along with the other Americans and it was well for this country that he did. He won glory enough at the Olympic games to last a lifetime. Craig ran two grand races, the 100 and 200 meter events, and easily beat out the fastest sprinters in the world. Craig is a member of the Detroit Y. M. C. A., where his wonderful ability as a runner first attracted the attention of the athletic world.

HARD FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

It's hard enough to keep house in perfect health, but a woman who is weak, tired and suffering all of the time with an aching back has a heavy burden to carry. Any woman in this condition has good cause to suspect kidney trouble, especially if the kidney action seems disordered at all. Doan's Kidney Pills have cured thousands of women suffering in this way. It is the best-recommended special kidney remedy.

AN INDIANA CASE.

"Every Picture Tells a Story."

Mrs. Mary A. Elderkin, South Franklin Street, Pendleton, Ind., says: "I believe Doan's Kidney Pills saved my life. I was in agony with gravel and was confined to bed. I became so bad that I wasn't expected to live through the night. On a friend's suggestion, I used Doan's Kidney Pills and in a short time they cured me. I have not had any symptom of kidney trouble during the past 5 years."

are relieved at once by an application of Sloan's Liniment. Don't rub, just lay on lightly.

"Sloan's Liniment has done more good than anything I have ever tried for stiff joints. I got my hand hurt so badly that I had to stop work right in the busiest time of the year. I thought at first that I would have to have my hand taken off, but I got a bottle of Sloan's Liniment and cured my hand."—WILTON WHEELER, Morris, Ala.

Good for Broken Sinews

G. G. JONES, Baldwin, L. I., writes: "I used Sloan's Liniment for broken sinews above the knee cap caused by a fall and to my great satisfaction was able to resume work in less than three weeks after the accident."

SLOAN'S LINIMENT

Fine for Sprain

MR. HENRY A. VOEHL, 84 Somerset St., Plainfield, N. J., writes: "A friend sprained his ankle so badly that it went black. He laughed when I told him that I would have him out in a week. I applied Sloan's Liniment and in four days he was working and said Sloan's was a right good Liniment."

PLAIN WHY TRUSTS GREW REPUBLICANS CULTIVATED THEM

—SAYS GOVERNOR WILSON

"The Republican party has been in practically complete control of the federal government throughout the greater part of the last 50 years, and throughout that period, the period during which America was gaining her growth and all her national habits, it has followed one invariable and consistent policy; it has fostered every special interest, every body of capital that desired to exploit the natural resources or use the labor of the country to build up wealth. Its argument has been: 'First take care of the interests, and then the interests will take care of the common people; first make big business prosperous, and then big business will make the masses prosperous; first take vast sums of money out of the pockets of the people in the shape of tariff exactions and make everything they buy more expensive, and then pay it back to them, in part, in wages.' The doctrine of the Democratic party has always been, on the other hand, that the aim of government must first be to make the masses prosperous, and that the interests will then prosper as a natural consequence; that the people must first be taken care of, and then the interests will be able to look out for themselves; that the only right government is that which robs no one, but protects all."

HIGH TARIFF CAUSES HIGH PRICES.

Campaign managers of President Taft, who since January 1, 1912, has vetoed tariff bills that would have reduced the high cost of living $650,000,000 a year by lowering tariff duties, are asserting that Taft and the tariff had nothing to do with the soaring prices. They declare that scarcity of gold is partly responsible. That is just what Democrats 16 years ago said would happen.

Reduction in acreage cultivated is another reason assigned and that was predicted when the government was so lavish in grants of land to railroads.

The people are blamed as a contributing cause, because, it is asserted, they multiplied too fast. Taft's managers do not believe that the dividends of 200 and 300 per cent, which trusts pay, and in many instances on millions of watered stock, is in any way responsible. No fault is found with the tariff law which, by keeping out cheaper commodities from other countries with high duties, enables the unscrupulous manufacturer to say to the consumer, "You must pay our price for goods, because you can't get any cheaper."

It is argued that manufacturers and their employes get the benefit of high prices, but THE FACTS SHOW THAT THE PRESENT HIGH PROTECTIVE TARIFFS DO NOT HELP WAGE EARNERS AND THAT WAGE EARNERS IN HIGHLY PROTECTED INDUSTRIES RECEIVE LOWER WAGES THAN WORKERS IN UNPROTECTED INDUSTRIES. THE WAGES OF UNPROTECTED INDUSTRIES, SUCH AS PLANING MILLS, FLOUR MILLS, SHIPBUILDING PLANTS, ETC., RANGE FROM 10 TO 45 CENTS AN HOUR MORE THAN THE WAGES OF WORKERS IN THE COTTON AND WOOLEN MILLS, WHICH ARE HIGHLY PROTECTED.

The result of protective duties is always an increase in prices much greater than in wages. Byron W. Holt, tariff expert, stated in 1910: "Since 1896, prices have risen about 60 per cent, while money wages have risen about 26 per cent." The increase in prices has caused the consumer to pay $21,882,500 more each year in profits to dealers alone."

The Strangest of Birds.

The German emperor was lately the recipient of a pair of very curious birds from the East Indies. The species is nearly extinct, and it is said that an effort will be made to prevent their becoming entirely so by enforcing the laws against hunting them.

These birds always travel in pairs and are hardly ever separated. The beak of the male is short and strong while that of the female is fine, long and curved. The male's work is to break with his strong bill the tough bark of trees in order that his mate may introduce her pointed beak into the holes dug into the trunk by insects and so extract food. When the male detects an "insect haunt" he lays it bare and the female pulls forth the prey with her beak, divides it in two, gives the male his portion and eats the other, continuing the process until both have had enough. Consequently the death of one or the other means starvation to the survivor, the female being unable to break the bark of trees and the male to take out the prey when its presence is exposed.—Harper's Weekly.

He Got It.

"My nephew," says the bespectacled man, "entertained me most generously while I was in New York. He took me almost every evening to one restaurant or another and I heard several most lively songs."

"What were they?" asks the other.

"I do not remember them definitely, but one of them had a refrain which began by stating 'Everybody Is Engaged in a Similar Occupation at the Present Time.'"

A Home Ruler Before Gladstone.

Sir Wilfrid Lawson was a home ruler long before Mr. Gladstone. In 1881, when the Liberal government was engaged in a policy of active repression in Ireland, Lawson, in an address to his constituents at Carlisle, summarized the situation with characteristic shrewdness. "I am convinced of one thing," he said, "that, as surely as I stand here, a disaffected nation, hating the rule of the nation that governs it, is not a source of strength to that country, but a source of weakness to everyone concerned in the matter. Suppose you had a housemaid who was continually breaking the crockery, who went into hysterics once a week and had to be put into a straight waistcoat, and three or four policemen brought in to keep her in order, would you keep her? No, you would say, 'Wayward sister, go in peace.'"—London Chronicle.

Sir Henry Irving a Victim.

Mr Grossmith, the noted English comedian, just deceased, was an inveterate joker, and Sir Henry Irving was once his victim when they were both staying at the same hotel at Manchester. Mr Grossmith, seeing an enormous crowd outside the hotel, said to the porter: "Are these people waiting to see me?" On being told that they were waiting to see Sir Henry he turned up the collar of his overcoat, adjusted his eyeglasses, pulled his soft hat down over his eyes and walked down the steps with the Irving gait. There was great cheering, but when Sir Henry Irving went down later the crowd had dispersed. Afterward when Sir Henry heard of the incident, he said to Mr Grossmith, with a twinkle in his eye: "You ought not to have done that. I pay those people to come here every night."—London Mail.

Chronic Dyspepsia.

The following unsolicited testimonial should certainly be sufficient to give hope and courage to persons afflicted with chronic dyspepsia: "I have been a chronic dyspeptic for years, and of all the medicine I have taken, Chamberlain's Tablets have done me more good than anything else," says W. G. Mattison, No. 7 Sherman St., Hornellsville, N. Y. Sold by all dealers.

Mrs. Lapham entertained the Dock Road Flinch Club on Wednesday.

KEEN BUSINESS MAN.

The chief argument of those advocating the cause of the Third Term Party's candidate for governor is that he was a successful business man. No man in public life today has been more successful in private business than has Congressman James M. Cox of Dayton, the Democratic gubernatorial candidate. Purchasing two wobbly newspapers that were absolutely without merit, style or any other commendable feature and were about ready to lie down and die, Mr. Cox rebuilt the two plants and today there are no more prosperous, influential or progressive newspapers in Ohio. Keen, industrious, ambitious and level-headed, Mr. Cox has displayed a wonderful faculty for energizing and vitalizing concerns coming under his control. He has shown a wonderful faculty for arranging and assembling distinct forces of an organization into corps of harmonious and evenly balanced workers so as to get the best results possible. From the standpoint of business training and experience, no party ever put forward a better equipped man for governor than Congressman James M. Cox.

FARMERS HELPED BY DEMOCRATS

"I shall have something to say about Mr. Cox and his party having failed to discover that there are farmers in Ohio," said the Third Term Party's candidate for governor, while talking in Columbus recently about his proposed speaking tour of the state.

When the Third Termer searches the records and finds just what has been done for the Ohio farmer during the state Democratic administration he will discover that by making the above statement he has made himself ridiculous, for it is an established fact that more has been done for the farmers of Ohio since the advent of Democrats in the state house a few years ago than was done in the 50 years preceding. It was the Democratic party that first discovered the farmers, for their interests had been neglected by Republicans.

A decent respect for the farmer and his calling has been inspired and firmly established. A law has been enacted that values property of railroads and other big corporations up to equality with that of farm property, which before Democrats took hold of the governmental reins in Columbus paid more than its share of taxes. The fertilizer frauds, which existed for years and which were an economic loss of millions of dollars to the agricultural interests, have been eliminated. A state serum and research institute for the protection of live stock interests has been established.

The state appropriation for the suppression and prevention of contagious infectious diseases among live stock was increased by Democrats from $5,000 to $90,000 a year. The orchards are being looked after by experts, over $100,000 have been appropriated during the Democratic regime for five-day agricultural schools in each county of the state, funds for county farmers' institutes have been increased from $22,080 to $30,000 a year, liberal appropriations have been made for running agricultural trains throughout Ohio, thorough and rigid inspections of commercial feeds and fertilizers are being made to protect farmers from unscrupulous dealers, who in the past robbed them of millions of dollars, and no item carrying an appropriation for any of the state's big agricultural institutions has been vetoed during the entire period of Democratic rule in the state house.

One of the crowning events of the administration for farmers is the new law requiring the teaching of agriculture in all country schools—a measure that has been of more benefit to agriculturists than any other single law ever enacted in Ohio. Many other beneficial laws were enacted, the above being a few of the more important.

Dixon was much more anxious to talk about the La Follette and Taft campaign funds than he was about the Roosevelt fund.

EASY TO CHOOSE.

Taft, nominated through a boss-controlled convention; Roosevelt, the most arrogant of the political leaders the country has known for generations, who was nominated by himself with the aid of George W. Perkins' money, and Wilson, nominated by an unbossed convention on a platform that definitely promises tariff revision downward and the abatement of the evils of the trusts.

Can there be any doubt as to the choice intelligent voters will make?

WANTED—Three corn huskers. Five cents per bushel paid. J. S. Stafford, Richmond Road, Painesville.

All Painesville Coughing
Death from a gun-shot wound less to be feared than Death from pneumonia.

A great number of our city's men, women and children have colds and coughs today. The air seems to be fairly laden with these throat and lung troubles. There is great danger of contracting pneumonia or consumption from them. Nearly every case has its beginning in a cold or cough, and many people die as a result. Beware!

A sudden chill, stupefying fever, sore throat, hoarseness, running nose, racking cough, rattling and wheezing in chest, painful breathing, signify that your cold borders on pneumonia.

There are many remedies offered for colds, but there is one certain, reliable article that we know of—DR. BULL'S COUGH SYRUP. It is best for soothing and subduing the inflamed, sore, bronchial tubes and lungs. It wards off pneumonia. It checks a cough at once. Cuts a cold short. Don't wait to see if your cold or cough wears away of itself, as pneumonia may come over night.

Test it first by sending a postal for a free sample. Address A. C. MEYER & CO., Baltimore, Md. But, to have no delay, get a regular bottle of the remedy; price, 25 cents, from your druggist today. This is the best advice we can give to avoid pneumonia. (ADV.)

TEACHERS' EXAMINATION

The Lake County board of examiners will offer examinations for teachers' certificates on the first Saturday of each month in the year 1912. If first Saturday falls on holiday, examinations will be held one week later. Boxwell pupils will be examined the third Saturday in April and the third Saturday in May, 1912. All examinations will be held in the old High School building, Painesville, beginning at 8:15 standard time.

By order of the board
F. H. KENDALL, Clerk,
Painesville, Ohio

NOTICE

Sealed proposals for printing the ballots, cards of instruction and all necessary blanks for the elections to be held throughout Lake County, November 5th, 1912, will be received by the Board of Deputy State Supervisors of Elections of Lake County, Ohio, at the office of said Board, in the Court House, Painesville, Ohio, up to Saturday, October 26th, 1912, at 8 o'clock A. M. Specifications will be on file at the office of said Board on and after October 21st, 1912.

Each proposal for printing must be accompanied by a bond executed in due form by the bidder with at least two good and sufficient sureties, satisfactory to the Board of Deputy State Supervisors of Elections, in the sum double the amount of his bid, conditioned for a faithful performance, pursuant to the contract of such printing as may be awarded to him, and for the payment of liquidated damages by such bidder to the Board of Deputy State Supervisors of Elections of any excess of costs over the bid or bids of such bidder which the Board of Deputy State Supervisors may be obliged to pay for such work by reason of the failure of such bidder to complete his contract, the bond to be null and void if no contract is awarded to him. No bid unaccompanied by such bond shall be entertained by the Board of Deputy State Supervisors of Elections.

C. A. RUSH, Chief Deputy
NEWTON G. STEARNS, Clerk
Painesville, Ohio, Oct. 9th, 1912

MENTOR

The weather has been very fine indeed, most all of this past week, and the trees are a glory. Those of our people who were not too tired on Sunday, from the strenuous work of the week, went for walks and rides, just in order to enjoy the beautiful coloring displayed so lavishly by Nature and her Maker.

The small boy declares there are "lots and lots of nuts this year, 'n you jest ought to see how them burrs are turned jest right side out 'n upside down, jest fer us boys so we kin pick 'm right up from the ground, easy."

Mrs. Warren Rexford spent a portion of this past week visiting with friends in the city.

Mrs. Maurice Markall and her boy baby, of Willoughby, was over here with her mother, Mrs. Eva McCrea, for Saturday and Sunday.

Miss Josephine Baker is spending this week in Lakewood with friends.

Mrs. J. W. Lowe and Mrs. George Marsh gave a reception on Wednesday to about thirty or more of their lady friends, we understand, same being held at the home of Mrs. Lowe. Indeed, receptions and luncheons were quite the rage all last week, as there were no less than four on the docket.

Miss Elizabeth Dunham of Oberlin is at date visiting her niece, Mrs. Will Merkle, and also her brother, Mr. Edgar Dunham and his family.

Mrs. Marie Dunkleburgh of Boone, Iowa, who has been spending most of the summer here with her brother, Mr. Sam Curtiss and his wife, has just left for her western home.

Mrs. Samuel Remington also has gone, returning to the city, where she spends the winter with her daughter, Mrs. Wing, the wife of Judge Wing, and their family, but Mrs. Remington loves her Mentor home, and comes back here just as early in the spring as she can.

The first oyster supper of the season was given last Friday evening by the Maccabees in their hall at East Mentor, where they and their friends enjoyed a good time.

Miss Evelyn Smith gave a luncheon on Wednesday in honor of her friend, Mrs. Milo Bell, whose home is in Black Lick, Pa., and quite a number of ladies were down from the city, per invitation, mutual friends of both.

As the long evenings of the winter months advance, we hear of more electric wiring, and more who are planning to use electricity in their houses just as soon as they can get around to it. This past week, Messrs. T. D. Morley and H. [illegible] King have put electric lighting into their barns, thereby getting daylight (almost) for all evening chores.

Mr. and Mrs. James Smith and family spent the day over on Waite Hill last week, with Mr. and Mrs. Fred Presley.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Andrews and son, Horace, took dinner on the Plains on Sunday, with their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Ambrose Bryson and Miss Jennie Yeomans another cousin of Mrs. Andrews.

Mrs. LaVerne Amidon has been spending some days in Oberlin with friends, and we learn with great pleasure that she will not return to California with Mrs. Root some time this week, as was feared.

The only jurors from here, so far as we have been able to learn, are Mr. Charles Losey, and Mr. George Bell. For some reason, our Mentor gentlemen do not particularly enjoy serving on jury, but go as a case of must.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyman Bothwell, of "The Pines" entertained this last week quite a number of friends from the city, among whom were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brown, Dr. and Mrs. Brooks, Mrs. DeForest and her son, Tracey, also Mr. Howe.

Mrs. Anna Warren Shumaker gave a pleasant luncheon on Thursday last to some fifteen ladies, in honor of the going away of her aunt, Mrs. M. V. Hopkins, who left for her winter home in Florida, later on in the week. From Painesville, there came out Mrs. Lloyd Tuttle, the wife of a cousin, and Mrs. Frank Streator and Mrs. Spencer Munson, old friends of Mrs. Hopkins. It is needless to say that it was a very pleasant affair.

Mrs. Robert Case has been enjoying a part of the two weeks vacation of her brother, Mr. Frank Lawrence, of Scranton, Pa. Mrs. Case now has the great pleasure of having her mother with her, Mrs. Lawrence having recovered from her recent severe illness enough to travel this far, and will remain some weeks.

Mrs. T. P. Cadle has been in the city some portion of this week, a guest of her sister, Mrs. Will Cadle.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Gage of the Knitting Mills are to occupy the Samuel Remington house through the winter months.

Rev. O. E. Houser of Cleveland and Mrs. Houser, were the first guests at the Methodist parsonage to enjoy the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Schaffner, since they got settled.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Tanswell have been having a visit from their uncle, Dr. Wittie, of Cleveland, quite recently.

Mr. Charles Glenn, who is traveling for the Mentor Knitting Mills Co., having his "beat" through Michigan and Indiana, was at home over Sunday.

Mrs. Eliza Rexford has been spending a short time with friends up at Little Mountain this past week.

Miss Augusta Marwin has been entertaining her old friend, Mrs. C. E. Snow who is living at the McGregor Home in Cleveland, but who enjoys a few days in the country occasionally.

Mr. and Mrs. George Marsh accompanied by Miss Lucy Duer, spent a part of last week in Akron.

Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Carver and their daughter, Mrs. Marion Hodges, were guests of their friends, Mr. and Mrs. Bothwell at "The Pines" a portion of last week.

It is almost impossible to get help here in Mentor, especially for farm work. Two of our young ladies have had to go out into the corn fields and cut corn, else see the crop go to waste. If "Teddy" or some enterprising person would import a few "Japs" or even a Chinese "coolie" or two, so that one could be hired to do things—he would be quite a benefactor, indeed.

Mrs. Ben Warren gave a delightful luncheon on Friday, in honor of Mrs. Frank Daniels, of Abingdon, W. Va., to which Mrs. A. D. Carleton, her sister, was invited, also Mrs. Frank Jenkins, another sister, and still another sister, Miss Louise Upham.

Mr. T. D. Morley returned one day last week from a sad trip to Grand Rapids, Mich., where he had been called by the death of his aunt, Mrs. Theodore Martindale, a dear woman known around here where she used to live as "Aunt Comfort."

Rev. Hodgson of Willoughby, occupied the Methodist pulpit on Sunday morning, communion service being held afterwards, when the new service given by some unknown friend (in memory of some dear one) was used for the first time. This "individual communion service" is something that has been needed for a long time, but there never seemed to be money in the church treasury that could be spared for its purchase. Who the giver is—has been kept a secret, but some of us fancy that we know.

The "up-town" park project has met unexpectedly with a black eye, and most of our men seem to be dead set against it at present. The pleas set forth are, that "taxes" are high enough now, in all conscience, and with such an elephant on our hands the cost of getting it into shape would be immense, and the cost of its up-keep afterwards would be more than our people could afford. The plan to buy more land and add a few acres to the park we have already at the lake, seems to be generally approved, and plans are being talked of for the planting of more trees down there, and doing several other things to help make the park more pleasant. Some say, that "when the two ends of the village are united and one "corporation" extends over all, and a good central high school is erected and well equipped for the use of our school children, and a Y. M. C. A. building for the use of the village young men has been put up, then—and not until then, do we need to waste any time or ink (to say nothing of nerve and words) on any park on this village main street."

That the subject of a Rest Room has been brought up by the city fathers in Painesville, is a matter of much interest to our Mentor folks who go there to trade and have to "hang around" most any where while waiting for the trolley. It is certain, that if a convenient, clean and pleasant place to "rest" should be provided, either by the C. P. & E. Co. or by them and the town authorities together, a good deal of custom would be saved that now goes to Cleveland. Of that, we are quite certain.

Mr. Robert Case has just finished putting onto his store at the Center a new roof made of Asbestos and Portland Cement which promises being the roof of the future, as it is lighter than slate and more durable. The new barns and many out buildings that Mr. Holden has been putting onto "Goodhold Farm" are roofed with this stuff, which comes in two or three different colors, and looks very nice when on.

Miss Lucy Morley, of Baraboo, Wisconsin, is visiting her cousins the Messrs. T. D. and N. W. Morley and their families at present. Miss Lucy is the daughter of Mr. Nelson Morley whose home used to be here, and who will be remembered by many of your readers in this county.

The last Miscellany Club met with Mrs. Charles Church, when the roll call was responded to by "Current Events." A paper was read by Mrs. Carleton entitled "Magazine Illustrating" which was very interesting, and which was followed by five short papers, supposed to be five minutes each, on the following subjects: "Canada's Royal Family," Mrs. Frost; "An Original Story," Miss Eleanor King; "The Boy Scouts," Mrs. Clapp; Paper on "Ellis Island," Mrs. Johnson, and a Reading, Dialect Story, by Mrs. Munson that was enjoyed as her delightful readings always are. The program, though long, was very good, and enjoyed through to the finish.

The Danger After Grip

lies often in a run-down system. Weakness, nervousness, lack of appetite, energy and ambition, with disordered liver and kidneys often follow an attack of this wretched disease. The greatest need then is Electric Bitters, the glorious tonic, blood purifier and regulator of stomach, liver and kidneys. Thousands have proved that they wonderfully strengthen the nerves, build up the system and restore to health and good spirits after an attack of Grip. If suffering, try them. Only 50 cents. ## SOMETHING COMING!!

WHEN VIC DONAHY TURNS ON THE LIGHT.

Democrat Will Probe State Auditor's Office, Where No Examination Has Been Made for 40 Years.

"I propose, if elected auditor of state, to apply to the business of the state, so far as practicable and lawful, the recognized methods of accounting and business procedure now well known and universally accepted by well regulated, honestly and efficiently conducted private business concerns," says Vic Donahey, Democratic candidate for state auditor. "I will use every power of my office to have enacted into laws such methods and procedures as will increase efficiency and eliminate waste and graft in the conduct of the state's affairs, also to intelligently and currently inform the people as to the manner in which their business is being conducted.

"How could private business know its standing at any given period or for any given fiscal year, or ascertain the dividend it could pay, if it kept no ledgers, took no inventories, kept no stock or cost accounts and made no statements of revenue or expense or profit or loss? There are those who will argue that the state business is not for profit and therefore such statements are unnecessary, but this is a principal argument for such statements in order to show that the state does not profit or levy an unnecessary tax on the people this year for the benefit of next year or future generations. The principle involved being that the people should pay this year, with proper provision for emergencies, for what they consume for ascertained expenses.

"If elected auditor of state I will serve the people of Ohio honestly and faithfully, without fear or favor. I will keep all records, reports and examinations open for inspection at all times.

"I will not permit politics to influence me in the discharge of my duty.

"I will honestly work for progressive reform in this office and will appoint honest, capable men to assist me in conducting the most important state office within your gift."

A Third Termer recently referred to that organization as the party for "human welfare." It has always appeared to be the party for the welfare of Roosevelt and a corps of disappointed Republican office seekers.

The people know just where Jim Cox stands upon every important issue of the campaign. A few bosses alone know the sentiment of the opposition candidates.

It begins to look like a multitude of multimillionaires who want their business regulated will be left standing at Armageddon on election day, November 5.

Swiss to Use Their Water Power.

No country is better off than Switzerland in the matter of water power, and vast resources of force are still unutilized. It is now proposed to electrify all the state railways and to supply the energy needed from the numerous water powers not yet developed. Already most of the funicular railways employ electricity.

Bear With Others' Faults.

When we consider we are bound to be serviceable to mankind, and bear with their faults, we shall perceive there is a common tie of nature and relation between us.—Marcus Aurelius.

Puts End To Bad Habit.

Things never look bright to one with "the blues." Ten to one the trouble is a sluggish liver, filling the system with bilious poison, that Dr. King's New Life Pills would expel. Try them. Let the joy of better feelings end the blues. Best for stomach, liver and kidneys. [illegible] Gehring's Pharmacy.

SYNOPSIS.

Harding Kent calls on Louise Farrish to propose marriage and finds the house in great excitement over the attempted suicide of her sister Katharine. Kent starts an investigation and finds that Hugh Crandall, suitor for Katharine who had been forbidden the house by General Farrish, had talked with Katharine over the telephone just before she shot herself. A torn piece of yellow paper is found, at sight of which General Farrish is stricken with paralysis. Kent discovers that Crandall has left town hurriedly. Andrew Elser, an aged banker, commits suicide about the same time as Katharine attempted her life. A yellow envelope is found in Elser's room. Post Office Inspector Davis, Kent's friend, takes up the case. Kent is convinced that Crandall's room and find an address. Lock Katharine's strange outcry puzzles the detectives. Kent and Davis search Crandall's room and find an address: Lock Box 17, Ardway, N. J. Kent goes to Ardway to investigate and becomes suspicious of a "Henry Cook." A woman commits suicide at the Ardway Hotel. A yellow letter also figures in this case. Kent calls Louise on the long distance telephone and finds that she had just been called by Crandall from the same booth. "Cook" disappears. The Ardway postmaster is missing. Inspector Davis arrives at Ardway and takes up the investigation.

CHAPTER VIII—(Continued.)

The dry matter-of-fact way in which he recited the facts he had learned added to the value of his narrative. More and more I marveled at the man's detective ability. I was overwhelmed with a sense of my own incapacity. All day long the coroner, the constable and I had been trying to ferret out the mystery of the unfortunate woman's identity with practically the same properties to draw deductions from; the inspector in a very few minutes had not only learned her identity, but many other important facts about her. Nor did it occur to me to doubt the truth of his information. The assurance with which he spoke was in itself a sufficient guarantee.

"How on earth did you learn all this so quickly?" I asked in amazement.

He smiled with that grim tantalizing smile of his that I had seen before. His cigarette had burned itself to a stub as he spoke. He turned it carefully in his fingers, inspecting it as if to see whether he could extract another puff before throwing it away. He finally decided that he could not, and drew forth his cigarette papers and tobacco preparatory to rolling a new one. Meanwhile I awaited his answer in suspense.

"Go on," I continued. "Tell me about it. I must know how you did it."

"The principal part of a magician's art," he said as he lighted his new cigarette, "lies in what is called 'misdirection.' With a glance from his eyes, with a sudden movement of his hand he attracts your attention to his right side. Meanwhile his left is doing the trick. Now, misdirection, in my business, has just the opposite effect. Amateurs in investigating crime, examine the evidence and see clues pointing in some direction. They follow those clues and find themselves floundering. They have the right clues, but they go in the wrong direction. You read the evidence aright as to Miss Sackett coming from Bridgeport, but all your efforts to locate her as Mary Jane Teller were simply a waste of time. In the clothes she left behind her was her real name."

"Look here," I said, "you can't string me in that fashion. I myself examined those garments closely. There was no name in them and there no marks by which she could be identified."

"[illegible] on." There was deep [illegible] in his tone.

"[illegible] only that, even if I overlooked any marks that might have been there, the landlord, the coroner, the constable and half a dozen others examined them closely. If there were any [illegible] one of us surely would have discovered them."

[illegible] he picked up the garments and [illegible] the [illegible] lying [illegible] skirt [illegible] lower [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] the coats [illegible] pocket [illegible] altered [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] worn by hundreds of other women."

"You see," he responded tersely. With one finger he began to trace an almost invisible line on the goods where there had once been a seam. "Do you see that mark?"

"Yes," I replied. "I noticed that long ago. It simply means that the skirt has been lengthened or shortened, but what of it?"

"It means more than that," he answered almost severely, as if reproaching me for my lack of observation. "It means that a thirty-eight skirt has been lengthened an inch and a half. Look at this coat. The sleeves have been lengthened two inches. It is a thirty-eight coat. Can't you see how simple the problem has become?"

"I confess I can't see it at all."

"Let me state it for you! A woman from somewhere in Connecticut buys a black suit of a rather peculiar texture from a cloak and suit house that receives a great many mail orders. She requires a thirty-eight coat with sleeves lengthened two inches and a thirty-eight skirt let down an inch and a half. That's enough to identify any person."

"I must confess I still don't see how that knowledge will help you."

"In these days of system every house that sells women's garments has elaborate card indexes. The greatest expense they have is in alterations. They figure that a roll of cloth that costs so much will make so many suits of a certain pattern which they will sell for so much in a certain length of time. They figure on making so much profit on the suits. If the cloth is all right, the pattern popular and the price reasonable, they can figure to a certainty on their profits, except for one factor—alterations. Alterations require the time of skilled work people and also correspondence and frequently extra express charges. The aim of the manager is to reduce alteration to a minimum. For that reason he keeps a record of every alteration made. This particular dress happened to come from a store where I know the manager well. It is their busy season just now, and I took a chance on finding him in his office. I described the goods in the suit, gave him the size and the sort of alterations that had been made on it and asked him to have his card index looked up. I told him in all probability the woman I wanted to know about came from Bridgeport, Conn., or near there. It happened that only three of the eight suits they had made from this piece of goods, at least the only ones entered on the alteration cards, had gone to Connecticut. Of the three, two were thirty-six coats, so they could be eliminated at once. The third one had had the sleeves lengthened and also the skirt. The sizes corresponded. So there was very little doubt that it had been this woman who had bought it, Miss Sarah Sackett, the woman who committed suicide here."

"But even so," I protested, still marveling at his revelations, "how did you get the rest of your information about her so quickly?"

"The address she had given was in care of the express agent at Bridgeport. Such an address in a large city would mean nothing, but in a place the size of Bridgeport the inference was plain that the agent was probably [illegible] committed [illegible]

"He [illegible] dream that she has [illegible]," he replied. "I put my questions in a guarded way and he happened to be a garrulous fellow, who readily followed my leads. All I asked him was where a letter would reach Miss Sarah Sackett, saying I had forgotten which rural free delivery route it was that she lived on. He told me that she and her brother were still living on the old Sackett place, Route No. 1. I explained that I wanted to make sure of an important letter reaching her at once. He told me she was away, explaining that he had seen her come down to the station with her brother, and suggested that it might be a good idea to send the letter in her brother's care, and told me the address of the bank where her brother could be reached. So you see it is all quite simple when you know how."

"I don't see, though," I objected, "how anything that you have learned in any way connects this woman with the Farrish mystery."

"I told you there would be other suicides, didn't I?"

"It looks to me like a mere coincidence."

"How about the yellow letter she was reading?"

I started. For a moment I had forgotten the strange, tinted link that seemed to bind the Farrish tragedy, the Elser case and the Sarah Sackett suicide together in the terrible chain of mystery.

"We've got to find Hugh Crandall!" I exclaimed. "I will not be content until we do. There is no doubt in my mind that he is the author of those letters. We've got to find him, Davis, and make him explain. I promised the girl I love I would not rest until I had cleared away the mystery, until I had lifted the cloud that is hanging over her father and her sister. Nothing, nothing shall stand in the way! Think what it means to me! The one I love, the one who is dearer to me than anything else in the world, is living in constant dread of an unknown terror. I feel that Crandall is responsible. I am positive that he is guilty. Help me find him, Davis! We must find him."

As I spoke Davis sat regarding me with unmoved countenance. He puffed leisurely at his cigarette two or three times, and then, with cutting asperity, without the slightest indication of sympathy for my anxiety, said slowly:

"Harding, I told you that one of the reasons for my success was that I never undertake anything that I cannot accomplish. I came out here to find the man who has been using the mails illegally to terrorize people to such an extent that they are driven to suicide. I am confident that we will quickly locate him and his accomplice in crime. Rest assured that you can safely leave the plan of action to me."

"But—but," I stammered, "what is your plan of action? What are you going to do now?"

"I'm going to bed," he replied, yawning as he rose from his chair. "There's nothing more that can be done tonight."

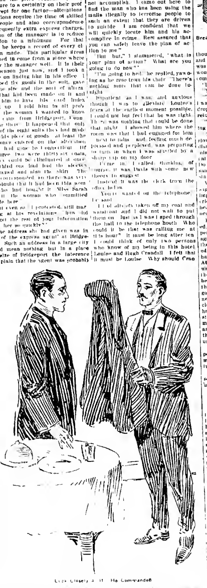
Impatient as I was, and anxious though I was to alleviate Louise's fears at the earliest moment possible, I could not but feel that he was right. There was nothing that could be done that night. I showed him where the room was that I had engaged for him next to mine, and feeling much depressed and perplexed, was preparing to turn in when I was startled by a sharp rap on my door.

"Come in," I called, thinking, of course, it was Davis with some new theory to suggest.

Instead it was the clerk from the office below.

"You're wanted on the telephone," he said.

I had already taken off my coat and waistcoat and I did not wait to put them on. Just as I was I sped through the hall to the telephone booth. Who could it be that was calling me at this hour? It must be long after ten. I could think of only two persons who knew of my being in this hotel, Louise and Hugh Crandall. I felt that it must be Louise. Why should Crandall [illegible]? True he [illegible] have [learned] my name from the hotel register, [illegible] my question about the yellow letter he must know that I [was] on his trail, but having escaped from the village, why should he communicate with me? No, it could not [illegible]. It must be Louise. She would not call me at this time unless something had happened. That was it. Something terrible had happened! Katharine was dead, or, perhaps, her father. Perhaps both of them. Or maybe Katharine had spoken again. Perhaps she had given some information that Louise felt would aid me in the investigation that meant so much for both of us.



"Look Closely at It," He Commanded.

Isn't it strange how fast we can think? It could not have taken me more than thirty seconds to race from my room to the telephone booth in the hall below, yet in that brief period all these thoughts and a hundred other queries and fears pursued each other in mad tumult through my brain.

Breathlessly I rushed into the booth and grabbed the receiver. It was the voice of Louise that I heard. Faint though it was, I recognized it at once, and was overjoyed to note that there was nothing in it of the sadness there would have been if the worst had come to her father or Katharine.

Breathlessly I Rushed Into the Booth and Grabbed the Receiver.

"Is that you, Mr. Kent?" she asked.

"Yes, yes," I cried. "What is it?"

"This is Louise Farrish speaking. I want you to promise me that you will drop your investigation at once and return to the city."

"What's that?" I cried, not believing my ears.

"If you love me"—she was speaking slowly and enunciating with labored distinctness that there might be no mistake—"you will drop all investigation at once without any questions. Do you hear me? Repeat what I have said so I can be sure you understand."

Word for word I repeated her message, amazed beyond thought at its import. As I finished repeating it, I cried: "Why, tell me why—" but I heard the thud of the broken connection.

Frantically I called central. I pleaded, urged, demanded that she get the person at the other end of the wire again. It was no use. I called for the Farrishes' number. Central reported, "Don't answer." I said that I had been called just now from there. After weary, impatient minutes of waiting and wrangling, she told me the call had come from another number, from a pay station. I demanded that number at once and finally she got it for me. It was a drug store near the Farrish home. The druggist's clerk said that the young lady who had been telephoning had left the store. I tried to get him to send a messenger around to the Farrishes' to ask Miss Louise Farrish to come to the telephone. He refused. It was useless. I was forced to give it up.

I emerged from the telephone booth perspiring, frantic, puzzled beyond measure at the sudden and startling turn in affairs.

What could have induced Louise to send me such a message? What could have happened?

End of His Masquerade.

A wedding is about to take place in the German capital between a nursing sister and a young man who has been living the life of a beautiful and accomplished "lady" assistant in a leading wholesale coal firm. The assistant, who was given power of attorney by "her" employers as a reward for "her" several years of faithful service, recently had to go to the hospital on account of an accident. The physicians were astonished to discover that their patient was a man instead of a woman. It was only a day or two before he fell violently in love with the nurse who was attending him, and a marriage was arranged. A few days ago the office assistant resumed her duties, but clad in a fashionable morning coat and trousers instead of in a tight skirt and blouse.

Serious Misquotation.

A remark by the late Lord Lister led to his being wrongly identified with the "no bath" faddists who avoid soap and water because they believe in the protective value of an unwashed skin. In a lecture Lord Lister said: "I never wash my hands"—the rhetorical pause was accompanied with laughter—"immediately before an operation, but soak them in a solution of carbolic acid." The idea was that if soap and alkali were used, it would interfere with the antiseptic action of the acid. Put only the first part of the sentence got into the papers.

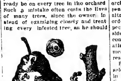
SAN JOSE SCALE IS PRIMARILY A PEST OF PEAR, PEACH AND OTHER FRUIT TREES

Extremely Important That Grower Should Know Just Which Plants Are Most Likely to Be Attacked by Little Insect—Some Serious Mistakes Made.

(By F. SHERMAN, JR.)

Trees that are badly infested with the San Jose Scale appear as if they had been dusted over with ashes. If the branches and twigs where the insects are numerous be scraped with a knife it will be seen that this unnatural covering is quite easily removed, coming off in little flaky patches. Each of the little circular gray objects is a separate scale, each covering a tiny yellow insect underneath. On thickly infested branches they often become so crowded that the scales are piled over one another so that the real bark of the tree is not visible at all. Branches and twigs which are only slightly or moderately infested will not be thus completely covered over, and the bark may be of its ordinary color and appearance except here and there along the branches where the scattering scales are found. The largest full-grown scales are about the size of an average pinhead. They can, therefore, be detected by any person who has in the beginning an intelligent idea of the insect, has sharp eyes, and who happens to look in the right place.

Usually the farmer or fruitgrower does not know that there is any serious trouble until the trees begin to die. By that time they are covered by the scales and present the ashy appearance. Then, if the owner finds that his trouble is San Jose scale, he is apt to think that it is only on those trees that present the unnatural appearance, when in reality it may already be on every tree in the orchard. Such a mistake often costs the lives of many trees, since the owner, instead of examining closely and treating every infested tree, as he should do, simply takes out those which are already in dying condition, and then, because he sees no more of similar appearance, he imagines he has exterminated it, when as a matter of fact other trees moderately or slightly infested still stand in the orchard and soon begin to die, having in the meantime spread the insect into still other trees, and so on, until the whole orchard may be ruined.



THE SAN JOSE SCALE

Where the scales are not numerous enough to crowd one another each individual grows to somewhat larger size than when they are crowded. Where the scales are scattering along the branches each scale is often (but not always) in the center of a slightly reddened spot on the bark. If the natural color of the bark be reddish this will not show plainly, but if the bark be of a light green or yellow, the reddish spots are quite conspicuous. In looking for scale on slightly infested trees it may usually be more readily found by looking for these reddish spots than by looking for the scale itself, but close watch must be kept for both scales and blotches. If such a spot be found, however, it must then be examined to see if it is caused by a true scale-insect, for there are certain unimportant diseases which may have a similar effect. If the little gray, circular scale is found in the center of the spot, and if the scale is readily removed by scraping gently with a knife blade or the finger nail, then you may be pretty sure it is San Jose scale, and should at once send specimens to your state entomologist and find out.

Turn one of the scales over gently with the point of a knife. If it is one of the large full-grown scales the insect may as likely be dead as alive under it, for the scale adheres long after the insect is dead. If the insect is alive it will be seen as a little, yellow object, slightly egg shaped, but more pointed at one end, and slightly flattened. Indeed, it has been well described as resembling a tiny bit of cheese or yellow butter. Press the body with the point of the knife or pin and it is easily crushed, yielding a tiny bit of yellowish, oily liquid. If, on the other hand, the insect is dead, the dried body will likely be found simply as a thin yellowish-brown particle under the scale.

The San Jose scale is not capable of living and thriving on all kinds of plants, and it is extremely important that the grower should know which ones are most liable to attack. It is primarily a pest of orchard trees and it is an exception, rather than the rule to find it on any other. Of the orchard fruits, peaches, plums, apples, pears, and cherries seem to be worst attacked and die most readily in the order named. Certain varieties, especially of pears, seem to show considerable resistance, the Keiffer, Le Conte and Garber seeming to be less attacked than others, though by no means exempt. Sour cherries are also resistant.

Forest and shade trees are very seldom infested with the San Jose in harboring or spreading infection. Growers sometimes make serious and ridiculous mistakes on this point and give up hope because they imagine that "the scale is in the woods," or they try to destroy the forests which they suspect, or spend hours in a fruitless search for it on the forest or shade trees, and then when they find a scale (which is some other species in nine cases out of ten) they think that they have surely found it.

Let us repeat then with greater emphasis that the San Jose scale is primarily a pest of orchard fruit trees. It may also occur but less frequently on rose, grape, currant, gooseberry, mockorange and Japan walnut, but forest and shade trees are not appreciable factors in harboring or spreading it.

Irish Use Dairy Waste.

Irish experts have invented a process by which dairy waste in combination with coarsely ground phosphate of lime and yeast makes a fertilizer which will return to the soil all of the phosphate removed by milk. Scientists claim this fertilizer is worth about $25 per ton while it costs only about half the amount to make it.

Small Cows.

Small cows may be good milkers at first, but they generally lack staying power. Large, coarse cows, are, on the other hand, likely to be costly feeders. A vigorous animal of fully average size and of the milk type is best.

COLUMBIAN BREED RESULT OF ACCIDENT

Just because a White Wyandotte hen found a hole in a fence and crawled through, a new breed of poultry came into existence according to the Suburban Life. There was a flock of Barred Plymouth Rocks on the other side of the fence, and when the eggs of the White Wyandotte were incubated the birds were of a kind never seen before. With the size and shape of a Wyandotte, they were marked like light Brahmas.

Rev. R. M. Briggs, who originated the White Wyandottes, was so well pleased with this accidental cross that he mated and culled until he had fixed the type. Thus it is that new breeds are sometimes made. All this happened some time before the Columbian exposition, in honor of which event the new breed was given the name of Columbian Wyandottes.

Value of Hen Manure.

It is generally understood and recognized that hen or fowl manure is of considerable value in the garden, and it is interesting to note that a hundredweight is equal to half a ton of cow manure as regards the quantity of nitrogen; and, further, that it is more readily available as an immediate plant food. Analysis has shown that dry chicken excrement is nearly four times as rich in nitrogen as compared with a stable manure, sheep droppings about the same, while cow manure drops down to one-fifth of the value of the first named.

Fence Wires.

Never fasten fencing wire directly to growing trees. If you do, in a few years the wire will have become imbedding in the tree and do it permanent injury. When you wish to use a tree for this purpose, spike a strip of sound board securely to the tree and fasten the wire to that. In this way very little injury will be done to the tree.

Build Tiger Proof Houses

Malay Natives Perch Their Houses High Up in Trees to Escape Beasts.

The ordinary Malay house is built on posts from five to seven feet high; but one which I came across was perched high up in a tree. It was the home of a man, his wife and family, and they informed me that it was placed in this unusual situation so as to be out of the way of the numerous tigers which then infested the neighborhood.

As tigers have been known to jump 15 feet in vertical height somewhere above 20 feet is considered to be the limit of safety. The Malayan house is a frail and flimsy structure of sticks tied together with rattan thatched with palm leaves and walled with plaited bamboo, or, as in this case, with the bark of a tree.

It is therefore an easy matter for a tiger with its great strength to break into a house and attack the inhabitants. Many instances of this have been recorded in Malaya. In one well known case a whole family were killed except one man, who climbed up into the roof, and thus escaping the notice of the tiger, was a horrified observer of the cruel mauling and ultimate slaughter and devouring of his relatives.—Strand.

Optimists.

For non-committal brevity of speech, commend us to the Yankee lord of the soil. One such, who was obliged to make a physician daily visits, had an unvarying answer to the question, "How do you feel today?" "Well," he would reply, showing as little interest in the subject as possible, "I ain't no wuss." Further than that he wished to say nothing, and it took the cunning of a serpent to discover his real feelings. A man who was knocked down in the street by a snowslide was assailed by a sympathizing crowd with condolence and question. "Did it hurt you?" inquired one of his rescuers as he brushed the snow from the clothes of the well-powdered victim. "Well," was the cautious answer, "it ain't done me no good."—Argonaut.

Liquid Measure.

It was the time of the singing lesson at the local council school, and the teacher was explaining to the young hopefuls that if a "treble," and "alto," a "tenor" and a "bass" sang together, their united efforts would constitute a quartet.

There seemed no trouble about that, and the teacher thought the class was getting on very nicely.

"Now, Jimmy, leave off pinching your brother's leg and listen to me," said she. "If a bass and tenor sang together, what would you call that?"

Jimmy was the son of the local milkman, and a bright lad at that. His answer was not long in coming.

"Please, miss," said he, "that would be a 'pint-two.'"

NORWAY LOG CABINS

Picturesque Abodes Are Being Done Away With.

Modern Clapboard Buildings Taking Their Place—Typical Examples of Old Style Buildings Are to Be Preserved.

Christiania, Norway.—No one knows when the first log cabin was built in Norway, but it must have been about 1,500 years at least. At first they were windowless, chimneyless things, then they gradually became light and airy, acquired chimneys and floors and developed into one and one-half and then into two story houses, becoming the homelike abodes of enlightened people. Their development and transformation are easy to understand, thanks to the efforts of Dr. Sandvig of Lillehammer, Norway.

Born in the country, he had from his boyhood a passion for the old homes of peasants, and even as a child it pained him to see them set aside or torn down to make way for the nondescript buildings of clapboards which appeared in their stead. It became his ambition to collect before it was too late the most typical examples of the different log cabins.

In these old houses is wonderful furniture belonging to the period represented and always arranged according to ancient traditions. For instance, there are examples of old Norwegian beds, which are appalling contrivances. Rarely are they more than four or five feet long and often almost as wide. It seems that in the fourteenth, fifteenth and even sixteenth centuries people in Norway did not lie down in their beds—they sat in them. A person was propped up, so to speak, by four or five feather beds and as many more pillows under his head.

Those who have traveled in Norway, if they have been out of the beaten track and have walked across barren mountain tops or through pungent pine forests, will remember coming some evening when the sun was still high to a little log chalet looking strangely picturesque from the outside.

And they will remember when the door was opened how they entered a large room where the white wooden floor was strewn with sprigs of fresh juniper and where an armful of green birch filled the fireplace ready to burst into a pungent flame when a match was set to it.

Norwegian Bride and Groom at Door of Log Chalet.

In Norway these houses are made of heavy pine logs. The bark is carefully taken off and then the logs are hewed square and of the same size from one end to another. It takes some experience to notch them at the ends so that they fit exactly. The logs are usually either stained or oiled and their rich yellowish or brownish color is in harmony with almost any surroundings.

The old-fashioned Norway log cabin had a sod roof. It is hard to express the poetry those words should convey except to those who have seen the sod roofed cabin. "I have come across roofs that were a riot of wild pansies," says a writer in the Craftsman, "and I have seen wonderful roofs where wild rose bushes hung over the eaves or a daisy roof the effect of whose white, starlike flowers topping the dark brown structure was exquisitely picturesque.

"Some roofs produce only pasture grass, and the story runs in Norwegian folk lore that a lazy man led the cow on the roof—the cabin was built against a hill—instead of taking her to pasture. I have no doubt that the story is true, for I have often seen a couple of white kidlets gamboling on the soft green housetops, while the mother goat, grave and ruminative, was tethered to the chimney."

KILLED BY BROTHER'S THEFT

Well Known Moscow Merchant Drops Dead When He Hears of Loss of $350,000.

St. Petersburg.—The well known wealthy Moscow business man, Yastuninsky, a member of the council of the empire, died suddenly on learning that his brother had decamped with $350,000 belonging to the firm of which both were members.

Mrs. Sage Saves Birds.

New York.—Mrs. Russell Sage has purchased Marsh island, on the gulf coast southwest of New Orleans, and has dedicated it as a guarded refuge for the migratory birds of America. At a cost of $150,000 she has taken control of the most popular haunt of the southern market gunner and has given protection to the game birds that flock there in millions every winter. The island is about eighteen miles long and nine miles wide.

BIRTHPLACE OF JOHN BUNYAN

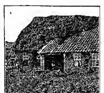
Little English Village, Still Boasts of House in Which "Immortal Dreamer" Was Born.

London, England.—The little village of Elsborough, near Bedford, will always be remembered as the birthplace of John Bunyan, and the cottage is still shown where the "immortal dreamer" was born. It was while in Bedford jail for "conscience sake" that Bunyan ministered to all posterity by writing the "Pilgrim's Progress" from this world to the world to come, under the similitude of a dream. As an allegory of the soul's conflicts and struggles with evil in its journey through life, it is unsurpassed. It is believed that no other book, except the Bible, has gone through so many editions or attained such a popularity in all languages.



Where Bunyan Was Born.

Bunyan was of poor parentage, his father being a tinker. At one time Bunyan was in the parliamentary army, and in 1645 was a prisoner at the siege of Leicester. Having left the army he married, then after a time of great spiritual anxiety and doubt, with quieter intervals, he became a member and then a minister of the Baptist congregation at Bedford. His labors were stopped by the act of conventicles and Bunyan was a prisoner in Bedford jail for twelve years. While in prison Bunyan assisted in providing for his wife and family by making tagged laces. The only books he had during his confinement were the Bible and Fox's Book of Martyrs. Through the interposition of Bishop Barlow of Lincoln Bunyan was released and resumed his work as a preacher until his death of fever in London in 1688. Bunyan also wrote the "Holy War" and other books less known to fame.

WENT TO CHURCH TO STEAL

Prisoner Is Rated by Philadelphia Judge as Meanest Kind of Thief.

Philadelphia, Pa.—Joseph Waters was convicted of stealing from worshipers in St. John's Catholic church on Thirteenth street above Chestnut, and Judge Kinsey sentenced him to the Huntingdon reformatory.

"This fellow is the meanest kind of a thief," said Judge Kinsey in reply to the plea of Attorney C. S. Patterson, Jr., for leniency. "To go into a church and steal purses while the owners are bowed in worship!"

Waters, who has been in court on a variety of charges, but never before convicted, went to the church and, entering a pew in which was kneeling Margaret McGinty of 1829 North Croskey street, threw his cap over her pocketbook containing a sum of money. A few moments later he picked up the cap and also the purse, but was arrested before he could make off with it.

MUSTACHES NOW THE RAGE

"Bumper" Crop Appears on Lips of Undergraduates at Harvard—Radcliffe Disapproves.

Cambridge, Mass.—Harvard has a wonderful growth of mustaches this year. The crop is far enough above the average to be qualified as a "bumper." Most of the mustaches are dapper little affairs. They look cute, and more than one proud student has resolved to have lip protection for the present term, at least.

The petty concelts have not made what might be termed a smashing hit with the Radcliffe girls, but this cold reception has failed to nonplus the young men.

They have had unprecedented success at Wellesley, according to reports that have come from private advices, and it is a safe bet that as long as Wellesley stands for them they'll stay and grow.

SUN'S RAYS SET FATAL FIRE

Mrs. Bulwinkle of New York Ignites Clothing With Reflector—May Die.

New York.—A fire lighted by the sun's rays, focused by a large lamp reflector, was responsible for burns which may prove fatal to Mrs. Minnie Bulwinkle, caretaker of the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church. She lies at the point of death in St. Vincent's hospital.

Mrs. Bulwinkle was standing in front of the church holding the reflector in her hand and idly watching its concentration of the sun's rays upon the thin material of her dress. Suddenly there was a wisp of smoke and in a moment her clothing was all aflame. A policeman summoned by her screams threw off his coat and smothered the fire, but too late to save her from serious injury.

CITY FLYCATCHER IS BUSY

Fifty Gallons of Insects Trapped Since September 1, Reports Redlands (Cal.) Swatter.

Redlands, Cal.—A. B. Chapman, the municipal fly catcher here, filed his first report, showing that between September 1 and September 24 he killed 2,750,000 flies. He has emptied fifty gallons of flies from 100 traps scattered through the business portion of Redlands. Chapman estimates that there are 75,000 flies to a gallon, and on this basis the total mortality is estimated.

Social Forms and Entertainments

Wedding Etiquette.

Will you please answer some questions relative to a church wedding:

1. What are the bride's expenses and what are the groom's—that is, what does each pay for?
2. Who furnishes the bridesmaid's carriage, or does she ride in the same one with the bride?
3. What are the groom's obligations toward the best man?
4. What is the order of the procession up the aisle and also coming back from the ceremony?
5. What should the groom wear at a 6 p. m. wedding in October? Would a black business suit be impossible? What kind of gloves?
6. What are the bride's and bridesmaid's duties at the altar? Also those of groom and groomsman?
7. What would be appropriate to serve after the ceremony in the way of a light supper?
8. How soon before the wedding would it be proper to see the clergyman?

Thanking you for any information you may give.—Interested Reader.

Delighted to answer all your questions. The family of the bride bears all the wedding expenses except the carriage for the bridegroom, which he engages for himself and the best man, and the conveyance in which he takes his bride away. The bridegroom is also privileged to send the bride and her attendants their wedding bouquets; he furnishes the ushers their gloves, ties and usually gives them some souvenir, a scarf pin if the wedding is before 6 o'clock, as they then could wear them. The best man receives the same as the ushers, and he is given the check or gold piece with which to pay the clergyman, who should be engaged at least a month in advance, to make sure that he has no previous engagement.

The processional is led by the ushers, followed by the bridesmaids two by two, then the honored maid or matron and the bride immediately after on the arm of the one who gives her away. The bridegroom and his best man enter from the side and await the bride at the altar.

The maid of honor or first bridesmaid, if there is no maid of honor, stands beside the bride, holds her bouquet, and the best man stands at the bridegroom's side and hands him the ring at the proper time in the service. The proper garb for a day wedding is a frock or what is newer, the cutaway coat, light gray striped trousers, gray or white waistcoat, four-in-hand or ascot tie, pearl gray suede gloves.

Serve chicken salad, hot rolls, veal croquettes or jellied tongue, coffee, salted nuts, olives, ice cream in bulk or individual shapes, cakes, bon-bons.

State Flowers.

At last I have found a list of the flowers appropriated by the various states. I am not positive that it is correct and would be most happy to hear from the readers if they have anything more complete. Some say the goldenrod is our national flower.

A reader requested this list some weeks ago. I hope it is not too late for the purpose.

Alabama, goldenrod; Arkansas, aster; California, columbine; Delaware, peach blossom; Idaho, syringa; Iowa, wild rose; Maine, pine cone and tassel; Michigan, apple blossom; Oklahoma, mistletoe (the last three states have adopted the flower given by the legislatures of the respective states); Minnesota, moccasin flower; Missouri, goldenrod; Montana, bitter root; Nebraska, goldenrod; New Jersey, the sugar maple; New York, rose and sugar maple tree; Oregon, Oregon grape; Rhode Island, violet and maple tree; Vermont, red clover; Washington, rhododendron.

Sending Announcements.

Should announcements be mailed the evening of the wedding or the next day?

In sending an announcement and addressing it to a gentleman who is a first cousin, should I address it to his wife also, whom I have never met?—Leona.

The announcements should be mailed immediately after the ceremony that evening if possible. If a man is married his wife must be included in all social events, whether personally known or not, so address the announcement to "Mr. and Mrs."

Reply to "Merry" and "Happy."

There is no reason in the world why boys and girls should not be just the very best kind of chums and comrades, and I think it is fine. As long as the boys are what they should be you girls can have a wonderfully good influence over them. Go on with your outdoor sports as long as your mothers do not object. Do not care one bit what people say. As long as you are sure they have no cause you need not worry.

Reply to "An Unknown Friend."

Seems to me I would not be too anxious to go out with boys, especially if they are younger. Perhaps the boy you mention has business in your town. You are under no obligation to ask him to spend the night at your house. Could you not arrange to be away at the time of his contemplated trip?

MADAME MERRI.

The Cause.

"How was it Smith came so rapidly to the front?"

"He had the backing."

KEEP MOUTH PRETTY

OTHERWISE IT WILL BE THE FIRST TO SHOW SIGNS OF AGE.

Cultivate Smile That Will Obliterate the Hard Lines Time Will Surely Bring—Fretful Droop to Be Guarded Against.

A pretty mouth will endow the plainest face with a touch of beauty. This naturally includes pretty teeth as well, for one is hardly possible without the other.

One very important reason for giving the mouth the best of care is that advancing age shows its marks first around the mouth.

Perhaps the first direction for improving the mouth should be to cultivate smiles. Not grins—you know—but smiles, which bring a look of happiness and joy to the face and obliterate in a minute all the hard lines which have been years in forming. Smiles will not remove those lines permanently in a minute but if the smiles are indulged in frequently they will soon blot out all the objectionable lines.

Nothing mars the mouth more than a fretful droop at the corners, and for this a hearty laugh is the very best method of correction. Does this sound like nonsense? It is really the very best of common sense and if you will notice the faces of your friends and the members of your family you will agree with me, I am sure. Without going very far afield you can find a dozen instances where smiles and laughter would so improve the shape or expression of the mouth that you would just long to suggest them for the purpose.

In connection with the above directions, massage is an excellent method for improving the appearance of the mouth. The massage given for this purpose must be very gentle and should always have an upward trend.

To keep the "Cupid's bow," which gives the lips such a delicately pretty outline, press the little crease in the upper lip gently every morning regularly. The best way to learn what your habitual expression is, is to study your face before a mirror, assuming as well as you can your habits of speech and laughter, as well as your ordinary expression when in repose. When you have learned your faults you can then set to work more intelligently to correct them.

Serious defects of the mouth require the care of a specialist in facial surgery. Many ordinary defects, however, can be treated at home. Among the very common ones are the lines reaching from the nose to the corners of the mouth, making a well defined parenthesis which is exceedingly unbecoming. These must be massaged out with nourishing cream and the use of wrinkle plasters will also prove helpful. A person who breathes through the mouth habitually will never have a pretty mouth or a good expression. The mouth that is usually held open is more unbeautiful than one where the lips are compressed. The former gives a vacant expression to the face, the latter indicates ill-temper.

A large mouth is not a disfigurement; indeed, it is much better than one which is too small, as it denotes a better disposition and shows a kindlier nature and a broader outlook on life. If you cannot change the shape of your mouth you can certainly improve its expression and it is well worth while to make the effort.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

Westbrook.—Massage of the scalp is much better than vigorous brushing to stimulate the circulation and increase the growth of hair. Surface friction is beneficial when given very moderately, but the average person is apt to be too severe in their use of the hair brush. Press the fingers firmly, but not too heavily, on the scalp and move the scalp in small circles. Have the fingers separated a little and change them from place to place until the entire scalp has received the massage. Do not bruise the tissues—remember that gentle movements many times repeated bring better results than too vigorous massage.

Jimsey.—The reason why you do not find benefit from the exercise you are taking is because you do not quite understand how to do it. You must not allow the knees to bend even slightly, but must hold them stiff while you bring your hands up over your head and then stoop forward and touch the floor with your finger tips. When this exercise is properly taken it strengthens the back, makes the back and waist muscles limber and also makes the waist more slender.

N. L. K.—I doubt if you will ever get rid of that wart by the method advised—you would be more likely to aggravate it into becoming a permanent sore spot. Use instead a daily application of oil of wintergreen, which will gradually dry up the warty growth and it will disappear, leaving no trace of any kind. One of my readers told me of this remedy and it has proved good in a great many cases besides being perfectly harmless.

Playroom Rugs.

Playing rugs are to be seen in many nurseries and are carried out in several varieties of material and design. Thick flannel makes an excellent foundation for one. Dark red flannel with a cutout border with red silk would make a most attractive rug.

A whole menagerie of animals may be used for the border. Teddy bears alternating with dancing rabbits might be preferred.

Shoulder Wrap for Baby.

A dainty shoulder wrap for a baby is made of a square of flannel, thick silk or cashmere. The square is scalloped and worked with buttonhole stitch, using either pink, blue or white floss silk, while a dainty spray of flowers is embroidered in one corner. The flower spray may take the form of a wreath and enclose the baby's initials.

Cheerfulness is what greases the axles of the world, a little applied will smooth every difficulty.—Lyons.

SUCCESS FOLLOWS JUDICIOUS FARMING

IN WESTERN CANADA IT IS CERTAIN.

The story of the Big Farmer in Western Canada, and the immense profits he has made in the growing of grain, has been told and retold. He has been found in all parts of the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. His splendid farm buildings have been pictured, his traction outfits described and his princely surroundings, resultant of his success in growing grain, have been portrayed by letter, press and camera. It certainly is not to his discredit that by successfully applying common sense and up-to-date methods to the conditions that climate, a good soil, and splendid market have placed at hand, that he has made the best use of them. He is not too proud to admit that he came to the country a very few years ago handicapped as to money, leaving behind him unpaid mortgages in his old home land (which are now wiped out), and he is still today the same good-hearted fellow he was in the days that he had to work for a neighbor while the neighbor broke the land on his homestead, which went to make up the settlement duties.

Then, there, too, is the farmer and the farmer's son, already wealthy, who has bought large holdings in Western Canada, in either Manitoba, Saskatchewan or Alberta, who has made forty to one hundred per cent on his investment, whose big grain crops and whose immense cattle herds are helping to improve the country. Health and strength, energy and push and bull dog grit are as essential in Western Canada as in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, or any of the states from which so many of these people come, and then, when you have added to that a fair amount of means with which to make a start, the land which is only waiting for the skill of the husbandman will quickly respond.

But there is the smaller farmer, the man who has not made sufficient in four or five years, that he might comfortably retire if he felt like it. There are many of them in all the three Provinces. It is not the less to his credit that he has earned his homestead by the three years residence, that he is free from debt, and has a reasonable bank account. He, too, came to the country handicapped by debts, and with very little means. He is contented, has a good home, land free of encumbrance, some stock, and with good prospects. One of these writes: "I formerly lived near Dayton, Ohio, on a rented farm, had as good a chance as the average renter, but after ten years of hard work satisfied myself that if I ever expected to secure a home, I would have to undertake something else. Hearing of Western Canada, I investigated, and seven years ago last Spring settled in a homestead and purchased (on time) an adjoining half section, arriving with a carload of household effects and farm implements, including four horses and three cows, and $1,800 in money—my ten years work in Ohio.

"The first year our crops gave us feed, the second year 100 acres of wheat gave us $1,800, no failure of crop since starting here. I have now 22 head of horses, 15 head of cattle and 35 hogs. We own 1,120 acres of land, and have same all under cultivation. Was offered at one time $35.00 per acre for a half section where we live, and all the other land could be sold today on present market at $30.00 per acre. Should we care to dispose of our holdings, could pay all debts and have over $30,000 to the good, but the question is where could we go to invest our money and get as good returns as here?

"We have equally as good, if not better prospects for crops this year, as we had three years ago, when our wheat reached from 30 to 48 bushels per acre. I never believed such crops could be raised until I saw them myself. I had 15 acres that year that made 50 bushels to the acre. Our harvest will be ready by the 12th. We have this season in crop 400 acres of wheat, 125 of oats, 90 of flax, and run three binders, with four men to do the stooking.

"We certainly like this country, and the winters, although the winters are cold at times, but we do not suffer as one would think. What we have accomplished here can be duplicated in almost any of the new districts. If anyone doubts anything I have said in this letter, tell them to come here and I can prove every word I have written."

The name of the writer can be had from the Superintendent of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, who can also give the names of hundreds of others equally successful.—Adv.

Steamboat Memories.

London Opinion, commenting on the recent celebration of the centenary of the steamboat, remarks that it is interesting to note that the British admiralty of that period rejected the invention with the declaration that a paddle wheel steamboat could be of no use in navigation, and that a Dr. Lardner, a pundit of that day, who proved that no steam vessel could ever cross the Atlantic lived long enough to tell to America in a steamer along with another man's wife.

POLLY VICTIM OF DECEPTION

Bird Realized Period Between Its Temporary Oblivions Had Been Materially Cut Short.

The Goodleys have a sailor son, who on one occasion brought home a parrot for the amusement and enlightenment of the family. They kept it for the sake of the donor—on no other account would it have been given house room. Of course, it was a perfectly respectable bird—occasionally, but on Sunday evenings, when young Mr. Saintly paid his regular visit, it was deemed advisable to cover Polly with a cloth.

Recently, however, Mr. S. took advantage of a half-holiday accruing to him, and made an extra call on the Wednesday. As he was ushered in Miss Mary Goodley dextrously threw the cloth over Polly's cage. Greetings over, there ensued the usual awkward pause, which was broken by a squawk from the covered cage.

"Well, I'll be everlastingly blessed," said Polly. "This has been a thundering short week!"

JUDGE CURED, HEART TROUBLE.

I took about 6 boxes of Dodds Kidney Pills for Heart Trouble from which I had suffered for 5 years. I had dizzy spells, my eyes puffed, my breath was short and I had chills and backache. I took the pills about a year ago and have had no return of the palpitations. Am now 63 years old, able to do lots of manual labor, am well and hearty and weigh about 200 pounds. I feel very grateful that I found Dodds Kidney Pills and you may publish this letter if you wish. I am serving my third term as Probate Judge of Gray Co. Yours truly,

WOMAN SICK TWELVE YEARS
Wants Other Women to Know How She Was Finally Restored to Health.

Louisiana, Mo.:—"I think a woman naturally dislikes to make her troubles known to the public, but complete restoration to health means so much to me that I cannot keep from telling mine for the sake of other suffering women.

"I had been sick about twelve years, and had eleven doctors. I had dragging down pains, pains at monthly periods, bilious spells, and was getting worse all the time. I would hardly get over one spell when I would be sick again. No tongue can tell what I suffered from cramps, and at times I could hardly walk. The doctors said I might die at one of those times, but I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got better right away. Your valuable medicine is worth more than mountains of gold to suffering women."—Mrs. BERTHA MUFF, 503 N. 4th Street, Louisiana, Mo.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs, and to-day holds the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

MADISON

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Owen are moving to Painesville this week.

Miss Grace Heartwell has resigned her position with A. N. Benjamin, and has disposed of her household goods and will leave soon for Cleveland.

Mrs. Heartwell, of Jarves, Canada, who has been spending some time with friends here, will leave the last of the week for Detroit, Mich.

Mr. and Mrs Chas. Morley and family of Geneva, spent Sunday at the home of Mrs. Morley's father, Mr. John Austin.

Mr and Mrs. Floyd Bailey and Mr and Mrs. B. P. St John and son, Raymond, of Ashtabula, called on friends in town, Sunday.

Miss Harriet Ritscher spent several days last week with friends in Collinwood.

Mrs. Ed Dayton and Mrs. S. D. Good, of Ashtabula, entertained the Jolly Matrons at the home of Mrs Dayton, Friday afternoon.

Mr and Mrs Clinton Phelps entertained D. L. Phelps and family of Painesville, Sunday.

Mrs. Wm. Price and daughter, Bernice, were shopping in Cleveland Thursday.

Dr. and Mrs S. D. Good of Ashtabula spent several days recently at the Dayton home.

The divorce case brought about by Mrs. Jennie Upton Culp against W. P. S. Culp, came somewhat as a surprise to many of their friends in this vicinity. Mr Culp was pastor of the M. E. Church here for five years. His first wife died during this pastorate. Mrs Culp was a Madison girl, a graduate of Madison high school and for a number of years, teacher in the primary department. Mr. and Mrs Culp were married in January, 1911.

Miss Alta Graves was in Ashtabula over Sunday the guest of her friend Helen Jordan.

Mrs. L. S. Dayton spent Wednesday in Cleveland.

The Martha's and Mary's, Mrs Winan's S. S. Class, will spend Friday afternoon with Mrs. Howard Wood.

Miss Florence Quayle left Sunday evening for Topeka, Kansas, where she will spend several weeks with friends, and from there will go to Los Angeles, Cal., where she has accepted a position as teacher.

The W. C. T. U. will meet Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs Frances Ensign Fuller.

Mrs. Edna Cutler is quite ill. Dr. Tuttle is attending her.

Mr and Mrs E. J. Foster and daughter Eleanore, spent Friday in Cleveland, and returned to Willoughby Friday evening where they spent a couple of days with Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Ketcham.

Mrs. Bertha Lott Sorensen of Chicago, Ill., called on friends in town Monday.

Avoid Sedative Cough Medicines.

If you want to contribute directly to the occurrence of capillary bronchitis and pneumonia, use cough medicines that contain codine, morphine, heroin and other sedatives when you have a cough or cold. An expectorant like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is what is needed. That cleans out the culture beds or breeding places for the germs of pneumonia and other germ diseases. That is why pneumonia never results from a cold when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used. It has a world wide reputation for its cures. It contains no morphine or other sedative. For sale by all dealers.

Agricultural Credit

Just at this time when there is so much agitation for a better agricultural credit system for the farmers of the United States, it is interesting to note what is being done in Germany in this regard. Interest on farm loans is lower in Germany than in any other country in the world, due to a splendid system of co-operative organization. In an article in a late issue of the Ohio Farmer, Professor H. C. Price Dean of the college of agriculture, Ohio State University, explains the workings of the land Mortgage Associations of the German Empire. These are co-operative credit associations under direct control of the government. Their operation is described by Professor Price as follows: "When the individual farmer wants a loan, instead of going to a bank, life insurance company or a private individual, he goes to the Land Mortgage Association, becomes a member and arranges with the association for the loan, giving his land as mortgage, and the association in turn issues bonds of equal amount and sells them on the money market.

The regulations of the Land Mortgage Association is rigid in regard to the amount that will be loaned on farm property. It is based as a rule on the appraised value for taxation purposes, does not exceed two thirds of the value and the loan must be secured by first mortgage. In addition to the rate of interest, which is determined by the money market the farmer is usually charged one-fourth per cent on the face of the loan each year to cover the cost of managing the association and in addition the payment that is required on the capital—one-half to three-fourths per cent. At the present time a loan, for example, would cost a farmer four per cent for management and three-fourths per cent as payment on the principal, or a total of five per cent. Thus by paying five per cent annually on the original loan it would be paid off in a little over forty years. The individual farmer is only liable to the extent of his mortgage yet the bonds are secured by all the mortgages of the association. In this way a better security is given without increasing the liability of the individual who is a member of the association."

WILLOUGHBY

Mrs. Edwin C. Caldwell of Niles is spending a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Burgess.

Mrs. H. C. Dawson is visiting her daughter in Youngstown.

Mrs G. E. Manville, Mr Fred Bain and Mr and Mrs James A. McMahon drove to the Little Mountain Tuesday.

Died—Sunday, Tony Mevin, an Italian, of consumption. He leaves a wife and several children.

Painesville football team played the Willoughby team Sunday at Willoughbeach. Score 28 to 0, favor of Willoughby.

Mentor and Willoughby played football Wednesday. Score 47 to 7, favor of Willoughby.

J. O. Manville has been spending two or three days at Ottawa, Ill.

W. P. Sherman is preparing to erect a garage on Erie street, where the old Chapin place was located.

The foundation for McCarthy's new restaurant is being laid.

Dr C. H. Tanner has purchased the place formerly owned by Mr. Hooper and has moved his office there.

The Crane family moved here from Madison Friday, and are residing on West Spaulding St.

Edward E. Burnett who died last week in Perry was a former citizen of this place, having spent his childhood and early manhood here.

The K. of P. show was largely attended, and was very good.

Mr and Mrs G. E. Manville spent Monday on the Plains at the home of Mr and Mrs T. H. Code.

The K. of P.'s will give another show Nov. 19th, at College Hall.

Smallest of Snakes.

The hair snake, the smallest of all creatures bearing the name of snake, is found in water, and is responsible for many a heated discussion in rural districts, where the common belief is that it originates from horse hairs. This theory is all a myth. horse hair snakes are parasites living inside of crickets and grasshoppers, upon leaving which they seek the water to lay their eggs.

About Tea.

A good tea may be made a bad tea, but a bad tea cannot be made a good tea, says the Lancet, except perhaps by very skilful blending. Excessive infusion will spoil a good tea, but even a short infusion of a bad tea may be as objectionable as an excessive infusion of a good tea. On physiological grounds therefore the consumer of high quality teas runs less risk of digestive disturbance, provided the tea is made properly.

Industrious Malaysians.

The following interesting information is taken from a report made by Walter D. Scott, British agent in Trongganu: The hand loom is found in every house and the women weave beautiful silk and cotton sarongs. Throughout the peninsula the men are famed as the best boat builders, and they are clever and efficient workers in iron, brass and nickel.

Duel That Never Came Off.

Humphrey Howarth, a surgeon famous in the pool flogers' day, appeared on the field arrayed only in nature's garb. "What does this mean?" asked his challenger, amazed. "I know," was Howarth's reply, "if any clothing is carried into the body by a gunshot wound, festering ensues. Therefore I have met you thus." The duel was declared off.

Just Try It.

Set about doing good to somebody; put on your hat and go visit the sick and the poor; inquire into their wants and minister to them. Seek out the desolate and oppressed. I have often tried this medicine, and always find it the best antidote for a heavy heart.—John Howard.

Friends.

We speak with awed tenderness of our guardian angels, but have we not all ha our guiling angels who came to us in visible form, and recognized or unknown kept beside us on our difficult path until they had done for us all that they could?—Lucy Larcom.

The Worst of It.

BOARD OF DEPUTY STATE SUPERVISORS OF ELECTIONS, LAKE COUNTY

C. A. RUSH, Chief Deputy
N. G. STEARNS, Clerk

A DOZEN REASONS

WHY YOU SHOULD VOTE AGAINST PRESIDENT TAFT.

1. He signed the Payne Aldrich Tariff Bill and referred to it as the best tariff law ever enacted.
2. He vetoed the Farmers' Free List Bill, the Woolen Bill, and other bills reducing excessive tariff duties.
3. He has failed to take any steps to lessen the present high cost of living.
4. He supported Ballinger in h's efforts to turn rich coal deposits in Alaska over to the Guggenheims.
5. He has used federal patronage to maintain a po'itical machine manipulated in his behalf.
6. He abandoned his official duties to enter into an undignified scramble with his predecessor for renomination.
7. He has lost the confidence of his party and of the people.
8. He failed to support Dr. Wiley in his administration of the Pure Food Law.
9. His trust policy has helped the trusts and brought no relief to the people.
10. His administration has resulted in disappointment and failure.
11. He is a reactionary.
12. Ex-President Roosevelt, who knows him best, says of him: "He has proved faithless to the cause of the American people."

"Ne Temere" Decree.

The "Ne Temere" decree, so called from its first two words in Latin ("Let no one rashly"), is the official declaration of the bishop of Rome, to all Roman Catholics the world over, calling upon them to abstain from intermarriages with those of other creeds and declaring that Roman Catholics must be obedient to the rules of their church regarding such marriages, and their solemnization by their regular clergy.

Metals as Fertilizers.

Certain experiments are being made at present which, though not yet completed, tend to show that certain metals exercise a favorable influence on vegetation.

On the Job.

Stern Mamma—"Young man, the milkman is beginning to make his rounds, the day is breaking and the roosters are beginning to crow." Harry Stalate—"How punctual is nature in her workings."

Almost a Miracle

One of the most startling changes ever seen in any man, according to W. B. Hinsclaw, Clarendon, Tex., was effected years ago in his brother. "He had such a dreadful cough," he writes, "that all our family thought he was going into consumption, but he began to use Dr. King's New Discovery, and was completely cured by ten bottles. Now he is sound and well and weighs 218 pounds. For many years our family has used this wonderful remedy for Coughs and Colds with excellent results." It's quick, safe, reliable and guaranteed. Price 50 cents and $1.00. Trial bottle free at Gehring's Pharmacy.

The Lake County Weekly Herald

ROOSEVELT SAYS:

"Any man who fails to come out against the action of the fraudulent Republican convention at Chicago, has forfeited all right to the support of the rank and file of the Republican party and decent citizens generally. In my judgment no honest man, whether Republican or Democrat, can support Mr. Taft and claim any right to the suffrage of an honest man."

TO THE REPUBLICAN COUNTY CANDIDATES, ALIAS THE SUMMIT COUNTY BULL MOOSE CANDIDATES

Your name will appear on the regular Republican ticket, yet you say that you have also been endorsed by the Progressive or Bull Moose Party. WHAT ARE YOU, A BULL MOOSE OR A REPUBLICAN?

Judge E. R. Dillon was nominated on the Republican ticket for Governor, but when Roosevelt demanded that Dillon declare for him (Roosevelt), Dillon refused and withdrew as a candidate for Governor. The Republican party nominated a separate candidate for Governor, and so did the Bull Moose party. Which nominee will you support? Do you stand by the principles advocated by the Republican party in its state and national platform, or do you stand by the principles advocated by the Bull Moose state and national platform?

Which electors will you support? Those nominated by the Bull Moose party, or those of the Republican party? If the Bull Moose party gets more votes in Lake county and in the State of Ohio, than the Republican party, will you join the Bull Moose party?

If you are a Bull Mooser, do you adopt the attitude of Theodore Roosevelt, contained in the following telegram?

New York, July 20, 1912.

Wallace Bachelder,
Bethel, Vt.

"We can not endorse any candidate of either party, who will not support Roosevelt electors in the coming election. I depend on you for your support in this matter.

Theodore Roosevelt."

The republican county ticket in Lake county is not entitled to the support of any Roosevelt voter in Lake county, except upon personal grounds. Every candidate in allowing their names to appear on the Taft ticket is giving Mr. Taft their support politically. The Herald does not claim that Bull Moose voters should vote for democratic candidates on the county ticket, but we do say that every candidate on the democratic ticket is man enough and honest enough to stand by his political convictions, and on the other hand the Herald claims that any Bull Moose candidate who has not the courage to run independently on the Roosevelt ticket "HAS FORFEITED ALL RIGHT" to the support of Roosevelt voters. We challenge every candidate on the republican county ticket and insist that the voters have a right to know to what political party they belong and if they do not respond the Herald puts up this banner and flaunts it in their faces, as every Roosevelt voter should do on election day.

Every candidate on the Republican ticket in Lake County
Is a Standpatter
and a supporter of
President Taft

ABOUT PEOPLE AND PLACES

Mildred Moore, the small daughter of Captain C. A. Moore of Courtland street, is seriously ill.

—o—

The President's regular Thanksgiving proclamation, advancing turkey about ten cents a pound, will be issued right after the election.

—o—

The radical new city charter of Los Angeles is short but sweet, and might be reduced to "Go ahead." The city can operate anything from a cheese factory to an athletic stadium.

—o—

Election returns will be received at the Herald office next Tuesday night by wire. Precinct committeeman are requested to send in local returns by telephone.

—o—

Mrs. C. C. Viall has recently purchased a new Baker electric automobile. The new machine is most handsome and is the only one of its kind in this city.

—o—

Mrs. Henry Johnson, of Courtland street, who was reported critically ill the first part of the week has improved rapidly and no apprehension is now felt for her complete recovery.

—o—

A description of the new voting precincts will be found in this issue. If you live in Perry, Fairport, Painesville Township or City you should cut this out and be informed on the precinct boundaries.

—o—

We wonder if the present city administration remembers that it was elected on a platform. Probably this has been forgotten and it might be well to read it over occasionally and see if some of the promises made have not also been forgotten.

—o—

The best political meeting, in point of attendance, was held at City Hall last Saturday night by the democrats. The hall was crowded and the audience was well entertained by Wm. Gordon, candidate for Congress, and Mayor Newton D. Baker of Cleveland.

—o—

Word has been received of the death of Robert N. Miller at Elwell, Mich., where he made his home for several years after leaving Perry where he was a resident of the Narrows road. Mr. Miller will be remembered by the older residents of Perry and vicinity.

—o—

C. T. Radcliffe, who was stricken last week with paralysis and apoplexy, is still confined in the City Hospital. According to the reports of Mr. Radcliffe's physicians he is still in a critical condition, there being a possibility that he may not recover from the attack.

—o—

Yes sir, Fletcher,
You will fetch her
Don't you have
A moment's doubt
Dr. Winan's
Fast declining
Soon he will
Be blotted out.

—J. H. S.

—o—

The Gilmore & Jacobs Dairy Company, now located at 208 Bank street has purchased property on the East Side and will erect a modern dairy building, moving its plant to the new location. Ground has already been broken for the new structure which will be thoroughly equipped with the latest apparatus for handling milk.

—o—

Mrs. John Doeberelner of Richmond met with a serious accident on Saturday last, while waiting for supplies at the Nickle Plate Milling Co., the horse which she was holding gave a sudden start, throwing her with great force out of the wagon. She was rushed to the city hospital for medical aid, where she remained until Sunday, when she was taken to her home.

—o—

Say what you please about H. Frank Crofoot as a political manager but he has that Taft republican club beaten at about every angle of the game. Why Frank has the county candidates on the Taft ticket so badly scared that they eat out of his hand and he has them so well in hand that every candidate is actually contributing to the propaganda fund of the Bull Moose party.

—o—

The other Democratic nominee for the senate is a resident of Ravenna but formerly lived in Akron. He publishes a Democratic newspaper which is an assurance that he knows enough for the position for which he is a candidate. Mr Weygandt is one of the most industrious, painstaking and conscientious men we ever knew. He will do his duty anywhere and a lobbyist would find him a hard proposition in our opinion.—Akron Times.

—o—

The city authorities should make some exits at the new city hall that will safe-guard the lives of people if the hall is to ever be used for public purposes. At the big democratic meeting last Saturday night at least fifteen minutes were required for the crowd to get out. The doors swing inward instead of outward at the main entrance, and only one stairway exit was open. In case of panic or fire many lives would be lost with a large crowd in the hall.

THINK ABOUT THIS!

Why is it that the trusts contribute so heavily to Republican campaign funds?

In the McKinley campaign the contributions amounted to from twelve to sixteen millions of dollars. The majority of it came from corporations.

In the second McKinley campaign from seven to nine millions of dollars were contributed.

In 1904 according to testimony brought out in the senate investigating committee, the trusts contributed 75% of the millions of dollars that were raised to elect Roosevelt.

In 1908 the trusts were again partial to the Republican party, as they have always been, and a fund of several millions of dollars was raised to pay Taft's campaign expenses.

Records show that the Republican party has made it profitable for the trusts to contribute. A Republican administration has given the trusts a tariff law which imposes a burden of $115 annually on each family in the country. OF THIS AMOUNT $16 GOES TO THE GOVERNMENT AND $99 TO THE PROTECTED INTERESTS. THE REPUBLICAN PARTY HAS IN BEHALF OF THE GOVERNMENT FORMED A PARTNERSHIP WITH THE TRUSTS IN WHICH THE GOVERNMENT GETS ONE-SEVENTH OF THE TARIFF TAX AND THE TRUSTS GET SIX-SEVENTHS. NO WONDER REPUBLICAN CAMPAIGN FUNDS HAVE BEEN SO LARGE!

The Democratic party's candidate for the White House, will, with the assistance of a Democratic congress, dissolve that partnership.

VIEWS OF A SOCIALIST

Painesville, Oct. 28, 1912.

Editor Herald:

If the Republican Party is as certain of victory on election day as Dr. John Wesley Hill would have us believe there is absolutely no chance for any other political party. And if Pres. Taft is as great and courageous as Mr. Hill claims, the greatest statesmen of all time pale into insignificance when compared to William Howard Taft.

If false accusations will serve to carry the election for the Republican Party, the whole click should go in on the jump.

In dealing with the tariff question Mr. Hill repeatedly proclaimed the benefits which working men received from a high protective tariff.

He did not tell us that the steel and woolen industries are "protected" by a higher tariff than any other large scale industry. He did not tell us that in these industries wages are lower, the hours of labor longer, and sanitary conditions more defective than in any other large scale industry.

In the steel mills owned by the U. S. Steel Corporation, the labor organizations were crushed out years ago. The wage slaves of the steel mills were subdued and cast into capitalist servitude. The memory of Homestead has not vanished. We still remember how the rivers were red with the blood of the protesting strikers.

The average wage in the textile industry of the New England States was less than six dollars per week. As a matter of fact the conditions were so deplorable that 25,000 mill workers of Lawrence, Mass., went on strike.

Then riots were started by professional sluggers and pluguglies in the employ of the woolen trust. Working men and women were clubbed. When they attempted to put into practice their constitutional right of free speech, they were beaten and thrown into jail. These cruelties and a thousand more speak of the reign of gold and a high protective tariff which Mr. Hill claimed was such a fine thing for the workingman.

Then to continue their reputations as psychological prevaricators Mr. Hill with the aid of Homer Harper made a malicious attack upon the Socialist Party claiming that it was a party with no other purpose than to destroy.

Their definition of socialism was so far from the truth that every fair minded person must conclude that they are either ignorant of the socialist philosophy or that they have intentionally misrepresented it. It is my opinion that the latter is correct.

Every student of economics clearly comprehends that socialism is based upon the collective ownership of the machinery of production and distribution. But if these politicians were to tell the truth, it would serve to drive the people from the Republican Party into the Socialist Party.

Mr. Hill launched forth into an attack upon the character of Horace Greeley and William Lloyd Garrison. History's pages will give sufficient evidence as to the true character of these men.

When the names of Homer Harper and John Wesley Hill have passed into the silent grave of oblivion, men and women all over the land, will pay the highest tribute to William Lloyd Garrison and Horace Greeley.

These men will be loved and honored when the present crop of politicians has become extinct. What we need at this time is a thousand Horace Greeleys and William Lloyd Garrisons, but we can get along first rate without an additional Homer Harper or a John Wesley Hill.

Yours most respectfully,
George Lovengood.

Charles T. Rodcliffe, well known business man of this city and prominent in all public affairs, was stricken on Thursday, Oct. 25, with a stroke of apoplexy and paralysis. Mr. Rodcliffe was at his farm on Madison avenue when he was stricken but he was rushed at once to the hospital where Dr. Charles F. House was summoned. The condition of Mr. Radcliffe is very critical although he was resting as well as could be expected.

—o—

A candidate for county office who will run on the republican ticket and refuse to support President Taft is not entitled to the vote of republicans, and the candidate who is in favor of Roosevelt and refuses to run alone on the Roosevelt ticket is not entitled to the support of the Bull Moose voters. With but one or two exceptions the candidates on the republican county ticket are straddlers, and without political convictions strong enough to take a stand for anything. Everybody hates a coward.

—o—

The old days are gone, in Lake county, when a republican nomination was equivalent to an election. With the election drawing near the county candidates are hustling like beavers, and scouring the county for votes. They are so terrified that scarcely a man on the ticket will declare whether he is a standpatter or a Bull Moose. They are actually contributing to two different campaign committees, and meeting one night with the Taft Republican Club and the next night with the Bull Moose organization. Such a mix up in politics was never known and the poor county candidate is really to be pitied and does not appear to know what it is all about. One of the candidates was so perplexed when interrogated the other day that he said, "I am not a Stand Patter, I am not a Bull Moose, I am not a Ram Sheep and not a Wild Boar, I am not a horse, nor a cow nor a dog, I am not a chicken, nor a goose nor a duck, but if this campaign don't come to a close pretty soon, I'll be an inmate in some lunatic asylum and won't need your vote for a county office."

DEMOCRATS!

DEMOCRATS—SEE THAT EVERY DEMOCRAT IN YOUR NEIGHBORHOOD GOES TO THE POLLS NOV. 5. IT IS IMPORTANT THIS YEAR THAT EVERY DEMOCRAT VOTES.

UNIONVILLE

Mr. E. L. Morris was in Cleveland on Friday.

The Ladies Sewing Society held an all day session in the church parlors on Thursday, to sew for the bazaar which will be held some time during the last of November. A picnic dinner was served at noon.

Mr. E. L. Morris has purchased the Pettiplace property, and will plot part of it into lots which will be on the market for sale.

Misses Francis and Bessie Gibbs of Willoughby spent Sunday with their friend, Miss Joy Miller.

E. N. Warner has let the contract for a new barn to take the place of the one which was burned to C. D. Darrow, who will begin work on it at once. Mr. Darrow purchased the lumber from the J. B. Laird Lumber Co. at Ashtabula Harbor. Mr. Laird shipped the lumber on the cars and then sent up his big auto truck to haul it to Mr. Warners. It took about 3 days to haul it. The big auto consumes one gallon of gasoline for each mile it travels.

Mrs. Victor Salkeld of Perry is a guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Warner.

Mrs. E. B. Miller is confined to her home with a very bad cold.

Pupils who attend Geneva schools had a vacation last Friday on account of teachers attending teachers' gathering in Cleveland.

FOR SALE—Two half Percheron colts, black, half brothers, six months old. Three-fourth mile east of Unionville on South Ridge. F. F. Upton.

WANTED—Three corn huskers. Five cents per bushel paid. I. S. Stafford, Richmond Road, Painesville.

EXTRACTS FROM SPEECH BY WILLIAM GORDON

Democratic Candidate for Congress from the Twentieth District of Ohio

My political philosophy is well comprehended in Jefferson's maxim, "Equal rights to all, special privileges to none". If elected to Congress, I shall apply this touch stone to all public questions upon which I am called upon to vote and I believe it points the way to a correct solution of every ill which today afflicts the body politic. Unlawful conspiracies in restraint of trade and encouraging the growth of private monopolies, should be put down by enforcing the laws against those who are guilty, and if the laws are inadequate, others should be enacted.

To enact laws, the purpose and inevitable effect of which is to suppress competition and then enact other laws to punish those who engage in these conspiracies is a system of double dealing which ought to be stopped.

The first step ought to be the repeal of laws creating and conferring privileges and then enact laws to regulate competition and destroy monopoly.

Theodore Roosevelt says that "The Republican party is monopoly controlled and privilege ridden" and this condition has been created by the subserviency of men like Paul Howland who is a candidate for a fourth term in the 20th Congressional District.

Mr. Howland is a political protege of Senator Burton, who in exchange for his "114 votes with Aldrich" in the framing of the Payne-Aldrich tariff law, was enabled to obtain increases and prevent reductions in tariff schedules out of which certain influential constituents of Senator Burton are making large sums of money. As a faithful servant of privilege and monopoly Mr. Howland voted for the joint product of Aldrich, Cannon and Burton. In excusing his public record two years ago, Mr. Howland said that he voted for the Payne-Aldrich law because it was the best he could get; he admitted that it was not in compliance with the promises made to the people by him and his party. Soon after his last re-election Howland was afforded an opportunity to prove that he was sincere in his profession of a desire to improve the Payne-Aldrich law by reducing its rates; he voted against every single bill introduced in Congress which had for its purpose the lowering of tariff duties and in every single instance sustained by his vote the vetoes of President Taft.

Bills were passed through both Houses of Congress reducing the rates of the notorious woolen schedule, Schedule K, which Taft himself had declared to be indefensible, from an average of about 98% to an average of about 49%, and corresponding reductions were made in the cotton, metal and other schedules, and bills were passed removing the tariff from flour, meat, agricultural implements, boots and shoes, etc., all of which were killed by the vetoes of the President, but through his desire to retain the political support of the federal office-holders and stand-patters, Mr. Howland sustained all these vetoes with his votes.

Mr. Howland excuses his votes of last year against these bills on the ground that Taft's Tariff Board has not yet reported the results of its investigation of these schedules; he voted for the extortionate rates of the present law, without a report from a tariff board, in fact a plank approving a tariff commission was voted down in the Republican Convention of 1908 by a vote of nine to one.

But the cotton and woolen schedules had been investigated and reported on by the tariff board, long before he cast his votes this year to leave these schedules as they are. Mr. Howland is attempting to deceive the voters of the Twentieth District by a pamphlet which he is circulating throughout the district in which he parades a vote he cast on March 15th last in favor of free sugar. Such a bill was reported to the House by the Committee on Ways and Means and Mr. Payne moved to refer the bill back to the Committee, with instructions to amend it by imposing a duty on sugar high enough to "measure the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad to be ascertained by the tariff board," etc.

Howland voted for Payne's motion, and after it was defeated, he then voted for free sugar, but on July 30, 1912, Howland voted to concur in the Senate amendment to the free sugar bill imposing a tariff of $1.60 per 100 pounds on sugar.

Lake County Candidates for State Assembly

FLETCHER D. MALIN, Democrat, Painesville lumber dealer; made a rattling good record in constitutional convention, and is pledged to enactment of entire progressive legislative program. One of the best candidates in the state.

J. V. WINANS, Republican, Madison doctor; regarded as a straddler with heavy leanings toward the reactionary side; cut very little figure in his first term in the legislature, except as far as his vote went for the reactionary crowd. He is pledged to NONE of the progressive measures.

Slaying Is Unearthed by Fiance of Dead Woman, Who Eloped With Her From Baltimore About Three Weeks Ago.

Chicago, Ill.—The discovery of the body of Miss Sophia G. Singer, an heiress of Baltimore, crushed and bruised by blows inflicted by a door knob improvised into a "billy," in a rooming house at 3229 Indiana av. at an early hour in the morning, coupled with the disappearance of a couple who had been occupying the same suite of rooms with the Singer woman and her fiance, has furnished the police with one of the most baffling crimes of the year.

Murder Discovered by Fiance.

The murder was discovered shortly after midnight by William Randolph Worthen, 25, the fiance of the dead woman, who eloped with her from Baltimore three weeks ago. Worthen said he and the dead woman were to have been married October 30 and had planned to start immediately to Baltimore. They were to have kept the wedding a secret for a year, he said, or until his wife had inherited $50,000, her share of her father's estate.

Simultaneously with the discovery of the murder it was found that Charles A. Conway, a former well known high diver, and his wife, a vaudeville singer, known as "Beatrice Rivall," "Mayme Coyne" and Grace Carroll, were missing from their rooms in the same suite with the room occupied by Miss Singer and Worthen, who posed as man and wife.

With this latter discovery Worthen at once attributed the murder to Conway and his wife, whom he said he and Miss Singer befriended for three weeks. The motive, he said, was robbery. He said Conway and his wife were without any money and that Conway had seen him give Miss Singer $48 on Sunday night. The police failed to find any money or valuable jewels said to have been owned by Miss Singer and Worthen said that the murderers had killed his fiance to get possession of these.

Worthen was arrested by the police, who questioned him at length. He appeared to be deeply affected by the death of his fiance.

Tells Straight Story.

Worthen, who is of pleasing appearance and was immaculately attired in a light checked suit, told a straight story of his movements on Monday afternoon and evening and at no time contradicted himself.

He repeated his story told the police earlier in the day at the coroner's inquest in the afternoon and went into the minutest detail concerning his movements, especially on Monday evening between 6:40 o'clock, when he said he left the rooming house, and 11 o'clock, when he returned. Several police officials said he told too detailed a story and they believe they will be unable to corroborate his story at several points.

Without being able to disprove Worthen's detailed story of his movements on Monday night, the police are inclined to the theory that the Conways are responsible for the crime. Motive, they said, was divided between Mr. Conway's jealousy of Miss Singer and robbery.

NEW YORK RIDES THE WAVES

Newest of Uncle Sam's Great Battleships Is Launched at the Brooklyn Navy Yard.

New York.—The battleship New York, newest addition to the United States navy, was successfully launched October 30 at Brooklyn navy yard. The ceremony was more elaborate than usual, the navy yard was bedecked with flags and bunting and the launching was witnessed by President Taft, Secretary of the Navy Meyer and thousands of others who were admitted by ticket.

Miss Elsie E. Calder, daughter of Congressman W. M. Calder of New York, christened the big vessel, breaking a bottle of wine on its bows, and little Kathleen Fitzgerald, daughter of Congressman Fitzgerald of Brooklyn, was the flower girl.

The New York is a sister ship to the battleship Texas, which was launched at Newport News a few months ago. Like the Texas she will have an armament of fourteen inch guns. Ten guns of this size will be carried in the main battery. She will also have 21 five-inch guns along her sides.

New York City.—Miss Mary Fontaine Freeland, aged 50, great-granddaughter of Patrick Henry, the revolutionary orator, and formerly a resident of Vicksburg, Miss., committed suicide by inhaling gas in a room she had occupied for the last three weeks in a boarding house here. A servant smelled gas coming from the room, forced the door open and found the woman lying on the bed with a gas jet in her mouth. She had been dead several hours. Miss Freeland had been a victim of melancholia.

POLICE LIEUTENANT CONVICTED WITH PROCURING THE DEATH OF HERMAN ROSENTHAL.

JURY IS OUT EIGHT HOURS

Verdict Is a Severe Blow to Defendant, His Wife and Counsel, All of Whom Looked for Disagreement at Least.

BECKER CASE HISTORY.

JULY 16—Herman Rosenthal shot at entrance of Metropole hotel.
JULY 18—Jack Rose surrenders and gives information leading to arrest of Bridgey Webber, Sam Paul and Jack Sullivan.
JULY 22—Harry Vallon surrenders.
JULY 25—Dago Frank Cirofici arrested in New York.
JULY 29—Rose, Vallon and Webber confess they planned murder at direction of Lieut. Becker, who feared exposure by Rosenthal. Becker indicted and arrested same evening.
AUG. 10—Sam Schepps arrested in Hot Springs, Ark., as witness against Becker.
SEPT. 14—Gyp the Blood and Lefty Louie arrested in Brooklyn.
OCT. 5—Big Jack Zelig, important witness against Becker, shot and killed by Red Phil Davidson.
OCT. 7—Becker's trial begins.
OCT. 25—Becker found guilty of murder in first degree.

* * *

New York City.—Charles Becker, charged with procuring the death of Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, was convicted of murder in the first degree at three and a half minutes after midnight. The jury was out eight hours.

The verdict came only after a most protracted struggle among the jurors, whose arguments at times rose to such a pitch that their voices were heard in Whitest below the juryroom, on the ground glass windows of which was silhouetted their figures angrily gesticulating.

Mrs. Becker, wife of the convicted police official, was barred from the courtroom when the jury returned with their verdict. Seated in the corridor outside, the dread news was broken to her as gently as possible. She sat perfectly immovable when the messenger told her her husband's fate. Apparently stunned she neither moved nor spoke. Then her eyes closed and she apparently swooned. Friends carried her away.

The verdict was a severe blow to both the defendant and his wife and counsel, all of whom had been confidently looking for a disagreement at least.

It was 11:54 p. m. when Justice Goff entered the littered courtroom whence he had been summoned by a message that the jury was ready to come in.

As the black robed justice took his seat on the bench, all of the sleepy-eyed spectators rising while he entered, the jury began entering from the door at the rear of the room.

The last juror had scarcely gained his seat when the same door through which the arbiters of his fate had entered again swung open and Becker himself stalked through. His face was white. His eyes swept about the courtroom in an affrighted manner and finally fell upon the jurors. So intent was he in studying their countenances that he stumbled just inside the room.

Becker Had to be Supported.

The attending deputy sheriff caught him and supported him within the rail.

All eyes thereupon were turned upon the jurors.

Then came the age old formula: "Gentlemen of the jury, have you agreed upon a verdict?"

"We have," said Foreman Skinner.

Becker was ordered to rise. His manner indicated that he feared the worst. As he dragged himself to his feet his body swayed. He looked upon the jurors and pityingly they looked upon him.

"How say you, gentlemen of the jury?"

"Guilty in the first degree," almost whispered the foreman.

Becker's chest sunk in with a sigh that shook his whole frame. His mouth twitched and all the muscles of his face knotted in an anguished spasm. A deep drawn sigh swept over the courtroom.

Convicted Man Gives Pedigree.

The clock had just finished striking 12 as he took his place there at the bar, a convicted murderer to give his pedigree. He seemed to realize his position and yet to be dazed, crushed and annihilated.

Becker gave his age as 42, Germany as his place of birth, his business a lieutenant of police, his religion protestant, his mother's name Lizzie.

These details over, McIntyre mournfully asked that sentence be postponed one week. Justice Goff announced that he would not sentence the convicted man until Wednesday.

Mr. McIntyre immediately announced after Becker had been conducted back to the Tombs that he would make an appeal at once.

STREETS OF CITY CAPTURED BY BULGARS PILED WITH DEAD.

Further Details of Massacre of Innocent Men, Women and Children by Turks Given by Correspondent.

London.—Pushing on tirelessly under the magnificent leadership of Czar Ferdinand, leaving behind only enough soldiers to bury the dead, care for the wounded and guard their prisoners, the main Bulgarian forces are intrenching themselves less than one mile from the city of Adrianople, preparatory to the siege, on the result of which military critics declare depends the future of the sultan's dominions in Europe.

Back in Kirk Kilisseh, the scene of Thursday's Bulgarian victory, the streets are piled high with the dead of the conflict and the adjoining plains are strewn with corpses.

Ten thousand lives were lost before the isolated Turkish garrison of 30,000 men, cut off from all possible escape by the daring flank movement of the invaders, surrendered.

Further details of the massacre of innocent Christians by the Turks before they fled the town of Servia were received here. A dispatch from Gordon Rose, special correspondent of the I. N. S. at Athens, said:

"The slaughter of Christians as the Turks abandoned their positions within the town to flee to the hills was horrible. No mercy was shown women and children. Greek mothers were found dead on their doorsteps. Whole families had been slain in their homes. In some streets not a house had escaped the Moslem hand of death."

Among the army of 22,000 Turks who are entrapped in the nearby mountains are the soldiers who did the indiscriminate killing.

BECKER SAYS HE'S INNOCENT

Convicted Lieutenant Declares He Has No Fear and That Truth Will Prevail in the End.

New York City.—Immediately after the verdict Lieut. Charles Becker said: "Though convicted of murder in the first degree I have no fear. I know that I am innocent. The truth will prevail in the end.

"I was disappointed as I did not believe that any twelve men would accept the story told by my accusers. While I hoped to be acquitted I did not believe that the final result would be worse than a disagreement. I had absolutely nothing to do with the killing of Herman Rosenthal. I never suggested it in anyway. I wanted to be a witness in my own behalf. I believe that I could have explained away all of the suspicious circumstances which tended to implicate me, but I was forced to abide by the decision of my counsel and remain silent.

"I do not believe that I had the fair and impartial trial which is guaranteed to all men under our laws."

SCORES MILITANT SUFFRAGET

Judge Says Women Who Resort to Lawless Methods Will be Dealt With Severely.

New York City.—The militant suffraget will hereafter be regarded by the New York city courts as a "dangerous crank," if the ruling of Chief Magistrate Kempner in the case of Miss Maud Malone, who interrupted Gov. Wilson at a Brooklyn meeting, is observed. The magistrate said:

"We will not tolerate lawless methods, and fanatics of either sex will be dealt with severely, while rational propaganda of any proper cause will be free as air. If such conduct as yours goes unpunished dangerous cranks will multiply, also the number of mayors, presidents and other public men be carrying bullets in their bodies. Although you profess to believe you were heroic and helpful to a great cause, in reality you only succeeded in disgracing yourself and injuring that cause. Persons of your type only retard the day of women's enfranchisement."

FEARED SHE'D TELL POLICE

Closing Chapter of Tragic Life Story of Young Woman Who Became Fettered by Chains of Underworld Is Revealed.

New York City.—Jennie Cavalieri, who was decoyed to a lonely spot on the outskirts of Bridgeport, Ct., and brutally murdered by the agents of a band of white slavers, was the wife of an Italian nobleman. Following clues found among the letters in the dead woman's baggage Detective Frank Virelli of the Connecticut state police discovered that she had been married in this city, on Sept. 24, 1911, to Cavalier Archillo Rotondo. Her career was at once romantic and tragic. Jennie and the Cavalier Archillo had been playmates together in Seffa, a small town in the province Caserta in the southern part of Italy. His family boasted of descent from the [illegible] who came to Caserta in the latter part of the Eighteenth century with the Bourbons. Although the family of the youth forbade alliance, the young couple pledged their betrothal.

In his native land, however, a cavalier of the king could not soil his hands with menial labor as he would have to do to support a wife when deprived of his patrimony, so Archillo came to America, leaving his bride behind until he should be able to support her. Finally, after two years of waiting, came the summons to join him in the new country. Archillo had not fared as well as he had expected during the two years, chiefly because of his frail constitution, but he had accumulated sufficient of the world's goods to satisfy him that he would be able soon to fit up a home for his bride. It was just about the time of her arrival at Ellis Island that Archillo began to show symptoms of dreaded tuberculosis. Then when he fully realized that the end was but a matter of hours away he insisted upon calling in Father Tofini that they might be united, even in the shadow of death. That day the widow's weeds took the place of the bridal veil.

This was a year ago. Jennie Rotondo, widowed bride, sat in her meagerly furnished room in East 115th st., near First av., and made plans for a future that looked dark. Several days passed, during which she occasionally entered a coffee house kept by one Amadio Buonomo in 114th st. Although she conducted herself at all times becomingly she attracted the attention of Joseph Buonomo, a brother of the proprietor. To the latter she told of her plans to return to Seffa after she had earned enough money to bring back with her the remains of her dear husband that he might be properly interred with the ashes of his forefathers in Caserta. Joseph Buonomo was a white slave trader, but there was nothing in his appearance or manners to betray his despicable business and Jennie Rotondo felt that perhaps she had found a friend and adviser among the strangers who surrounded her. He induced her to go to Chicago—how no one knows, but the police declare her motives, if not his, were of the best. Then came the awakening—a horrible realization of her plight. But it was too late to retreat. The chains of the slave were upon her. Buonomo was her master. An opportunity came when an agent of the Law and Order league that was making a vigorous crusade against vice in Chicago met her and did not need much urging to enlist her as a silent crusader, a spy in the camp of the "white slavers."

"Chicago Joe," the name by which Buonomo was known in his haunts of the Chicago underworld, became suspicious. In the meantime Jennie had learned, when he boasted in his cups, that he, Buonomo, had served time in prison in Connecticut for shooting at Chief of Police Bromidge of Thompsonville when he had interfered with Buonomo's efforts to recruit girls from the ranks of mill workers in that town. Then there was the recent case of "Nick, the Bum," a character of the underworld who was shot on Oct. 1 by Buonomo because he would not give up his girl and who died three weeks later in New York, whence he had been hurried by agents of the white slave band to avoid the agents of the Law and Order league. Valuable information pointing to Buonomo as the slayer of "Nick the Bum" could have been given to the police by Jennie Cavalieri, but no one knew this better than Buonomo. It had become a matter of his life or that of Jennie Cavalieri. She was killed.

HARDWARE IN STOMACH

NAILS, KEYS AND SPIKES TAKEN FROM "HUMAN OSTRICH."

Man Who Said His Digestion Was Little Out of Order Is Operated on by Surgeons.

Pittsfield, Mass.—Luke Parsons, the "human ostrich," was operated on in a Pittsfield hospital and the surgeons removed 132 nails, two keys, a button hook and a partly digested three inch spike from his stomach and intestines.

A nail had punctured the abdomen and caused peritonitis.

Parsons, who is 40 years old, has had a craving for metals since he accidentally swallowed some shingle nails ten years ago.

Jack knives, spikes and can openers were regarded by him as a special delicacy.

Recently he had symptoms of indigestion. He had attacks before that always found a remedy by eating pieces of tin, a button hook or some keys.

When he applied to the hospital for treatment he said his indigestion was a little out of order.

The surgeons are doubtful of his recovery.

TWO WOMEN SHOT TO DEATH

Tragedy Follows Quarrel Between Children, It Is Said, Father of Nine Being Under Arrest.

Wellston, O.—As the result of a quarrel between their respective children James Cochran is accused of having shot and killed Mrs. Ida Colley and Mrs. Rosa Butt, neighbors. Cochran is the father of nine children. He is in jail and held without bail. The post mortem examination showed that one of the women was about to become a mother. Cochran was tried and acquitted a year ago of having shot and killed Ammon Kauffman, a neighbor.

According to persons living near the scene of the shooting it appears that there has been ill feeling existing for the past three months in the families of the three parties, Cochran being possessed of the idea that his children were being imposed on by the children of Mrs. Colley and Mrs. Butt. There had been frequent quarrels between the different parties which had its culmination in the shooting of the two women.

CONVICT'S PLEA SAVES BOY

Softens Heart of Judge Who Sends Young Prisoner to Reform School Instead of to Prison.

Chicago, Ill.—The plea of an old convict saved Charles Broadbent, 18, from a penitentiary sentence.

"I'm an old convict," he said. "I've been in the pen, so let me go back there again. It can't hurt me any more than it has. But this boy was led astray by me. It was my fault, not his. Don't ruin him by sending him to the pen. I know how it blasts a man's life."

This plea by Magnus Nelson, who with Broadbent held up four men in a park, got the younger prisoner sent to a reform school instead of to prison. Judge Cooper sent Nelson back to the penitentiary.

INVALID PLUNGES TO DEATH

Inmate in Home for Incurables Kills Himself by Toppling Over Railing Into Courtyard.

New York City.—Wheeling his invalid chair to the railing surrounding the fourth floor veranda of the Montefiore Home for Incurables, Max Snodowsky, an inmate, drew himself up to the edge and toppled over into the courtyard, forty feet below. He was dead when carried into the home.

Several other invalid inmates in their chairs on the veranda saw their companion slowly drag himself up by all the power left in his arms to the top of the rail, but were powerless to prevent the suicide. Snodowsky had been an inmate of the home for six years. He suffered from spinal disease and was practically helpless.

Sterilization Law Upheld.

Olympia, Wash.—The constitutionality of the law providing for the sterilization of habitual criminals and those guilty of unnatural crimes was upheld by the supreme court, in sustaining the sentence imposed on Peter Feilen of Seattle, who also is under sentence of life imprisonment. The court found that medical authorities agreed that the operation was neither dangerous nor painful and held that such punishment was not cruel or inhumane. The case was the first of its kind to come before the supreme court of the state.

Slays Three, Takes Own Life.

Sheboygan, Wis.—Alvin Roehr, 33 years of age, a young farmer of Plymouth, shot and killed his father-in-law, Philip J. Ott, Mrs. Ott and Mrs. Ott's father, Fred Haut, eighty, when he was refused to see his wife, with whom he has not been living. The man escaped. Roehr's body was found later hanging to a tree in the woods about a quarter of a mile from the scene of the tragedy. It is supposed that the assassin, fearing summary action at the hands of a posse, committed suicide.

Two Find Watery Graves.

Marietta, O.—Two unidentified men, who were cruising down the Ohio river in a canoe, were drowned when their craft went over a dam at the head of Nails island, three miles above Marietta. Two automobile parties from Marietta and residents of the island saw them struggling in the water. A canoe, two suit cases and a coat were recovered. In the garment was a letter addressed to Ward Boss, Pittsburgh, Pa., and a license to carry firearms, issued to Ward Boss at Olean, N. Y.

GOT RICH IN THREE YEARS

EXPERIENCES OF A BRITISH EMIGRANT IN CANADA-WEST.

The following straightforward statement needs no comment to add to its force and effect. It appears in a recent issue of the Liverpool Mercury.

H. Patterson, of Nutana, Saskatchewan, Canada, when he arrived from Liverpool, had "Six of us to support," to use his own phraseology, and his funds were getting low. He secured a homestead 32 miles out from Sundarn, and started living on it April 15, 1907. The previous fall he put all his money, $137, into a shack and lot, making sure of a home. As cook and caterer in a local hotel he made $75 a month, and out of this had some savings out of which he paid his breaking and improvements on the homestead. The shack was sold to good advantage. Then Mr. Patterson tells the story after he had removed his family to the homestead:

"For the first month life was so strange and [illegible] that I hadn't time to think of anything, only fixing up our new home. I was so 'green' to farm life that I didn't know the difference between wheat and oats (I do now)! Between working out, cropping my place, and with my gun, we managed to live comfortably for the three years, which time was required to put in my duties. I had accumulated quite a stock of horses, cows, pigs, fowls, and machinery in the three years.

"In October, 1909, I secured my patent to my land, so took a few days' holidays to Saskatoon to locate a purchased homestead (viz., 12s. per acre) from the Government. Instead of getting the purchased homestead, I secured a half section (320 acres) on the Saskatchewan River for $25 per acre on easy terms, nine years' payments with a cash payment of $1,000. I mortgaged my first homestead, obtained chattel mortgages on my stock, and on December 24th, 1909, took possession, on June 10, 1910, I sold out again for $10 per acre, clearing, besides my crop (140 acres), $4,800. I also sold my first homestead, clearing $1,600 and two Saskatoon town lots, which we value at $1,000 each today. We placed all our capital in another farm (river frontage) and some trackage lots (60), also a purchased homestead (river frontage). I remained as Manager of the Farm I had sold on a three years' contract at a fine salary and house, garden, and numerous privileges.

"So by the time my three years have expired, with my investments and the increased value of my frontage and lots, I am hoping to have a clear profit on my $137 investment of $50,000. My land doesn't eat anything, and it is nearly all paid for. I hold a good position (and secure)."—Adv.

FACE ALMOST COVERED WITH PIMPLES AND BLACKHEADS

Atchison, Kan.—"For a number of years I suffered very greatly from skin eruption. My face was very red and irritated, being almost covered with pimples and blackheads. The pimples were scattered over my face. They were a fine rash with the exception of a few large pimples on my forehead and chin. My face burned and looked red as if exposed to either heat or cold. It was not only unsightly but very uncomfortable. I tried several remedies but couldn't get any relief. I was recommended to use Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment.

"I applied the Cuticura Ointment in the evening, leaving it for about five minutes, then washing it off with Cuticura Soap and hot water. I washed with the Cuticura Soap and hot water also several times during the day. After about four months of this application, my face was cleared of the pimples. I still use the Cuticura Soap." (Signed) Miss Elsie Nielson, Dec. 26, 1911.

A Nice Distinction.

Senator Gronna, discussing a knotty tariff problem, said in a speech:

"There is a nice distinction involved here. You don't notice it at first. Once it is pointed out to you, however, you perceive its immense importance.

"It's the sort of distinction that Gobse Inde's beautiful young wife revealed to him during a conjugal quarrel over a diamond tiara.

"'People say,' quavered the man, trembling with rage, 'People say you only married me because I had money.'

"The young woman smiled superbly.

"'Rubbish!' she exclaimed. 'My primary reason for marrying you was that I had no money myself.'"

T. R.'S POLITICAL PURITY ROBE IS BECOMING SOMEWHAT SOILED.

WOOL TARIFF FRAUD

HIGHEST TAX IS PLACED ON THE CHEAPER GRADES OF WOOLEN GOODS.

ORDINARY PEOPLE SUFFER

Warm Winter Clothing Literally Taxed Off the Backs of the Poor of This Country to Enrich the Wool Barons.

The wool tariff fraud and the bloated fortunes resulting therefrom have one great advantage in every discussion.

The wool tariff is so involved, so tangled, so confused and intricate that it can hardly be explained in clear language. The general results, however, can be made clear.

The wool tariff, but a mixed-up scheme of juggling, gets a total average of duties running from 80 to 110 per cent on woolen clothing.

The wool tariff taxes highest the cheaper grades of woolen goods, which people of ordinary means can buy.

The wool tariff taxes a garment having one woolen thread to the yard as if it were all wool. This enables the manufacturer to get his cotton in a free trade market, mix it with 1 per cent of wool and sell it in a market protected by a 100 per cent tariff wall.

The wool tariff has made woolen clothing cost from one and one-half to more than twice as much in America as in England.

The wool tariff has literally taxed warm winter clothing off the backs of the poor of this country.

The wool barons pay nearly the lowest wages in their mills, and get the highest "protection" on their product.

In the wool debates a full generation ago, General—afterward President—Garfield became so disgusted with the hogglishness of the woolen interests that he vowed he would "walk a mile to kick a sheep."

The same interests that put through the wool steal in Garfield's day wrote the wool schedule of the Aldrich tariff. They are richer now than they were then—but no more honorable or generous.

The bloated fortunes of wool barons are built on a system of compound swindling of their American consumers.—Chicago Journal.

The Essential Facts.

Carefully analyzing all of Mr. Roosevelt's various statements in regard to the Standard Oil contribution we find the facts to be essentially as follows:

1. The Standard Oil company never contributed to his campaign fund.
2. If the Standard Oil company did contribute $100,000 to his campaign fund he never knew about it.
3. As soon as he heard of the Standard Oil company's contribution, he ordered the $100,000 returned.
4. The money was not returned, but if it had been returned Frick of the steel trust would have made good the deficit.
5. Everybody is a liar.

Not Striving for Free Trade.

Wilson says he is not striving "for trade or anything that remotely resembles free trade," because it is impossible to do away with imposts so long as the expenses of the federal government must be raised by indirect taxation. He does not object to the protection that makes life easier to America, but only to the tariff privileges that make life harder. He would clean the tariff schedules of all the lobby larcenies and the subsidies of cunning and sloth.

Regulation of Competition.

The regulation of competition, for which Mr. Wilson contends, means that a sharp distinction should be made between two very different kinds of competition. It is all right that private persons should compete with each other for power to serve the public; it is all wrong that they should compete with each other for power to tax the public.

Wilson insists that privileges should be utterly abolished and that private monopolies are absolutely intolerable.

AMERICANS NOT PREFERRED

How Roosevelt's Good Friend, the Steel Trust, Shows Zeal for Social Justice.

"Wanted—Sixty-two housemen, tinners, catchers and helpers to work in open shop; Syrians, Poles and Roumanians preferred."

Who paid for that advertisement?

Was it some free-trade miscreant who wants to break down the tariff barrier that protects us from the pauper labor of Europe?

Was it some millionaire with a hard face and a soft body, who sees in the third-party third-term candidate a menace to his swollen wealth?

Was it a boss, a mollycoddle, an undesirable citizen, a member of the Ananias club, a participant in the Standard Oil conspiracy to cut down campaign contributions?

Ah, no.

That advertisement was published and paid for by Theodore Roosevelt's great and good friend, the steel trust, and is an exact measure of that trust's fondness for American labor and zeal for social and industrial justice.

Why Not Wilson?

The American people want a president who has had executive experience and made good at it. Governor Wilson is such a man.

The American people want a president who has no trust affiliations to explain. Governor Wilson meets this requirement.

The American people want a president who will help scale down that hoary old fraud of the tariff. Governor Wilson will be such a president.

The American people want a president who respects the constitution and who knows that this nation can make progress without destroying the constitution. Again, this describes Governor Wilson.

The American people want a president who is free from entangling alliances with seekers of privilege. Every privilege seeker in the land is opposed to Governor Wilson.

The American people want a president who is free and able to serve the people, the whole people, and only the people. Governor Wilson is the only presidential candidate who meets that requirement.

Why not elect Woodrow Wilson?

The Wilson Campaign Fund.

The talk about "huge contributions" to the Wilson campaign fund fizzled to a fitting end when Chairman McCombs of the Democratic national committee testified yesterday before the senate committee.

While one boss gave $177,000 to Roosevelt's campaign fund and another $144,000, and the contributions to Taft were seldom recorded in less than five figures, only three contributors to Governor Wilson's campaign gave over $10,000.

Governor Wilson is the people's candidate. He is fighting for the people's cause, and the people are financing his campaign. They cannot finance it too well.

Mr. Wilson is no enemy of big business—the kind that grows big because big men are behind it. He abhors the kind of business that is flatulent and dropsical with fraudulent finance.

Where His Strength Lies.

Mr. Roosevelt's instant profiting by the labor troubles in the anthracite region points with unmistakable directness to the quarter where the peril lies. Trouble, unrest, discontent and disorder are the very substance of his strength.—New York Times.

We need no revolution; we need no excited change; we need only a new point of view and a new method and spirit of counsel.—Woodrow Wilson.

Deep down in his heart every man of any property, whether it be of "malefactorish," or merely "penal" dimensions, knows that this is the same Roosevelt who cajoled the late E. H. Harriman before election and beat him with a club after election.

The tariff on sugar costs every man, woman and child in this country $1.22 per year. The way to get rid of this tax is to make Gov. Wilson president and give him a Democratic majority in congress.

IMPORTANT RULINGS

ATTORNEY-GENERAL GIVES OPINIONS TO LIABILITY BOARD.

No Provision for Occupational Diseases—Amendment No. 5 Protects Employers Only When Within the Law.

Columbus, O.—Opinions on questions arising in connection with the Green Workmen's Compensation act and the adoption of Constitutional Amendment No. 5, removing the limit of damages for wrongful deaths, were given to the State Liability Board of Awards today by Attorney-General T. S. Hogan. In one of these he holds that Wm. Peters, of Newport, Ky., who is employed by an Ohio firm that has subscribed to the state insurance fund, is not entitled to compensation for an "occupational disease."

This conclusion is arrived at by construction of the law. In its very title and at places through the act the law speaks of compensation to employes who have been "injured and to the dependents of those who have been killed." Further than this, as showing that the general assembly did not intend to include occupational disease, the attorney-general cites the action of the last general assembly in passing a resolution for the study of ailments of this character. He suggests it as a subject for further remedial legislation, since provision has already been made by the constitutional amendments.

Regarding Amendment No. 5, Mr. Hogan holds that after January 1, 1913, employers who do not avail themselves of the Compensation act will be liable for damages without limit for wrongful death, but in the case of an employer who does take advantage of the act he will be protected from suit for damage, except such death be caused by wilful act in violation of law.

Mr. Hogan points out that in case of violation of the law it becomes optional with the injured employe or dependents of one killed to exercise option of suit or settlement with the state board.

In another opinion he holds that companies which go out of business before the period of their insurance expires are not entitled to a refunder under the present law. He suggests that as a subject for further legislation.

Lowry's Name Clear.

Confession by Dr. George B. Nye of Waverly to legislative bribery has proved the salvation of Dr. A. Clark Lowry of Ironton, another legislator who has been in the meshes of the law for the last year and a half with two bribery indictments hanging over his head. Acting on the Pike county solon's confession, Prosecutor Turner and Attorney General Hogan had the court nolle an indictment against Dr. Lowry which charged him with soliciting a bribe from Burns detectives.

Another indictment charging Representative Lowry with soliciting a bribe from Opha Moore, secretary of the Ohio Manufacturers' Association, now is under investigation by state's attorneys and it is probable this, too, may be nolled. If this is done, the Lawrence county legislator will be given a clean bill.

The state decided to nolle the indictment against Dr. Lowry after a thorough investigation of the Nye confession was made and compared with statements of Burns detectives, Dr. Lowry and S. J. Vining, speaker. These statements, they think, show Dr. Lowry had been the dupe of Dr. Nye and solicited the bribe from the detectives without guilty intent.

Dr. Lowry admitted that he solicited the bribe, but declared it was done with the understanding that the solicitation was merely a ruse to catch bribe-taking lobbyists. This statement was made by both Mr. Vining and Dr. Lowry at the time of the expose and Dr. Nye's confession bears them out.

New Inspector Doing Good Work.

Benjamin F. McKinney, the new state oil inspector, is starting out well. He has just made his quarterly report. It shows the receipts for the quarter to be $34,231.35, the largest for any like period in the history of the department. After paying the expenses of operation, including the salaries of some 40 deputies, the chief inspector and his office force, the state gets $23,250.68 as its share of the collections. There were 494,954 barrels of oil inspected.

Governor Appoints Delegates.

Some 200 delegates have been appointed by Gov. Harmon to represent Ohio at the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, which will be held in Washington December 4, 5 and 6. Most of the delegates were appointed by the governor a year ago to attend the same meeting. Ohio is always numerously represented at the gathering.

Enamel Manufacturers Interested.

Enamel manufacturers are about ready to take advantage of the Green workingmen's compensation act and subscribe to the state insurance fund for the benefit of injured employes. A conference was held with the State Liability Board of Awards and it was stated that it was probable that a number of the firms will come under the act. Those present were William Lipphardt, of Bellaire, Ohio; W. W. Judkins, of New Philadelphia; C. J. Burt, West Lafayette, and W. A. Steelers, of Bellaire.

State Aid Is Desired.

Attorney General Hogan and Prosecutor Pogue of Hamilton county will join in a requisition on Gov. Harmon to allow a member of the attorney's office to assist in the examination of the affairs of the Cincinnati Trust company, before the Hamilton county grand jury. Attorney General Hogan returned from Cincinnati where, after a conference with Prosecutor Pogue, this amicable agreement was reached. It is probable that Attorney Joseph McGhee, first assistant to Mr. Hogan, will be assigned to the work.

Bank Amendment Not Authentic.

The attorney general gave two rulings to State Bank Superintendent F. E. Baxter. In one of these he holds that the part of Constitutional Amendment No. 34 which relates to inspection of private financial institutions that use the word "bank" or "bankers" is not effective until suitable legislation has been provided. The superintendent's own notion that the amendment is not automatic is verified.

In another request Baxter asked whether the same amendment providing double liability of stockholders of corporations authorized to receive money on deposit means that stockholders having half of their capital stock paid in will be liable for the unpaid portion of their subscription and then double that, or "whether in banks where only one-half of the capital stock is paid in it will mean that the stockholders will only be called upon to pay the full amount of their subscriptions."

A construction of the language used in the amendment convinces Mr. Hogan that the stockholders are liable for unpaid as well as paid stock owned by them and double the amount of the stock subscribed. Any other construction would defeat the amendment's own purpose. He says: "For instance, if a person subscribes for one share of stock and pays in fifty per cent. of the value of the same he would be liable for the fifty per cent. remaining unpaid on his subscription and for one hundred per cent. in addition."

Railroads Lack Tracks.

Grain men, in a meeting at the Neil House, were told by Chairman O. P. Gothlin, of the Ohio public service commission, that the present lack of sufficient transportation facilities is not so much the result of a short car supply as it is the inadequacy of railroad tracking. Mr. Gothlin pointed out that under average conditions the equipment of most of the railroads would show a surplus of from 10 to 30 per cent. The meeting was the regular fall business conference of members of the Ohio Grain Dealers' association. At the morning meeting reports were received from every section of the state, showing an enormous crop and a record quantity of grain to be moved. It was the consensus of opinion among the grain men that the problem of transporting their large [illegible] experienced in years. They called in Mr. Gothlin in the hope that he might show them the way out of their difficulties.

Notable Speakers to Be Heard.

Prof. Geo. Vincent of the University of Minnesota, Prof. Charles Prosser, secretary of the society for the promotion of industrial education, New York, and Prof. Henry Suzzallo of Columbia university, are among the notable educators who are programmed for the meeting of the Central Ohio Teachers' association, which will meet in Columbus November 8 and 9. The general sessions will be held at Memorial hall, where 3000 persons are expected. Departmental meetings will be held at the Chamber of Commerce building.

Rules on Several Points.

Attorney General T. S. Hogan holds that automobile numbers are not interchangeable, and automobile companies are compelled to secure separate tags for each machine. Ohio statutes do not authorize transaction of a mutual insurance business that leaves uncertain the amount of the death benefit and certain the amount of the assessment, it was held in a ruling to Secretary of State Graves, directing him to refuse incorporation papers to a Greek Catholic union of St. George, O.

Refuse Permission For Issue.

Flat turndown on its proposition to sell additional stocks and bonds was met with by the Defiance Gas and Electric company at the hands of the Ohio public service commission. Before the application was heard the company declared that it had found that its previous bonds, the basis of which was a $200,000 mortgage, were faulty, and it asked authority to issue new bonds to replace them. While the commission was in the business it was requested to grant authority to issue $91,000 worth of bonds at 80 and $92,600 stock to be sold at 60. Before the final hearing the petition was again amended so as to ask $90,000 bonds at 80 and $90,500 at 60. The commission found that the mortgage is not faulty and there is no need to replace the original bonds and that the sale price proposed for the new bonds is inadequate. It, therefore, turned down the application.

Bonds to be Issued.

City Council has authorized the issuance of $310,000 worth of bonds for the improvement of the North Fourth street viaduct and the construction of a city refuse disposal plant. Work on neither structure can be begun before spring, but bonds are being sold now to evade the tax that goes into effect after January 1.

Directors to Decide Soon.

Directors of the Hayden-Clinton National Bank have determined upon no definite policy relative to filling the place made vacant in the organization of this banking institution through the death of the late F. W. Prentiss. It is expected that a meeting of the board will be called to elect a new president some time soon, but just how soon has not been decided. In the meantime David S. Gray, vice president of the bank, has assumed a part of the duties formerly devolving upon the late Mr. Prentiss.

Vital Statistics are Issued.

The annual report of the state bureau of vital statistics shows that in 1911 there were 100,938 children born in Ohio, of whom 52,865 were males and 48,073 females. The highest birth rate was in Lawrence county, with 28 per 1,000 population, and the lowest in Lake county, with 14 per 1,000. There were 65,532 deaths during the year, an increase of 5,000 over 1909. Tuberculosis caused more deaths than any other disease, with cancer second, and typhoid fever third.

MAKE BIG OIL FIND

COMPANY NOW HOLDS LEASES ON LARGE TRACTS OF LAND.

Very Fine Oil Is Found in Gas Well At Quincy—Will Be All Pumped Out.

Sidney, O.—The Consumers Oil and Refining company now holds leases on about 3000 acres of land in the Quincy-Degraff field and about 500 acres in Ross county. The company has also secured a lease on a well known as the "Town Gas Well," of Quincy, which they opened up a few days ago and found oil standing within 582 feet of the top, the well being 1366 feet deep.

The oil is of the finest quality, rich in gasoline, kerosene and everything that makes oil valuable. They will pump this well, clean it out and market the oil and gas.

PREPARING FOR SHOW.

Poultry Show at Springfield Will Be in January.

Springfield, O.—At a meeting of the Springfield Poultry and Pet Stock association held in the Commercial club rooms in the Fairbanks building it was decided that the annual show of fancy poultry will be held during the second week of January for the year 1913. Just what date to hold the exhibit was not definitely decided as the association has not as yet been successful in securing a desirable location.

Secretary O. T. Swigert was authorized to secure the services of two competent judges for the exhibit.

At this meeting a number of new members will be taken into the association and judging from the many applications received the class will probably number about 25. Called meetings of the association will be held from now on until the time of the show.

CONVICT DIES OF WOUNDS.

Is Shot by Guard While Trying to Escape a Second Time.

Columbus, O.—William Harnegraff, the penitentiary prisoner who was shot by a guard while attempting to escape over the prison wall, died several hours later while his wound was being dressed in the prison hospital.

Harnegraff, aged 21, from Butler county, was serving a life sentence for murder. He was captured at Piqua a little more than a week ago after he had escaped from the penitentiary. He was shot by a guard and probably fatally wounded when he again attempted to escape from the prison by scaling the wall. He fell 35 feet to the ground, fracturing his right ankle and left wrist.

BIG PLANT IS SOLD.

Portsmouth, O.—On an order of sale issued from the common pleas court to satisfy a judgment of $142,000 given the plaintiff in the case of the York Portland Cement company against the Empire Portland Cement company, the cement plant and mines located above New Boston were sold by the sheriff from the steps of the courthouse. Walls A. Hutchins, representing the plaintiff company, bid in the property, his bid of $48,125 being the only one recorded and it was accepted. The property was appraised at $72,186.

KILLED ON THE TRACK.

Marysville, O.—C. F. Reed, aged 24, an Erie brakeman of Marion, met instant death on his first trip over the railroad near here. When his train stopped near Pottersburg he was sent back as flagman to warn other trains. He sat down upon the track and, it is thought, fell asleep. The train backed over him, mangling his body. Reed's body was sent to Marion for interment. Ernest Baar of St. Marys was run down last week in a similar manner on the T. & O. C. railroad.

CHOOSES HOUSE MOTHER.

Portsmouth, O.—Miss Sarah Willson of Elkins, W. Va., a Virginian by birth, has been chosen as house mother of the Y. W. C. A. Miss Willson comes to Portsmouth highly recommended. She has had training at the Drexel Institute in Philadelphia and also hospital and settlement training work, which will make her a most valuable attache of the local association.

BUYS MIAMI PLANT.

Dayton, Ohio.—The Dayton Power and Light company has announced the purchase of the Miami Valley Heat, Light and Power company of Piqua for $500,000. The latter is capitalized at $465,000. Extensive improvements will be made and royalties and villagers within a radius of forty miles will be supplied.

WOMAN PAINFULLY BURNED.

Portsmouth, O.—Mrs. Mosie E. Zaph, wife of Thomas Zaph, was seriously burned in a gas stove explosion at their home, 720 Ninth street. Mrs. Zaph was cooking supper and thought the gas was lighted both in the oven and burners on top, when she started to set the table. An instant later she discovered the flame had gone out on top. She struck a match to re-light the gas, when an explosion followed. She was burned about the face and right arm and hand.

HELD A BIG MEETING.

Dayton, O.—Conferring the degrees upon a class of 50 candidates, Dayton Camp, Woodmen of the World, held a very important meeting here. Chief among the distinguished visitors present were Sovereign Manager William Ruess of Cleveland; Head Consul H. O. Brodbeck of Columbus, George Calloway, secretary of the Rovers' association, of Cleveland; Colonel W. M. Morse of Columbus, and ex-Mayor De Witt C. Badger of Columbus.

REVERSES LOWER COURT

CIRCUIT COURT HOLDS THAT GREENE COUNTY MUST PAY SHARE OF HOSPITAL.

Xenia, O.—Greene county must pay its share of the cost of establishing the District Tuberculosis hospital, according to a decision of the circuit court at Xenia. The holding of the circuit court is that Judge C. H. Kyle of Xenia erred in sustaining the demurrer of the Greene county commissioners, to the petition filed by Prosecutor Lawrence Laybourne of this city, in the name of the commissioners of Clark, Champaign and Madison counties.

Greene county's share of the hospital was $6254. The Xenia parties will take the case to the supreme court in an effort to seek reversal of the circuit court.

WAGE INCREASE GRANTED

Operators Offer Advance of Fifteen Cents to Blast Furnace Men.

Ironton, O.—Operators of the seven blast furnaces in this county tendered their employes an increase of 15 cents per day in wages, covering all classes of labor. The men made a request for a twenty-five-cent increase, such as was made by the two furnaces at Ashland, Ky.

The employes have agreed to accept the raise. There was no strike, and all the furnaces are working full time.

About 1,500 men are affected at the plants of the Marting Iron and Steel company, Ironton Iron company, Sarah Furnace company, Hanging Rock Iron company (two furnaces), Belfont Iron company and Lawrence Iron company.

TO LIMIT AGE OF DRIVERS.

Dayton, O.—Persons under 18 years of age will be denied the privilege of driving automobiles and motorcycles in the city of Dayton if Council passes an ordinance drafted by the codifying commission. The commission has in contemplation an ordinance denying all women the right to operate high power gasoline driven machines here, but will make an exception on electrics.

MAY USE PEN. CURRENT.

Columbus, O.—Connection of the municipal light plant with that of the penitentiary and either exchange or purchase of current is proposed by Superintendent Lockhorn of the city light plant as the only way to get current for additional cluster lights which the gas and electricity committee of council has decided to recommend.

TWO HURT BY AUTOS.

Dayton, O.—John Stupp of Samuel street suffered a broken leg and other injuries when he was run down by an automobile. Charles J. Webber, 208 East First street, suffered scalp wounds and many bruises in a similar accident. Both accidents occurred on East Third street, and within five minutes of each other.

ODD FELLOWS AT BANQUET.

Washington C. H.—Four hundred Odd Fellows from various parts of Ohio and Indiana were guests at a banquet given by the imperial degree staff of Temple Lodge 227. Preceding the banquet the imperial degree staff of 75 members put on the final degree. Three Columbus lodges came by special train.

DIRECTOR IS CHOSEN.

Dayton, O.—L. D. Upson, who arranged and directed the Cincinnati Municipal Exhibit, has accepted the directorate of the Bureau of Municipal Research here and will assume his duties November 1. He is aged 30, a native of Rockford, Ill., and received his training in New York.

CONVICT WAS NOT SHOT.

Columbus, O.—Following an investigation, Coroner Hanes declared that William Harnegraff, pen prisoner who was killed Monday while trying to escape over the wall, was not shot, and his death was probably due to fright or to injuries sustained in his fall.

EDITOR-LAWYER DEAD.

Dayton, O.—Frank Conover, a lawyer and newspaper writer, died at a local hospital of tuberculosis. He was a contributor to home and foreign magazines and at different times edited local papers.

RED CROSS DELEGATE NAMED.

Columbus, O.—Colonel James Kilbourne of this city was appointed by Governor Harmon as Ohio's delegate to the National Red Cross Society, which meets in Washington December 11.

LIBEL SUIT IS DISMISSED.

Springfield, O.—A suit for $100,000 for alleged libel which was brought recently by the Alameda Consolidated Mining company against a number of Ohio stockholders, including several Springfield citizens, was dismissed in the United States district court at Cincinnati. The company brought suit because of alleged libel contained in a petition for a receiver filed last [illegible] by the Ohio stockholders charging the directors of the company with mismanagement.

MAKING A NEW PARK.

Piqua, O.—The Wood Shovel & Tool company has had a force of employes at work on a tract of ground on South avenue transforming it into a park. Trees are planted and the land is being arranged for flower beds and the planting of grass seed. The object of the company in establishing such a park is for the purpose of beautifying the factory's grounds and by planting trees, do away with much of the bareness of the territory in that part of town.

It is conceded that Lake county will go at least two to one for Roosevelt over Taft. Yet Paul Howland, candidate for Congress, bitterly assails Ex-President Roosevelt, and is advocating Taft's re-election. Does Howland believe he will get many Roosevelt votes by denouncing their leader?

The revelation that Thomas F Ryan financed the Parker campaign of 1904 to the extent of $450,000 comes as a striking confirmation of the sureness of Mr Bryan's political instinct at the Baltimore convention. Gov Wilson's instinct in refusing to accept a Ryan contribution last winter was also very sound and sure, particularly for a mere schoolmaster.

The announcement that William M Wood, head of the woolen trust, leader of the manufacturers in the celebrated Lawrence strike last winter, and now under criminal indictment for planting dynamite, the announcement that Mr Wood has decided to vote for Taft may have the effect of making votes for various other candidates in Lawrence and vicinity.

Mr. Bryan has not lost his gift for epigrammatic statement. "If republicans tell you," he said in his Pittsburg speech yesterday, "there is danger of a panic, tell them neither Roosevelt nor Taft believe such a thing. If they did, they would not have split the republican party. They would have made some personal sacrifice, got together and thus saved the country from a disastrous panic."

Socialists in Lake county are not

Democratic Judicial Nominees.

The Herald has had several requests from readers to publish the names of the Democratic nominees for judicial offices upon the State, District and County tickets and they are given in the table below. While the following candidates were nominated by regular Democratic primaries or conventions, their names will appear upon the Non-partisan Judicial ticket, alongside the tickets carrying the nominees for National, State and County offices. For the information of voters the names of the Democratic Judicial nominees will be published from week to week in The Herald until the November election:

very strong but there are some voters who believe that at Fairport and Willoughby they will be able to put Mr Taft in fourth place. Of course Wilson and Roosevelt will poll a big vote but among the scattering votes, both Debs, the socialist, and Chapin, the prohibition candidate, are expected to get as many, if not more, votes than Taft.

The success of the Democratic ticket on November 5 is dependent wholly upon the activities of you loyal working Democrats. Do you know that Lake county is already conceded to Woodrow Wilson and Wm. Gordon by the republican leaders? The only hope left to republicans is that a part of the county ticket may be saved from the wreck. Now if you are a democrat and wish a real victory make it a clean sweep.

Isn't it just about time the Twentieth district were choosing a member of congress whose position is known, whose views are clearly defined, who thinks for himself, who neither seeks nor receives orders, who has studied public questions for himself and who is able to formulate and defend his own opinions? The Democrats make the appeal for their candidate, Wm. Gordon, not on the ground that he will follow somebody, not on the ground that he will stand somewhere when told to do so, not on the ground that he is a good fellow or that he is anything whatever except a student of political and economic matters and therefore capable of independent judgment and free to act in the light thereof.

The Judicial ticket is a separate ballot this year and should not be overlooked. While no campaign has been made for the candidates on the Judicial ticket, the Herald cannot refrain from a casual mention of the candidates for Probate Judge in Lake county. Judge C. H. Nye is a candidate for re-election to a fourth term, and Martin A. Tuttle one of our best attorneys is his competitor. The Herald believes that in this race for this office that Mr. Nye should be retired and the office turned over to a new man, especially so when the candidate is in every way as well qualified for the office. The Herald has no criticism of Judge Nye as a gentleman, nor as an official, but the fact that he has already held this office for three terms is greatly to his disadvantage and we believe that there is a large number of voters, irrespective of party, who hold to a similar opinion and will register their will by a substantial majority against a fourth term of office in any county office.

The Bull Moose voters should keep a watchful eye upon that county ticket, for the Taft republican club has been trying to put every candidate on record for Taft. If the Bull Moose voters do not guard their defense closely they will be in the same position the democrats were a few years ago when they endorsed and nominated C. H. Nye for probate judge. Mr. Nye was very thankful at the time the democrats endorsed his candidacy and supplied the convention delegates with cigars and taffy, but a few weeks later the republican club began to bear down upon him, and Judge Nye had to fly the democratic coop and the next we heard of him in the campaign he was on the stump in Lake county, whoop-laa-ing for Taft and Prosperity, and denouncing democrats as about the worst fellows ever. The Herald has never forgotten nor forgiven Judge Nye for his ingratitude at that time, and if the Bull Moose wish to take advantage of our political experience they are welcome to it without any charge.

FOR COMMON PLEAS JUDGE

Mayor A. J. Trunkey, of Geneva

This paper takes pleasure in introducing to the voters of Lake County A. J. Trunkey of Geneva, Ohio, who has practiced law since 1878 in Lake and Ashtabula counties, who is now making a great run on the non-partisan judicial ticket for Judge. This paper through its agents have made many inquiries about Trunkey from Ashtabula County, and we fail to find a single person, but what speaks in the highest praise of him, and especially say, that if there is one honest lawyer A. J. Trunkey is one, and is not afraid to do just as he promises. In Geneva, his home town, every man, woman and child, say he is the only Mayor that Geneva ever had, and is not afraid to make every one obey the laws, and from the time he went into office, they have had a clean town and all classes respect him, for his just treatment of every one who he has to deal with in his official duties, and we are willing to say if elected as judge will perform his duties without fear or favor of any ring, or political faction, but all will be served alike, and will have no political debts to pay. The ticket that his name will be on is non-partisan Judicial, and will not appear on any of the regular tickets.

MENTOR

Much of this past week has been rainy, dark and gloomy, the leaves are fast falling from the trees! On Saturday the sun came out and both that day and Sunday were indeed glorious. We have heard many people express the wish that it might keep right on being pleasant and nice like this, until another spring.

Miss Lillian Sears, first assistant in the High School of Elyria, and for several years principal of the school here, was in our village over Sunday as the guest of Mrs. Agnes Higgins. Miss Sears is one of the natural teachers who loves her work, and is consequently very successful in it. She has been over most all of Europe during the summer vacation conducting touring parties through all the southern countries of the continent, and next June expects to sail from Montreal with her fifth touring party.

The Miscellany Club is to meet with Mrs. T. O Hart on Wednesday of this week, when each member is expected to cast a vote for her favorite presidential candidate.

Miss Luelle Kerr still continues to gain, both in strength and flesh. Her friends are very confident that she will entirely recover from the distressing combination of maladies that has bound her for five years or more. Her cheerfulness has been wonderful through it all.

Miss Ellen Corning, accompanied by her niece Mrs Jennie Bostwich, took supper at the hospitable residence of Mr Frank Murray on Friday evening. Mrs. Perkins and her niece Miss Sarah Armstrong acting as hostesses.

Dr M S Clark and Mrs Clark are visiting friends in Youngstown for a few days at present.

The village schools were closed on Friday on account of the county Institute and several of our teachers attended the Teachers Convention held in the Hippodrome building in Cleveland on Friday and Saturday, and returned feeling themselves well paid for the effort of going up there, and being on the necessary expense.

Mr John Wilson a man who had worked for Mr Warren Dickey for a great while, being despondent, committed suicide Wednesday evening at the Dickey home at the Center.

Miss Anna Entsminger was married to Mr Charles Reynolds of Painesville on Monday evening, the ceremony being performed by Rev Schaffner and there being present about sixty invited guests. The usual "chivaree" was indulged in by a number of the young men, afterwards.

Mr and Mrs S A Baker took Sunday dinner with Mr and Mrs George Haywood at their pleasant home at Red Bird Beach.

Mrs Cordelia Radcliffe and her sister, Mrs Grier, spent a part of last week in Conneaut, as guests of Mrs. R E Upson, a former resident of Mentor.

Mr Louis Clark attended the National Convention of Disciples which was held in Louisville, Ky. last week, said convention being in nature of Missionary, and by request told at Sunday evening service here, a few of the leading thoughts advanced there.

Mr and Mrs Will Hodge of Indianapolis, Ind., have been recent visitors of their mother, Mrs. Laura Hodge, for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry King and daughter, Eleanor, were guests at a six o'clock dinner at Echo Hill Farm on Saturday evening, with Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Frost.

The welcome news has come to friends here, that Hugh McCrea, one of our Mentor boys, is just about to enter the Leland Stanford University in California, where he will take a course of study.

Word has also come of our Miss Alice Woodford, who has entered Y. W. C. A. work in the state of Washington, thinking to take a vacation from her school duties for a while.

Mr. and Mrs. John Cadle and small son, of Syracuse, N. Y. have arrived at "Lacwond" and are hereafter to be at home there, and Mentor residents.

Mr Joseph Trabert who is now employed in Cleveland, was at home over Sunday.

Mr. Clifford Freeman was in one of the city hospitals for some days with what the doctors pronounced a mild case of dipthoria; his wife and three small sons having come down to Mentor the week previous and so escaped all contagion, most fortunately. Mr Freeman has now recovered, and his family will rejoin him, sometime this week.

Mrs Sam Curtiss and Mrs George Rlisb have both been on the sick list this past week, but both are very much better today.

Mr James R Garfield was at his home "Holly Croft" over Sunday, in order to catch a much needed rest before entering these last days of strenuous campaign work.

The speeding through our village has begun again, and continues all through the week without the least abatement. A gentleman from Illinois stood by our side and watched the great touring cars go rushing through our street, paying no attention whatever to vehicles or children, and after a few moments said, "If they should drive like that in our county, somebody 'ad get shot!"

Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Cadle have moved into their new house in West Mentor, have just ordered a telephone put in, and are proceeding to get settled as fast as possible.

Mrs. John Tylar and her sister, Mrs. Belden, of Mayvill, N. Y., who is here on a visit, spent a short time in Painesville last week, with their niece, Mrs. E. O. Barber, and her family.

The Willoughby Chamber of Commerce are expected to spend Wednesday afternoon in our village, when they will visit the "Knitting Mills" the Library building and other places of interest, and be served by the ladies of the Mentor Aid Society with supper in the church dining room. Some fifty or sixty gentlemen are expected to come over on this tour of inspection, and get acquainted.

Judge Webber of Elyria is to give his most interesting lecture in the auditorium of the Methodist church on Wednesday evening, on "The Little Great and The Great Little," to which everybody is invited, as he comes under the auspices of "The Good Citizenship Committee."

The ladies of the Disciple church conducted a Food Sale in the Radcliffe Block on Saturday, which proved a great success, for they cleared some fifteen dollars.

The meeting of the township Sunday school teachers and officers was held in the M E church at two o'clock Sunday afternoon, and was very helpful and interesting indeed. Rev Corman of Painesville, the pastor of the Baptist church there, delivered a helpful address on "Teacher Training." Mrs Gilbert of the Painesville High School spoke on the "Adult Men's Bible Class (if we are not mistaken) and other addresses were given by Miss Landphair and several others. ### SYNOPSIS

Harding Kent calls on Louise Farrish to propose marriage and finds the house in great excitement over the attempted suicide of her sister Katharine. Kent starts an investigation and finds that Hugh Crandall, suitor for Katharine, who had been forbidden the house by General Farrish, had talked with Katharine over the telephone just before she shot herself. A torn piece of yellow paper is found, at sight of which General Farrish is stricken with paralysis. Kent discovers that Crandall has left town hurriedly. Andrew Elser, an aged banker, commits suicide about the same time as Katharine attempted her life. A yellow envelope is found in Elser's room. Post Office Inspector Davis, Kent's friend, takes up the case. Kent is convinced that Crandall is at the bottom of the mystery. Katharine's strange outcry puzzles the detectives. Kent and Davis search Crandall's room and find an address, Lock Box 17, Ardway, N. J. Kent goes to Ardway to investigate and becomes suspicious of a "Henry Cook." A woman commits suicide at the Ardway Hotel. A yellow letter also figures in this case. Kent calls Louise on the long distance telephone and finds that she had just been called by Crandall from the same booth. "Cook" disappears. The Ardway postmaster is missing. Inspector Davis arrives at Ardway and takes up the investigation. He discovers that the dead woman is Sarah Sacket of Bridgeport. Louise telephones Kent imploring him to stop the investigation.

CHAPTER IX.

A New Mystery.

I was up with the dawn the next morning and downstairs to find a train schedule. The only thought in my mind was that I must go to Louise at once. I could not understand her sudden amazing change of front. Why, after pleading with me to solve the mystery, should she all at once be so insistent that I should immediately stop all inquiry? I had lain awake the whole night, pondering the situation and seeking a solution. What reason could she have? Who could have influenced her to such action?

The first train, I found, left two minutes before six. I ordered breakfast, though in no mood for eating, and went to Davis' room. I felt that I needed his advice. I found him awake, smoking a cigarette in bed. Briefly I related to him the amazing telephone conversation I had had with Louise the night before.

"What possible reason could have influenced her to make such a strange request?" I concluded.

"A woman doesn't have to have a reason," he answered flippantly, it seemed to me.

"You don't understand!" I cried. "Louise is not the ordinary flighty girl. She has the finest, best balanced mind of any woman I ever knew. She never acts on impulse."

"Kent," he replied, "when you have been married as long as I have, when you know women as well as I do, you will realize the folly of trying to find reasons for the things women do. Their minds are not governed by reason, but by impulse. Every sane woman knew that the hobble skirt was an absurdity, yet when Fashion decided in favor of the hobble skirt it was worn. I doubt very much if Miss Farrish herself could tell you why she asked you to discontinue your investigation. Probably she acted on impulse. By this time she undoubtedly is just as eager as she ever was for you to go on."

"What would you advise?"

"I'd go on," said Davis laconically, as he lighted another cigarette.

For a moment I was almost shaken in my determination to do nothing until I had seen Louise. It seemed as if Davis might be right. Perhaps she had acted only on impulse. Perhaps her love for me had made her feel that the investigation might lead me into danger. But I reconsidered. She had given me her love and trust and confidence. She surely was entitled to full confidence from me. I could not honorably continue the investigation without first seeing her.

"I am going to town on the first train," I said decisively. "I shall do nothing until I have seen her."

"And I shall go on with the investigation," said Davis with that exasperating smile of his.

Impatiently I turned and left him. I choked down a cup of coffee and hurried to the station. The journey seemed miles and miles long, though the train made few stops. As soon as the ferry landed me in New York I sprang into a taxi and ordered the driver to take me at once to the Farrish house. Not until we had turned into their street did I realize that it was still too early for me to try to see Louise, even on such an urgent mission as mine. A few doors away from the house I stopped the chauffeur and bade him drive up the avenue to the entrance of Central park.

I dismissed him there and strolled aimlessly into the park. I would wait until ten o'clock before I tried to see Louise. Still pondering the situation I strolled along one of the park walks and flung myself on a bench by the little lake where the swan boats are. There was no one about at that early hour and I was glad of it. I wanted to be alone and think.

How long I sat there I do not know. I was so deep in thought that there was neither sight in my eyes nor hearing in my ears. Yet the eyes will not be denied their rights. A feeling came over me that some part of my brain was trying to tell me something. It came more and more forcefully. My eyes were seeing something which they were trying to compel me to notice.

What was it?

I pulled myself together with a start and looked about me.

With an exclamation of horror I sprang from the bench and gazed into the lake just in front of me. Floating on the surface, not fifty feet from where I had been sitting, was the body of a woman.

"Other suicides, other suicides"—Davis' remark of two days before kept jigging through my brain. Other suicides! Katherine, Elser, the woman at Ardway—his prophecy had been right—and was this another in the terrible chain?

I ran like a madman toward the park entrance, where I remembered I had passed a policeman. It was with relief that I found him still there.

"There's a woman—drowned—in the lake!" I gasped, pointing over my shoulder.

He ran back to the lake with me and together we waded out in the shallow water where the body lay. In my horror at the unexpected sight I had not stopped to note her appearance, nor could I have told whether she was young or old, dark or fair.

I looked at her now with more than interest—with a feeling of sorrow, of understanding. The deed of Katharine Farrish had brought me to a closer sympathy with unfortunate persons influenced to seek death. As I saw that this poor girl was young and fair I sadly wondered what tragedy had driven her to drowning.

Never shall I forget the impression the picture of this suicide made on me! She lay on her back, with long blonde tresses of well kept hair floating out on either side of her shapely head. Her eyes were closed, but her shapely brows and long dark lashes made her face comely even in death. Her clothing, I observed, was well made, and though wet and soiled as it was by the water it still gave the impression of neatness.

We grasped the body gently by the arms and drew it in to the bank, where we lifted it to the park bench on which I had been sitting.

"I wonder if there is anything about her to identify her by," said the policeman, and together we looked.

Apparently there was nothing. There were no rings on her hands, though the fingers were those of a woman of refinement. The officer turned back the collar of her coat, but the name of the maker had been cut away.

"She didn't want nobody to know who she was, I guess," he said after a hasty examination. "They generally try to hide their names."

"Yes, I suppose they do," I said apathetically.

"I've got to go over to the arsenal and report this and send for the wagon. Will you wait till I come back? I won't be long."

"I'll wait," I said.

He disappeared up the path, and I was left alone with the body. As I sat there, meditating on the mystery that had caused so many other tragedies, I became conscious of the fact that one of this girl's hands was closed as if, even in death, she was striving to conceal something.

Stooping over, I gently pressed back the stiffening fingers.

An exclamation of horror came to my lips as I saw what had been concealed there.

It was a little scrap of yellow paper.

I could hardly believe my eyes. It must be that this poor girl here was another of the victims in the baffling chain of crime I was seeking to unravel. I held the water-soaked fragment up to the light, but there was nothing on it—not a word. Yet there was no mistaking the color and texture of the paper. It was undoubtedly the same that Louise and I had found in Katharine's room after she had tried to kill herself. It was the same that the police had discovered in Andrew Elser's room. There was no question in my mind but that it was the same that the woman in Ardway had torn up before she had shot herself in the little hotel. But what was the tie between them? What could be the mysterious import of this yellow letter that drove its recipients to death?

Here was one fragment. Perhaps I could find other scraps, perhaps the whole letter. I ran down to the bank of the lake and began a systematic search of the water along shore. Foot by foot I studied it carefully. For ten minutes I searched unavailingly and then I caught a glimpse of something yellow half hidden by an overhanging tree. Carefully I parted the branches. Sure enough, submerged in six inches of water, were more of the yellow scraps. I waded in and, scooping them up carefully in my hands, laid them on the grass to dry, for they were all but falling apart and I hardly dared handle them. Meanwhile I continued my search for other yellow scraps, this time without avail. If she had carried a torn-up letter with her as she sprang to death, the other pieces had floated away.

At last, convinced that there was no possibility of recovering more of them, I gave up my search and returned to where I had spread the recovered scraps on the grass. One by one I studied them. They were evidently a part of a type-written letter, but the ink had run so that it was impossible to read a single word on them. From their shape, too, it appeared that they were not consecutive, so there was little hope of learning anything from them.

Just two of the inky smears seemed to have a possible meaning.

On one of them I was almost positive that I could trace the word "youth." On another scrap was a word that a little stretch of the imagination might decipher as "her."

"Youth" and "her."

They might mean much or nothing. They might have some bearing on the great mystery I was trying to solve. They might have none. Perhaps they were, after all, merely phrases from a letter that had brought disappointment to a loving woman. In all likelihood this suicide had no connection with the others. But why, then, the yellow paper?

So intent was I on my thoughts that I did not observe the return of the policeman until I heard his voice.

"What have you got there?"

There was suspicion in his tone—the natural suspicion of the representative of the law. It was on the tip of my tongue to say, "Another yellow letter."

For once prudence restrained me. I recalled how my too hasty speech at the coroner's inquest had led me into trouble. I could hardly expect a twelve-hundred-dollar policeman to assist in solving the mystery that was still perplexing Davis.

"Just some scraps of paper," I said carelessly. "After you had gone I noticed that she was clutching a bit of paper in one hand. I searched around the lake to see if I could find more. I found these. It is evidently part of a letter, but the ink has run so you can make nothing out of them."

"Let's see them."

I handed him all of them.

"This," I explained, "I found in her hand and the others were over there under those bushes."

One by one the policeman examined them, turning them carefully over and over.

"There's nothing to them," he finally announced. "The wagon will be here in a minute. I don't suppose you'll want to be claiming any credit for finding the body?"

I had feared that he would insist on my accompanying him to testify to its finding. It was quite a relief to hear him take this view of it.

"Of course not," I answered hastily.

"Then," said he with utmost candor, "you might as well beat it. It don't do a cop no good to have other people finding things on his post. If you ain't here when the wagon comes there ain't nobody to say it wasn't me that found the body. I want to thank you, though, for coming and telling me about it. There's a lot of fools would have gone and telephoned the arsenal and then I'd been on the carpet for not covering my post properly."

I was glad indeed of the opportunity to get away. It was nearing ten o'clock. My trousers and shoes were in such condition that I wanted to get to my apartments for a change before seeing Louise. I hastened to the park entrance and hailed a taxi. By the time I left my rooms and reached the Farrish home it was a little after ten.

As my taxi turned into the street I saw another one stop before the Farrish door. At first I thought it might be the doctor or one of the family, but as the front door closed behind the tall figure of a man who had been admitted to the house I realized that the it was some one I had seen before. There was something reminiscent in the broad shoulders, in the walk. It was some one I knew, or ought to have recognized, yet who it was or where I had seen him I could not at the moment recall.

I was not three minutes behind him in reaching the door. Though the other visitor had been admitted at once, there was no immediate response to my ring. I waited a while and rang again. It seemed minutes before any one answered, then one of the maids opened the door a trifle and peered out.

"Mr. Kent to see Miss Louise," I said.

To my great amazement she did not open the door to me, but still holding it just barely enough to enable her to talk to me, said: "I'm sorry, but I have orders to admit no one to the house."

"Of course, I understand that you have your orders, but please tell Miss Louise that Mr. Kent is here."

"I'll tell her, if you wish," she said doubtfully, carefully closing the door before she went on the mission.

The shutting of the door in my face gave me an odd sense of desolation. It seemed as if I were being shut out of the life of the woman I loved. Yet on second thought I smiled at my perturbation. The maid was only carrying out a necessary order. As soon as Louise knew I was there she would come running to the door herself. In a minute she would be folded in my arms and all misunderstanding would be cleared away. Undoubtedly she would have a good explanation for her telephone message of the night before. I told myself that it was only lack of sleep and the incident in the park that had upset my nerves. My misgivings were utterly foolish.

At length the door opened slowly. I had expected to see Louise herself behind it, but it was the same maid. This time she held the door hardly as wide as before.

"I'm sorry, sir," she said, "but Miss Louise says she can not see you now."

"What?" I gasped.

She repeated her message while I stood there dazed. "There must be some mistake. Louise must have misunderstood the name.

"Did you tell her it was Mr. Kent?"

"Yes, sir. I told her."

"What did she say?"

"She said she could not see you or any one else now."

Ever See a Stout Postman?

In London, for Instance, Carriers Walk Over Sixteen Miles Carrying Forty Pounds.

Has it ever struck you why a stout postman is such a rarity? The question is worth attention.

A postman who in a busy London residential district walks from fourteen to sixteen miles a day, starts out in the morning with mails weighing something like eighty pounds. As his letters and packages are distributed, the weight of his bag, of course, grows less, so that the average weight he carries during his trip is forty pounds. A pint of water weighs a pound. A 10-quart pail weighs about twenty pounds, and the average weight the postman carries is equal to two of these. If you want to know why postmen are thin, try a 16-mile walk with a 10-quart pail of water in each hand.

The driver of a brewery wagon, on the other hand, is usually fat. The reason is that he sits on the seat of his dray most of the day, and often consumes large quantities of liquid. Policemen, too, often grow fat through standing about on their beats.—Answers, London.

There are over thirty periodicals devoted to ghosts, visions and the supernatural generally.

LOTION EASILY MADE

CLEANSING CREAM SUITABLE FOR THE TOILET TABLE.

In Many Ways Better Than Can Be Purchased, Because Desired Quantity May Always Be Prepared as Desired.

Do you like to mix your own lotions and experiment with the attractive looking formulas for creams which you so often see printed? It is a very delightful occupation and when the lotion comes out beautifully blended and with the delicate fragrance of a high-priced article; when the cream is white and smooth and dainty, one feels well repaid for one's time and effort.

There is another side to this story, however, because sometimes the lotion comes out all curdled looking and queer and the cream disintegrates and will not blend, no matter what you do. Then you register a vow that you will never, never again attempt to prepare your own cosmetics, but will spend your dollars for the prepared articles gratefully.

One great difficulty with many of the published formulas is that they are too complicated for any one but a chemist to prepare and another is because the directions are seldom clear. It is not wise to use much guess-work when mixing creams and if the formula leaves you in doubt, lay it aside for a simpler one, or take it to your druggist and ask his advice about how to put the ingredients together.

I have had frequent requests for the following formulas and I am sure you will experience no difficulty in preparing them even though you are the veriest amateur, provided you follow the directions carefully.

For a cleansing cream, heat two ounces of oil of sweet almonds and melt in it a lump of white wax as large as a walnut; when these two ingredients are well blended add a rounding tablespoon of white vaseline and a few drops of oil of rose geranium and beat the mixture while it is cooling till it is light and creamy.

A good nourishing cream contains one-half ounce each spermaceti and white wax melted in a double boiler or dish set in a pan of boiling water; add one ounce cocoa butter, one ounce imported lanolin and three ounces sweet almond oil. When melted and thoroughly blended remove from the fire, add two ounces rose water and one dram tincture of benzoin and beat steadily till cold.

An excellent lotion for the hands (the formula for which was sent me by one of my readers) is prepared from two ounces of glycerin, one ounce each tincture of benzoin, bay rum and alcohol, one-half ounce rosewater and five cents worth of quince seeds. Scald the quince seeds with about one quart of boiling water, cover the dish tightly and let steam. Do not remove the cover for twelve hours, then strain through a thin cloth and add the other ingredients. This is especially good to prevent the hands from chapping.

A simple lotion which is said to possess bleaching and refining properties is made from a half ounce of glycerin mixed with a half pint of orange flower water and a level tablespoonful of powdered borax dissolved in the mixture. Another lotion which is often recommended requires one ounce oil of sweet almonds, one ounce glycerin, two ounces strained lemon juice and ten drops of carbolic acid. A few drops of rose may be added for perfume if desired and the special benefit of the lotion is to cure the chapped and roughened condition of the hands caused from the cold weather.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES.

California. Exercise will do more to harden your muscles and increase your appetite and digestive powers than anything else I can suggest. Go out every day and dig in that lovely garden and thank your lucky stars that you have the garden to enjoy. The pleasure of active work will do more to clear away the cobwebs from your sky than any other thing you can undertake and an hour a day out in the sunshine and fresh air and among the growing things will work marvels in your health and also your looks.

New Reader. You will never succeed in restoring your hair to its natural thickness and beauty by the methods you are following. Quite the contrary effect will result, as they are altogether too strenuous. The hair and scalp are never benefited by harsh treatment any more than the face would be. You can do more harm by such treatment than you can undo in years. Gentle brushing is advisable, but it should never be carried even near the point of irritating the scalp.

Nettie D. If you will keep a bowl of corn meal, moistened with vinegar, on the shelf near the kitchen sink and rub this mixture well over the hands immediately after taking them out of soapy water, it will counteract the harmful effect of the soap and will also remove ordinary stains. Rinse the hands in clear water and just before they are perfectly dried rub a soothing lotion well into the skin. If you will do this regularly you can keep your hands in very good condition.

Care of Velvet.

How often have you deplored the dusty, dingy appearance of a black velvet hat or gown which all the brushing and care you knew how to expend failed to change? Here is the secret and you should clip it out and keep it where you will find it when needed.

Brush the gown or hat either with a special brush which comes for velvet or with a piece of velvet; then take a piece of chamois, not a new one, and after wringing out of cool or tepid water very dry, wipe the velvet carefully with this. The effect is surprising, as it restores the velvet to its pristine freshness with every trace of dust and soil removed.

Social Forms and Entertainments

From a Perplexed Girl.

Your columns have been so helpful to others I would like to have your advice. I have been going with a boy for about two or three months and like him very much, and he has told other people he liked me better than any girl he ever knew. When at a "leap year" dance how many dances should I give him? Do you think it considered unladylike to wear small pearl earrings or would they make me look coarse? What should a girl say when asked to have a dance? Is it really wrong to let a boy kiss you if he is in earnest?—Perplexed B.

I hope from henceforth these columns will prove helpful to you and that you will come just as often as questions bother you. It depends upon how many dances there are. I should think you could give him every other one. Girls are wearing earrings now, and if small I see no harm, for the ears are not pierced these days and it is only a harmless passing fad to wear them. I think it is really wrong to let a boy kiss you and perhaps you will think I am very prim to say so. If the boy really thinks a lot of you, you can explain in a satisfactory manner why you'd rather not permit familiarity and he will appreciate and understand your situation and like you all the better.

A Short Contest.

Please give me some little game to while away a few moments before refreshments are served after a card party.—Madame Grundy.

After a card party, while the hostess was busy putting the finishing touches to her refreshments, the guests had this interesting pastime. Printed on little paper bags were the following questions:

1. Bag—A city.
2. Bag—A trifle.
3. Bag—A musical wind instrument.
4. Bag—Luggage.
5. Bag—A kind of cloth.
6. Bag—Caught in a sack.
7. Bag—A fish.
8. Bag—Stretching or pouching.
9. Bag—A game.
10. Bag—Where packages, etc., are kept when traveling.

Answers.

1, Bagdad; 2, Bagatelle; 3, Bagpipe; 4, Baggage; 5, Bagging; 6, Bagged; 7, Bagre; 8, Bagging; 9, Bagatelle; 10, Baggage car.

To the one answering the most the hostess presented a dainty silk bag, and then she filled the little bags on which the contest was written with home-made candy.

Progressive Candy Jack Straws.

I wish to entertain twelve little boys and girls at an afternoon party. Will you suggest a novel scheme with which to begin the party?—Puzzled Mother.

Provide a quarter of a pound of twisted candy sticks known as "opera" sticks in most candy shops. They come in all colors and there must be a different color for each table, four at a table. A pair of candy tongs must be in readiness for each player and a box for containing the candy "straws." The game is to see how many sticks may be withdrawn from the pile without breaking or throwing the pile into confusion. Progressions are made and the score kept. Children enjoy this entertainment and eating the sticks is permissible after the game is over and the scores settled.

Entertainment for Bride-Elect.

I am to entertain a bride-elect and am puzzled as to what to do in the way of entertainment. What can you suggest?—A. L. T.

I wonder if you have had either a magazine, book or a "den" shower? At the first the guests decide beforehand what subscriptions to magazines to give, each one contributing 50 cents. This assures pleasure for the whole year. The book idea is carried out in the same way.

For the "den" there are so many attractive things to get. A suggestion is for five or six to club together and give all the pieces for desk set, all to match. Those of leather are especially attractive. Copper or dull brass are also much liked. Then there would be candlesticks, waste paper basket, etc.

A "Western Girl's" Answers.

You are rather stout for your height, but no doubt will grow much more slender as you grow older, so take all the exercise you can every day, especially walking. Never lead a man on; it is the most unkind thing when you just intend to turn him down. I think it is decidedly wrong to allow boys to kiss you. Perhaps your letters went astray and the boy may not have received the last one; there will be no harm in writing to find out.

MADAME MERRI.

New Sleeves for Sweaters.

My two boys wear woolen sweaters in the winter. I have found that the sleeves wear out very quickly, leaving the rest of the sweater perfectly good.

Last winter I got knee length woolen leggings at 25 cents a pair, both in white and red, which matched the sweaters in color and weave. I cut off the shaped foot part, hemmed the lower edges by hand with loose stitch to allow for stretching. I cut the worn sleeves out of the sweater, fastened the new ones in, and they looked as well as the original.—Harper's Bazar.

WOMEN SHOULD BE PROTECTED

Against So Many Surgical Operations. How Mrs. Bethune and Mrs. Moore Escaped.

Sikeston, Mo.—"For seven years I suffered everything. I was in bed for four or five days at a time every month, and so weak I could hardly walk. I cramped and had backache and headache, and was so nervous and weak that I dreaded to see anyone or have any one move in the room. The doctors gave me medicine to ease me at those times, and said that I ought to have an operation. I would not listen to that, and when a friend of my husband told him about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and what it had done for his wife, I was willing to take it. Now I look the picture of health and feel like it, too. I can do my own housework, hoe my garden, and milk a cow. I can entertain company and enjoy them. I can visit when I choose, and walk as far as any ordinary woman, any day in the month. I wish I could talk to every suffering woman and girl."—Mrs. DEMA BETHUNE, Sikeston, Mo.

Murrayville, Ill.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a very bad case of female trouble and it made me a well woman. My health was all broken down, the doctors said I must have an operation, and I was ready to go to the hospital, but dreaded it so that I began taking your Compound. I got along so well that I gave up the doctors and was saved from the operation."—Mrs. CHARLES MOORE, R. R. No. 3, Murrayville, Ill.

BERGER IS FIND OF SEASON

Diminutive Chicagoan Plowed or Wriggled Himself Through 'Varsity Line in First Game.

One of the greatest finds of the season at the University of Wisconsin has been Louis Berger. In the first practice game he plowed or wriggled his way through the 'varsity line at will.

The diminutive Chicagoan, who is an exact counterpart of Otto Stangel, furnished the big attraction for the rooters who gathered at Camp Randall to watch the practice. Time after time he shot through holes in the varsity line for big gains, his most spectacular performance being a 22 yard gain through right tackle with half of the team trying to stop him. A [illegible] he again wormed his way through the forward wall for nine yards carrying the ball within striking distance of the goal. It was then, however, that the men who were selected to positions on the first eleven braced and hurled back three assaults sent at them by the scrub backfield, Woods being finally nailed in his tracks as he tried left tackle for the two yards necessary for a score.

Louis Berger.

Leading Pitchers.

Jimmy Dowd of the Utica team is the leading twirler of the New York State league for the season, having won 20 games and lost but five. Nagle of Elmira is also well up, having won 12 and lost two. Pappalau of Troy returned a winner 20 times, but dropped ten games. Friel, whom Scranton turned over to Albany for a pitcher, has 20 victories to his credit and only six losses. Decanniere and Walker of the Barons joined the team late in the race, and each won six games with but one loss each. Buck of Utica won 21 and lost 14. Malloy of Utica comes next with 15 victories and 11 reverses.

Finland Has Some Shot Putter.

The great Finn shot putter, Nicklander, Ralph Rose describes as the best built man in the world and a comer with the weights. The Finn stands 6 feet 4 inches, 48 chest and very little stomach, his waist measurement being 36. Nicklander gave both Rose and McDonald, the American competitors in the Olympic games at Stockholm, the fight of their lives in the two-handed shot-put, and it was only by inches that McDonald took second place from the Finn.

Treat for the Spectators.

[illegible] Brooklyn National league club's new grandstand is equipped with a telephone acoustic apparatus, whereby spectators are kept informed of the names of the batters, number of strikes and balls and changes in positions of the players on the teams.

Houston Is Defeated.

Houston, the winners of the Texas league pennant, played a post-season series with Beaumont, the tail-enders, and Beaumont won.

CUBS MAKE RACE EXCITING

Chicago Team Prevented Giants From Making Farce Out of National League Contest.

Close of the National league season caused little excitement. Had it not been for the Chicago Cubs the struggle would have been the worst the organization has had in many seasons. The New York Giants, winners of the flag, set out to make a farce out of it and would have done so had not the Cubs stopped them for a while and prevented them from cinching the pennant until September. For a time it appeared as if Chicago would overtake the Gothamites, but the latter, driven desperately by their manager, John McGraw, held their ground and eventually won with ease.

From the opening of the season until close to June 1 the race promised to be exciting. Hank O'Day stood out like a great manager during that time, as the Cincinnati Reds were on top. But the ex-umpire's greatness soon faded when the Reds slowly dropped back to the second division. Johnny Kling also had the Bostons near the top at the start, but the first division teams became too strong and Boston fell back to its customary position—last.

The Pittsburg Pirates were powerful until July 1, when they fell into a losing rut and slid back to make way for the Cubs. It was then that the latter began their struggle to shove the Giants out of first place. The National league race became interesting and for days the baseball world was talking of the wonderful spurt of Manager Chance's men. It continued until September 1, when the strain proved too great for the Cubs and they lost their grip, dropping back to third place, finishing there for the first time since 1905, when the finish was the same as this [illegible] McGraw has won and he is tied with Frank Chance of the Cubs.

There were few changes in the line-ups this season. Boston and Brooklyn are the only clubs which rearranged their batting order frequently, hoping to add strength. Johnny Kling did all in his power to bring Boston up higher in the race, but the material he possessed was unable to respond. He has had enough of the managing end, according to reports, and will retire from the game. O'Day did considerably better than was expected, but he was able to accomplish this owing to the good ball players on his roster.

Notes of Sportdom

They say Terre Haute wants Mordecai Brown as a manager.

Isn't it a relief to get to read a little football dope after being surfeited with baseball?

It is to be presumed that you have a perfectly good line on all the big football teams now.

It is said that more than half the clubs in the International league will have new managers.

Any writer who imagines his words influence the belief of the average fan has plenty of time to think again.

Baseball players have formed a fraternity. One of the highest rites of the order is the thirty-third degree of umpire baiting.

The squad of candidates for the Michigan football team is said to be small, as compared to the other big schools this year.

TACKLES MUST BEAR BRUNT

Survey of Football Rules Leads to Belief Game Will Be Close Cousin to That of 1909.

Walter Camp's latest variety of football rules has been accused of being everything from a return to the old eat 'em alive mass play rules to being a slight modification, which will have little effect on the style of play. Actually, a survey of the new football laws leads to the belief that the game that will develop under them will be a close cousin to that played in 1909, an invitation to the tackles to stand up and be killed. Last year's rules favored the defense to such an extent that scoring was almost impossible and fluky in the extreme. It appears that in their effort to strengthen the offense, the rulemakers have gone to the other boundary and that scoring this year is likely to be enormous.

The mass play died when pulling and pushing a man through the line was abolished. But the tackle now will have to stand the shock of his opponent forward, and then of a heavy man bent on making two or three yards. He will not, in all probability, get much help from the secondary defense. To weaken the defensive back line unduly will be simply an invitation to the offense to work the now unrestricted forward pass to its heart's content.

Walter Camp.

The situation will be much the same as Yost faced when Notre Dame beat Michigan [illegible] year, he compelled Pennsylvania to meet. The threat of the forward pass was always there, but the play itself was no great factor in the scoring. Instead, the first defense was simply battered down by "straight football," while the backs waited helplessly for the forward pass that didn't come.

Bat Made of Concrete.

Some genius is trying to put a concrete bat on the market. He claims that it is no heavier than a hardwood bat, and drives the ball much farther. According to the laws of the game, the bat must be made of wood, so that the statutes would have to be altered before the stone stick could be utilized. The game, right now, doesn't need a bat that will drive the ball any farther, but more batsmen who can drive the ball with the bats in current use. If they ever get bats that will hit 'em farther, the games at Boston, Chicago and New York National League parks will be nothing but parades of home runs.

Burkett Still Can Hit.

Jesse Burkett, who is managing the Worcester team of the New England league, can still show many of the colt players how to perform in the national pastime. He has a batting average of .399 for 16 games and has fielded 1.000, accepting 17 chances without an error. Burkett, a score of years ago, was one of the leading batsmen of the country. In 1893 he hit .372, and in the succeeding 11 seasons he continued to hit .300. In three of these years he registered over .400.

Two Champions to Quit.

The retirement from track athletics of two well-known champions is announced. They are Simon P. Gillis, who won many titles for the New York Athletic club, and Roy Dorland, the 300-yard champion of America. Both will engage in business in foreign countries, Gillis in Spain and Dorland in Brazil.

The Passing of a Ballplayer.

Of the warriors who battled in the world's series of 1903 between Boston and Pittsburg only three remain in fast company. These are Fred Clarke, Hans Wagner and Tommy Leach.

CHECKING EVAPORATION OF MOISTURE IS SECRET OF SUCCESS WITH TREES

In Order to Keep Plant in Good Condition Adequate Supply of Water Is of First Importance—Pruning Depends Upon Soil and Climate.

Why is it that a mere cutting or willow stake should be more successful in the hands of an experienced person than a well rooted tree in the hands of a bungler?

The answer is simply the tree is a vessel full of water and in order to be kept in such a condition it must have an adequate supply of water. When the water goes out faster than it comes in the tree dies.

The gardener grows his plants under glass and starts his cuttings in the same manner to prevent evaporation until such a time as they develop root systems that will provide water for the portion above the ground.

This requires but a comparatively short time and when he transplants he takes off a portion of the vegetable leaves to balance the amount of the root system that is destroyed by re-setting in order that the water losses through the top will not exceed the water supply from below. We may safely say that whenever a tree or plant dies it is the fault of the planter, unless it is practically dead [illegible]

Many times when a tree is half dead and has but scarcely any roots, a judicious pruning and proper packing of the roots around the tree, would save it.

How much to prune plants and trees, will depend upon the locality, soil, climate and other conditions and the intelligence of the planter. In a dry climate where the trees are exposed to hot and drying winds or a hot drying sun, the top of the tree must be thinned out to meet the short supply of moisture or the undue evaporation or if the tree has become partly dried out before planting the wood must be thinned out to meet the short supply of moisture.

Here again the intelligence of the planter is made manifest. The inexperienced planter cuts all the branches back alike, while the experienced planter bears in mind that his purpose is to check evaporation.

He knows that the smaller branches make the heaviest demands and that the more vigorous ones are more sappy. He cuts out the smaller thin branches and leaves the more vigorous ones. He can give the tree a severe pruning without ruining its form.

The roots should be pruned so that they will contain no bruised roots and so that they will correspond with the size of the top.

The top and the roots should be evenly balanced.

Numbers of trees die because they have too many roots, that is, they form a thick mass that prevents the soil from packing around the stronger roots and the tree can not make moisture connections with the soil.

PIG CHUTE IS A GREAT CONVENIENCE

A loading chute is a great convenience, if not a necessity, on every farm where pigs are reared. A hog chute to be tight needs to be just wide enough to allow one big hog to pass through it at a time and not turn around, say, from 20 inches to 24 inches. Use no legs. Make the chute 8 feet long, using good hardwood 2x4's for sides (oak is best), round the bottom corner or heel and taper bottom corner at toe back 18 inches (see diagram), now on the top or flat sides nail floor of inch boards, putting on occasionally a cleat to prevent animals from slipping. Take two pieces of iron 1 1/2 inches x 1/2 inches, sharpen one end and bend over forming hooks 1 1/2 inches long (old wagon tire is good). Bolt these to shaped toe with hooks bent down to hooks on tail of wagon. The sides are best made of elm strips 4 inches or 6 inches wide, the same length as the bottom and three strips to the side evenly spaced. Put the uprights so that they will make the sides 2 1/2 feet high when put together. Fasten with bolts, one bolt to the slat and one to sill. This allows the sides to close down or above at rear of wagon which cannot be done with the still sides of chute with legs, and the chute will be the right height for any wagon. These sides are kept in place by long heavy hooks bolted to bottom slat and fastened to body or sill by staples at close intervals to allow for shutting up space at rear of wagon. Do not put anything across the top as slats are in the way in case you want to make a rush up the chute in case of some emergency.

Cut Valuable Wheat Seed.

Persons passing the Kansas State agricultural experiment station during harvest days were surprised to see a number of students cutting wheat with scythes in the old fashioned way. The plot was two and one-half acres of very valuable seed wheat obtained in Europe and was part of 700 bushels Professor Roberts had selected from the best wheat he could find on the continent.

Agricultural Schools.

Four district agricultural schools supported by the state have been located in Arkansas. Legislature appropriated $200,000 for the equipment of these schools and further amounts will be augmented from the localities where they are established.

Apples in Iowa.

An apple grower at Hamburg, Ia., gives the total sales of fruit from 34 acres at $21,818. Half the trees were set out in 1891 and the remainder in 1895.

A Hog Shortage.

President H. J. Waters of Kansas Agricultural college says that this country has the greatest hog shortage in years and that it will take two years of good corn crops to bring the hog supply back to the normal. Eastern farmers who are turning their attention to pork production will have little cause to regret their action during the coming two or three years. There is money in good hogs.

Angora Goat Farm.

Two Pennsylvania men, who own 7,000 acres on the Blue mountains in Lehigh county, Pennsylvania, will establish a great Angora goat farm. The land, which is too lean for tilling or even grazing cattle, will, it is believed, support goats.

A $6,500 Hog.

Recently the Illinois Poland China boar On the Dot changed hands, or rather half of him did, at the rate of $6,500, the buyer paying $3,250 for a half interest.

The Witchery of Hallowe'en

The moon shone down with a brilliant light
And flooded the town with a sheen of light
All the earth was solemn and still
Not a leaflet quivered on woodland and hill
The fence posts stood all wrapped in white,
A ghastly row they seemed that night
The witching shadows among the trees
Took form and shape and stirred the dead leaves.
One lone owl hooted from a lonely place,
And its cry re-echoed away in space.
The children listened with wide-awake eyes,
At the distant echo of its strange wild cries
The mysterious hour of midnight near,
Strange faces are seen, with eyes so queer,
And stealthy foot-steps come and go,
And chase white forms that seem all aglow,
The goblin sings a weird song
And bangs his harp on the moonbeams long
E'en the old stately elm in the garden gray,
Seems half inclined to stalk away,
Each of its leaves seem longing to fly
And join the shadows hurrying by,
'Tis the witchery of Hallowe'en about
When the ghosts and goblins all are out

The Danger After Grip

lies often in a run-down system. Weakness, nervousness, lack of appetite, energy and ambition, with disordered liver and kidneys often follow an attack of this wretched disease. The greatest need then is Electric Bitters, the glorious tonic, blood purifier and regulator of stomach, liver and kidneys. Thousands have proved that they wonderfully strengthen the nerves, build up the system and restore to health and good spirits after an attack of Grip. If suffering, try them. Only 50 cents. ### Death of W. G. Broughton

William Greenham Broughton, eldest son of Sarah and John Broughton, was born Jan. 10, 1835, in Thompson, Geauga Co., and passed away at his home 8 St. Clair street, this city, Thursday, Oct. 24, at 5 o'clock a. m.

When but a child he with his parents moved to East Painesville and while still a very young man went west. He became a prominent man in railroad circles and held positions of trust, at one time being the general freight agent of the St. Louis Bridge Co. Later he was commercial agent for the New York Central fast lines at Dubuque, Iowa, where he was also a member of the Dubuque Club.

Mr. Broughton was a prominent Mason and Knight Templar.

He believed in helping and living for his fellow-men and his many deeds of kindness were known only to the recipients and himself.

He is remembered as a most devoted husband and brother and was held in the highest esteem by all who knew him. In his passing he leaves a record which will never be forgotten by his relatives, associates and friends.

Rev. E. Lee Howard of the Congregational Church officiated, speaking beautifully of his fine principles which guided his life and the unusual sentiment he expressed for his boyhood home which he has owned and remains unchanged since the death of his parents a number of years ago.

Six nephews carried him to the family resting place at Evergreen cemetery: Earl C. Broughton, Harry B. Young, John G. Eddy, Ralph Hartel, James E. White and Jerome Mugargil.

Mr. Broughton leaves a wife and one son, H. P. Broughton, a grandson, William G. Broughton, of Atlanta, Ga. Three sisters, Mrs. H. H. Young, Mrs. Geo. Eddy and Mrs. Ellen Wilson, and one brother, E. J. Broughton.

Those present from out of town were: Mr. H. P. Broughton and son, Atlanta, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Eddy, Mrs. W. Millot, Mr. John G. Eddy and Harry B. Young, Cleveland; Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Broughton and family of Youngstown, and Mr. A. C. Drysdale of Dubuque, Iowa, an associate of Mr. Broughton for many years who represented the New York Central lines.

PROGRESSIVE DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE FOR STATE SENATOR

☒ W. A. WEYGANDT

Ravenna, Ohio

He is 45 years of age, and has lived in the district 11 years. He believes in the initiative and referendum and if elected will help carry into law these principles and those of the recall as provided for at the Constitutional Amendment election.

He favors laws looking to the industrial, economic and moral benefit of the people.

He favors all legislation that will give direct primaries and elections, and put into the hands of the people the means, properly safeguarded, whereby they can best govern themselves directly.

He favors further perfecting the laws and systems that have resulted in a radical reform and a great saving in conducting state institutions, in equalizing taxation, in regulating public utilities, etc., etc.

Lumbering Lines to Fletcher

For truth and integrity
They'll give you no knock
For straight-forward dealings
You're a chip of the block
You in form may resemble
The splintered north pole
You sure are a magnet
That attracts heart and soul
A good judge of timber
(In hickory or pine
You can straight edge the crooks
And hew to the line
You're not all one sided
On both corners you're there
We know where to find you
You're right on the square
Wood-row is familiar
To you by decent,
And you Wil-son be assisting
Our next president.

Avoid Sedative Cough Medicines.

If you want to contribute directly to the occurrence of capillary bronchitis and pneumonia, use cough medicines that contain codine, morphine, heroin and other sedatives when you have a cough or cold. An expectorant like Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is what is needed. That cleans out the culture beds or breeding places for the germs of pneumonia and other germ diseases. That is why pneumonia never results from a cold when Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is used. It has a world wide reputation for its cures. It contains no morphine or other sedative. For sale by all dealers.

WILSON SWEEPS STATE AND NATION

DEMOCRATS ELECT PROSECUTOR IN LAKE COUNTY

Wilson's Electoral Vote May Reach 400---Roosevelt is Second and Taft Third in the Race

The democrats swept the country in the presidential election Tuesday, Wilson and Marshall being chosen president and vice-president, respectively, by a large majority in the electoral college. Congress passes under democratic control, the House being overwhelmingly democratic, while enough state legislatures have been carried by the democrats, apparently, to overturn the long-time republican supremacy in the Senate. The East went strongly for Wilson, three New England states---Maine, Massachusetts and Connecticut---choosing Wilson electors; and Wilson also carried the South with ease. The strength of Roosevelt was shown chiefly in the West. The indications are that Roosevelt will lead Taft on both the electoral and the popular vote. Democratic governors were elected in Massachusetts, Connecticut, New York, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and many other states.

THE VOTE HERE

LIVELY CONTEST BETWEEN REPUBLICANS AND PROGRESSIVES

Republican Candidates Beg the Bull Moose to Save Them From Defeat in Landslide That Went Against President Taft

Returns from Lake county complete give:

For President
Wilson 1,487
Roosevelt 2,109
Taft 1,155

For Governor
Cox 1,369
Garford 2,103
Brown 1,159

For Congress
Gordon (Dem.) 1,383
Howland (Rep.) 1,453
Willett (Soc.) 291
Woods (Prog.) 1,912

For State Representative
Winans (Rep.) 2,323
Curtis (Soc.) 373
Malin (Dem.) 1,688

For State Senator
Potteng (Dem.) 1,512
Weigandt (Dem.) 1,380
McDonald (Rep.) 1,957
Spicer (Rep.) 1,871
Saylerders (Soc.) 293
Miles (Soc.) 315

The county ticket went Republican, the Democrats electing only the prosecuting attorney. Approximately 85 per cent. of the total vote was cast.

It will be seen from above vote that Mr. Malin ran more than two hundred votes ahead of his ticket, which was a most remarkable showing considering the lively contest that was going on all day between Republicans and Progressives for first place in party vote. This contest overshadowed every other issue and prevented independent voting. At the same time the combined effort of the Republican candidates and their friends was directed in an effort to get the Bull Moose voters to remember their former party associates.

For Congress, Woods carried the county over Gordon by 450 votes. Woods also carried Medina county by 246 majority over Gordon, but Gordon carried Cuyahoga by 7162 votes over Woods and was elected by something over 6000 plurality. Howland was third in the race in all three counties. Gordon beat Howland in Cuyahoga two to one.

LAKE COUNTY

Has One Democratic Official For The First Time In Many Years

The following county officers were elected:

Clerk of Courts
John R. Williams

Sheriff
Ora M. Spink

County Auditor
W. Albert Davis

County Commissioners
J. C. Phillips
O. E. Stevenson
E. H. Williams

County Treasurer
E. M. Orcell

County Recorder
Geo. A. Bates

County Surveyor
H. P. Cumings

Prosecuting Attorney
Harry T. Nolan

Coroner
George F. Barnett

Messrs. Davis, Stevenson, Williams, Bates and Cumings were re-elected to their respective offices. All the others will be new to their official positions.

A Night of Terror

Few nights are more terrible than that of a mother looking on her child choking and gasping for breath during an attack of croup, and nothing in the house to relieve it. Many mothers have passed nights of terror in this situation. A little forethought will enable you to avoid all this. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is a certain cure for croup and has never been known to fail. [illegible] For sale by all dealers.

WOODROW WILSON CARRIES 37 STATES

DEMOCRATS CONTROL HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES BY ONE HUNDRED OR MORE.

REPUBLICANS LOSE SENATE

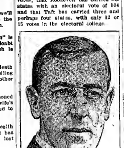
Uncle Joe Cannon and William B. McKinley, Jr., Congressmen From Illinois, Are Defeated by Roosevelt Vote.

New York City.—The latest returns from the election show that Wilson and Marshall have carried at least 37 states with a total of 412 electoral votes; that Roosevelt has carried six states with an electoral vote of 104 and that Taft has carried three and perhaps four states, with only 12 or 15 votes in the electoral college.



Woodrow Wilson

As the count proceeds Iowa, Kansas and Minnesota were found to be wavering between Wilson and Roosevelt with Wilson slightly in the lead in all three. Placing these and Wyoming and South Dakota where the vote is close in the doubtful column, Wilson has 387 certain votes in the electoral college, Roosevelt 89 and Taft 12.

The control of the house of representatives by a majority of 100 or more was early established. That the United States senate, held by the Republicans by the narrow margin of nine votes, will also be Democratic after March 4, there is little doubt.

In the latest news from Illinois it was found that not only had Uncle Joe Cannon been swept to defeat by the Roosevelt vote, but that William B. McKinley, Mr. Taft's campaign manager, who made a bitter pre-convention fight upon the colonel, had also been beaten. The Roosevelt plurality in Illinois dwindled through the day, but final returns gave him the state safely, although Edward F. Dunne, formerly mayor of Chicago, was elected governor by the Democrats.

Michigan, Kansas, Oregon and Arizona joined the ranks of the states in which women will be given the suffrage. But Col. Roosevelt, despite his personal insistence on a women's suffrage plank in the Progressive platform, did not carry a single state in which women were voting.

more than 8,000. Baldwin, Democrat, was elected governor by 14,000.

Colorado—That the Democratic majority in the legislature has been greatly increased as a result of the election is certain. Gov. Shafroth will be elected United States senator to succeed Guggenheim, Republican, and former Gov. Charles S. Thomas will be named to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Charles E. Hughes, Jr., over which the last legislature went into a deadlock.

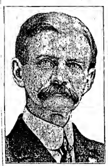
Georgia—The state, as usual, went Democratic. Chattanooga county, Mrs. Wilson's home, gave the new president 2,500 plurality.

Indiana—Wilson by 133,000, with Taft second and T. R. far behind, is the Indiana result. Samuel Ralston, Democrat, beat Albert J. Beveridge for governor.

Iowa—The popular vote cast for president in Iowa is estimated as follows: Wilson 231,855, Roosevelt 216,831, Taft 155,718, Debs 16,000, Chafin 10,000.

Idaho—Taft has a slight margin in this state. Legislature is Republican, insuring re-election of Senator Borah.

Illinois—Roosevelt carries the state, but Dunne (Dem.) is elected governor.



Thomas R. Marshall.

Kansas—Wilson has carried Kansas. Five Democratic congressmen were elected and W. H. Thompson, a Democrat, beat Gov. Stubbs for the United States senate.

Kentucky—Wilson's plurality, 65,000, was one of the largest ever given a presidential candidate here.

Louisiana—Wilson won by 50,000, and Taft but 1,000 votes ahead of Debs.

Maine — Wilson walked away with Maine, T. R. being second, Taft third.

Massachusetts—Wilson won by 25,000, and Foss (D.), for governor, by 45,000.

Maryland—The plurality given Wilson in this state was 40,000.

Michigan—This state is Roosevelt's by 50,000. Democrats and Progressives have made such gains in the legislature that the Republicans have lost control and there probably will be a three-cornered deadlock between the Democrats, Progressives and Republicans on the United States senatorship.

Mississippi—Wilson won by 55,000. All Democratic congressmen elected.

Missouri—Wilson carried the state two to one over Taft. Champ Clark was returned to congress.

Nebraska—Wilson won over Roosevelt by 20,000.

Montana—Wilson's plurality in the state probably will be 6,000. Walsh (Dem.) succeeds Dixon as senator.

Minnesota — Roosevelt will carry Minnesota by 8,000 to 10,000 votes.

New Hampshire — Wilson won this state after it looked as though Taft had it.

New York—Wilson won in the state by over 100,000. Roosevelt being third. Sulzer won for governor.

New Jersey—Wilson's home state gave him a plurality of more than 50,000.

New Mexico—State is Wilson's by 5,000.

Nevada—Wilson swept the state. Pittman (Dem.) has been elected governor.

North Carolina—Wilson's plurality is nearly 80,000.

North Dakota—Wilson's plurality is 10,000.

Oklahoma—Wilson's plurality is 25,000.

Pennsylvania—Roosevelt has carried Pennsylvania, probably by 23,000.

Rhode Island—Wilson got the state away from Taft by 4,000.

South Carolina — The Wilson-Marshall plurality here was above 60,000.

South Dakota—Roosevelt wins state by 5,000.

Tennessee—Wilson's plurality may be as high as 50,000.

Texas—Wilson is more than 200,000 votes ahead of Taft and Roosevelt.

Utah—Taft won Utah by 5,000. Gov. Spry, Republican, was re-elected.

Vermont—This state is Taft's by 1,000.

Washington—Roosevelt carried the state by 30,000, and the Progressives elected a governor and entire state ticket.

West Virginia—Wilson by a big plurality is the verdict here. Thompson, Democrat, won for governor.

Wisconsin—Wilson wins by 40,000. Woman suffrage is defeated. Victor Berger, Socialist, was defeated for congress.

Wyoming—Wyoming went for President Taft by a bigger vote than it gave him in 1908.
